The code is intended to foster a co-operative approach, whereby the industry and its agents work closely together with local planning authorities and communities. Orange escaped from its legal obligations to accept minimal council requests to reduce the visual impact of a proposed mast at Shrimpsfield, Brighton road, Kingswood in an unseemly row over whether the council had met the 28-day deadline. We can see, therefore, how much respect Orange has for the opinion of local people. It is little surprise that the Gregorys, whose life has been blighted by the mast, report that the requested shrub cover is painfully thin and inadequate.

I recognise the efforts that have been made by other companies in recognition of the unsightliness of masts. For example, One 2 One has voluntarily ended its use of the 1995 order for future masts on greenfield sites when there is mast sharing. I have to admit my surprise that one company—Orange—seems to be the usual culprit in enraging local communities. When my hon. Friend the Member for Tunbridge Wells (Mr. Norman) learnt of this debate, he sent me a copy of his local paper, with the headline "Mast Fury". Again the culprit was Orange.

I largely accept the advice on the danger from radiation. However, on environmental grounds alone, the regulatory framework must be rebalanced now that operators have met the coverage targets set for them by the Government. A specific example is one that has arisen over a telecommunications mast in Banstead Woods in the Metropolitan green belt, which is an area of great landscape value, a site of special scientific interest and ancient woodland. However, for some reason, the woods are not classified as an area of outstanding natural beauty, even though they are certainly that. I hope that the Minister will agree with me and the Chipstead residents association that the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 should be amended to give areas such as Banstead Woods the same protection as areas of outstanding natural beauty.

I also look forward to Oftel's consultative document on mast sharing, which will be published this year, but I am concerned that there will be an absence of target-setting by the regulator. Planning obligations to secure mast sharing should be strengthened, but local communities must be sure that other base station sites have been tried and that proper offers are made to the owners of such sites, who can prevent an unnecessary mast from being erected.

I hope that there will be greater co-operation between the cellular operators and others to minimise the need for more masts to be erected. The operators tell us that we can expect twice as many masts in the future. That is not acceptable. The Minister must use her powers to protect communities from the telecommunications operators and the privileges that they currently enjoy, and occasionally abuse. I hope that we shall hear of her intention to rebalance the regulatory framework in the direction that I have suggested.

12.43 pm

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (Ms Beverley Hughes): I congratulate the hon. Member for Reigate (Mr. Blunt) on securing this Adjournment debate and on giving the Chamber an opportunity to discuss this important matter, which exercises the minds of many hon. Members. I thank him, too, for his courtesy in giving me notice of some of the issues that he would raise. That was helpful in allowing me to respond as fully as I can.

The hon. Gentleman has drawn attention to the way in which the number of telecommunication masts has increased in the past few years. That is a reflection of the significant growth nationally in the mobile communication sector over the past 15 years. There are now 24 million subscribers in the UK. In other words, 40 per cent. of the population now have a mobile phone. That market is expected to continue to grow.

As the hon. Gentleman recognised, the Government want to encourage and facilitate the roll-out of a modern national telecommunications network. We want to ensure that the public can enjoy the benefits that come from a greater choice of service providers and a broader range of telecommunications services. An efficient and modern network brings a number of important social and economic benefits, helping, for example, to create a climate conducive to business development and providing ready access to different kinds of communications services in both rural and urban areas.

We accept the hon. Gentleman's argument: the drive to develop the telecommunications network with its attendant base stations, masts and antennae must be balanced with the Government's other priorities and commitments to the achievement of environmental objectives. That is not an easy balance, but we accept that a balancing needs to take place. Planning policy guidance for this form of development set out in PPG8 provides the framework. As we have made clear, we attach great importance to keeping to a minimum the environmental intrusion caused by the telecommunications network development. The land use planning system provides the tool for trying to strike that necesary balance.

I hope that the hon. Gentleman will accept that I cannot comment on the individual cases that he raises or any of the allegations that he makes about the motives and intentions of particular companies, but I can discuss the planning issues that are relevant in those cases. I hope that that will be helpful. The general planning arrangements are that larger telecommunications developments, such as masts higher than 15m, will require a fuller planning application. Relatively minor development is permitted by the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995, referred to as the GPDO. Permitted development rights generally have been approved by the House and apply throughout England and Wales. Generally, they benefit a large number of bodies in both the public and the private sector including, for example, householders and statutory undertakers, as well as licensed telecommunications operators.

Part 24 of the order grants a range of permitted development rights for telecommunications code system operators who are licensed under the

[Ms Beverley Hughes]

Telecommunications Act 1984. Those rights allow operators to carry out specified development, subject to certain conditions and limitations, without the need to make a full planning application to the local planning authority. The GPDO approach incorporates essential environmental safeguards. I should emphasise that there are special provisions regarding the installation of any mast in key designated areas such as national parks, areas of outstanding natural beauty, conservation areas and sites of special scientific interest. In those areas, the installation of any mast does not enjoy permitted development rights under those orders, but development is subject to a full planning application. That allows more detailed consideration of the different aspects, including the environmental aspects of the proposals.

The main safeguard under the GPDO is provided through the prior approval precedure and that gives the local planning authority an opportunity to consider the siting and appearance of telecommunications masts. We made important amendments to the procedure last year so that operators are now required to post a site notice to publicise a proposal to erect a ground-based mast, in order to provide the public with a clear opportunity to comment to the local planning authority on its siting and appearance. If the local authority considers that the proposed development would have a detrimental effect on local amenities it can refuse approval, but authorities are advised to explore if possible the scope for modifying the siting or appearance to accommodate acceptable arrangements before doing so.

The hon. Gentleman mentioned in particular the permitted development rights given separately to statutory undertakers. Permitted development rights enable statutory undertakers such as rail operators to carry out certain developments without making a planning application. Normally, it would be unreasonable to require statutory operators providing a service to the public to make a planning application for every essential development. Local authorities would be inundated with planning applications, and the efficiency of those operators would be needlessly compromised, with consumers having to bear the resulting costs. If Railtrack had to apply for planning permission every time that it needed to carry out essential safety, maintenance or enhancement work on the rail network, that would at the very least impose serious delays and at worst create unacceptable risks for rail customers.

Permitted development rights are important to the process of statutory operators fulfilling their duties to the public in the most efficient and cost-effective way, but that does not mean that Railtrack or any other statutory operator enjoying permitted development rights may do whatever it likes. For example, in relation to the exercise of such rights under part 17 of the GPDO, any development undertaken by the railway operator—including masts—on its operational land must be needed in connection with its operations: the movement of traffic by rail. It cannot exploit that power for non-railway-related purposes. Recent circulars from my Department provide guidance to the statutory operators on the use of permitted development rights, making it clear that local planning authorities should be informed of any proposal likely to have a significant effect on amenities or the environment.

The Department is aware of concerns about statutory operators' use of permitted development rights. A report on departmental research into the use of permitted development rights by statutory operators concluded that, in general, the system of permitted development rights is operating satisfactorily, but it made several recommendations for improvement, including arrangements for consultation with the public and local authorities, as mentioned by both the hon. Member for Reigate and my right hon. Friend the Member for Coatbridge and Chryston (Mr. Clarke).

In addition, the report identified several concerns in relation to rail operators, including the installation of communications masts; the impact of permitted development rights on light pollution; felling trackside trees; car parking at railway stations; and the scale and appearance of new buildings and structures. At the moment, we are considering whether to address those concerns by issuing new guidance and revising the GPDO. Members' views are therefore timely.

The hon. Member for Reigate was anxious about the number of telecommunications masts. We believe that it should be kept to an absolute minimum, consistent with the provision of an efficient national network. Our policy is that masts and sites should be shared, when appropriate, and we are taking steps to encourage that. Indeed, conditions attached to operating licences granted by the Secretary of State include a requirement to investigate mast sharing in the consequential manner requested by the hon. Gentleman before seeking to put up any new mast.

When the GPDO was changed last year, we issued new policy advice in a circular setting out our view that operators should give the local planning authority evidence of having considered the use of existing masts, buildings or other structures before seeking permission to erect any new mast, whatever its size. With evidence on the suitability of alternative sites, the operator can, at an early stage, discuss with the local planning authority whether a shared mast would be the preferable solution for a proposed development. Information from the radio sites databank that the mobile operators set up last year should help in those discussions. I accept the point that the databank needs to be more effective, but when it is, it will assist the identification of mast sharing opportunities and facilitate a strategic approach to the provision and siting of masts.

The Department has recently published a consultation paper on the rating of telecommunications masts that are shared by multiple operators. The growth of shared sites has caused uncertainty in their rates assessment. The proposals would remove that uncertainty by providing that shared mast sites receive only one rates bill, thus making it easier for operators to share masts. In addition, as the hon. Gentleman mentioned, the Office of Telecommunications, Oftel, intends to issue a consultation document on mast sharing later this year. I understand why he wants that document to be as robust as possible—to maximise the potential for mast sharing.

As well as base station location, sympathetic design has a key role to play in minimising the impact of telecommunications development on the environment where it must take place. The Government are encouraging operators to work together to investigate the use of new technologies, materials and designs that will allow masts better to complement their surroundings.

The range of approaches that different companies have adopted shows that there is no such thing as a universally acceptable design solution, not least because good design is a subjective concept, but there remains an important place for some simple measures, such as early consideration in the development process of the use of planting and landscaping to help to screen the impact of developments in a local environment.

Careful consideration of the siting and design of a development should ensure that the right equipment is put in the right place. How to arrive at that solution is a further strand in striking the right balance, to which the hon. Gentleman referred, between network roll-out and protecting the environment. The Government firmly believe that telecommunications development is best advanced through the adoption of an effective partnership approach. I know that that is a hackneyed term, but I have not found another. Such an approach would involve operators, local authorities and, through them, local communities in a meaningful way. I fully accept the points that the hon. Gentleman made about that, and we want that part of the consultation arrangements to be strengthened. The code of best practice on prior approval procedures for mast development, published by the Department, underpins such a co-operative approach. A working party representing local government and the telecommunications industry drafted the code, which is now being updated.

I have outlined the different policies and initiatives that we are implementing to strike the right balance between network roll-out and the protection of the environment, and to achieve better use of existing sites, masts, buildings and other structures for locating antennas. The research recommendations on the statutory undertaker's permitted development rights, to which I have referred, will help us to address the various concerns.

The hon. Gentleman referred to many of those concerns, including the installation of telecommunications masts and their relationship to permitted development rights. We hope that the different parties will work together to achieve that balance. I am grateful to him for raising those issues—especially as it was timely to do so in the light of our considerations—and for his contribution.

Question put and agreed to.

Adjourned accordingly at one minute to One o'clock.

Westminster Hall

Wednesday 19 January 2000

[MR. MICHAEL LORD in the Chair]

The Tote

Motion made, and Question proposed, That the sitting be now adjourned.—[Mr. Touhig.]

9.30 am

Mr. Richard Page (South-West Hertfordshire): I am delighted finally to have managed to obtain this debate through the ballot procedure. Success today has crowned six months of effort. However, the debate may be more apposite today than it would have been six months ago, as there has been a hint that in the next few months—or even weeks—there will be a ministerial statement on the Tote. I hope that the Minister will be able to elaborate on that.

I should welcome such a statement, as the one made by the Home Secretary on 1 May last year was, to put it delicately, opaque when it came to the ownership of the Tote and even murkier on its future. However, I am a helpful sort of person so I can tell the Minister that I quite understand his position. The Government may be leaky, but if they are to make a statement in the next few weeks or months, I accept that it is unlikely that he will give us all the details this morning. Therefore, I should understand if he were to employ a cricket bat 3 ft wide and 4 ft tall and stonewall furiously this morning. We have all been down that path, and we all understand the need for such defence.

I have two points for the Minister to take on board. The first is straightforward, and this debate underlines its importance. We need a Minister with responsibility for horses, a person in Government to argue the case for racing. That Minister could argue the case for the Tote turning into a trust, the proceeds from which could then be devoted exclusively to racing. We need a Minister for the horse, as exists in France and Ireland, although I fully accept that the Home Office should retain responsibility for betting and gaming.

I believe that my views broadly reflect those held by the vast majority of the racing fraternity in the United Kingdom, and that this debate is not just Richard Page firing off ideas without any support. However, it would do no harm for me to make clear the value of racing for this country—an aspect of the argument that is often pushed to one side.

Secondly, the racing industry employs about 60,000 people, with the betting industry employing another 40,000. One does not have to be brilliant at maths to realise that that works out to 100,000 people. All hon. Members know the ripple effect on other industries in a constituency when one activity weakens, so the total number of people supportive of and supported by racing is even greater than that 100,000.

The income generated by racing and breeding exceeds £300 million a year, generating £150 million a year in tax revenue and another £300 million a year in betting duty. As an aside, the Government must get their act together with regard to internet and overseas betting or those figures will go into a decline. However, that is a debate for another day.

There are more than 3,000 thoroughbred breeders in Britain. Some are very small, but some run quite sizeable operations. That sector achieves exports of more than £1 million a year. Last year, more than 5 million people went to watch racing involving the 13,000 horses that are in training. From that audience, the betting levy generated about £52 million. At the same time, the Tote contributed a record £12.3 million to racing. The previous record was £9.3 million, so it is evident that a substantial amount of money came back into racing.

We must bear it in mind that only 1.1 per cent. of horse racing betting turnover goes back into the sport in this country, compared with 4.4 per cent. in Australia, or the mammoth 15 per cent. in Germany. It is clear that Britain is very much the poor relation in terms of the volumes of money involved.

Our parsimonious approach is evident in the returns to British racehorse owners. Prize money receipts average 22 per cent., and in that respect I should declare an interest. Although I should be only too delighted if my prize money receipts climbed to 22 per cent., I have to say that my receipts are in the bottom half of the scale that keeps the average where it is. The costs of keeping a horse in training in this country compare with the 43 per cent. return in Australia. In the United States the return is 47 per cent., in France, 54 per cent., and in Japan, a stunning 87 per cent.

We are clearly at the bottom end of the Richter scale of support. The Tote's income stream is a vital contributor to racing's finances. It is inextricably entwined with, and an integral part of, racing in this country.

What is the future of the Tote? I am tempted to quote in detail from the debate on 26 July 1998 in the House of Lords. However, I want to emphasise two points that emerged from that debate, as I believe that it would do no harm to repeat them again and again.

The Tote was established by private Act of Parliament in 1928. It is worth underlining that the relevant Act began as a private Member's Bill, not a Government Bill. The Tote was not and has never been financed by Government money. It was financed by loans from racing. The Government do not stand behind or guarantee the Tote in any way; nor do they own any shares in it. The Government are therefore fairly remote from the Tote set-up.

Like any other bookmaker, the Tote has contributed to the Revenue for many years, with the money coming in through off-course starting prices and Tote odds. It returns to racing more than £2 million in sponsorship every year, and it also pays £6 million to race courses for the facilities that it uses. That money is vital, as the standard of some of our courses is disappointing and way below par. Those courses need to improve their image and raise their profile to make racing even more attractive to punters.

Successive Governments have benefited from the operation of the Tote, even though they contributed nothing to its creation and continued existence over the years. It is hard to comprehend how the Exchequer has a right to demand a payment for transferring the Tote into some other existence. Although there will be much legal toing and froing, I am given to understand that, to fulfil their plans for the Tote, the Government will first have to nationalise it, then privatise it.

[Mr. Richard Page]

This Government have made much of the windfall gains enjoyed by companies that have taken advantage of privatisation. I find it difficult to understand how the Exchequer can allow an operation to be nationalised—meaning that a fair sum of taxpayers' money will have to be paid into it—and then be privatised. If more money is needed, the Government will be guilty of going in for those windfall gains of which they have been so critical in the past. That is an interesting legal concept that will no doubt develop as time goes by.

I make these points to question the legal right of the Treasury to take its cut. I see no moral right for the Government to take a single penny. The Tote should pay the transfer costs; it would be wrong for them to fall on the taxpayer. The cost of changing its status into a trust is a legitimate cost for the Tote.

Elements of the racing world have come together in an unparalleled fashion. They are not used to working together in sweetness, harmony and unity, but they have called for the Tote to be operated at arm's length by an operating board, not directly controlled by the British Horseracing Board or racing's sectional interest as a charitable trust. The relationship between the Tote and its owners should be that of a listed company and its shareholders.

I envisage the racing trust comprising a chairman and a number of board members. Nominations for the board—perhaps seven, eight or nine—would come from interested bodies, such as the BHB, the Jockey Club, the Racecourse Owners Association and the Industry Committee (Horseracing) Ltd. A number of organisations go to make up that committee. To show the unity that exists, I should like to read into the record the organisations involved—the Amateur Jockeys Association, the British Equine Veterinary Association, the Federation of Bloodstock Agents, the Horseracing Sponsors Association, the Jockeys Association of Great Britain, the Masters of Foxhounds Association, the National Joint Council for Stable Staff, the National Trainers Federation, the Permit Trainers Association, the Point-to-Point Owners and Riders Association, the Point-to-Point Secretaries Association, the Racegoers Club, the Racehorse Transporters Association, Thoroughbred Auctioneers (UK) and, indeed, the Transport and General Workers Union. I hope that the inclusion of that last organisation will sway the Minister.

I also believe that the punters should be represented. Although I can see how all the bodies that I have mentioned would nominate someone, I cannot yet see a mechanism for nominating a punter representative. The one who loses the most money may not be the most satisfactory basis on which to choose a representative. The Tote's employees should also be represented. That would result in a representative on the board from every area of racing.

We need to set the Tote free to get support for the racing industry. I have already mentioned the problems arising from internet and overseas betting. The Tote needs to do its own thing to help racing in a positive way.

Although I hope that the Minister will give detailed responses to all my points, I quite understand if he cannot. But I should like him to accept that there is a strong feeling that any charge by the Exchequer would be regarded as unfair. If any charge were to be made, and if it was more than a nominal amount, it would cripple the Tote's ability to help racing. Not enough funds go back into racing for us to allow the Tote to suffer in that way.

The racing fraternity—in which I include those Members of Parliament who are interested—does not want this issue to be tied up with any of the consequences that might flow from an election. I should like to leave the Minister with three points. We need a Minister for the horse, we need a racing trust for the Tote, and we need them now.

9.46 am

Mrs. Llin Golding (Newcastle-under-Lyme): I favour a trust as well, but I disagree strongly with the hon. Member for South-West Hertfordshire (Mr. Page) about many of the issues being a debate for another day. I do not think that they are. The future of the racing industry must be considered as a whole, and if we are to have a trust, other matters must be considered.

I find the politics of racing fascinating: it makes the politics of this place look gentle, sweet and kind. It is the most interesting part of racing for me. I speak as a very poor owner of horses in the past, but hopeful ever of being a very profitable owner in the future. However, it may be a vain hope.

The problem is the amount of power that could go to the British Horseracing Board if there were a racing trust. The BHB already has control over the fixture list, which causes many problems, as people interested in racing will know. It has three members on the Horserace Betting Levy Board, and discussions are taking place on whether to abolish the levy board. That would mean another ball game altogether.

I understand that the BHB is sending threatening letters to internet betting companies, demanding copyright fees for pre-race meetings lists. I am aware that it already has an agreement with Victor Chandler in Gibraltar, who pays towards the betting list. As he was going to give money to the levy in any case—that was part of the deal that he was organising—is he now taking money from the levy and giving it instead to the BHB? That question needs to be asked. It has set the hare running on who owns the copyright of the racing list. We have not debated that, but it will affect the future of any racing company, whatever happens to the Tote.

There already seems to be a cosy agreement about who will sit on the racing trust. The hon. Gentleman gave a list; agreement has been reached, I understand, between the BHB and the Tote on who will sit on the trust. It is not in the interests of racing for something to be cut and dried before anything has been decided. It is all very well to have proposals, but to go round saying that something is definite when the proposal has not yet been agreed makes it seem like someone wanting to be king of the racing industry without proper consultation. I am concerned about what is happening, and extremely concerned that, if racing is to appeal to a wider audience, we should think carefully before a small group of people is given such wide power.

We are talking about the future of racing. Many matters are involved—including getting more people to go to racing. There must be proper debate; merely to decide to set up a trust is not good enough. I doubt whether the Minister will tell us that a racing trust will be set up to replace the Tote. I would advise him not to do so. Before such a measure, many more talks must be held—with the whole industry, not just a cosy group who want to carve it up for themselves.

I hope that the Minister will acknowledge my comments, and that he will understand that not only one group is interested in the future of racing; there is a wide audience out there. The problems are great, and he should consider the matter far more carefully than many people want him to.

9.51 am

Mr. David Rendel (Newbury): I am delighted to have the chance to speak in the debate. I congratulate the hon. Member for South-West Hertfordshire (Mr. Page) on having finally achieved the chance to hold the debate, after several months of trying. The matter is important for all parties; it is not party political. Members of all parties who have racing interests—or who have the best interests of racing at heart—will want to take part. I hope and believe that there will be cross-party consensus in favour of racing and of the transfer of the Tote—if it is to be transferred—into a trust controlled by the racing industry.

I think that my constituency has the second greatest interest—after Newmarket—in racing. We not only have a well-known race course, but a huge interest in breeding and training up on the downs. There is also a veterinary interest. I am happy to note that several owners live in my constituency. The industry provides employment, not only in my constituency but in other parts of the country, both for people who are comparatively wealthy—even if many of them spend more time losing money on racing than making it—and for some of the less wealthy members of our community. Perhaps the only chance of employment for those people may be that the racing industry should thrive and be prosperous.

At present, there is a threat to employment in the industry—especially for some of those who are less skilled in other matters—because of the potential ban on hunting. That is a contentious issue, on which I do not want to dwell in detail. I have made my position clear in the past: I am in favour of a ban on hunting. However, those in favour and those opposed will all agree that a ban is likely be introduced in the near future. When it comes in, that can only increase the threat to racing—particularly to national hunt racing. In view of that, it is especially important that we should take care not to damage the industry in any other way—for example, by losing some of the money that currently comes in from the Tote.

Sadly, several yards have already closed—I have lost one or two in my constituency. Several horses have been taken abroad, where, as has been explained, more money goes back into the industry—directly, from prize money, and indirectly, from a levy on the betting industry for that purpose. Some owners have an incentive to take their horses abroad and that is already happening.

There are race courses that greatly depend on the continuing prosperity of the Tote, so that money continues to come into the industry. As the hon. Member for South-West Hertfordshire explained, it is difficult to understand the moral grounds by which the Government would remove the Tote and would, in effect, put the ownership and managership of the industry into private hands. There is a danger that the monopoly of Tote betting could be transferred into a private monopoly. The Labour Government would surely not want to make such a proposal. It could not be seen to be in the best interests of racing as a whole if Tote betting were put into a private monopoly—for example, if it were to be taken over by one of the large betting companies.

The Tote was created by racing people for racing people. In the past, it never belonged to the taxpayer. It should not be handed over to the taxpayer. The Tote should be left in the hands of the racing industry. The obvious way to do that is to create a trust, as has been explained, and to leave the Tote in the hands of the racing industry. That would ensure that money from the Tote goes back into the industry; in that way, both the industry and the Tote can thrive in the future.

9.56 am

Mr. Richard Spring (West Suffolk): I am most grateful to have the opportunity to speak in the debate. I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for South-West Hertfordshire (Mr. Page), who made a compelling case, both in describing the financial background to the situation in racing and, most important, in setting out a structure for the future of the Tote, which was most persuasive.

My hon. Friend mentioned the importance to employment of racing and breeding. It is commonly thought that 100,000 people are employed in the industry. Indeed, racing and breeding employ about 60,000. That needs to be put in context—one in eight of all agricultural workers are so employed. The hon. Member for Newbury (Mr. Rendel) referred to the possible threat to hunting, but, because of the terrible problems in the agricultural sector and the difficulties facing farmers throughout the country, employment in agriculture will be under considerable difficulty and pressure in the months to come. In considering employment in breeding and racing, we should bear that broad agricultural background in mind.

The health of racing is rather like the curate's egg. It is true that prize money remains low by international standards. The contribution of bookmakers via the levy, is about £52 million, so the amount of money currently contributed to racing by the Tote—£12.3 million—is substantial. That is an important contribution—apart from help to race courses and other forms of assistance from the Tote. The future of the Tote and the financing of racing through it will become even more important in the years ahead.

I am happy that the number of people going to race meetings has reached a record going back to 1965. Over the past two years, in my constituency, auctioneering activity at Tattersalls has been excellent. That shows that there is high demand for top-quality bloodstock.

My hon. Friend pointed out that the racing and betting interests are often divided over the outlook for horse racing and the industry in this country. They have radically different attitudes as to the financing of the industry. However, all can agree that a contribution of about £12.3 million, which has risen and has the potential to grow, is vital for the future viability of the industry.

[Mr. Richard Spring]

The hon. Member for Newbury referred briefly to the internet. I shall deal with that matter at some length because it involves forces that are difficult to control and it will have a significant impact on the whole future financing of the racing industry and, of course, on Government finances. No Government know how to tackle that problem. The internet is driving prices down, as is evident in the retail sector. Offshore betting by telephone has been growing. Ladbroke's, Coral and William Hill have developed or are developing offshore companies. A voluntary ban introduced by Ladbroke's and Hill's was abandoned because Victor Chandler set up in Gibraltar.

At present, the 9 per cent. deduction from all bets in the United Kingdom consumes more than 40 per cent. of the money spent in betting offices and by telephone customers. In the United Kingdom, we have myriad confusing and antiquated betting arrangements. I welcome the Government's inquiry into gambling; we need to understand how gambling will react to meet the challenge of simplification and the challenges that the internet, e-commerce and offshore betting imply. Will the Minister tell us when that process is likely to be concluded?

Not surprisingly, the Treasury is seeking ways to protect its income. Three hundred million pounds is raised from general betting duty on horse racing alone. Can the position be sustainable if the pressures that I have described continue?

In November, the Government announced that it would ban advertising on Teletext by offshore bookmakers, and there is talk of tax penalties. How can Governments control the situation if Victor Chandler offers free telephone calls and a 3 per cent. deduction, versus the current 9.5 per cent. in the United Kingdom? Success beckons, with mobile telephones and the internet—ultimately to racing's disadvantage, because the money from bookmaking helps to finance the industry.

The Betting Office Licensees Association commissioned a report by Europe Economics. It studied the experience of Ireland, where duty was reduced from 10 to 5 per cent. Admittedly, the Irish economy has been doing extremely well, but betting turnover has increased by about 30 per cent. Ultimately, Governments cannot buck the market.

The British Horseracing Board agrees. It has called for a cut in off-course punter deductions to 5 per cent. from the current 9 per cent., and for a cut in general betting duty from 6.75 to 5 per cent. Of course those are Treasury matters, but the Tote's outlook must be viewed in that context. Others would like betting duty to drop to 3 per cent.

It is generally recognised that the current situation is unsatisfactory, and that there are grave questions to be asked about the future financing of racing. Therefore, the role of the Tote, and its ability to generate funding for racing, become even more important. I am delighted to say that racing takes a broadly united view of those issues.

In 1991, the Select Committee on Home Affairs recommended the sale of the Tote to a democratically accountable body. Arguably, we have that body today. The details of how it would operate betting offices and race course facilities must be addressed, so there is much to do, but there is widespread agreement among racing's constituent groups.

Mr. James Gray (North Wiltshire): My hon. Friend may have inadvertently been wrong. I believe that, in 1991, the Home Affairs Committee recommended that the Tote should be given, not sold, to such a body.

Mr. Spring: If I used the word sold, I was wrong. The crux of the matter at the time was that the Committee called for a democratically accountable body.

The time has come for action. We have spoken about the need to appoint a single Minister in charge of the horse, and I believe and hope that one will be appointed. We must give the Tote a status, so that it is viable and enriches racing for the long term. Purchase price, structure and composition will need to be worked out, but I believe that there is an opportunity for the Tote to contribute ultimately and successfully to the viability of racing, that most important industry for this country.

10.5 am

Mr. Neil Turner (Wigan): My interest in the debate is not confined to horse racing; it is focused on the Tote, whose headquarters are in my constituency. One of the first things that I did when I was elected was to visit them, because the Tote employs about 1,000 people in Wigan. The Tote is investing heavily to bring itself up to date and into the 21st century with new computer technology. It is among the most advanced operations in the betting industry.

However, we need to sort out the Tote's future. There is far too much indecision and far too little certainty. Those who work for it in Wigan are deeply worried. I hope that the Minister will tell us that things will be settled very soon. Many of its workers are part-time, and their shift patterns are convenient, especially for those—mostly women—who have children to care for.

Mr. John Greenway (Ryedale): The point that the hon. Gentleman is making about the importance of part-time work to Tote staff applies not only to Wigan but to all 59 United Kingdom race courses.

Mr. Turner: That is absolutely correct. I am simply saying that, because the headquarters are in Wigan, the issue is greater importance to my constituency.

When I visited the Tote's headquarters, I was surprised to discover that much of the betting that takes place within the Tote involves football, boxing, rugby league and so on. If we are to hand over the Tote to a trust, it should not be restricted to horse racing. People who bet on other sports would be miffed if they thought that the money that they were putting into the Tote was going solely to horse racing and not being used to benefit the sport that they were interested in.

A windfall tax may be imposed if the Tote is privatised, or nationalised and then privatised. The Government were right to take back some of the excess profits of privatised industries because those industries had been undersold. However, in the case of the Tote the surplus will go to the general public. There is a clear difference between windfalls going into the private hands of shareholders and windfalls going to the general public for the public good.

Mr. Gray: The hon. Gentleman seems to be moving towards proposing that the Tote should be privatised. Does he recall the remark made by his right hon. Friend the Member for Livingston (Mr. Cook), now Foreign Secretary, before the general election:

"There will be no proposal by Labour to sell the Tote"?

That was perfectly plain. Does that commitment have the same status as the commitment with regard to National Air Traffic Services, which was that Britain's airspace was not for sale?

Mr. Turner: I was not debating whether the Tote should be privatised or outlining what its future should be. I was merely making the point that, if the Government decide to privatise it, there is a clear difference between the profits from privatisation going to the private sector and private people and the profits going into the public purse. If the Government privatise the Tote, it is right that the surpluses should go to the public sector for use in whatever way the Government wish. However, that is a matter for the future.

I emphasise to my hon. Friend the Minister that the issue needs to be settled. The Tote must have a clear direction. We cannot have the matter hanging round in the way that it has for so long. The interests of racing need to be taken into account, but so do the interests of the other sports in which the Tote has betting interests. The interests of the work force, particularly those who work in my constituency, clearly need to be taken into account, as do the interests of management who have a clear view of the Tote's future. I hope that, in the not too distant future, the Minister will be able to provide clear direction on where the Tote is going.

10.11 am

Mr. Laurence Robertson (Tewkesbury): As I am required to do, I declare an interest. I have a registered interest with the Tote, and Cheltenham race course is in my constituency. It is the source of a great deal of information and, occasionally, expense.

I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for South-West Hertfordshire (Mr. Page) on his persistence in trying to secure a debate on the Tote. I am glad that that has paid off. The fact that he has been persistent shows how much he regards the racing industry and that he, like us all, recognises its importance to this country. He ably and eloquently demonstrated why the industry is important not only to the people who enjoy it, but to the people who work in it and to the Exchequer. He also provided statistics that show its importance.

There are some good statistics on racing. The figures for the number of racehorses in training and the number of people going racing are very impressive. Some statistics are more impressive than ever. However, as my hon. Friend pointed out, there are some bad statistics. For example, a small amount of betting turnover finds its way back into racing, and owners in this country recover a lower percentage of their expenses compared with those recovered elsewhere.

It is important that we do not view racehorse owners as a group of extremely rich people. Some horses are owned by a number of people. In these days when world travel is so easy, it is important to recognise that it is much more beneficial to send one's horses abroad. We must be careful about that. There are good and bad statistics for racing and, in some ways, the position is rather static or even worse than that.

My hon. Friend used statistics to show how important the Tote is to racing. It is important not only financially, but in other ways. Under the expert guidance and chairmanship of Peter Jones, much interest has been taken in racing. That has been generated partly by the Tote's performance, especially in recent weeks. Who could have ignored the fact that, for two consecutive Saturdays, ordinary punters, such as me, have had the opportunity to win £1 million on the scoop-six bet? I was not far off winning that sum, but, as they say, a miss is as good as a mile.

The Tote has several options for the future. Of course, there is the opportunity for a straight commercial sale and there would be some advantages to that. It would offer the Tote freedom and it might lead to the injection of capital and new people becoming involved. However, in those circumstances, how would we ensure that racing received the same amount of money as it does now from the Tote? A regulatory system, such as those for the water, gas and electricity industries, could be created. We could create an "Oftot" or something like that to ensure that money went back into racing. However, if we were to promise the private company that was created that we would take its profits away, I suggest that we would not have a successful sale of the Tote. That is not a viable option, especially given the way that it was set up and the reasons for its creation that were described by my hon. Friend.

A racing trust would secure the profits of the Tote for racing and would have racing people running it. The hon. Member for Wigan (Mr. Turner) was right when he said that the Tote takes bets on other sports, but historically, it was set up for racing purposes. I am a football fan and I would not want football fans to be estranged from the Tote. However, the fact that it was set up for the racing industry is all important. People in the racing industry say that betting and horse racing are two separate industries. They are correct in technical terms, but I think that one depends on the other. It is important that the Tote remains within racing and within a racing trust.

I pay tribute to the chairman of the Tote and all those with whom he has been involved in setting up an agreement with the British Horseracing Board and others. As my hon. Friend the Member for South-West Hertfordshire pointed out, such agreements are even harder to construct in racing than they are in Parliament. The agreement shows the willingness of the British Horseracing Board and the Tote to sort out differences and problems and to come together for the benefit of racing. That point, above all others, shows why a racing trust should be set up.

[Mr. Laurence Robertson]

It is important to set up such a trust very soon. When Ladbroke bought Coral and passed some shops to the Tote, uncertainty was created in the industry and among the people who work in it because of the delay in finalising the deal that was caused by the referral to the Office of Fair Trading. I therefore urge the Minister to make a swift decision and the Government to enact the necessary legislation quicker than they appear to intend.

Some months ago, the Home Secretary announced—I think at the Tote's annual general meeting—that there would be a change in its status. Several years could pass before the Government bring that about. The passage of so much time is not good for the industry, so I urge the Minister to make a decision, announce it quickly and persuade the Government to introduce the necessary legislation. It should not be that complicated or difficult.

I wish to consider the money that the Government appear to want to take out of the Tote. The steering group report says:

"the government has not financed the Tote and does not stand behind it, eg as a financial guarantor".

That fact is crucial as is the fact that the Government do not own the Tote. They may have given it a pool betting monopoly, but that is why it was set up and it does not provide a reason to take money out of it.

In the old nationalised industries, such as British Steel, which might have lost £1 million a day at the height of its success, the taxpayer was due a return. Taxpayers have not financed the Tote, so I do not see why they—and I am normally on their side—are due any return. It would retard the prospects of progress and, to some extent, weaken the Tote's position if a substantial amount of money were taken out. That would set things off to a bad start and—to use a racing expression—handicap it against other bookmakers. Is that fair when we want to create a successful enterprise when we change the status of the Tote?

Unlike a case in which a company acquires more shops or more business and has extra profits to pay off a loan, if the Tote's status is changed, it will not gain any extra business immediately from which to pay back the Government. Money would be taken from its present operating costs and income. That would be a smash-and-grab raid on behalf of the Treasury. I urge the Minister to stand up to the Treasury for the good of racing.

In conclusion, I repeat that racing is important to the country. There are worrying statistics, and we need to put more money into racing and to create a trust to control the Tote. That would enable the Tote to expand and carry out many more exciting ventures, which would be good for the industry. The Tote is therefore extremely important to racing. I urge the Government to make a speedy decision and to implement the necessary changes. I further urge the Minister to persuade the Treasury not to handicap the Tote and racing by taking money from it.

10.20 am

Mr. Owen Paterson (North Shropshire): I have rather a sad interest to declare in this debate as I have been backing slow horses since I was about 15.

Mr. Gray: And fast women.

Mr. Paterson: I shall pass on the question of fast women.

I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for South-West Hertfordshire (Mr. Page) on securing this debate. I know that he tried extremely hard to do so, and his determination has paid off. This is a unique opportunity to do something extremely good for racing because, as far as I know, everyone in racing agrees on this matter.

I have to take issue with the hon. Member for Newcastle-under-Lyme (Mrs. Golding). I do not know anybody who opposes this measure. This is a unique moment in the byzantine politics of racing in that all parties appear to agree.

Mrs. Golding: I made it quite clear that I was in favour of a trust, and I should not like the hon. Gentleman to think otherwise.

Mr. Paterson: I am delighted by that intervention. I understood that the hon. Lady was advocating a delay. If I misunderstood her, I apologise and withdraw my remark.

The unique feature of this proposal is the agreement that has brought all racing interests together. I heartily endorse the comments made by my hon. Friend the Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson). He was right to say that time is short. We hear much from the Government about globalisation, and no industry can be more affected by globalisation than racing. Trying to stop people betting on the internet would be as effective as King Canute setting up his throne on the beach at low tide. Betting duties would flow straight to the new betting points abroad.

It is pointless and childish to pretend that the Government can ban adverts for internet betting. As my hon. Friend the Member for West Suffolk (Mr. Spring) said, the only way to increase betting is to do as the Irish have done and reduce duties to make the industry competitive. In Ireland, the take has rocketed to 30 per cent. It is childish to try to stop people betting abroad.

It is equally childish to pretend that in today's racing industry horses will stay here and that owners owe us a favour. When the big owners go to Keeneland, they can send their horses all over the world, to Australia, Hong Kong, France or elsewhere. They do not have to come here—we have to offer them the very best. There have been spectacular cases in the past few weeks where horses have been arbitrarily moved abroad. Many jobs and businesses are at stake.

Racing and breeding support 60,000 jobs, which, as my hon. Friend said, means that they employ one in eight agricultural workers. With the pig industry losing millions of pounds every week and milk prices at rock bottom, we have to encourage jobs in the countryside. Here we have a chance to help.

Thoroughbred exports alone are worth £100 million a year. There are 7,300 thoroughbred breeders in Britain, of whom about 350 are full-time. All that could be in jeopardy if we do not grab this opportunity. The moment is right because more people are going racing. Last year, 5.1 million went racing, which is the highest figure since 1965. The state is the winner.

In 1998–99, the Tote's contribution to racing was £12.3 million compared with £9.3 million the year before. That is thanks to the new dynamic management in the Tote. Who really won? The state took £3 million in corporation tax and £21.3 million in betting duty. Racing did not gain, as we can see from the fact that only 1.1 per cent. of betting turnover in racing goes back into the sport. That compares with 4.4 per cent. in Australia and 15 per cent. in Germany.

We must not forget that earnings can be sent to those countries with no problems at all. We cannot blame owners for sending their yearlings abroad because the average take by owners in this country, after the cost of keeping a race horse in training, is only 22 per cent. compared with 87 per cent. in Japan, 47 per cent. in the United States and 54 per cent. in France.

As my hon. Friend the Member for Tewkesbury said, if the Government act quickly, they have a chance to do something good for racing. The Government did not set up the Tote—it was set up by a private Act of Parliament in 1928—they do not own it or any shares in it and they have never subsidised it. I raised this matter in Home Office questions this week and the Minister's answer was most unsatisfactory. I noticed that the Minister nodded when my hon. Friend mentioned the monopoly of pool betting, but that is only one sector of betting. The Tote is up against fierce competition from this country and abroad, from the lottery and other forms of betting. It is not a normal monopoly.

On that basis, it is time for the state to get out of racing. The trust has the full support of the industry. How much will the state take for the transfer of an organisation that does not belong to it, and when will it transfer it?

10.26 am

Dr. Lewis Moonie (Kirkcaldy): I congratulate the hon. Member for South-West Hertfordshire (Mr. Page) on securing this debate. I apologise for my tardiness in getting here and for missing his opening speech, and I can assure him that it was entirely involuntary.

I declare an interest as a paid parliamentary consultant to William Hill. I therefore have a specific interest in gambling, although I have to say to the hon. Member for North Shropshire (Mr. Paterson) that, in a long life of trying to defeat the odds, that is the only way that I have ever managed to make any money out of a bookmaker. I finally found a way to do so, and I have not placed a bet since.

This is a welcome opportunity to debate a serious issue facing racing and the gambling industry. This is a crucial nexus. It has become clear from developments over the past six months that the industry cannot be left alone, with the Government simply assuming that it will limp along and we can patch over any cracks that appear. The offshore cracks in particular cannot be patched over, and the loss to Treasury coffers will be substantial over the next few years. I do not think that anything can be done about that.

The present telephone-based system will quickly develop into internet betting. One of the great—or, from the Government's point of view, depressing—features of internet betting is that it is impossible for Governments to control it. The quicker they realise that and the sooner they start to live with it, the better for them and for those concerned in gambling and racing, including the general punter.

The Tote, as a pool betting system, is a natural monopoly. I do not see how such a monopoly could be fully transferred to the private sector. That would be wrong and challengeable in law. It could not be defended under European Union competition law unless a trust were set up to organise it. I do not think that the Government have a prayer of getting rid of it. They should recognise that such a natural monopoly would be best dealt with by a trust that is set up to serve racing. We should bear it in mind that to serve racing was the raison d'être of the Tote when it was set up, and that primary purpose should continue.

Other hon. Members have mentioned the need for quick decisions. We cannot afford to dilly-dally over the matter for much longer. I welcome the fact that the Government are setting up a general commission to consider every aspect of gambling. That is long overdue, but the Tote cannot afford to wait until that weighty organisation comes to its conclusions, which could easily take a year or more. Therefore, I would warmly welcome a quick decision by Ministers.

If we allow matters to continue to develop as they have done, there will be a loss to the Treasury and to racing. Gambling will become prey to criminal influences: the moment it is taken offshore, it will become more difficult to control and unsavoury elements may well find a niche. It is far better to recognise the need for change and to accept a reduction in revenue to encourage gambling to remain onshore. In that way, we shall help to ensure a healthy future for racing and the gambling industry.

10.30 am

Mr. John Greenway (Ryedale): I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for South-West Hertfordshire (Mr. Page) on having secured the debate. For some months, with my encouragement, he has been trying in the ballot to win a place for such a debate. However, I agree that the delay has been worth while, because the time is now right for a decision to be made on the Tote's future. In the period since such a debate was first mooted, clear progress has been made within the racing industry toward drawing up recommendations that can be put to the Government.

Although I speak now on behalf of the official Opposition, I, like many hon. Members, have a close constituency interest in racing, in that the Malton and Norton area of my constituency contains stableyards with a long history, stretching back almost three centuries. I am glad to report that they have of late enjoyed better times, with more big race winners, but much remains to be done. At this juncture, I should express my agreement with all that has been said about the importance to the rural economy of racehorse training, and the need to improve the lot of many of the yards and their staff.

I place on record my admiration and affection for the Tote. I suspect that many participants in today's debate have, from time to time, enjoyed the Tote's hospitality. My association with the Tote began when, with the hon.

[Mr. John Greenway]

Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale), I was a member of the Select Committee on Home Affairs. We grasped the nettle and inquired into the Tote, the Horserace Betting Levy Board and the equivalent body for greyhound racing.

That fascinating experience began by our being told that we would find an incompetent rabble at the Tote. In fact, we found that, under its then chairman, Lord Wyatt, it was an extremely well run organisation. I endorse the remarks of the hon. Member for Wigan (Mr. Turner) about the staff at the Wigan headquarters. Members of the Home Affairs Committee visited Wigan during our inquiry: we were greatly impressed and found that many of the allegations made against the Tote, especially by some sections of the media, were wholly unjustified. I pay tribute to the Tote's current chairman, Peter Jones, and its team of directors and executives. They have successfully developed the Tote in recent years.

As my hon. Friend the Member for West Suffolk (Mr. Spring) said, the key recommendation of the Home Affairs Committee report was that the Tote should be given to racing when a suitable body, capable of running racing, had been established. That recommendation was the spur to the creation of the British Horseracing Board. We made our recommendation for two reasons: first, to get the Government out of an organisation in which they had no real long-term role; and, secondly, to enable the Tote to develop its commercial interests to a greater extent than it could as part of the public sector, thus generating increased profits that could be fed into racing, especially in support of prize money and race course development.

That objective is within racing's grasp, but one or two fences remain to be taken. Even though hurdles are lower than fences, using the word hurdles to describe any obstacles would imply that jumping them will be difficult; in fact, it should not be difficult to do so. The chief fence that has to be cleared is the Government's decision on how to proceed.

The Tote is a strategic asset for racing. My hon. Friend the Member for South-West Hertfordshire described it as a vital part of the income stream of racing. The £12.3 million it generated in 1998–99 is significantly more than the hon. Member for Mansfield and I remember it producing nine years ago, when our Committee produced its report. That sum is almost one quarter of the revenue racing gets through the levy. The best way to illustrate the importance and effective use of money from the Tote is to draw attention to the Tote's sponsorship of key races at this country's two main racing festivals: the Cheltenham gold cup, which is coming up shortly, and the Tote Ebor handicap at York in August. They are the two great festivals of jump racing and flat racing respectively; without the Tote, they would be all the poorer.

The Tote has never received Government funding or taxpayers' support. The Government do not own the Tote and, regardless of racing's interests, that is one of the key reasons why it should not be sold off to the highest bidder. However, it is important to recognise that the Tote has enjoyed a monopoly on pool betting. In discussions with racing's leadership, I have learned that the industry wants to continue to enjoy that monopoly and recognises that it might justify a relatively modest payment being made to the Government to set the Tote free and enable it to become a directly held asset of racing.

The structure of such a transfer to racing of that asset would have to command the support of all strands of racing. My hon. Friend the Member for South-West Hertfordshire listed the many organisations that have expressed support for the creation of a new racing trust, but the three key bodies that have had to come together to try to settle a common position are the British Horseracing Board, the Racecourse Association and the Tote. Despite a shaky start, I have been encouraged by what I have seen of their deliberations. For many of the bodies involved, the experience has been a unifying one. The racing industry has, at long last, shown some maturity and responsibility in its attempts to reach agreement.

The hon. Member for Newcastle-under-Lyme (Mrs. Golding) has been treasurer of our all-party racing group for many years. It is because of the likelihood that I would have to speak on such matters on behalf of the Conservative party that I stepped down as chairman of that all-party group. The hon. Lady said that it appeared that there was a cosy club in racing, but I do not believe that that is so. Racing has been challenged to find a solution and it is not surprising that, in responding to that challenge, it has attempted to resolve all the problems that might arise by creating a new structure. However, I gather that the BHB would have only one of the eight seats on the Tote board.

I do not want to get bogged down in detail, because we have not yet seen the document that gives full details of the proposals—we have seen only the broad outline. However, it appears that, of the available options and in the light of the Government's announcement that they are minded to put the Tote into the private sector, the racing trust proposal is the most attractive. A total sell-off of the Tote is unacceptable, not least because of the likely diminution in profits returning to racing. Also, it would be unacceptable to create a privately owned Tote monopoly of pool betting, a point which the hon. Member for Kirkcaldy (Dr. Moonie) rightly made. We listened with interest to his perspective on the basis of the main high-street bookmakers.

A private pool would lead to pressure for the pool to be broken up, or it could lead to the end of the monopoly of pool betting. That would be disastrous for horse racing and it would be equally bad for punters. It is essential that the pool monopoly be retained. The same argument underpins the concept of the national lottery. I am sorry that my hon. Friend the Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) did not win scoop 6, and I have no doubt that he is too. He spoke of the value of a massive single pool in terms of attractive bets and the opportunity through horse racing to create millionaires, in addition to the national lottery. That is an extremely important factor.

There are genuine questions about other matters—for example, the protection of the punter, efficacy and the need for the running of the pool and of the Tote itself to be properly monitored. None of these issues is beyond early resolution. There are also the interests of other betting organisations. As the hon. Member for Wigan said, there are other sports interests, which must be considered. I do not believe that these matters undermine in any way the concept of the proposed racing trust.

The Government need to take some early decisions on the deregulation of gambling. More importantly—we appreciate that this is not a matter for the Minister—there is the vexed issue of betting duty and the need to deal with the difficulties created by betting on the internet and the offshore activities of some bookmakers.

Those issues are for another day. Our opportunity this morning is to indicate our view on the future of the Tote. I hope that I have made it clear that the Conservative preference would be to give real and urgent consideration to the racing trust proposal. I agree wholeheartedly with the hon. Member for Wigan that the matter needs to be settled, not least for the members of the staff who work for the Tote throughout the country, to whom we pay tribute. The employment that the Tote generates is important to local communities.

We think that the proposed racing trust deserves every consideration. We are unconvinced by the other options. The trust is the best chance that racing has had to show what it can do for a generation or more. My hon. Friend the Member for North Shropshire (Mr. Paterson) was right when he said that this is a unique moment for racing, and racing will not forgive us if we fluff this chance.

10.43 am

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Mike O'Brien): I join in congratulating the hon. Member for South-West Hertfordshire (Mr. Page) on raising the debate. It is an enormously important issue. The racing industry is clearly important to Britain. The debate provides a useful opportunity to air many important questions that are associated with the future of the Tote and of horse racing.

There have been some extremely good speeches, including those of my hon. Friends the Members for Newcastle-under-Lyme (Mrs. Golding) and for Kirkcaldy (Dr. Moonie). The hon. Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) made an important contribution, given his extensive knowledge of the racing industry. The hon. Member for North Shropshire (Mr. Paterson) and others also spoke very well.

I need to make it clear that the Government are not willing to announce today their conclusions about the sale of the Tote. However, I shall give you some indication, Mr. Chairman, of when we might make that announcement.

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Mr. Frank Cook): Order. I remind hon. Members that this is not a Committee but a convention of the whole House.

Mr. O'Brien: I am grateful, Mr. Deputy Speaker.

The hon. Member for South-West Hertfordshire said that the industry needs someone to argue for racing. I am not sure whether I want to be designated the Minister for the horse, but I am happy to say that I would want to be an advocate for the success of the industry, which is enormously important to Britain. It employs many people and millions of people have an interest in it, even if it is merely to put a bet on horses from time to time.

The industry benefits us all in many ways. For example, betting duty is paid to the Exchequer, which benefits every taxpayer. I agree with the hon. Member for Tewkesbury that racing is not only a rich man's sport. My father was very far from being a rich man, but he supported the industry for many years. Many people care deeply about racing, and not only because it benefits them economically or is of interest to them. In many ways, it is part of our country's culture. It needs to be respected for that reason.

The Tote is also extremely important to us. A few statistics might illustrate that importance. In 1998–99, the Tote had a turnover of £497 million. That was an increase of 25 per cent. on the previous year. There was a profit of £23.9 million, which was an increase of 34 per cent. From that profit, it gave £12.3 million to horse racing, which was an increase of 32 per cent. It has more than 300 betting offices and the credit betting operation has more than 50,000 customers. It operates pool betting at all 59 race courses and employs 2,800 full and part-time staff.

I agree with the hon. Member for Ryedale (Mr. Greenway) that it is time to send a clear message that the Government need to get out of an organisation in which it should not have a long-term, direct role. We must ensure that the Tote's long-term future is secured, and that is what we propose to do.

We have given the most careful consideration to how the Government get out of having a role in the Tote and to the way in which we secure its long-term future. We want to be sure that we reach the right conclusion, which pays proper regard both to the interests of horse racing and to those of the taxpayer. We would do neither a service by trying to rush our fences. As we all know, the Government decided to sell the Tote only on the advice of a steering group which was chaired by its chairman, Peter Jones. On the basis of the group's recommendations, we are satisfied that a sale would represent the best means of securing the Tote's future in the increasingly competitive and diverse business environment in which it operates.

One option, which I know is favoured by many, is the sale of the Tote to a racing trust. In considering the sale options, the Home Office received a proposal, jointly sponsored by the British Horseracing Board and the Tote itself, for the acquisition of the Tote by racing.

My hon. Friend the Member for Newcastle-under-Lyme (Mrs. Golding) referred to the politics of racing, suggesting that it made politics in this place look kind. We wondered for a while whether the various political groups in racing would be able to come together and form a coalition government given the proposal that a racing trust should run the Tote. I am pleased that there is a proposal. We will give it careful and detailed consideration. My hon. Friend the Member for Newcastle-under-Lyme called it a cosy deal, rather than a cosy club, but it is not such a done deal. She asked me to consider the views of all racing. In that regard, hers are wise words. We need to consult widely and ensure that the industry broadly supports the proposals.

[Mr. O'Brien]

Mr. Page: Will the Minister give way?

Mr. O'Brien: I will give way, but only once, as I am anxious to conclude my remarks.

Mr. Page: I cannot think of another organisation that is not signed up to the proposal. If the Minister can think of one that is not signed up, I shall pop along and see its representatives.

Mr. O'Brien: I hear what the hon. Gentleman says, and what others have said during the debate. I shall weigh the words of all of them with great care. We shall examine the issues with care and we intend to consult widely. The hon. Gentleman would want us to do so, to ensure an element of consensus in the industry.

The hon. Member for Ryedale is right to say that some element of agreement has been reached, and we should congratulate the industry on achieving that agreement. I agree with the comments of the hon. Member for Newbury (Mr. Rendel) on the matter. We need to ensure that the future of racing is secured for the long term.

We have looked at the issues in detail, alongside the other options, the principle of establishing a trust and the possibility of a sale on the open market or a flotation. My officials have had discussions with the relevant racing interests so that we can be confident that we fully understand the detail of the proposals.

We are aware that the Tote is considered by many to be an integral part of horse racing, not least because of its presence at each of the United Kingdom's 59 race courses and through its financial contribution to the sport over many years.

The Government recognise that racing has a stake in the Tote, and it has been one of our key objectives in this exercise to ensure that the interests of racing are safeguarded. There are other stakeholders, notably the present managers and staff, whose collective efforts have been a major factor in the Tote's success. However, it must be recognised that the taxpayer also has a legitimate interest in the business. That was an important conclusion of the Tote review steering group.

Although the Tote was originally constituted under a private Bill, the statutory framework within which it now operates is largely based on the Betting, Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963. Today's Tote is a very different and far more diverse business than that originally envisaged by Parliament under that private Act in 1928, and decisions about its future must self-evidently be taken in today's context, and not in the context of 1928.

Mr. Alan Meale (Mansfield): Will my hon. Friend give way?

Mr. O'Brien: I will give way one last time, because my hon. Friend has not contributed to the debate so far. I am happy for him to make a contribution.

Mr. Meale: I thank my hon. Friend. He speaks of protecting the public interest. May I point out to him that a recent ruling by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the proposed Ladbroke-Coral merger clearly showed the danger of off-course betting becoming a monopoly? Choosing the route of the trust would prevent that for ever in the industry.

Mr. O'Brien: That is one of the issues to which we must give full consideration. I assure my hon. Friend that, when we make known our views, we will take account of that and many other points.

We must not overlook the extent to which the Tote's status as a public body has been a factor in its commercial success, not least through the perception of its probity and respectability, on which those who work for the Tote are to be congratulated. As the hon. Member for Tewkesbury observed, the Tote has enjoyed a commercial advantage over competitors by virtue of the grant by the Government of an exclusive licence to operate pool betting on horse racing. Indeed, that remains the foundation on which the Tote's broader success has been built.

The hon. Member for Tewkesbury argued—ingeniously, I thought—that the taxpayer—the public—would smash and grab the racing industry. I disagree with that view. The unarguable fact is that the Tote is at present a public body, and it is therefore reasonable that the taxpayer should obtain some benefit from its sale. The Government will defend the taxpayer against those who would seek to give away potential benefits.

The taxpayer has a legitimate interest and it is important that when the future of the industry is determined, we balance the interests of the industry, the long-term future of the Tote and the taxpayer, which are all legitimate interests. The fact that neither the Government nor anyone else currently own the Tote does not alter that conclusion.

Mr. Gray: Will the Minister give way?

Mr. O'Brien: No.

Primary legislation will be required before the Tote can be sold, and we will introduce that at the appropriate time and when parliamentary time allows.

Hon. Members will understand why I cannot say today when we will be able to introduce such a Bill, but I have noted the arguments for it to be introduced sooner rather than later. I will bear in mind the views expressed by the Opposition. The hon. Member for Ryedale said that he wanted some early movement on the matter and we shall take that on board. No doubt the matter will be discussed through the usual channels.

I am aware of the need to reduce uncertainty about the Tote's future in the interests of the business, the Tote's staff and the industry as a whole. I remain hopeful that we shall be able to announce our conclusions about the future of the Tote within the next few weeks. [Interruption.] My hon. Friend the Member for Wigan asks how long, so I say not long. The future of the Tote does not stand alone as an issue facing the industry, although it is one of the more important issues.

Alongside our assessment of the sale options, the Home Office has been reviewing the Horserace Betting Levy Board and the current levy system. It is our present intention to make a single announcement covering both the Tote and the levy board. Examination of the issues has taken some time, but it is right that we should be able to set out our conclusions clearly for those who have a direct interest in the future of the racing industry.

Although the hon. Member for Tewkesbury thinks that the process has taken a long time, it has not taken longer than we planned. We must balance the various considerations that a successful sale strategy would have to cover, and ensure that the financial implications have been properly evaluated. We must also ensure that the racing industry comes together on the proposal for a trust.

If we had gone too fast at those fences, we could have ended up with a situation in which some of the riders had come off at the back and the racing industry had not got its act together at the front. It has now done so, and we can give full and proper consideration to the proposals. We can also begin to examine the other issues that will directly affect the future of racing.

We expect to make an announcement soon. It will set out clearly our perception of the Government's future relationship with horse racing, especially with the industry's funding arrangements. Today's debate has shown that British horse racing is an industry and a sport of major national and international importance, and the Government wish it to prosper and thrive in the years ahead. I welcome the opportunity that the debate has provided to make that important point.

Banking Sector

10.59 am

Mr. Patrick Hall (Bedford): I am grateful for the opportunity of securing a debate on the United Kingdom banking sector. I would like to focus on banks overcharging small businesses. That is a serious matter of considerable public interest with significant implications for Government.

My attention was drawn to the problem through the experiences of a small business that trades in Bedford. Its proprietor had become convinced over the years that he was being charged too much on his business account. Strenuous efforts succeeded in generating a refund of £16,000 from the relevant bank as a final settlement of the dispute. However, my constituent persisted because he knew that more money was owed. He secured the services of a firm that specialises in recovering alleged overcharges. Even then, the bank delayed, blocked and prevaricated. I became involved at that stage, at my constituent's request. I was surprised that the bank, although it sent me lengthy and courteous letters, initially refused my request for all the parties to meet in an effort to resolve the matter once and for all. It eventually agreed to a meeting, which I attended as an observer.

After two or three hours of vigorous negotiation, the matter was settled and the bank wrote out a cheque on the spot that was well in excess of £20,000. I was taken aback. Together with the earlier cheque, the bank had returned to my constituent's business more than £36,000, including compound interest. That £36,000 should not have been taken from the business in the first place. It constituted overcharges, which represent valuable cash flow—the life-blood of any small business. It should have been available to underpin the business's activities, and assist its employment capability and its contribution to the local economy. That £36,000 was returned only after five years of effort—which would have been better expended in running the business—by the proprietor and after he involved a specialist firm and his Member of Parliament.

My first thoughts about the case were that the unfortunate experience was simply the consequence of a series of human errors and misjudgments by the bank in dealing with an individual customer. I was rather sceptical when the overcharge recovery specialists, Anglia Business Associates, told me that my constituent's experience was not uncommon and was, indeed, so widespread that several firms and individuals specialised in and made a living from recovering bank overcharges for business customers all over the country. Those firms describe themselves as the bank audit industry.

Anglia Business Associates showed me its evidence, which was not only drawn from people who had contacted the company because they believed that they had a problem, but from random testing by spot audits on business accounts in various parts of the country, organised on separate occasions in the past few years by, for example, BBC World's "Watchdog", ITV's "World in Action", Granada's "Tonight with Trevor McDonald" and The Daily Telegraph. That evidence showed that approximately 75 per cent. of all bank business customers have been overcharged at some time and that the average overcharge amounts to about £4,000. Those figures have been in the public domain in recent years and have not been countered with evidence from the banks.

[Mr. Patrick Hall]

High street banks claim to have approximately 3.2 million business customers. The Department of Trade and Industry says that, out of a total of 3.7 million business, 3.5 million are described as microbusinesses—small businesses, which employ fewer than 10 people. It follows that the majority of bank business customers must be small or microbusinesses. The banks will not reveal the proportion of their customers who have bank borrowing, and use overdrafts and loans. However, it is fair to suppose that businesses use bank borrowing for cash flow and other purposes.

If we make a conservative estimate that 50 per cent. of businesses use bank borrowing and apply the figures that I mentioned—75 per cent. of business customers overcharged an average of £4,000—it suggests a staggering total of £4.8 billion in overcharges. If 80 per cent. of business customers use bank borrowing, the total in overcharges is £7.7 billion. Those amounts are shocking. Doubtless, some people will be sceptical, and I do not ask anyone to accept the figures blindly. There is credible, verifiable evidence of a serious problem of bank overcharging in this country; it should be put to the test.

I want to consider what is meant by overcharging. Don Cruickshank, who is chairman of the independent Treasury review of banking services in the United Kingdom, has identified an absence of competition in the sector, especially among those that offer services to small businesses. In an uncompetitive market, it is likely that we will find uncompetitive pricing. That is a definition of overcharging. However, the overcharging identified by some customers and the specialist recovery firms to which I referred is different.

We are considering circumstances in which the advertised rate is not the rate that is applied to the customer. The advertised rate may be competitive, perhaps 5 per cent., but, on later inspection, the applied rate turns out to be 8 per cent. Overcharging does not appear in an identifiable way in accounts. Other devices include calculating interest on wrong overdraft limits; applying penalty rates that should not have been applied; and charging hidden management fees. All those devices have been used without informing the customer. That is not only uncompetitive practice; it is sharp practice.

The question is not whether such practices happen, but to what extent they happen. I would welcome testing the available evidence and gathering more. That should be done through an independent investigation commissioned by the Government. It should be done because strong evidence, beyond prima facie indications, exists of a significant and unjustified diversion of resources from businesses to banks. That can only harm the productive economy and employment prospects in this country. It represents appalling, unethical, socially irresponsible business practice, which is a national scandal and an abuse of trust.

May I draw briefly from the executive summary of British invisibles 1997 report on banking? To paraphrase, the banking industry operating in the UK is a crucial and integral part of the UK economy. The sector consists of UK and foreign banks operating in the UK and its broad customer base encompasses individuals, companies and public sector organisations. The industry's assets are well in excess of £2,000 billion. Slightly under half are held by the UK banks, which are dominated by the high street retail banks. I am not arguing with any of that. The banks are a crucial and integral part of the economy and most people's lives. It is right, therefore, to expect that they are efficient, competitive and transparent and that they serve their customers and the country well, deal straight with people, charge them fairly and, as a result, earn and are worthy of their trust. It seems that all the high street banks, in varying degrees, have overcharged at one time or another, and not only as a result of human error. Of course there is human error, but if that were the principal cause of overcharging one would expect there to be plenty of gainers as well as losers. The bank audit industry is absolutely convinced that that is not the case.

I have described what is meant by overcharging. The process also involves going into denial if and when a customer inquires or complains. There is, so I understand, a clear pattern of making excuses and saying that there is insufficient staff time to investigate. Paperwork has been lost or never existed. Progress is slow and grudging and, at some point, a partial refund is offered. After a year or so, a fuller amount may be offered to those customers who have survived the obstacle course. May I refer to an example of that?

In February 1997, Anglia Business Associates lodged a claim on behalf of a family-owned engineering business based in North Yorkshire that had been overcharged by more than £15,500. The bank's immediate response was to say that its own review of the account showed not an overcharge, but an undercharge of £650. A month later, however, it changed its mind and offered a refund of slightly more than £4,000 in full and final settlement, stating categorically that it had not made an error. After being pressed to reconsider, three months later the bank's final settlement was raised to £5,700. A little later, it was raised to £6,000 and later still there was a breakthrough to £13,000. Finally, in January 1998—almost a year after the claim was first lodged—it was raised to £15,200, which was about £500 short of the refund originally asked for. Time after time, in every letter that it wrote, the bank stressed that it had not made any mistakes at all. That is interesting: it had not made an error, but was prepared to give money away to its customer if it asked hard enough.

I am sure that you, Mr. Deputy Speaker, are aware that concern about bank overcharging and other matters in respect of the relationship between banks and their customers has been in the public domain for a long time—well over 20 years—and is not exactly new. It is remarkable that it has not been firmly addressed. Pressure from the National Consumer Council led to the banks setting up and sponsoring the voluntary banking ombudsman scheme in 1986. It has become clear that the scheme is somewhat weak. For example, it cannot recommend on policy or make rules for the banking industry. It can deal only with individual complaints, and does so only if and when all the internal procedures of the banks have been exhausted and if the matter is deadlocked, but the banks can be pretty expert in delaying the internal investigation of complaints. The ombudsman scheme as currently formulated therefore turns away a high percentage of complaints.

As I interpret the presentation of the banking ombudsman's 1997–98 annual report, which is the most recent I could find, he received almost 20,000 concern calls on his helpline and 12,000 written complaints. Conciliation settled 960 before formal investigation and 630 went through formal investigation. The indications from that are that thousands of complaints and potential complaints are not being addressed through that route. Another initial weakness of the scheme was that it was limited to personal customers and unincorporated businesses. Continuing public pressure in the 1980s led to the then Conservative Government setting up a Treasury review into banking services—the Jack committee, which reported in 1989.

The Jack committee recommended that the banks adopt a code of practice, that the ombudsman scheme be extended to cover incorporated businesses and that it be made statutory. The then Government rejected the latter two recommendations and the banking code was not introduced until 1992. It is voluntary and not all the banks signed up to it. Those that did are prepared sometimes—perhaps too often—to ignore it, as well as their own company versions of it. In 1991, again in response to representations from small businesses, the public and Members of the House, the then Chancellor of the Exchequer asked the Bank of England to carry out a survey of lending to small businesses. The concern was that cuts in base rates were not being passed on to small business customers.

As part of the outcome of that survey, the Chancellor asked the banks to suggest a code of conduct for small business customers. That is also part of the scene. By 1993, continuing public pressure led to him asking the Bank of England to repeat its survey of bank lending to small firms and, in addition, he agreed to the recommendation of the Jack committee of 1988 that the banking ombudsman scheme should include small incorporated businesses. He accepted, however, the banks' recommendation that that should be restricted to businesses with a turnover of less than £1 million a year, which is not a huge amount for a successful small business. That means that the only option for many small businesses, apart from involving a specialist firm, is legal action, which is an expensive and difficult route for them and for individuals. Only the banks are properly equipped to pursue it.

It is fair to say that, although the issue of alleged overcharging has been around for a long time, it has managed to avoid being put under the rigorous scrutiny of the Government and the regulatory authorities. The usual response has been that charges are a matter for the banks—which exercise their commercial judgment—not for action under competition legislation, and should be resolved through their internal procedures or the banking ombudsman. I am an optimist and I am pleased to sense that there are indications that the worrying and unsatisfactory state of affairs that I have described could at last be effectively addressed. As part of the general context of that, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has recognised the poor deal on prices that British customers get in a number of areas, compared with those on the continent and in the United States. He has promised action, for example on international price comparisons for cars.

With regard to the banking industry, the interim report of the independent review chaired by Don Cruickshank, which is due to report soon, was published last July and was responded to by the Government in the form of changes to the Financial Services and Markets Bill, which was then in Committee. One of the positive features of a very long and complex Bill is the proposed one-stop shop statutory financial ombudsman scheme, combining and replacing eight schemes, including that of the banking ombudsman. Unlike the voluntary scheme, it is proposed that the decisions of the new ombudsman will be binding on respondents, which is helpful. The new scheme provides us with a golden opportunity to address the weaknesses of the previous arrangement. There are two areas to which I wish to draw attention.

First, there is a failure to address thousands of complaints. I have no objection to requiring that a customer with a complaint first puts it to the bank for consideration by its internal procedures under its customer code; that makes complete sense. However, the new financial services ombudsman will need to be mindful of the techniques too often deployed by banks before a state of deadlock is agreed in writing.

Secondly, it is important that the ombudsman seeks to improve voluntary customer codes. The banking code, to which I have referred, is, so I understand, drawn from a number of banks and building societies, and tends to reflect the lowest common denominator rather than standards that might best serve the customer. In dealing with complaints over the years, it is essential that the new ombudsman scheme looks to raise standards and improve codes. My hon. Friend the Economic Secretary knows that I have raised that point with her in Committee, and I ask her to reflect further on it today.

There is also the key matter of regulation. Banks are regulated by the Financial Services Authority with regard to capital structure and their accounts, and to ensuring that they are run by fit and proper persons. Although the FSA is developing and is very much encouraged and required to develop an outlook more mindful of the customer—to become more customer-friendly—the regulation of banks does not include pricing, or matters that might be seen as relevant to a consumer watchdog. Indeed, there is no consumer watchdog for bank customers. The financial services ombudsman is intended not to act as a consumer watchdog but to be impartial in reaching balanced decisions. That ought to lead to a consideration of how such a state of affairs could be addressed.

How about having "Ofbank"—an office of banking? Ofbank could be an independent banking regulator, complete, perhaps, with regional customer services committees and a national customer council, charged with advising the regulator on policy issues. Such a development would tune in with the independent banking review's observations that the UK banking sector lacks competition—a position strongly supported by the Consumers Association.

Other regulators, such as the Office of Water Services, the Office of Electricity Regulation and the Office of Telecommunications, were introduced because of the obvious monopolistic nature of the privatised utilities created by the previous Government. There is not enough competition among banks. The degree of regulation would of course reflect the extent of the competition and, where competition develops, a light touch may be all that is necessary.

[Mr. Patrick Hall]

It is the intention of the Financial Services and Markets Bill to create the legal base for innovation, competition and greater efficiency in financial services, but until that happens in the UK banking sector, Ofbank will have a job to do.

There is one other major issue that I want to raise. It is clear, is it not, that I believe bank overcharging to be a serious problem; I want it to stop. If it were to cease from today, what would be done about the past? Customers have been overcharged and that needs to be addressed, just as the mis-selling of personal pensions during the first part of the 1990s is slowly and steadily being addressed. It is worth recalling that a final total of—perhaps—1.8 million cases will have been examined in trying to resolve the mis-selling scandal, and that compensation of between £5.3 billion and £7.6 billion may have to be paid.

I ask the Government to do six things: first, to acknowledge that there is a problem of bank overcharging, particularly on small business accounts; secondly, to commission an independent investigation to examine the evidence and establish the scale of the problem nationally; thirdly, and somewhat dependent on the outcome of the investigation, to take proactive, effective measures to compensate customers for past overcharging; fourthly, to create the legal and regulatory framework in which effective competition can take place; fifthly, to ensure that the financial services ombudsman seeks to improve the banking code; and sixthly, to give serious consideration to the establishment of a bank regulator who encompasses the role of consumer watchdog.

I do not expect my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to be able to agree to all of that today, but I ask her to give all the matters very careful thought. I am asking for nothing less than a new deal for bank customers—without whom banks would not exist—which serves the British people and British business and makes it absolutely clear, once and for all, that the practice of bank overcharging is unacceptable, intolerable and must cease.

11.27 am

Mr. Tim Loughton (East Worthing and Shoreham): I am pleased to be able to make a short contribution to this important debate. I should first declare an interest, as recorded in the Register of Members' Interests. Secondly, I apologise to the hon. Member for Bedford (Mr. Hall) and the Minister because, owing to a long-standing engagement just after 12 o'clock, I may not be present for the winding-up speech

I feel that I have been brought on my first outing to Westminster Hall on false pretences. I thought that this debate was about competition, regulation and the review of the banking sector. The issue of competition crept lightly into the hon. Gentleman's comments, but only in rather scornful terms; regulation did not feature much; and Don Cruickshank was mentioned just twice. Instead, we heard something of a bank-bashing session.

I was interested to read the press release that the hon. Gentleman issued in advance of the debate. To give him his due, he referred to Anglia Business Associates, to which it might be helpful to allude further. It seems that that company is the basis for the hon. Gentleman's raising this subject. Although it might be seen in his eyes to be providing a public service, it is a commercial, profit-making organisation, which makes its money by taking a 35 per cent. cut of any money that it is able to retain on behalf of clients whose cases against banks it takes on. That should be put on record.

The press release describes the organisation's fairly alarmist claim that in excess of £5 billion has been wrongly extracted from clients of banks over a number of years: 35 per cent. of £5 billion makes Anglia Business Associates a rather wealthy company.

It would be interesting to hear more about who regulates that company and whether they are acting in the best interests of customers and the whole banking sector. The hon. Gentleman's press release refers to a Mr. Mark Radin, who I believe is the owner of the company, and gives his phone number for further inquiries.

I am no great fan of retail banks, and indeed I would be the first to admit that they have been exceedingly hapless with their public relations over a number of years, especially on the subject of charges. They certainly gained a very poor reputation in the recessions of the 1980s and early 1990s for the way in which they treated small businesses. They were greatly at fault, although the matter may not have been quite as one-sided as the hon. Gentleman made out. On average, the banks made a 21 per cent. return on their equity, so they were very successful.

The British banking sector accounts for about 4.2 per cent. of the UK economy and last year paid more than £4.5 billion in tax to the Exchequer, so there is no denying its importance. Because of the common poor perception of the sector, the Chancellor announced an independent review into its working on 3 November 1998 under Don Cruickshank, as the hon. Gentleman said.

The remit of the review was to consider the UK banking industry, with the exception of investment banking; to examine the levels of competition, innovation and efficiency in various sub-markets, and especially the relationship with small and medium-sized enterprises; and to make international comparisons. In January 1999, a consultation document was produced. For all the qualms about the extent of co-operation from the banking sector, it took a great deal of work on the part of commercial banks to provide the information that was required to make the review meaningful.

In April 1999, a progress note was issued by Mr. Cruickshank and the review was widened to include e-commerce. Specific teams were set up to deal with the subject of small businesses in deprived areas and their interaction with the banking sector. Perhaps most notably, in July 1999 Mr. Cruickshank produced an interesting interim report, focusing on the dynamic interaction between competition law and banking regulation, and making six main recommendations designed to ensure that competition considerations are more closely factored into the regulatory process.

The theory is that in future competition problems should be less likely to occur if the possible effects of regulatory decisions on banking competition are the subject of more rigorous scrutiny at the time when they are made. There was also discussion of the future role of the Competition Commission, taking advice from the Office of Fair Trading.

The publication of the report was timely for those of us, including my hon. Friend the Member for Arundel and South Downs (Mr. Flight) and the hon. Member for Bedford, who have served for many, many months on the Standing Committee considering the Financial Services and Markets Bill, which is to continue its path through the House next week. The Conservative Opposition closely agreed with the comments made by Don Cruickshank.

Indeed, the Official Report of our deliberations in Standing Committee A shows that the Conservative Opposition tabled amendments specifically to promote competition in the UK financial services industry—which includes banking—and international competitiveness. Amendment No. 46 dealt with the objective—an objective rather than just a principle—of competition, to include

"the maintenance of competition and promotion of United Kingdom competitiveness".—[Official Report, Standing Committee A, 8 July 1999; c. 42.]

We also tabled two new clauses defining the whole subject. Interestingly, in all our sittings—I was at virtually all of them—no comment was made by the hon. Member for Bedford on that subject, which overlaps neatly with today's debate. Indeed, it is clearly recorded that on 8 July the hon. Gentleman voted against proposals that would have included a competition objective and a competitiveness requirement in the Financial Services Authority. Where did his new-found interest in competition come from? When we could have done something tangible about it, by influencing relevant legislation, he had nothing to say and voted against our proposals.

The most important factor that would allay the fears that the hon. Gentleman and many others quite reasonably share is the promotion of competition in the UK banking sector. Conservative Members' entire approach to the Financial Services Authority has been to limit the impeding by regulation of the financial services industry.

There are something in excess of 560 banks in the City of London, including many foreign banks, many of which offer private banking facilities and any of which can apply for licences to set up as banks offering current accounts. There are in excess of 43 banks ordinarily offering current accounts in this country, and myriad other providers of other products along similar lines.

Such services are offered not only by the traditional banks but by the demutualised building societies, by an increasing number of credit unions—we would certainly encourage the freeing up of that sector, which plays a key role—and, perhaps most significantly of all, by the burgeoning internet services, which are proving to be extremely successful in the banking climate.

Only yesterday, the results from Prudential, which owns Egg, were published. In the space of about a year, Egg has brought in about £7.6 billion of private money on deposit, gained more than 800,000 depositors—bringing in an extra 100,000 in the final quarter of 1999 alone—and built up an asset book in excess of £2 billion. It has been enormously successful by being competitive and offering low or nil charges and preferential rates of interest. Like any other commercial company with a banking licence in this country, it is perfectly at liberty to do that. It is accessible to anybody who chooses to gain access to it and has the money to bank with it.

Similarly, Virgin is setting up a successful internet banking business. There is also much greater access for foreign banks—this has been a consideration in the Financial Services and Markets Bill—to offer facilities to British customers at competitive rates. The number of credit card providers has doubled in the past six years alone.

It is not only traditional banking houses that offer facilities to individuals. Largely with the approval of the Government—I agree with them—supermarkets such as Sainsbury's and Tesco and even car manufacturing companies are offering banking facilities to members of the public. It is interesting to note that, perhaps as a dry run, when the Government launched their initial hapless proposals on individual savings accounts in 1997, they strongly promoted new forms of providers, to increase competition in the banking sector and encourage savings schemes such as ISAs to excess.

Of course, ISAs have been an enormous disaster in terms of bringing in new investors, but that is the marketplace. The market has shown that the product is defective. The product will succeed only if there is a multiplicity of providers offering different products and services that appeal to different people.

Everything that the hon. Gentleman has, justifiably, said today, could be resolved to a large extent by the greater promotion of competition, for which Conservative Members have been arguing for a long time. In practice, there is more competition because of all the new providers entering the market. The hon. Gentleman would do better to concentrate on the prime considerations: the transparency of information on the availability of those products; greater upfront transparency on charges and agreement to them, which has happened since voluntary codes of banking practice came in in 1992; greater product innovation, which will only be hampered by excessive regulation, as has happened in other countries; and, greater moves towards making accounts portable and mobile.

The greatest incentive for a bank not to charge excessively is the power of the customer to say, "I don't like the service or the level of charges that you are imposing and I will take my account elsewhere." Some work could be done to improve the mobility of accounts, in particular when one is tied up with direct debits and such like. Those are the considerations to which the hon. Member for Bedford would do best to direct his ire.

I have no doubt that in future there will be a much tougher regime for banks that promote uncompetitive practices under the competition laws—for example, through the greater powers that are being given to the Competition Commission, the campaigns against so-called "Rip-off Britain", or whatever soundbite one wants to use. However, the marketplace and the greater mobility of customers will help most of all, in particular during the next few years as the way in which financial services operate changes radically.

[Mr. Tim Loughton]

The hon. Gentleman's six-point plan contained little if anything about those considerations. He said that the Government should acknowledge that bank overcharging is a problem. There has been acknowledgement of a problem with bank charges—or the perception of them—which is why the Cruickshank commission was set up. The hon. Gentleman asked for an independent investigation. One would hope that the Cruickshank review has some degree of independence—certainly some of the comments in Mr. Cruickshank's interim report in July grated with what the Chancellor had said days earlier, but the Government have not so far been amenable to accepting our amendments to the Financial Services and Markets Bill.

The hon. Gentleman asked for compensation for past overcharging. Banking codes have existed since the early 1990s and it does no one any service to rake back over the past 10 or 15 years to prove that, in what was a different environment, banks should have been liable for all those charges. That would provoke a scandal like the pensions mis-selling scandal, on a massive and wholly impractical scale.

The hon. Gentleman also asked that a legal and regulatory base be created within which effective competition can take place. The Competition Commission and what Mr. Cruickshank is trying to do will deal with part of that problem. Furthermore, the hon. Gentleman asked that the new financial services ombudsman should improve the banking code, and he came out with the extraordinary statement that the ombudsman is not there to act in the interests of the consumer. The entire Financial Services Authority is there to act on and safeguard the financial interests of consumers, so that demonstrates a basic misunderstanding on the hon. Gentleman's part.

Finally, the hon. Gentleman said that we need yet another "Of-organisation"—an "Ofbank." We have the FSA, the Bank of England and the Competition Commission. We do not want yet another tier of regulation which could succeed only in stifling competition, which would result in fewer players in the market, fewer products, and less innovation. That could mean only that choice for the consumer and the charges that go with such choice would be diminished, which is not what we are trying to achieve.

This debate has been disappointing because of the way in which the hon. Gentleman moved it. It does no one any good simply to bash the banks and to hark back many years. If the Government are to succeed in many areas, such as saving schemes and the regional venture capital fund that they want to promote, it is important for them to liaise with the banks. The banking sector is vital to the economy. Many things have gone wrong and many need to get better, but it is competition, above all, that will bring that about.

11.44 am

Mr. Martin Salter (Reading, West): I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Bedford (Mr. Hall) on securing this important Adjournment debate. The hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Mr. Loughton) was somewhat mean spirited in his response. If he thinks that my hon. Friend was bank bashing, he should listen carefully to my contribution.

I shall concentrate on the on-going review of banking services and the fact that the network of rural and district bank branches is shrinking fast. In doing so, I shall draw on the excellent contribution made by the hon. Member for South-East Cornwall (Mr. Breed) to his debate on financial services on 15 December, which also elicited a response from the Economic Secretary to the Treasury. I also want to demonstrate the concern felt by all hon. Members regardless of party—expressed in early-day motion 822, which attracted about 89 signatures, and early-day motion 962—about the lack of availability of banking and financial services and the worrying pace of district bank branch closures.

I have had direct experience of the sheer lack of concern shown for the elderly and disabled customers of Lloyds TSB in my constituency. Last summer, Lloyds TSB introduced an ill-fated pilot scheme, which completely removed cashier services from four branches in the Reading area. It showed no concern for the elderly or the disabled. How are blind people supposed to use a fully automated bank branch? How are the disabled supposed to access some of the services via what are known as ATMs? What small business can tolerate a system that will offer only £200 in cash? What jobbing builder can operate in this day and age on only £200 per day for building materials? What small shops can cope with the loss of a day's interest on their deposits as a result of it taking four days to clear cheques and deposits as opposed to three when one deposits over the counter?

Only after an extremely high-profile and vigorous campaign, which I brought to this place, supported by local people and also ably supported by our local newspaper, the Reading Chronicle, was Lloyds TSB, the largest and most profitable of our banks, forced to back down and reinstate the cashier service.

I worry that that bank's ill-fated pilot scheme in Reading is simply a nasty glimpse into the future. Robots may well replace people in banking. The disabled, the disadvantaged and those living outside the large town centres would then be denied local access to a range of financial services. That is called financial exclusion and the Government need to lead the way in tackling that serious threat to the quality of life of many of our constituents.

The branch network of Britain's retail banks is shrinking as I speak. More than 4,000 branches of high street banks have closed in the past 10 years and the independent consultant, Deloitte, predicts that a similar number will close in the next five years, which is a significant quickening of the pace of closure. Barclays announced 200 more closures starting this month and, if last Sunday's The Mail on Sunday is to be believed, although I accept that it is not always right, Barclays' new Canadian chief executive, Matthew Barrett, is likely to announce a further round of closures with the bank's results next month.

NatWest has announced a further 200 closures as part of its defence against the Scottish take-over bids and for Lloyds TSB the closures are a continuing process. The closures are hardly likely to stop there. For a growing number of communities in rural areas, urban suburbs and inner-city areas, the result is a complete loss of local banking representation.

The campaign for community banking services, with which many hon. Members have been in touch in the past few years and which acts as the voice of 24 of some of the country's best-known charities and trade organisations, has forecast that at least another 1,000 communities will become bankless if present trends continue unabated.

The lack of local banking services impacts most heavily on the vulnerable, the elderly and disabled and on shopkeepers and small business people. It also impacts on those on low incomes or without the use of a car. For many, the lack of such services can mean not only inconvenience but major difficulties—early loss of financial independence and exclusion from mainstream financial services. For the shopkeeper, it often means lost turnover, as the more mobile go elsewhere for banking and take their shopping needs with them. Some of those businesses then have to close, and the lifeblood is drained from our district, rural and inner-city communities.

My hon. Friend the Minister should appreciate that, beyond the obvious problems, there are serious implications for community sustainability and environmental damage, as many are forced to use their cars to travel further—not only for their banking needs, but to shop for items that were previously available within their local communities. The situation will undoubtedly get worse as the full effects of the current takeover battle in the retail banking sector are felt. Frankly, it is spurious for the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham to claim that the market will be the answer to all our needs. Clearly, it will not, and there is a need for Government action and intervention.

The Government's current attitude—which seems to be to leave the question of branch closures to self-regulation—worries hon. Members, including myself. Self-regulation by an industry in turmoil, driven by the desire to slash costs and increase profits, is likely to achieve little.

Let us look at the banks' record on self-regulation. NatWest gave five weeks' notice to close the only branch in Killamarsh in Derbyshire, which has a population of some 10,000. That was done just before Christmas in 1998. The bank refused to listen to the concerns of thousands of local people. I have referred to the tactics and behaviour of Lloyds TSB in my constituency. The company was quite happy to remove the last bank from the village of Theale in my constituency, and it moved to the self-service, fully automated scheme with no consultation with its customers—those stakeholders who provided the bank's record £3.2 billion profit last year. The village of Wheathampstead in Hertfordshire—featured in the BBC's "Panorama" programme in October—was deserted by Barclays at only two weeks' notice, either side of an August bank holiday.

So much for self-regulation—so much for community consultation. So much for giving a damn about the interests of the people who made those banks so successful and profitable. Can the industry be trusted to self-regulate? I think not.

Mr. Loughton: Will the hon. Gentleman give way?

Mr. Salter: No, I will not.

In anticipation of what the social exclusion unit's policy action team might say, we have seen token experiments in social banking being planned by individual banks in half a dozen deprived areas—notably Portsmouth and Salford. By their own admission, the banks concerned see these merely as expensive one-off experiments. That is not much help for the hundreds—soon to be thousands—of communities throughout Britain who are losing their banks.

Three quarters of the cases brought to the notice of the campaign for community banking services over the last two years were not in deprived areas. What sort of help will those token social banking schemes be to middle England, or to rural areas in Scotland or Wales?

I make a plea to my hon. Friend the Minister that she, unlike her predecessor, finds time to meet representatives of the campaign for community banking services, which has been requesting such a meeting since January 1999. If not, will she at least meet hon. Members, such as myself, who are in the process of establishing an all-party campaign for community banking? Why is provision not being made in the Financial Services and Markets Bill to give the Financial Services Authority at least reserve powers regarding local access to basic banking services?

I thoroughly endorse the six points made by my hon. Friend the Member for Bedford in his measured and thoughtful speech. I believe that we have made the case for a banking regulator to guarantee access to financial services, and to tackle head-on the growing menace of the exclusion of hundreds of thousands of people from financial services.

11.54 am

Mrs. Louise Ellman (Liverpool, Riverside): I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Bedford (Mr. Hall) on securing this debate. It is important because it puts an increasing focus on banking, particularly the relationship between banking and the small and medium-sized business sector. That is particularly important, because more than 90 per cent. of new jobs are generated through small and medium-sized enterprises. The success of SMEs depends very much on their access to finance, whether venture capital or financial services. The banks have a particular role to play in that respect.

Historically, banks have failed the SME sector in this country by failing to provide funding for small businesses, and by their lack of support in their day-to-day dealings. They have failed also to understand the needs of businesses in areas such as access to cash, cash flow and the ability to give support and advice that are valid and helpful, without the people receiving that support finding that they are then liable for large bills that they did not know about and find difficult to meet.

The initiative for finding funding for SMEs has come not from the banking sector, but from outside. Principally among those outside sources is the much-derided local government sector. I was leader of Lancashire county council between 1981 and 1997, and one of our major policy innovations was to find a way in which the public and private sectors could work together to support businesses. Specifically, we found a way in which venture and loan capital could be supplied to small businesses which the banks had abandoned and, in many cases, had not even tried to help.

In 1986, through Lancashire Enterprises, now Enterprises plc—the county's economic development company—we set up the Rosebud fund. The fund was one of the first attempts to assist small businesses. It made—and still makes—loans to small businesses. Those loans were at times as small as £1,000, but, typically, they have reached £100,000 and £200,000. Those funds were then matched with funding from other sources and, in the years since the fund started, more than 260 investments have been made, over £3.5 million has been invested in small businesses in the Lancashire economy—which otherwise would not have received support—and 5,000 jobs have been supported.

[Mrs. Louise Ellman]

The fund was set up with the support of the European Commission through European objective 2 funding. It was innovative—it still is—in that it showed how small businesses could be supported on a commercial basis. The secret of the fund's success is that finance is provided in an appropriate way and on appropriate terms, and is linked to specialist business advice. Firms—particularly small firms—that found themselves in difficulties after the first year or two are able to secure re-financing and have access to proper advice in a way that helps them to prosper.

The Rosebud fund was needed because the banking sector had failed small businesses. Since that time, parts of the banking sector have tried to step into that gap—in a variable way, but with some success. Other funds involving banks, such as the Local Investment Fund, have attempted to assist in localised, poor areas. Organisations such as the Prince's Trust do very good work, and the innovative Merseyside investment fund, using European objective 1 funding, has invested—together with other finance generated—£62 million to support 4,000 jobs in the Merseyside area.

Those schemes were required because of the failings of the banking sector. The ideas started in the 1980s through, in my case, Lancashire county council have been picked up through the new regional development agencies. The agencies are looking at setting up their own venture capital funds, geared particularly to the needs of small and medium-sized businesses. I am glad to note that Barclays has said that it will be willing to invest in the North West regional development agency's regional fund. I also pay tribute to the work that the Co-operative bank has done in identifying the banking sector with the needs of small businesses.

When we think about small businesses, the possibilities of community and co-operative businesses are often ignored. Through co-operative development agencies and the Industrial Common Ownership Fund, attempts have been made to find funding for co-operative development. That is another area in which the banking sector, apart from the Co-operative bank and—to a limited extent—one or two others, has ignored the needs of small and new businesses. I hope that, in the future, the banks will pay more attention to those needs.

Businesses need access to capital through banks, but they must also have day-to-day dealings with the banks. My hon. Friend the Member for Bedford has drawn attention to many of the problems that businesses and individuals face in their daily operations. Banks are often not friendly to small businesses. They often do not understand the cash flow needs of small businesses or understand the problems that charges for cash deposits impose on small businesses, especially the smallest. The consumer, whether a business or an individual, is often unclear about the rate of interest being charged. All too often, small businesses undertake the necessary consultations with banks, but then face a large, unexpected bill, often to the small businesses' detriment.

I support my hon. Friend's proposals for openness, support and clarity for the consumer. The Consumer Association has conducted surveys and drawn attention to the similarities in the difficulties faced by small businesses and consumers in their dealings with banks. The association also points to the difficulties that many consumers believe they would face in changing their bank if they can find a better service. Sometimes, changing banks is not as complex as it is made out to be. The association has performed an important role in drawing attention to those areas, and has assessed of the appropriateness of the different services offered by the banks according to the varying needs of their clients. There is a need for clear information, whether for individual consumers or for small businesses, on the various services offered by different banks and the charges imposed. I support any initiative that will bring more clarity to that information and make it more readily available to the consumer.

I agreed with my hon. Friend the Member for Reading, West (Mr. Salter) when he expressed disappointment with the comments made by the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Mr. Loughton), who seemed more concerned about defending banking interests than considering the needs of small businesses and the community. I cannot share his view that the only problem is lack of competition in some sectors. Banks have responsibilities, and they must meet them—preferably by following Government guidance. If that does not work, regulation may be required.

Banks are an important part of our economy and our society. They are rightly under scrutiny because they have failed, and in many cases still fail, the needs of small businesses. Banks also have consumer and community responsibilities. In a recent statement, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor spoke about his intention to set up new investment funds in areas of particular deprivation, including one in my constituency in Liverpool. Those funds will be extremely important and will take their place with other funds that are directed to those particular needs. However, the businesses set up through the availability of such funds—like other businesses—can be successful only if they have continuing access to sympathetic and reasonable banking services.

So far, banks have not faced up to their responsibilities. I hope that they will do so under the new scrutiny of their dealings with the commercial sector, which is important in generating our economy, and with consumers in general, who are important to our society.

12.6 pm

Mr. Howard Flight (Arundel and South Downs): This is an important debate because it raises serious issues and heralds the full Cruickshank report, which is expected by the end of June. Two important specific issues were also raised by the hon. Members for Bedford (Mr. Hall) and for Reading, West (Mr. Salter). All of us will have met constituents with problems in both categories. I sympathise particularly with those problems raised by the hon. Member for Reading, West, because my rural constituency suffers from similar problems.

Better competition is not the full answer, but it is an important part of it, as has been demonstrated in the United States of America. Another issue is exactly how the FSA will regulate banks. Despite the monumental nature of the Financial Services and Markets Bill, which has 378 clauses and deals in detail with many issues, the actual banking regulation that the FSA will deliver remains to be considered.

My biggest concern is that the Cruickshank report will be subject to too much spin. The Government will say that the report proves that they are doing something about the issue, but the report will be sidelined. That has already begun to happen, as my hon. Friend the Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Mr. Loughton) pointed out. We have consistently argued that competition should be an objective of the Financial Services and Markets Bill; the FSA is not too keen to focus on it. It has been made clear that the FSA will focus on the objectives laid down in the Bill, and that the principles are considered secondary to the objectives. The Treasury has been successful in heading off Cruickshank's intention, which we share, and has replaced it with competition arrangements that are weak by comparison, albeit worth having.

I was slightly uncomfortable to note that the hon. Member for Bedford focused on data produced by a particular organisation. We all admit that mischarging problems exist, but to quantify them as an amount for compensation is not the best approach. The new ombudsman scheme will address complaints more effectively, and I agree that he or she should review the banking code. I hope that the combined ombudsman will be more effective than the single banking ombudsman arrangements and that the relevant staff at the FSA will read the report of this debate, because it relates to the banking regulatory activities that they will undertake.

If we focus on the competitiveness of the market place, there are arguments both ways, but at the macro level there is a powerful case of insufficient competitiveness, because financial intermediation in the banking system is still enormously expensive. As a cost, it is 4 to 5 per cent. of assets. In the United States mutual fund industry, which has become as big a financial intermediator as the banks, it is about 1.5 per cent. One of the main reasons why the US has been much more successful is its ability to offer money funds that compete with bank deposits. That is not possible in this country, largely because of EU regulation, under which money funds may not account on what is called an amortisation basis. I have to say that, to protect their own position, German banks have not wanted to permit money funds to get off the ground. I have banged on about that for some time, and shall continue to do so, as I believe it extremely important to have competing money funds, as happens in the US.

The lender of last resort doctrine has also encouraged concentration. The original doctrine was that the central bank should stand behind any bank that was well run, whether large or small. That no longer prevails, and the market has been forced to conclude that the central bank—the lender of last resort—will stand behind only those banks that are so big that they cannot be allowed to fail. The resulting net reduction in smaller banks has led to increasing consolidation in the banking industry.

Conversely, the argument that banks' return on equity has risen constantly over the past decade is slightly unfair. The starting level was very low, and banks have had very low levels of bad debts for the past seven years, largely as a result of this country's economic success since 1992 and of the golden economic legacy bequeathed by the previous Government to the present Government. However, that situation will change in due course: I am afraid that the Chancellor is deluding himself if he thinks that he has abolished business cycles.

New competitive banks have emerged, such as Virgin, and Egg, which has £7.6 billion in deposits. Barclays bank has noted that it had lost 30 per cent. of the credit card market and now has only 10 per cent. The banking industry here is more productive and competitive than that in France or Germany. In principle, the internet ought to be a major vehicle for more competition, but will customers or providers benefit from the cost savings? That is the big question.

One problem for banking regulators and central banks is the fear of systemic risk. The last time that a Government really tried to get banking competition going was in the early 1970s. Hon. Members may recollect that that was followed by the 1974 banking crisis and the Bank of England's "lifeboat" to rescue a total systemic threat to our banking system.

That period of difficulty came about because lots of new, small banks founds that, although they could obtain deposits by paying high interest rates, their lending risks were high. When the economy turned down, those banks had appalling bad debts and the structure proved to be a house of cards. Regulators therefore have a bias in favour of cartels, which they feel they can manage more effectively against systemic risk, but a balance has to be struck.

I am slightly worried about the new banks that are joint ventures with supermarkets. They are not really new banks, but will be more partnerships between a supermarket and an existing large bank. Will that really provide competition? The Prudential, for example, is already a major financial services business.

Market entry remains a problem. The questions of who can be a bank and of what a bank is have not been clearly defined. Money transmission charges are high, and the relevant organisations operate to some extent as a cartel, representing a barrier to entry. In addition, there are high capital adequacy costs on change of control. Overall, banking concentration is increasing and will manifest itself on a pan-European basis, rather than merely in the domestic economy.

The hon. Member for Reading, West used the phrase "financial exclusion". I dislike that phrase, which I consider to be a politically correct usage, but the problems set out by the hon. Gentleman are real and need to be addressed. I was amazed when my own bank wrote to me to tell me that I could no longer get cash over the counter and that I had to use a machine. I wondered what a bank was for if it was not obliged to dispense my own cash back to me. The incident led me to believe that the services that banks provide might be determined when banking licences are granted. That could be a lever to help tackle some of the issues.

[Mr. Howard Flight]

The large banks would be foolish if they did not take the initiative in addressing those needs, but that will depend in part on the seriousness with which the Government address the issues raised in the Cruickshank report. However, it is only fair that large banks with greater powers should address some of the community issues that have arisen.

The hon. Member for Bedford made some specific points towards the end of his speech. I consider that overcharging must come within the territory of the competent ombudsman. The concept of following the phase 1 and phase 2 pension model is not practical; the necessary regulations do not exist to do so. I do not think that it is legally possible—even were it desirable—to do what the hon. Gentleman proposes in terms of a total financial compensation deal. The territory is for the ombudsman and a review of the banking code. We are awaiting the independent investigation, but the crucial political question is whether the Government will act in earnest or will sideline the findings of the Cruickshank investigation.

The matter of separate regulation arose. The Conservative party has expressed doubts about including banking in the remit of the Financial Services Authority. The US model, the Securities and Exchange Commission, deals with securities and related industries only. However, the decision has been taken, and it does not permit establishing a separate body that might be called Ofbank. The important question is whether banking regulation will simply combine the roles previously taken by the Bank of England and other central banks, or will be wider. The key to that is a more competitive banking environment.

I look to the US model in this matter. It is not perfect, but the US banking system is more competitive and delivers customer needs better than the system here, and substantially better than the system in continental Europe. I believe that the biggest enemy of banking competition is European Union banking regulation, which retains a major element of support for cartels. This debate also reveals one significant point—the importance of the initiative that the FSA will have in formulating its activities and objectives in the area of banking regulation.

12.18 pm

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Miss Melanie Johnson): It is a pleasure to be able to congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Bedford (Mr. Hall) on securing this Adjournment debate. He and other hon. Members have raised important matters, and the debate comes at an opportune moment.

First, I shall outline some of the background themes of this important issue. The financial services industry is one of the UK's success stories, accounting for 7 per cent. of national income and employing more than 1 million people. Increasingly, financial services are a key component of local economies throughout the UK. The work force survey shows that, of the 450,000 extra jobs created over the past year, one in three was in the financial services sector. The message is clear that financial services is a growth industry for many regional centres as well as for the City of London.

Within the general financial services sector, the UK banking industry plays a central role in the economy. A modern economy depends on effective and efficient relationships between its savers and borrowers and its financial services industry. Firms need the investment that the banking industry provides. They also need the financial markets, on which they can raise the capital that enables them to invest, grow and create jobs.

High levels of innovation, competition and efficiency are vital to an effective banking system and essential for meeting the productivity challenge. That is why, as my hon. Friend the Member for Bedford said, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his pre-Budget report in November 1998 a review of the services provided by the United Kingdom banking sector.

The Government had a genuinely open mind on the issue, but a number of concerns have been expressed similar to those articulated so well by my hon. Friend about whether the United Kingdom banking industry fully meets the high levels of competition necessary. The review, announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer and chaired by Don Cruickshank, was established to examine the innovation, competition and efficiency in various sub-markets of the banking industry, including lending to small and medium-sized enterprises, to compare them with international standards and to consider possible options for change.

Don Cruickshank published his interim report in July last year. He noted that it was crucial to get the right balance between regulatory and competition outcomes if there were to be more innovation, more effective competition and greater efficiency in the United Kingdom banking industry. He added that, in the Financial Services and Markets Bill, the Government had already taken a significant step forward in tackling the issue, and suggested ways in which it might be taken further.

Don Cruickshank made some specific recommendations. The Financial Services Authority should be responsible for making the trade-off between regulatory and competition outcomes in financial services. To ensure that that happens, the FSA should have a primary competition objective in addition to its regulatory objective. He recommended that the financial services sector should have no unnecessary exclusion from general competition law. The rules should be within the scope of scale or complex monopoly investigations by the Office of Fair Trading or the Competition Commission. The OFT should not be required legally to scrutinise every rule issued by the FSA, but its role of overseeing the financial services sector, including the impact of regulation, should be strengthened. The FSA's rule-making decisions should be open to review in respect of their impact on competition. The final recommendation was that the Competition Commission, not Ministers, should be the final arbiters of the public interest in the scrutiny or review procedures.

The Government considered the interim report very carefully and announced their response on 9 November. We accepted all but one of Don Cruickshank's recommendations, and we shall table amendments to the Financial Services and Markets Bill to give effect to them in due course. In the remaining area, although we share Don Cruickshank's objective that the FSA should have responsibility for making a trade-off between regulatory outcomes, we did not accept his conclusion that giving it a new competition objective would assist it in doing so. Instead, we believed it likely that such a change would confuse the responsibilities of the FSA, as the United Kingdom's prudential financial services regulator, and the roles of the OFT and the Competition Commission, which are responsible for competition regulation in the economy as a whole. We are considering the changes to the Bill that will be necessary to meet the underlying recommendations of Don Cruickshank's review.

In summary, the Government took Don Cruickshank's interim report very seriously. Our response demonstrated our commitment to effective competition in the banking sector. Don Cruickshank said in a statement at the time:

"I welcome the changes the Government proposes to make to the Bill to ensure that markets in financial services are subject to effective competition scrutiny."

I understand that the review team is close to finalising its report, and the Government should receive it in the next couple of months. The hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs (Mr. Flight) mentioned June.

Mr. Flight: By June.

Miss Johnson: I think that that is a generous estimate.

I should like to deal with some of the comments of my hon. Friend the Member for Bedford. He referred to the difficulties that some of his constituents have had with the banking sector, and we all sympathise with those problems. That is why the ombudsman proposals are in the Financial Services and Markets Bill and why matters are being dealt with under the FSA's supervision. We need those structures, and we are putting them in place. We recognise that there are issues to be addressed.

My hon. Friend also spoke of the details of the financial services ombudsman scheme as proposed in the Bill. I am grateful for his comments and questions. I understand why some hon. Members have attempted to turn this debate into a detailed discussion of the Bill. They will have further opportunities to do so shortly, but now is not the time. There have already been plenty of opportunities. However, the specific areas mentioned by my hon. Friend are relevant to this debate.

The first recourse for those who have a dispute with a bank or other financial institution is to try and resolve the dispute directly. My hon. Friend described some of the difficulties that occasionally arise when doing so. The banking code emphasises the need for fair dealing, transparency on charges and a willingness to correct errors and handle complaints speedily. The industry has shown a willingness to update the code regularly and to take account of the views of a range of outside bodies, including the current relevant ombudsmen.

I recognise that it is not always possible to resolve disputes directly; that is why the schemes exist and why, as my hon. Friend is aware, the Financial Services and Markets Bill covers that important issue. Part XV sets out the framework for the operation of the ombudsman scheme, the detailed operation of which will be determined in rules made by the Financial Services Authority. This scheme will replace the existing dispute resolution schemes, including the existing banking ombudsman. It will provide a one-stop shop, which is extremely desirable. The scheme's main purpose is to provide easy access for individual retail consumers to a dispute resolution procedure that is speedy and informal. However, it will be open to the authority to define certain categories of firms as eligible complainants. The FSA is consulting on this; it issued a consultation paper in November last year and is seeking responses by 10 February.

As proposed by the FSA, the scheme would provide a free, simple, informal and accessible alternative to the courts. It would enable eligible customers of the banks to resolve a range of disputes similar to those currently covered. It would, of course, also be statutory and its findings would be binding.

The FSA has proposed that firms should be eligible to use the scheme if they have a turnover of up to £1 million, and no more than four employees. A number of people have commented on the proposals, and my hon. Friend may wish to do so. As for his comments about retrospective compensation, it is worth noting that many of the claims received pre-date the banking code. Some other changes, such as advance notification of charges, have been made since then.

Let me say to my hon. Friend the Member for Reading, West (Mr. Salter) that we recognise that there is a trend towards smaller branch networks. We welcome the banks' development of alternative delivery channels. Choice and diversity are important; a number of banking options are open for many people, but not everybody. However, there are now many options that were not previously available. Indeed, a number of banks, including Lloyds TSB, have successfully established links with Post Office Counters Ltd. to ensure that banking is available where there is a post office. The post office network is far more extensive than the banking network and provides a number of other options.

I was concerned to hear how events have developed in Reading and about the lack of consultation. That is not how banks should deal with their customers. I was passed a note offering inducements to have a meeting. I shall consider further the possibility of holding such a meeting. The inducement was that my hon. Friend will love me for ever—it says here. I find that quite tempting—

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Mr. John McWilliam): Order. On that appropriate note, time is up.

Inner London Housing

12.30 pm

Mr. Jeremy Corbyn (Islington, North): I welcome the opportunity to hold this brief debate. I also welcome the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, my hon. Friend the Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin), who looks more like a Minister than I have ever known him to do, and I have known him for a long time. I am glad that he will reply to the debate, because, although the housing problems that he faces in his constituency are different from those in inner London, he has a good understanding of the life of people in inner London. I hope, therefore, that he will have some sympathy over the issues that I shall raise.

I have chosen inner London housing as the subject of the debate because the problems there are different from those in the rest of the country. A vacant housing agency has been set up by the Government. Members of Parliament from north-western and north-eastern constituencies frequently complain about the large number of unlettable council properties in their areas—that is a fairly common phenomenon in that region, and raises specific issues that need to be tackled.

However, the situation in inner London is completely different. Every week, my constituency surgery is full of people with desperate housing problems. Those problems impinge on many other parts of people's lives. We must consider that. Recently, a document jointly produced by the London Housing Unit and the Association of London Government set out starkly how poor quality housing affects people's lives.

I shall not quote the whole document, as that would take up the half-hour allocated for the debate, so I shall deal specifically with educational achievement. Teachers in any inner London primary or secondary school will tell us that children living in bed-and-breakfast or hostel accommodation, or grossly overcrowded council accommodation, suffer in many ways. They suffer because they do not have their own bedroom—something that all of us would want for our children—so they cannot do their homework and keep up with other children.

If a child has to share a bedroom with a couple of brothers or sisters, that is extremely unhealthy—especially for older children. Furthermore—on a practical matter—if one child is ill, all the children become ill. In an overcrowded household, the incidence of cross-infection is much higher than elsewhere. If children do not have their own bedroom, where can they do their homework? Homework clubs are fine; they are wonderful, I welcome and support them. However, children should be able to do their homework in their own home and in their own time. That is important.

Truancy rates are higher among children who live in overcrowded accommodation. Often their parents are much poorer. Increasingly, London is becoming a two-class society. In any primary school, one can see which kids have computers and good housing and who are achieving in school. One can also see children who are equally as bright, enthusiastic and intelligent, but do not have computers at home and do not have the same facilities as others. We owe it to our children to ensure that they have decent housing.

If I might migrate slightly—from the school to the doctor's surgery, or to the local hospital—we can consider the incidence of notifiable diseases and serious health problems, such as bronchial pneumonia. One can often trace those problems straight back to housing. My general practitioner, who works in my constituency, asked me, only half joking, "Why don't we swap surgeries one week, because we're seeing the same people?" Their real problem is not health, but poverty and housing. My GP told me to do my best to improve their housing and he would do his best to improve their health. However, the two matters are closely linked. If one takes into account such matters as the nutrition of people who live in poor quality housing, one can see the whole pattern.

In the attitudes of many of our young people—those in their mid-teens and older youths—towards education and life in general, I detect a sense of anger and dislocation, and a lack of belonging, because they have not had the same opportunities as others. That can often be traced back to inadequate housing. There is no lack of love on the part of their parents, nor a lack of desire to keep the family together. Their main problems are economic and are to do with housing. That is what we must try to tackle.

In inner London overall, there is a serious shortfall of housing.

Mr. Tony Colman (Putney): Does my hon. Friend agree that that has been especially exacerbated in Tory-controlled Wandsworth? There, the situation is much worse, because the council has sold a large quantity of its social housing stock to people outside the housing waiting list, as part of its continued mad idea that such housing is not needed. Does he agree that it is important for the Government to be able to haul in Wandsworth council to try to stop that process, given the inner London housing crisis that he so eloquently describes?

Mr. Corbyn: I thank my hon. Friend for that intervention, which he made at just the right time; I was about to refer to the sale of council properties.

Last Sunday, on "Crosstalk", I debated poverty in London with the hon. Member for Billericay (Mrs. Gorman). She held up Westminster and Wandsworth as paragons of virtue. I pointed out that both those authorities, where a significant number of extremely poor people live in substandard accommodation, had been involved not only in the legal sale of council housing, which local authorities are forced to undertake under the right to buy legislation, but had engaged in the wholesale removal from the social register of council tenants and council properties, and had exported their homeless people to other far-flung boroughs. That issue must be examined.

I entirely accept my hon. Friend's suggestion. I hope that the Minister will ask those two authorities—especially Wandsworth—what they are doing by continuing that policy of disposing of empty publicly owned buildings. There is a big difference between that and the sale of housing to existing tenants under the right to buy.

The Housing Corporation, which funds the construction of buildings by housing associations, has constantly had its funding cut. That has not occurred only under the Labour Government; it is part of a long continuum whereby the corporation's capital allocation has been reduced and it must rely increasingly on the private sector for funding. That leads to a disparity between the rents in housing association and local authority properties. That is a serious matter.

If a tenant receives housing benefit, the rent disparity does not make much difference. However, when tenants are trying to find a job, it makes an enormous difference. If they find a job and live in a housing association property with a lower rent than a council property, the gap between being on benefit and working is more favourable than it would be if their property had a high rent—a positive disincentive is created. That matter must be considered.

The total number in the queue for affordable housing in London is about 178,000—an enormous figure. In my own borough, the number is 12,000, of whom several hundred are on the priority list at any one time. That figure masks many inequities and inequalities. To get on to the housing waiting list, it is not just a matter of going to the town hall, the council office or—in my borough—the neighbourhood office and putting oneself on the list. People are included on the list only if they are in significant housing need and if they are not single. Single people, who have no particular medical problems and no requirement to support anyone else, do not go on to the housing list. The number of people in housing need is thus much higher than that figure of 178,000.

When my hon. Friend the Minister examines housing statistics, as he obviously does, will he reconsider the problems that are faced by single people? I give hon. Members an example. A week ago, a single man visited my advice surgery; he explained, reasonably, his housing problems and said that he was trying to find a job. He is due to attend various interviews, so hopefully he will be successful. However, he cannot find anywhere to live because he cannot afford any privately rented accommodation locally. He would be eligible for housing benefit if he could find private accommodation, but he cannot raise the deposit. He is being asked for deposits of more than £1,000 to rent a small flat in the borough of Islington; there is no way that he can raise that.

Either we must consider introducing rent controls in the private sector or we must look at the role of the Department of Social Security in helping to support people in raising a deposit for a privately rented flat. Many single people simply cannot raise the large amount needed for a deposit, and therefore cannot move into a privately rented flat. Meanwhile, landlords increasingly say that they are not interested in people who are on benefit. It is a vicious circle that must be looked at.

Rented accommodation is only part of the issue. Home ownership in London also features in the equation. In the great scheme of things, London certainly has a much higher proportion of council-owned or housing association-owned property than does the south-east as a whole, or, probably, most of the country outside the great industrial cities of the midlands and the north, but house prices are very high. People who own property in London are seen to be on a ladder to permanent wealth, and permanent growth in that wealth.

However, in the borough that I represent, which is not very different from the rest of inner London, prices are rising very rapidly. In my borough, it would cost about £150,000—sometimes as much as £200,000—to buy a one-bedroom flat for single person or a couple.

The cheapest flat that I have seen on sale anywhere in my borough recently was £80,000. Out of curiosity, I went to look at it. It had one bedroom, a living room-kitchen-diner in one room and a very small bathroom, and was on the second floor of a four-storey Victorian building on Holloway road, above a shop. Holloway road is a major road, by any stretch of the imagination. The flat had been well cared for by the current owner, but it was still priced at more than £80,000—for a very small flat where no one could think of bringing up children in a normal way.

The long-term effect of the very rapidly rising prices in inner London is that if a family in housing need cannot get on to the housing list and therefore cannot be nominated to a housing association property or a council property, they must rent privately—for which they need to raise a large deposit and in which they have no long-term guarantee of tenure—or buy, or move out of the borough.

Throughout inner London—Islington, Hackney, Camden, Lambeth and Lewisham—we are witnessing a rapid migration out of people on average or below average income and a rapid migration in of desperately homeless people who are housed in bed-and-breakfast accommodation and often wait a very long time to get any housing, and of wealthier people. London will rue the day that it turned its back on the social housing needs of its people, because we shall end up with an extremely polarised city.

I hope that the Minister will acknowledge several factors. I have mentioned the problems of housing and inadequate housing, but many people are completely homeless. Some of them sleep on the streets and rely on hostels for a secure roof over their head for as many nights as possible, and some are trying to bring up children in bed-and-breakfast accommodation, which is even worse than bringing them up in substandard housing.

We must look for solutions. In the 1970s and early 1980s, I was a local councillor on Haringey council. I recall with great pride the year that our borough managed to provide 1,000 new dwellings. We were very proud of our achievement. Many of those dwellings were of high quality. We were trying to build homes with gardens—places that any of us would want to live in.

After the election of the Conservative Government in 1979, the provision of new dwellings dwindled to almost nothing as a result of the cutting off of funds with which local authorities could build, the denial of local authorities' right to borrow in order to build, the encouragement of a limited number of housing association developments and, increasingly, the private funding of housing associations. Indeed, in answer to a parliamentary question that I asked last year, the Minister for Local Government and the Regions told me that, in one year, the total number of new dwellings for social renting in my borough was only 205. We need far more, as does every other inner London borough.

[Mr. Corbyn]

For solutions, I refer the Minister to a valuable document called "Homelessness in London—a way out" produced jointly by the London Housing Unit and the Association of London Government. Under the heading "Immediate action", it calls for:

"The acquisition—over a three-year period—of 15,000 existing homes, at an estimated total cost of £497m a year. The total public sector grant would be around £1.2b over a three year period, of which 10 per cent. would be met by the boroughs, £50m from the discretionary element of current ADP and the remainder . . . from additional ADP."

The rest would have to be raised from other sources.

The document also calls for

"A further increase to the current cost limits for 'existing satisfactory property' and 'purchase and repair' categories.

An increase to the notional weighting given to the new homelessness indicator in the housing capital resource allocation formula.

The provision of central Government revenue support for net costs of homelessness falling to the General Fund."

The document then talks about

"new measures to be taken in the medium term to prevent homelessness occurring; such as improvements to the housing benefit system, boosting the housing advice service, improving standards in the private rented sector."

Essentially, my plea to the Minister is that unless there is a significant increase in public sector investment in good-quality housing in inner London, the situation will not even mark time; it will get worse. Since the Government were elected, in May 1997, we have welcomed the release of capital receipts, the considerable amount that is being spent on the enormous backlog of housing repair, and the improvements to estates. In my borough, there is a repair backlog of £500 million. The repairs cannot all be done in one year; we are doing our best to deal with them. I hope that the declaration of a single regeneration budget area around Finsbury Park will further increase expenditure on housing.

However, better running, better administration and better improvement to existing stock do not solve the problem. The fact that the Government quite often insist on mixed developments and allow large amounts of private sector developments on land that was formerly in the public sector does nothing to fulfil the needs of the worst-off people in our society. I ask the Minister to consider very seriously increasing capital investment for local authority and housing association properties in inner London.

I mentioned housing benefit a couple of times, because it is important in many people's lives. In the early 1980s, housing benefit was given to local authorities to administer. They did not want to administer it, and indeed are penalised for doing so. In my borough, the administration has now been contracted out to a company called IT Net, largely because the council—in common with Hackney and many other boroughs—could not afford the capital necessary to invest in a new computer system.

The administration of housing benefit is appalling by any standards. Serious grief is caused. People visit me who are in desperate straits, threatened with eviction by private sector landlords because they are in arrears with their rent because housing benefit has not been paid. Others are being threatened by eviction by the local authority for being in arrears, when they are not really in arrears; it is an administrative problem.

I hope that, in monitoring the performance of the administration of housing benefit throughout the country—obviously, in the context of the debate, including London—the Minister will take note of those companies that are making a great deal of money from housing benefit but delivering an appalling service. I hope that he will take note of the vast profits that are being made by bed-and-breakfast landlords, who are getting fat on housing benefit while providing appalling housing. We need to take a serious look at the housing benefit system and perhaps invest more in bricks and mortar than in private sector landlords.

We ended the 20th century with great bangs, great fireworks and great hopes for this century. I hoped that we would have a slightly more social objective towards the start of this century. It cannot be right that, in inner London, the divisions between rich and poor are so big, and getting bigger. It cannot be right that so many children are growing up in inadequate accommodation. It cannot be right that market forces are driving the poor out of inner London and forcing the remainder to live in substandard private rented accommodation.

We must make a real effort to improve the housing conditions of the poorest people in this city. That problem can best be tackled in the way that it was tackled in the 19th century by great social reformers, such as Annie Besant, and by the London county council and many local authorities in the great building boom after the second world war. They built property for affordable rent, to give secure homes to people who would otherwise be denied them. If we deny our young people decent quality housing, we shall deny them many other things in life. I look to my hon. Friend the Minister and the Government to recognise those needs and to provide us with the investment that we need to improve housing conditions in inner London.

12.50 pm

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (Mr. Chris Mullin): In his forceful speech, my hon. Friend the Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) has raised many important issues. However, he has left me only nine minutes in which to respond to his many questions.

Mr. Corbyn: I beg my hon. Friend's pardon.

Mr. Mullin: At the outset, I shall address one or two of the points that my hon. Friend made. However, I may have to write to him to reply to his other questions.

My hon. Friend is right. Before I moved to Sunderland in 1985, I lived in inner London for many years. I am familiar at first hand with some of the problems that he described.

My hon. Friend mentioned the special difficulties that single people have in getting on to housing waiting lists. He is right to say that it is a serious problem, but I am aware of several schemes to deal with it. The Peabody Trust has a scheme in Hackney to help single people into housing and the Bart's and Royal London trust has a similar scheme for its employees. Those schemes are aimed primarily at finding key workers somewhere reasonable to live, but we would like to see more of them.

My hon. Friend the Member for Putney (Mr. Colman) mentioned the position in Wandsworth and my hon. Friend the Member for Islington, North referred to Wandsworth and Westminster where local authorities have taken the irresponsible line of selling social housing stock and pushing the problems that they should deal with into neighbouring boroughs. That is regrettable and my officials are in an on-going dialogue with Wandsworth on that and other issues.

My hon. Friend mentioned resources. It is quite right that resources lie at the root of dealing with the huge problems that we face. However, I am sure that he accepts that it is not just a question of resources. He and I have lived in inner London for long periods and will have noticed the extraordinary incompetence and inefficiency that has occurred in some London boroughs over the years. I am glad to say that the position is getting better. We are putting much pressure on local authorities to improve their performance, and many of them have. I launched the best value housing programme this morning. I hope that it will also provide an incentive for local authorities to improve their performance. I am well aware, as my hon. Friend will be, that one can pour good money after bad. Therefore, we want the many extra resources that we are making available to be spent properly.

My hon. Friend referred to the homeless. As he will know, we are putting £200 million into a programme to help with rough sleeping. Given the constituency that he represents, I am sure that the extra pressure that asylum seekers put on housing is on his mind. He will know that we are taking steps to move asylum seekers to those parts of the country where there is no shortage of accommodation. Sunderland, the area that I represent, is for the first time accommodating asylum seekers in some of our surplus houses.

My hon. Friend referred to the Association of London Government document. My hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning has already met representatives of the association to discuss its initiative and he is due to meet them again next month.

Let me make it clear from the outset that the Government are acutely aware of the difficulties that my hon. Friend the Member for Islington, North has described. We are determined to do everything that we can to meet the challenge. Our aim is to ensure that everyone has a decent roof over his head and lives in sustainable communities.

The present situation in inner London is the result of several complex factors that cannot be resolved overnight. In the same way, we believe that the solution lies not in one or two high-profile central Government initiatives. A more holistic approach is called for that involves a number of linked activities in a partnership of the private, public and voluntary sectors.

The Government have already taken significant steps to improve the quality and increase the supply of affordable housing in the capital. We are involved in a massive investment programme to raise the quality and quantity of social housing in London. Over the lifetime of this Parliament, an additional £5 billion of capital receipts will have been made available nationally to build new homes and to rehabilitate old ones. About a third of that money will go to London, reflecting the high level of need that we know exists in the capital.

As part of that support, we recently announced a £613 million package of capital resources for investment by London boroughs in the current financial year. That represents a 54 per cent. increase over the previous year and accords with spending plans arising from the comprehensive spending review. Of this, more than £400 million will go to inner London authorities. Although some authorities will want to use the money for repairs to their own stock, others will want to prioritise new supply initiatives to ease the pressures on homelessness and families in temporary accommodation.

As I said, we are keen to ensure that the extra resources are spent wisely. For that reason, the housing investment programme allocations are made not on the basis of need alone, but on the quality of authorities' housing strategies and their performance in delivering housing services. That has proved a great incentive for the London boroughs to make real efforts to improve the services that they provide to their tenants and residents. I was pleased to see that, for example, my hon. Friend's local authority, Islington, made significant progress last year and that is to some extent reflected in its award of £28.5 million for the current financial year—an increase of more than 57 per cent. on what it received previously.

Most housing authorities in London are gradually improving their standards of performance, but there are still areas where some could do better. Indeed, some local authorities—I could name them but I will not—have only recently worked out which houses they own and which they do not. We are determined that local authorities should deliver high quality, efficient services that are responsive to the needs and aspirations of local people. That is why we are introducing the best value framework that I mentioned earlier. It will start on 1 April. Housing, as one of the key local authority services, is of prime importance. The new housing inspectorate, which is part of the Audit Commission, will not only act as an independent scrutineer of local authority housing services, but will assist and support authorities to build long-term strategies and tackle service failure where it occurs.

The proposed single pot for housing, also due to be implemented next year, will give London boroughs greater flexibility on deciding their own spending priorities. It will be up to each borough to decide on the balance between investing in its own stock and in new supply. I am confident that the boroughs will take full advantage of the opportunity.

The comprehensive spending review confirmed the continuation of the Housing Corporation's development programme. We have reversed the decline in funding and it will now increase in line with inflation. In the next financial year, we shall invest £276 million in London.

London's supply of land is limited, leading to an imbalance between supply and demand, so one of our main themes is to make more efficient use of existing urban land. The publication of the report of the urban task force has given greater impetus to making urban areas in inner London and elsewhere more attractive places to live. Over time, that will help to relieve the pressures on the capital's housing stock.

[Mr. Mullin]

We must not underestimate the contribution that the planning system makes to the supply of affordable homes in London. That is why the Government give strong encouragement to local authorities to use existing planning powers to insist that developers provide affordable housing in new developments. London boroughs reported that 2,650 homes were secured through planning policy in 1998–99 and many more are in the pipeline. Taken together with more than £15 million of developer contributions in lieu of on-site provision, the planning system makes a real contribution to increasing the supply of affordable housing. My colleagues and I are keen to encourage good practice and I am confident that the planning system could be used to better effect to deliver even more affordable homes.

As I made clear at the outset, I did not have sufficient time to respond to all the points in my hon. Friend's speech. I shall study it and, if there are points that I have not answered, I shall write to him. I thank him for raising this important issue.

Airborne Forces (Pegasus Symbol)

1 pm

Dr. Julian Lewis (New Forest, East): I am delighted to have secured the opportunity to raise the issue of the Pegasus symbol and airborne forces in this short debate. I am particularly grateful for the presence of the entire Conservative Front-Bench shadow defence team. Another Conservative Member who would very much have liked to be here is my hon. Friend the Member for Aldershot (Mr. Howarth), who has taken a close interest in this matter, but who is unavoidably on a Select Committee visit to the Netherlands. My hon. Friend has, however, left me a copy of a publication which is one of his prized possessions. It is a venerable, official history of British airborne divisions, entitled "By Air to Battle". Typically, because the Pegasus symbol is directly identified with anything to do with the airborne forces, that symbol adorns the front cover of the publication.

My hon. Friend particularly drew my attention to the part of the publication that refers to members of the airborne forces being honoured in December 1944 at a special investiture held in Buckingham palace. It says:

> "Each officer and man of these . . . divisions wears upon his shoulder the badge of Pegasus, the winged horse and its rider, brandishing a lance. As an emblem it is singularly appropriate, and whenever the citizens of Britain catch sight of it, they may perhaps call to mind that other horse which, long ago, it is said, brought armed men into the city of Troy—the vanguard of a victorious army."

To have an entire debate about insignia might seem to exaggerate the importance of such symbolism, but, when we consider it in contexts other than the military, we know that that is not the case. Only today, the papers are full of the argument about the future of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, and no doubt part of that will be the question of what signs, badges and insignia will in future represent that police force.

When one looks at any publication dealing with events in the history of the airborne forces, such as the account of the battle of Arnhem in Martin Middlebrook's definitive version that I have here, it is always Pegasus that illustrates its cover because Pegasus is the brand name that is inextricably bound up in the public mind with the image, the record and the heroism of the airborne forces. It is astonishing that the symbol should have been scrapped when it is so well known.

I am concerned about that matter because I view it not in isolation, but as part of a continuum. I have been noting with dismay a succession of events that have been chipping away at service morale and the military ethos. As I customarily do in these debates, I have taken the trouble to tell the Minister in advance nearly all the points that I intend to make today.

The Minister knows of my concern that, all too often, senior serving military personnel are being pushed forward by politicians into debates, to take the flak and to justify and try to excuse controversial decisions made by politicians. That is not good for the forces; it is not good for the impartiality of serving personnel, and it is imposing too much on military chiefs who have to put on a brave face when confronted by unpalatable decisions.

Politicians have a habit of showing spite to those who embarrass them. That is as true of the military field as it is anywhere else. I am old enough to remember the case of Colonel Colin Mitchell of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, who was deployed in Aden in the 1960s, when Harold Wilson had announced that it was not possible or viable to continue to maintain British control there.

Colonel Mitchell, on his own initiative, showed by his successful activities in Crater and the Radfan mountains that it was entirely practicable to do so. I believed then, as I do now, that it was no coincidence that, within a very few years, a Labour Government were hell-bent on destroying his regiment, the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.

I shall touch briefly on other examples before I return to Pegasus itself. The first is the Berlin airlift, which was commemorated in a number of ways in this country. However, unlike in other countries, no commemorative stamps were issued here last year to mark the 50th anniversary of that successful key moment in the cold war. I have a particular interest because my constituent, Mrs. Jessamy Waite, is the widow of Air Commodore Rex Waite, the RAF officer who conceived the practicability of the Berlin airlift.

On 6 April 1998, in a parliamentary question, I asked:

"Will the Minister consider the representations of the British Berlin Airlift Association, which wants the Royal Mail to issue a commemorative stamp to mark that crucial turning point in the war? That suggestion has so far been given a idle brush-off."

The Minister for the Armed Forces was then merely the Under-Secretary. He replied with his usual insouciance:

"I cannot accept that. I have had discussions with the Department of Trade and Industry, which as the sponsoring Department, is discussing this matter with the Post Office."—[Official Report, 6 April 1998; Vol. 310, c. 13-14.]

Sadly, those discussions were unavailing and no stamp appeared.

Subsequently, when I was in Germany, I saw the German postal 50-year anniversary cover of what they call the Luftbrücke, the aerial bridge. That followed the stamp that Germany had issued for the 40th anniversary, which followed a stamp to commemorate the 25th anniversary. It is sad that the Germans have a better appreciation of what the RAF did than does the British Post Office, whatever representations the Ministry of Defence managed to make to it.

The second example is the changing-over of the long-term volunteer reserve decorations, known as the RD and the TD. In March 1999, those gave way to a combined long service decoration for reserve forces, which is applicable to all ranks. As someone who never got above the lower deck in the Royal Naval Reserve, I welcome that change.

I do not, however, welcome the fact that, whereas previously officers had the incentive to stay on and work hard for 10 years to put the letters RD and TD after their name, that incentive has now disappeared. Instead of entitling officers and other ranks to have those letters after their name, the change ensures that nobody now has those letters after their name, except those who were awarded the decoration before the end of March 1999.

The next example is the royal tournament. Almost by stealth, and certainly without any major public debate, more than 100 years of history were scrapped virtually without notice. The first that most people knew about the loss of the tournament was that it was a fait accompli. When one looked at the royal tournament website, one read the following announcement:

"The Royal Tournament will run from 20th July to 2nd August 1999. It will be a show that will live on in your memory, make its mark in history and make you proud of our heritage. This is the year you must not miss. You will not see its like again."

You can say that again.

What did the MOD have to say about that? Mr. George Robertson, who was then Secretary of State, issued a press release in which he said that "it is timely for us to take a fresh look at this event . . . A number of alternatives are under consideration for this tri-service contribution to the year 2000"—

he was referring to the tournament's successor. He continued:

"A study team is currently examining how to modernise the permanent annual tournament after this millennium spectacular has completed."

That press release makes it quite obvious that the Government had no clear idea of what they wanted to put in place of the royal tournament; all they knew was that they wanted to get rid of an established and historic institution.

I revert now to the question of Pegasus and the airborne forces. In the early hours—at about a quarter past midnight—on the night of 5–6 June 1944, three gliders landed at the foot of a bridge over the Caen canal. In one of those gliders was a friend of mine, Mr. Bill Jolliffe, who was then a sergeant-major. He was a quiet, unassuming man, whom I met on what turned out to be his last trip to visit the grave in Normandy of his brother, who had been killed 10 days into the battle. Bill is not able to tell us what he thinks of the abolition of the Pegasus symbol, but one of my constituents, Mr. Bill Cornick, who is now 82, was in the second wave of gliders that landed during D-day itself. He has written to me, saying:

"How can those who have not served understand the morale-boosting effect the right to wear such insignia has upon soldiers? Arguably this is the driving force which makes men rise to efforts seemingly impossible, like all those things which go to make the individual think that his unit is the best. It's part of man management."

That is the voice of a veteran, but what do ordinary serving soldiers think about the loss of the insignia? I offer a couple of quotations from the comments of serving soldiers that were published in a service magazine. I shall identify neither the soldiers nor the magazine, in case Alastair Campbell gets to work on them. One states:

"I think it is disgraceful. I would be upset if the REME"—

the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers, of which he is a member—

"got amalgamated, which is one of the worst things, but to have something your parents and grandparents earned taken away must be heartbreaking. People died for that badge."

Another says:

"Each unit needs an identity so I feel they should keep it. It gives them a sense of the past and the endeavours of those who went before them. There are too many changes going on around the Army."

[Dr. Julian Lewis]

A third says:

"I don't think they should scrap the Pegasus; perhaps the whole air mobile force should keep it as their emblem. I don't know if the Paras would like that, but it is one way to keep it. It would keep everyone happy, I think."

He is absolutely right—that would be the sensible solution.

In August, I wrote to the Minister about the issue. The second paragraph of his reply of 1 September appeared to be contradicted by the fourth. The second paragraph states:

"The emblem of Bellerophon astride Pegasus was introduced in 1941 for all elements of the Airborne Forces"—

I emphasise, all elements—

"which during World War II included the Parachute Regiment, the Glider Pilot Regiment"—

we know that from my account of the glider attack on the bridge that later become known as Pegasus bridge—

"the SAS, and all within the WW II Army Air Corps."

However, the fourth paragraph states:

"The reason why this emblem has not been incorporated into the new 16 Air Assault Brigade badge is that the parachute element of this new Brigade is only one of the two constituent parts—the other being the aviation or airmobile element".

That argument is undermined by the second paragraph, which states that the symbol has, in the past, been used far more widely than just by the Parachute regiment.

The change in insignia, like the scrapping of the royal tournament before Ministers had any idea of what would be put in its place, is rooted in a word that we hear all too often from new Labour—modernisation. New Labour means Labour without socialism and modernisation in the armed forces means the armed forces without their history. The problem is that the Government have no sense of history, no sense of military morale and, apparently, no sense of the value of the Pegasus symbol as a brand synonymous in the public mind with the concept of airborne forces.

I conclude by referring to one of my frequent visits to Arnhem—I have friends who live close by—made in September of last year, the 55th anniversary of the battle. I have here three photographs taken during that visit. The first shows the sign erected over the road leading toward Oosterbeek cemetery: it says, in Dutch and in English, "Welcome veterans", and silhouetted against the sky line is Pegasus, selected from all the signs that might have been chosen. The second photograph is that of a veteran in a period Land Rover: he is wearing his red beret and his Parachute regiment badge—the Minister will, no doubt, assure us that those are not to disappear; yet his tie is covered with the symbol of Pegasus.

The final photograph is of two wreaths, side by side on the memorial in the Airborne cemetery in Oosterbeek. One represents the British Legion: the card reads, "Lest we forget". The other represents the airborne forces: at the heart of it is the Pegasus symbol. By their despicable action, the Government and the Ministry of Defence have ensured that it is far more likely that we shall forget what we owe to the airborne forces of the United Kingdom.

1.16 pm

The Minister for the Armed Forces (Mr. John Spellar): I am grateful to the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis) for the opportunity to explain the Army's decision not to incorporate the Pegasus emblem in the new 16 Air Assault Brigade badge; and to explain the Government's position on that issue. I am also grateful to him for having previously told me about some of his broader concerns; I hope to deal with them as well. I believe that he is trying to construct an over-developed edifice on some pretty shaky foundations—it must have something to do with his experience of the Oxford school of philosophy.

It might be helpful to the hon. Gentleman and to the House if I begin by correcting a widely held assumption, expressed by the hon. Gentleman during our lengthy correspondence, that the Bellerophon or Pegasus symbol is the badge of the Parachute Regiment. It is not, and never has been, specific to the Parachute Regiment. The only badge specific to the Parachute Regiment is the regimental cap badge, approved by the sovereign, which depicts a pair of outspread wings with an open parachute in the centre surmounted by the royal crest. That badge was designed to reflect the operational role of the Parachute regiment. It is not the same as the Bellerophon insignia, and it remains the cap badge of the Parachute regiment today.

The popular, and widely recognised, emblem of Bellerophon astride Pegasus was introduced in 1942 for all elements of the airborne forces. During the second world war, they included the Parachute Regiment, the Glider Pilot Regiment and the Special Air Service. Therefore, it was a specific to arm insignia, as the formation flash of the 1st and 6th Airborne Divisions; it was not a regimental badge. In the post-war period, the emblem was used as a formation insignia in airborne formations, including 6 Airborne Division, 16 Parachute Brigade and 44 Parachute Brigade (Volunteers). I reiterate that the Bellerophon design was not specific to the Parachute Regiment, but was used by the formation as a whole to reflect its inclusion of airborne elements.

The Bellerophon badge has, in recent years, been worn as the combat insignia of 5 Airborne Brigade. It was worn by all brigade members, including logistics staff, engineers, signallers and non-parachute-trained infantry battalions. Equally, it has not been worn by parachute battalions when employed outside the 5th Airborne Brigade. However, the Ministry of Defence and I appreciate fully the significant level of attachment that many feel towards the emblem. I assure the hon. Gentleman and the House that the decision to discontinue use of the Bellerophon emblem was not taken lightly, or without full and careful consideration of all the facts.

I remind the House that 16 Air Assault Brigade also includes the units of the former 24 Air Mobile Brigade, whose winged emblem, called a heraldic pinion, is also being discontinued. That badge has an equally long and illustrious history, having been used originally as the insignia of 24 Guards Independent Infantry Brigade from 1940 to 1947. It is reputed that this was the personal crest of Brigadier "Boy" Browning, who gave it to the brigade when he was its commander. The emblem has been used variously by several infantry and aviation formations over the intervening years.

The newly formed 16 Air Assault Brigade is one of the most powerful brigade-sized formations in Europe, and the most powerful air-manoeuvrable fighting unit in Britain's history—a history of which we are all justly proud. It is made up of two discrete parts; one is the parachute element, deploying from the air, and the other is the aviation or airmobile element, which will engage in battle from the air. The brigade will comprise 16 different units. In addition to the infantry and Army Air Corps elements, there will be units from the Royal Artillery, Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers and Royal Logistic Corps, to name but a few.

This exciting new force, with its inherent versatility and flexibility, will dramatically change the way in which we respond to crises throughout the world. The introduction of the Apache helicopter during the year will further enhance the brigade's assault power.

The hon. Gentleman claimed that, somehow, the military was being asked to ratify decisions made by civilians and by Ministers. I stress that there was a recommendation to Ministers from the Army. It is their judgment, given the circumstances that I have described, that the new formation needed its own symbol to reflect its new and unique identity, with which all its members will be able to identify in future. As the hon. Gentleman knows, the badge that has been decided upon for the new 16 Air Assault Brigade is a symbolic design of a striking eagle. However, in keeping with tradition, the new emblem incorporates both light blue for the aviation element and maroon for the airborne heritage.

I understand that many people will regard the passing of 5 Airborne and 24 Air Mobile Brigades, remembering, as well detailed by the hon. Gentleman, their achievements and rich traditions. We have not lost sight of the contribution that they have made to Britain's armed forces. However, the new brigade will reinforce the role that airborne forces play in carrying out our defence mission. I reassure the House that there is no question of the specific and unique identity of the Parachute Regiment or any other regiment being lost as a result of the formation of 16 Air Assault Brigade, or the discontinuance of the Bellerophon emblem. The identity of the regiment will continue to be represented by its winged regimental badge, which is worn on its famous maroon berets. The regimental magazine of the regiment will maintain the link by retaining the Pegasus title.

In addition, the Pegasus trophy will continue to be awarded each year by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to the unit that is deemed to have done the most to enhance the reputation of the airborne forces. The Pegasus symbol will be retained by a number of organisations, including the airborne forces charities, Friends of Airborne Forces, the airborne forces security fund, Airborne Brotherhood and the Airborne Forces museum.

The hon. Gentleman and the House, including the many Members who have written to the Government on this subject on behalf of their constituents, can be assured that the Pegasus symbol, and all the history and tradition that it represents, will continue to be an instantly recognisable symbol of the airborne forces, both past and present.

The hon. Gentleman raised other items in trying to construct the thesis of disregard for our history. I resent that, because we are alert to the issues and traditions of our armed forces and the important part that they play in maintaining the cohesion and operational effectiveness of our forces.

We made a significant contribution to the celebration of the courage of those who took part in the Berlin airlift and the success of a remarkable operation. The Royal Mail had responsibility for this. It considered the issuing of a commemorative stamp, but decided that it was unable to do so as it was focusing on a millennium theme in 1999. As the hon. Gentleman kindly pointed out, I made significant representations to the Royal Mail and to the Department of Trade and Industry on the matter. As they work on fairly lengthy time scales, the initiating process should probably have taken place under a previous Administration. However, the airlift was commemorated by the production of a commemorative label and a philatelic medallic cover.

Further, Royal Air Force bands participated in the traditional wreath-laying ceremony and at various concerts. The Queen's Colours Squadron and aircraft from squadrons associated with the airlift participated in events and ceremonies marking the 50th anniversary of the start of the airlift.

We had to face the real issue of the level of commitment of manpower by the services to the Royal Tournament and the reduction year on year of attendances, which led to a series of losses. The field-gun competition was the subject of some correspondence from hon. Members. Of the 30,000 man days that were taken up by the tournament, about 16,000 were taken up by the naval field-gun competition. The event had significant audience loyalty, and it continues to be held in special regard by those who participated in it. Frankly, however, it was no longer representative of the Royal Navy and its contemporary activities. In practical terms, it led to considerable pressure on other members of the Royal Navy, who were having to fill gaps created by those who were able to participate in the event.

Dr. Julian Lewis: That beggars belief. Of course the Royal Tournament took up a large proportion of the Navy's resources. However, the field-gun competition was synonymous with the Royal Tournament, just as Pegasus is synonymous with airborne forces. I find it incredible that the Labour party is suggesting that people cannot see the value of these symbolisms.

Mr. Spellar: The reality is that, within the Royal Navy, many individuals were having to be devoted to the event. That was putting pressure on other members of the service when, I reiterate, attendances at the tournament were declining, which led to the making of losses. The purposes of the tournament were to provide a shop window for the armed forces, to enable people to associate with them and to generate money for service charities.

We considered how the situation could be improved, We were mindful of the significant attachment to the tradition represented by the tournament. That is why the Royal military tattoo of 2000 will be the armed forces' flagship contribution to the nation's millennium celebrations, with a theme of defence of the realm past, present and future. It will take place against the spectacular and historic backdrop of Horse Guards in July, with a performance on six evenings. It will combine the most imaginative staging, state-of-the-art technology, pageantry, son et lumière, lasers, fireworks and the world's largest mobile video screen. It will provide a worthy showcase for the men and women who make up Britain's armed forces. [Interruption.] I am surprised that the hon. Gentleman finds that amusing.

[Mr. Spellar]

We will not lose sight of the fact that the armed forces have played a significant and integral part in our history. They continue to play their part on the world stage, and will continue to do so in future. The military tattoo will demonstrate that to the country and to the wider world.

In parallel, an annual defence event will be held during the summer outside London—it is important that we get away from London in many instances—at different locations each year. This will be based, where possible, on a successful single service event to minimise the resource implications, and the services will take it in turn to lead on the event.

I am pleased to say that the first of these events will be held in Portsmouth in 2001, with the Royal Navy in the lead, and will be linked to the popular international festival of the sea. We intend that both the location and the content of these regional events will enable the armed forces to showcase their equipment and demonstrate their capability in an exciting and modern way, including hands-on public participation, which was not possible in the royal tournament.

Our armed forces are steeped in history and tradition, of which they are justifiably proud and which contribute to operational effectiveness and to our sense of identity as a nation. Our armed forces have never stood still, and that is one of their enduring strengths. These matters must continue to be judged on their merits and on the way in which they serve the country and the armed services.

Hadley Wood (Parkway Station)

1.30 pm

Mr. Stephen Twigg (Enfield, Southgate): I am delighted to have the opportunity to raise a major issue of local concern in my constituency, and one that raises questions of wider regional and national importance. I am especially pleased to have this, my first debate, in the new Westminster Hall. I am a member of the Modernisation Committee and a strong supporter of the experiment.

One of the reasons that the Committee proposed the Westminster Hall experiment was to provide increased opportunities for Back-Bench Members and Select Committees to have issues debated. The topic that I bring before the Chamber today is one that I have attempted to bring before the House for some time under the traditional Adjournment debate procedure. This is my second attempt to bring it to Westminster Hall, and I am delighted to have succeeded so speedily.

I am grateful to all those who assisted me in my preparations for today's debate, in particular the Hadley Wood Association, a number of whose members are present for the debate; the Council for the Protection of Rural England; the Railway Development Society; and several of the affected local authorities, most notably Hertfordshire, Hertsmere and Stevenage councils.

Transport is clearly a key policy challenge for our Parliament, Government and country. There is wide support in my constituency for the Government's transport policy objectives—to reduce congestion, to enhance the environment and reduce pollution, to foster a shift to greater use of public transport and to promote greater integration between different modes of transport, including between road and rail.

As part of this policy development, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions published in July 1998 "The Future Strategy for the M25", which takes a strategic look at the future of that road. In that document, DETR states:

> "Among the issues to be addressed . . . will be the scope for . . . park and ride facilities near the motorway".

I recognise, as do my constituents, that parkway stations can play a positive and productive part in transport policy, but that an overall view needs to be taken about proposed locations which considers the benefits as well as the drawbacks, in terms of both transport and the environment. Over the past year, new parkway stations have been opened at Luton airport and, last May, at Horwich in Bolton, and they have brought many benefits to those areas. Parkways can work where the location is appropriate.

Great North Eastern Railway has expressed a wish to create three new parkway stations—one north of London close to the M25, one close to Edinburgh and one in Doncaster.

Caroline Flint (Don Valley): I congratulate my hon. Friend on raising such an important matter on behalf of the residents of Hadley Wood. Does he agree that in transport planning, GNER must be sensitive to local residents and local circumstances? In my constituency a new parkway station is planned, which I believe will bring enormous benefits to villages such as Rossington and Finningley, but it must be integrated into the local transport infrastructure. An area such as Doncaster could benefit tremendously, but GNER must be mindful of other partners to ensure the best outcome for all concerned.

Mr. Twigg: I am grateful to my hon. Friend for her intervention. Later in my speech, I shall deal with a more appropriate location for the proposed parkway north of London. I am well aware of the benefits that can be gained, but also of the great importance of proper public consultation and involvement.

My understanding is that GNER's preferred site for the parkway station north of London is on land immediately adjacent to Hadley Wood. According to GNER, the aim of the new station would be, first, to encourage north London residents to drive out to Hadley Wood, rather than going into central London to pick up their trains, and secondly, to encourage drivers in the area north-east of London and in Kent to drive around the M25 to Hadley Wood, rather than taking the train into central London and going to King's Cross by underground or other forms of public transport.

The proposed site is greenbelt land in the borough of Hertsmere, although most of the affected residents live in the borough of Enfield in my constituency. GNER has not submitted a formal planning application because it is awaiting the outcome of the process of renegotiation of franchises, and has stated that it will not submit such an application until that process is complete.

I am opposed to the siting of a parkway station in Hadley Wood for three main reasons—first, the effect on the green belt; secondly, the impact on the local infrastructure in my constituency; and thirdly, the wider consequences for transport policy in outer north London and Hertfordshire.

The green belt was one of the finest achievements of the post-war Labour Government. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has reaffirmed the Government's commitment to the green belt. Hadley Wood is an attractive residential area in the north-west of my Enfield, Southgate constituency. The threat to the green belt is a threat to the amenity and way of life not only of the residents of Hadley Wood, but of all my constituents and the residents of neighbouring constituencies. I am pleased to see my colleague the hon. Member for Chipping Barnet (Sir S. Chapman) in the Chamber. We have been working closely together on the matter, along with the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison), in whose constituency the proposed development would take place.

I pay tribute to the excellent work done by the Hadley Wood Association in drawing the attention of local people to the matter and getting media coverage, and in doing work that has largely informed what I shall say in objection to the proposal.

The site is in the narrowest part of the green belt around London. It is less than two miles wide. The effect of a parkway station would be to extend the urbanised boundary of London beyond Potters Bar. The area is a community forest with two working farms, both of which would have to be closed, were the proposal to proceed. They would be replaced by a 2,000-space car park. In other words, two farms would be replaced by an area the size of five Wembley football pitches for cars. That poses a disastrous threat to the green belt.

With regard to the local infrastructure, one effect of the GNER proposal would be to increase the use of roads in our area—the M25, obviously, and local roads as well. The stretch of the M25 between exits 23 and 25 is already heavily overloaded and is a well known bottleneck. It makes little sense to encourage more cars on to an already overloaded stretch of the M25.

Furthermore, like most of London and many other parts of the country, my constituency is increasingly plagued by traffic congestion. Since the opening of exit 24 on the M25, the A111 that passes through my constituency has undergone a heavy increase in traffic. The Hadley Wood Association commissioned a study by the leading traffic consultants, Messrs Colin Buchanan and Partners, in 1997, which demonstrated that during rush hour periods there were more than 1,000 vehicles per hour using that stretch of road. I am certain that there has been a further significant increase in traffic volume since that study was carried out. Buchanan and Partners estimated that a parkway station could add a further 500 cars per hour during peak times.

While one theoretical solution is to widen the roads, there would be substantial local opposition to that as there is little scope or capacity in the Cockfosters area for widening the road. Even were such a plan acceptable, it would be not be viable. In terms of the infrastructure in Cockfosters, Hadley Wood and the wider Enfield, Southgate area, the consequences of such a proposal would be to increase congestion and worsen the bottlenecks. That would contravene the wider objectives of Government policy on transport.

There is a wider argument against the proposal. I am worried about Railtrack's lack of overall planning to develop a coherent strategy for new parkway stations in our part of the country. The case against Hadley Wood is not simply a "not in my back yard" reaction to a proposal to build on the green belt; there is a strong transport argument against it. Hertfordshire county council has clear, well-thought-out transport policies in which Stevenage is the key rail centre for the county. In the past few days, Hertfordshire county council told me that it had received no evidence from GNER or anyone else of special circumstances that would justify building on the green belt. That view is reinforced by Hertsmere borough council, which stated that for the development. Last year, GNER tried to challenge Hertsmere's local plan to facilitate a possible parkway station, but it did not pursue the matter and the local plan stands.

"no case has been made"

Stevenage council shares Hertfordshire's view that Stevenage should remain the main focus for rail in the county. It goes further, and would like Stevenage to be the site of a parkway station. My hon. Friend the Member for Stevenage (Barbara Follett) shares that view. The council told me that there was space in Stevenage to build the necessary car parking facilities, that there is scope to expand the station to six platforms, that no greenbelt issues affect it and that traffic congestion is less significant because of Stevenage's location as a relatively new town alongside the A1M. People in Stevenage and elsewhere in Hertfordshire are worried that a Hadley Wood parkway station would detract from Stevenage's position as the main rail focus for the county. Anxiety has been expressed that some trains might not stop at Stevenage because of the close proximity of the two centres.

[Mr. Twigg]

I hope that my hon. Friend the Minister will tackle those anxieties in his response. I appreciate that, for the reasons that I outlined, there are no specific proposals from GNER. However, if GNER wins the franchise, it will want to move rapidly to effect its proposals for the three parkway stations, including Hadley Wood. That is why there is widespread anxiety in my constituency and beyond. While the residents of Hadley Wood form the focus of that anxiety, other people in the Enfield, Southgate area and colleagues in neighbouring constituencies are worried about the proposals.

Like my hon. Friend, I am a passionate supporter of public transport and a non-driver. I use public transport every day; I believe in the railways and I support a successful, thriving railway system for our country. There is a persuasive case for a parkway station north of London. However, Hadley Wood is a totally unsuitable location for it. If such a proposal were implemented, it would be a disaster for the green belt, exacerbate already appalling conditions and congestion on our local roads and threaten the future of Stevenage as a rail centre.

I hope that GNER or whoever wins the franchise will abandon the idea of a parkway station in Hadley Wood and pursue the sort of alternatives that I have outlined. I hope that the Minister will take account of my comments and offer some hope to my constituents.

1.44 pm

Sir Sydney Chapman (Chipping Barnet): I shall speak briefly to support everything that the hon. Member for Enfield, Southgate (Mr. Twigg) said in opposition to the GNER proposal. I want to make two points on behalf of my constituents. First, if the proposal goes ahead, it will constitute the most devastating blow to the metropolitan green belt in one of its most sensitive areas. The main objective in that area is to keep Potters Bar away from the metropolis. The thin strip of land has already been divided by the M25, so not only the proposed development but the attendant feeder roads would devastate the green belt in that area. I congratulate the hon. Gentleman not only on securing the debate but on the eloquence with which he put the case.

Perhaps I should declare a possible interest. For many years, I was president of the London Green Belt Council until I was appointed a Minister, when, quite properly, I had to give up that honorary position. The consolation for my friends is that my career has gone downwards ever since.

I want to underline the effect of the proposal on the local infrastructure. The roads are already overcrowded and the hon. Member for Enfield, Southgate was right to refer to the overloading of the M25 in that area. I disagree with one point that he made. He painted a rather rosy picture of the Government's commitment to conserving our green belt. He mentioned Stevenage, which is a much better location for the proposed parkway station, but the Government have permitted a significant development to the west of Stevenage on the metropolitan green belt. Their action reinforces the case for a parkway station in Stevenage, not Hadley Wood.

1.46 pm

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (Mr. Keith Hill): I begin, as is usual, by congratulating my hon. Friend the Member for Enfield, Southgate (Mr. Twigg) on securing the debate. I am aware that the proposal by GNER for a new parkway station near the M25 north of London is a source of great concern to many of his constituents.

Since his general election triumph in 1997, my hon. Friend is proving himself, in this matter as in so many others, an extremely conscientious constituency Member of Parliament and an outstanding advocate on behalf of the interests of his constituents.

I also thank the hon. Member for Chipping Barnet (Sir S. Chapman) for his contribution to the debate. As a former resident of Chipping Barnet, who often walked in Hadley Wood, I know that he is also a most assiduous constituency Member of Parliament.

My hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) is another highly effective constituency Member of Parliament. She also made proper representations on behalf of her constituents.

I want to make it perfectly clear at the outset that there is no firm proposal for a new parkway station near Hadley Wood and no final site has been identified. The station is one of three new parkway stations proposed as part of GNER's initial bid for a replacement franchise. The other proposed stations are near Edinburgh and the M18 in South Yorkshire.

However, it is still early days. No decision on whether to replace GNER's franchise has been taken. Even if GNER's bid were successful, careful consideration would need to be given to several important issues including planning, transport and wider environmental implications, before the parkway stations could be approved.

The Chamber knows that last September, the Deputy Prime Minister issued new instructions and guidance to the franchising director asking him to deliver improvements through renegotiation of the terms of franchise agreements. When considering any renegotiation requests, we have asked the franchising director to give due weight to commitments to current performance, customer services, innovation, investment and efficiency; new or earlier investment; securing better performance; initiatives to promote integrated transport; a willingness to give passengers a greater voice in the level and standard of services; and value for the taxpayer.

In November last year, the franchising director announced that the current GNER franchise would be one of the first three to be renegotiated or replaced. The GNER, Connex SouthCentral and Chiltern franchises were chosen because they are thought to offer great potential for improvements and developments which can be delivered in a relatively short time scale.

On 22 December, the franchising director announced that Sea Containers, which is the parent company of GNER and Virgin Rail, in conjunction with Stagecoach, had pre-qualified to participate in further discussion of its franchise replacement proposals. They are now preparing their detailed proposals for discussion with the franchising director before final negotiations. It is hoped to conclude these negotiations in the spring.

However, it is important to remember that the franchising director is not committed to accepting either proposal. After careful consideration, he may decide instead to allow the existing GNER franchise to run its course until it expires in April 2003.

In considering any franchise replacement negotiations, the franchising director will consult, among others, local authorities, regional planning bodies, regional development agencies and rail users' consultative committees as appropriate. If the parkway station proposal were to be adopted as part of a franchise commitment, planning permission and full local consultation would be required.

I want to say a word about the Government's approach to parkway stations. We are keen to encourage integrated transport proposals that are designed to encourage people to travel by public transport and to reduce the need to travel by car. I understand that GNER's proposal is intended to encourage a modal shift from car and air travel to rail use and to allow a seamless transfer between transport modes. It believes that its proposed parkway stations would considerably reduce long-distance car usage, thereby reducing road and motorway congestion and associated pollution problems.

We are also keen to improve the quality of rail services and GNER believes that the parkway stations would make long-distance rail travel more accessible and attractive. The parkway stations would be served by GNER's planned new fleet of high-speed trains. I understand that stations would be airport style in design and built to accommodate the needs of passengers, including those with special needs. There is a measure of support for a new parkway station in the north London area and the London Chamber of Commerce and Industry, for example, believes that the parkway station

"could prove the single most important lever for achieving a modal shift from road to rail for long distance journeys between London and the north east and Scotland."

There are also clearly important planning implications for the scheme, however, and I am well aware that the proposed site for the parkway station lies within the metropolitan green belt. That has generated considerable local opposition and I know that organisations such as the London Green Belt Council, the Association of North Thames Amenity Societies, the Potters Bar Society and the Hadley Wood Association have expressed their concerns.

Obviously, a scheme for a parkway station would need to be the subject of a planning application. Under national planning policy guidance on green belts, which is known as PPG2, such a development would be inappropriate in the green belt. To justify approval being given, it would therefore be necessary for GNER to show that very special circumstances outweighed the harm that would be done to the green belt. The land use planning merits of a station proposal would need to be considered against the statutory development plan, and careful regard would have to be paid to all other material considerations. Those might include, for example, the impact of the development on the environment and on residential amenity as well as the effect on the M25 and the local highway network. Should the local planning authority be minded to grant consent to a planning application, there remains the possibility that it might be called in by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for his own determination should it be thought to raise matters of more than local importance.

Last October, we set out land use planning policy on transport, including park and ride, in our consultation draft PPG13 on transport. That emphasised the need for park-and-ride schemes to be introduced as an integral part of the overall planning and transport approach for an area. They should be in the local transport plan, and based on a thorough assessment of travel impacts, and should also be in the development plan and consistent with the strategic context of the regional transport strategy.

In his speech on 13 December, which set out the Government's vision for transport policy, my right hon. Friend explained that the final version of PPG13, which is due out this year, would give priority to well-designed and well-conceived park-and-ride schemes. We are currently examining the responses to our public consultation on PPG13 and aim to publish the final version in the summer.

We are keen that local authorities should consider allocating sites for interchange in their development plans, for example, park-and-ride schemes to town centres and at bus and rail stations. I am aware that GNER objected to the deposit draft of the Hertsmere local plan on the grounds that it failed to support proposals for improvements to passenger services on the east coast main line and, in particular, the provision of a parkway station on land to the north of Hadley Wood. A public inquiry into the local plan was held last year and the inspector's report is still awaited. When it is received, Hertsmere borough council will consider the inspector's recommendations and decide whether any modifications to the plan are required. Those will then be published and the public will have an opportunity to express their views on the merits of the proposed modifications.

I reiterate that GNER's proposal must be regarded for the present as an option, not a firm and agreed package that can be implemented without further consultation. There is a process still to be gone through in which the planning, transport and wider environmental implications would need to be thoroughly considered. I hope that my hon. Friend the Member for Enfield, Southgate is reassured that any decisions will be taken only after the most careful consideration.

Question put and agreed to.

Adjourned accordingly at four minutes to Two o'clock.

Westminster Hall

Thursday 20 January 2000

[SIR ALAN HASELHURST in the Chair]

Small Firms

[Relevant documents: Thirteenth Report from the Trade and Industry Committee Session 1998–99 HC 330 and HC 49 Session 1999–2000 (Government Reply).]

Motion made, and Question proposed, That the sitting be now adjourned.—[Mr. Dowd.]

2.30 pm

The Minister for Small Business and E-Commerce (Ms Patricia Hewitt): I am delighted to open our debate this afternoon on small firms, particularly because this is a happy side effect of Opposition Members' disgraceful behaviour in the House last night: the beneficial effect of not taking the Electronic Communications Bill in the House this afternoon is that I am able to be present at this debate. I want to put on record my thanks to my right hon. Friend the Minister for Trade, who would have opened this debate if I had been piloting the Bill in the House.

We are discussing an important subject and a sign of the importance that we attach to it is that we held a similar debate in June 1998 and a further debate in June 1999 on innovation and enterprise, both of which covered issues of importance to small businesses. I hope that we shall have an equally constructive and helpful debate this afternoon on how the Government can create the conditions in which more small businesses can start, survive and succeed.

Hon. Members will be aware of the wide-ranging report published last October by the Select Committee on Trade and Industry. I am delighted to see my hon. Friend the Member for Ochil (Mr. O'Neill) here. In line with one of the Committee's recommendations, I am delighted that our debate will cover the wider enterprise agenda.

There is another reason why the debate is timely. I had the good fortune this morning to speak at the ceremony for the Parcelforce small business awards, which is one of the largest and best-established of the small business awards programmes. I am delighted that Parcelforce had more than 2,000 entries for the awards whose winners were announced today. That is a tribute to the spirit of enterprise that is alive and well in our country.

It is not Government but business that creates wealth. In the knowledge-driven economy, small businesses are the source of innovation, enterprise and growth. That does not mean, as some in the previous Administration made the mistake of believing, that Government can walk away and tell business to get on with the job. Our responsibility as a Government is to create the conditions in which business can succeed. That is what we are doing. The first and perhaps most important condition for success is an end to the boom and bust that has been so disastrous for investment and business for the past two decades. The first and continuing achievement of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer is to steer a course of economic stability and growth. Taking politics out of decisions on interest rates has ensured not only that interest rates are at an historically low level, but that businesses can plan with confidence for a future of stability.

Mr. Christopher Chope (Christchurch): On a point of order, Mr. Deputy Speaker. It will have come to your notice that the annunciator states that a debate is taking place here on small arms. Is it within your capacity to have that corrected?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman, but I have anticipated him.

Ms Hewitt: Thank you, Mr. Deputy Speaker. I am under no illusion as to what we are discussing.

We have put an end to that damaging cycle of boom and bust, which saw interest rates peak at 15 per cent. and remain in double figures for four years. The economy that we inherited was set to repeat that damaging cycle. We now have a new and credible framework of monetary policy, inflation is historically low and is expected to remain close to the target figure, and the number of employed has risen by 700,000 since the general election. Virtually all that growth in employment has occurred in the small and medium-sized enterprise sector. More people in this country are in employment than ever before. Levels of joblessness are at a 20-year low. Youth unemployment is down by more than 70 per cent. and long-term unemployment by more than 50 per cent. Those are achievements of which the Government can be proud.

Of course, the climate for small businesses is good. Barclays bank estimates that approximately a quarter of a million businesses started up in the first half of last year, which is more than started up in the first half of the previous year. Almost one million new businesses have started up under this Government. That is a higher average for each quarter than for the first half of the 1990s. In marked contrast, the lowest number of business start-ups on record—a pathetic 77,000 in one quarter—occurred under the previous Government.

While building a firm foundation for stability and success, we have also taken steps to ensure fairness for workers, families and communities. The hon. Member for Tiverton and Honiton (Mrs. Browning) will probably tell us about the iniquities of regulation. Doubtless she and some of her right hon. and hon. Friends would like workers, some of whom are employed by small businesses, to continue to be paid a pittance and work excessively long hours with no right to paid holidays. We will not accept that. We believe that fairness and enterprise go hand in hand. That is what good, successful employers and businesses believe as well. We want our companies to compete on quality, not on the basis of how badly they can get away with treating their employees.

Of course, it is often difficult for small firms to access the support that they need, and especially sources of finance and information. We are working not only within Government but in partnership with the private sector and the not-for-profit sector to deliver the services and support that small businesses need. In particular, we are creating the new Small Business Service, which is a key part of the strategy to create an entrepreneurial Britain. Hon. Members are, I hope, aware that the results of last year's extensive consultation, together with our response to the issues raised, were published yesterday. I am delighted to say that there are 700 high-quality replies to that consultation from a wide cross-section of people, including representatives from a number of firms.

[Ms Hewitt]

The new Small Business Service will build on the real advances made by the creation of business links. Everyone acknowledges that business links was a great improvement on the complete confusion that existed six or seven years earlier, but it is still not good enough. Small and medium businesses tell us constantly that quality is uneven. Some of the links deliver excellent services, but others are proving inadequate. For some years, the focus has been on larger businesses with high growth potential, so it can prove difficult for the sole trader and those who want to take up self-employment to get practical help.

First, the Small Business Service will help us to create the world-class business support services that our small and medium-sized businesses deserve. Secondly, it will help us to cut red tape. Thirdly, it will help us to simplify and streamline the support services that the Government offer to business. There is a large number of excellent programmes, but the number is so large that the small business person can sometimes have difficulty finding his or her way through. The Small Business Service will help us and it will help the small business customer.

As hon. Members can see from the response to our consultation, we are on the right track. Business across the country has given our vision for the Small Business Service a real welcome. Now we have to deliver on that vision, which we are doing by franchising through business links. We are asking the existing business links partnerships to make the first proposal for that new franchise, but making it clear that if the quality does not match the standard that we demand for our customers, we shall go out to open competitive tender. There are no illusions about the challenge for quality that we are setting for business links.

At the end of last year, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced the appointment of David Irwin as the first chief executive of the Small Business Service. He has an outstanding record in the north-east as chief executive of Project Northeast, an entrepreneurial and largely commercially funded organisation. Its mission is support for start-ups and for small businesses. He will take up his post on 6 March, but I am happy to say that, thanks to e-mail, he is already closely engaged with officials in setting up the Small Business Service. I am sure that hon. Members will join me in welcoming David to his new post. He is ideally placed to develop the Small Business Service into the organisation that we and small businesses want.

Some of those who responded to our consultation questioned whether the chief executive would carry sufficient weight with Government. I can assure hon. Members that he has the confidence and the backing of the entire Government. He will have an independent right of direct access to the Prime Minister if there is an issue of particular importance. He will attend key ministerial meetings at which small business issues are discussed. He and the Small Business Service will have the right, but also the responsibility, to scrutinise all proposals for regulation and to examine in detail those that may affect small business, to ensure that the litmus test of thinking small first—thinking about the impact on the small business, the owner manager, the sole trader—is the starting point when considering the implications of regulation. He will also be a member of the new star chamber, the ministerial panel for regulatory accountability chaired by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office. That panel will call to account Ministers from every Department, including my own, for their regulatory performance and programmes.

We want to deliver world-class business support services to the whole of the entrepreneurial community. That must include women entrepreneurs, who form a growing proportion of that community, although they are still under-represented in this country compared with, for example, the United States of America. It must also include entrepreneurs and potential entrepreneurs from the Afro-Caribbean and other minority ethnic communities, who have not, in the past, felt that the mainstream business support services understood their needs or responded well to them. We must also reach out to support the development of both social and commercial enterprise within the most disadvantaged areas. Regulation is of particular concern to small businesses. We are determined to address that through the Small Business Service, through the existing task force on better regulation, and now through the new ministerial panel on regulatory accountability.

I must also refer to the extraordinary comments made this morning by the British Chambers of Commerce. I have great respect for that organisation, and for its director general, Chris Humphries. In my experience as Minister with responsibility for small business, I have found it a valuable source of advice and information on what is going on in the business community and on all its concerns, but the numbers that it published this morning about the so-called regulatory burden are nonsense. I notice that, an hour or so ago, it issued a revised version of those numbers. They are coming down hourly, but there are at least two difficulties with the numbers issued. The first and most important is that they include the so-called burden of the benefits to workers of the working time directive.

The working time directive is about paid holidays for employees and making sure that they are not forced by their employer to work 70, 80 or 85 hours a week to the detriment of their own and their family's health and often to the detriment of customers and the productivity of the business. There are real benefits to employees from the working time directive, but those are the costs that the BCC has included.

Mrs. Angela Browning (Tiverton and Honiton): Does the Minister agree with Lord Haskins, who described her Government's stewardship of the working time directive as a dog's breakfast?

Ms Hewitt: The hon. Lady overlooks the fact that we consulted business carefully about the way in which we should implement the working time directive. In response to that consultation, we have significantly changed the administrative way in which it will be implemented. The administrative costs included in the business burdens listed by the British Chambers of Commerce are out of date. They are figures that would have existed for the old way of administering the directive, but because we have listened to business and got rid of the record-keeping requirements that increased red tape and administrative burdens, we have got rid of them.

The same is true of the minimum wage. The British Chambers of Commerce has included a substantial figure, although it has changed a couple of times already today, for the administrative costs of the national minimum wage; but we listened to business on how the national minimum wage should be implemented and, having listened, we decided not to pursue some of the options that had originally been proposed in the consultation, including the option to include the minimum wage on the payslip, with the effect that the administrative costs to business of the national minimum wage are virtually zero.

Mrs. Browning: In tidying up some of the nonsense around the administration of the national minimum wage, has the Minister also removed the requirement in statute for directors of limited companies to pay themselves the minimum wage, whether they want to draw that salary or not?

Ms Hewitt: I am not sure that I immediately know the answer to that question, as I am not the Minister with direct responsibility for the national minimum wage, but I shall come back to that point, if I may.

I also want to draw the Chamber's attention to an extremely interesting interview on the BBC's lunchtime business news with one small business man, the director of Rowan Yarns, an excellent company, in Holmfirth. He said that he ran a successful small firm by employing good people, and that he got good people—most of his work force are women—by ensuring that they could balance work and family and did not have to sit at work worrying about their families all day. He is perfectly happy to pay a decent wage and to have good conditions. When the interviewer said, "But surely you have noticed this terrible increase in red tape and administrative burdens over the last two years," he said, "No, actually, I haven't noticed anything of the kind and I think that what's happening is right."

Finally on this point, I want to draw the Chamber's attention to the recent report of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, which examined administrative and economic regulations in the member states and concluded, on the basis of an exhaustive analysis, that the country that imposed the least administrative and economic regulation on its businesses, large and small, was the United Kingdom. We are determined to do even better, but let us not exaggerate the position that we start from and let us not confuse fair standards for employees that will help businesses to improve the quality and productivity of their work force with administrative costs, which we should simplify and strip out wherever possible.

Mr. Chope: What is happening in respect of the payroll service? That involves legitimate administrative costs that are especially burdensome to new small businesses.

Ms Hewitt: That is another happy example of consulting with and listening to small business. We knew that small businesses were particularly concerned about payroll administration and the implications of the working families tax credit. We consulted them on a proposal to introduce a payroll voucher, which would have helped with the costs of payroll administration, but they told us clearly that they did not want that, but rather the kind of one-to-one advice that the Inland Revenue can provide. Just before Christmas, my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary and I announced that investment was to be put into expanding the Inland Revenue's NESI—new enterprise support initiative—scheme, which enables new businesses, in particular, to get tailored advice on how to administer their payroll.

One of the best ways of slashing administrative costs, including those of payroll administration, is by exploiting information and communications technology. I should like to dwell for a moment on electronic commerce.

Mr. Chope: Regarding payroll, it was said at the time of the previous Budget that a substantial sum—about £70 million—was to be made available to the Small Business Service to administer the payroll. Now that it is no longer to be charged with that responsibility, is that £70 million still available to help small businesses in other ways?

Ms Hewitt: As I have already said, we are investing in an expansion of the Inland Revenue's one-to-one support service for small business, because that is a service that small business wants. When we publish the budget for the Small Business Service, the hon. Gentleman will see the full figures. He will also see, in April, the launch of an immensely exciting new initiative—an internet-based gateway to all Government business support information and services, aimed directly at the small and medium-sized enterprise sector. It will be available on-line—for those who are on-line—or through a call centre or through advisers for those who want indirect access.

It is essential that our small businesses exploit to the full the power of electronic commerce. We have in our country some world-class small businesses that are helping to lead the way in e-commerce.

Mr. Brian Cotter (Weston-super-Mare): Will the Minister expand on that? I believe that a trial scheme is in operation whereby when one registers as a self-employed person, one can fill out a form that can then be distributed electronically. That is a welcome development. How is that progressing, how quickly is it to be expanded so that it can be used more widely, and how many people are aware of its existence?

Ms Hewitt: I was delighted to find that shortly after coming into Government we ran an experiment that took the four forms that someone becoming self-employed had to complete, and turned them into a single form. As the hon. Gentleman said, it was then trialled as an electronic intelligent form. The single form is still in use, and I have asked officials to ensure that it is one of the services that is offered as part of the electronic gateway for the Small Business Service. It is an excellent initiative that needs to be made more widely known and available. It is just one small example of the power of electronic commerce to transform the ways in which small businesses interact with Government and, by doing so, reduce their administrative costs.

[Ms Hewitt]

I am worried that although there are some shining examples of firms exploiting e-commerce, if one looks across the piece at our small—especially very small-firms, they are lagging behind. Our benchmarking study, published last year, suggested that our smallest firms were at the bottom of the G7 league table for the use of information and communication technology. They cannot afford to be left behind in that regard because within a year or two the internet will be as common and as essential to business as the telephone is today.

We have rolled out across the country information society initiative support centres and ISI local centres. I opened one in Luton yesterday. They are already delivering objective advice to small businesses in plain English. That advice is driven not by the desire to sell a product but by business needs and a desire to establish how information and communication technology can be applied within their business.

The results are outstanding. Optimum Designs, based in Wigan, is a sportswear firm, and it was one of the first companies to come to the ISI centre. It was given help in setting up a full e-commerce transactional website. As a result, during its first 12 months of internet trading, its turnover increased tenfold. Across the country small businesses have experienced extraordinary increases in markets and extraordinary reductions in the cost base. That shows the power of electronic commerce and explains why I am so passionate about the synergy between the two parts of my ministerial role.

Our country led the world into the first industrial revolution. We are determined that we should be the winners and leaders in the new knowledge-driven economy in which small businesses have a vital role to play.

I have not been able in the time available to describe many of the other programmes and support services that we are working on with businesses. I look forward to the rest of the debate and to responding to the points that hon. Members raise.

2.56 pm

Mrs. Angela Browning (Tiverton and Honiton): I declare two non-registerable interests as a former director of the Small Business Bureau and the current president of Women into Business; neither post has been remunerated.

I am delighted that at long last a debate has been devoted to small business. When the Labour party came to power, it promised an annual debate on this subject. When the then Financial Secretary, the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche), presented the first small business debate, she flagged it up as an event that we could look forward to. During the past year, however, and despite many promptings from the Dispatch Box from Conservative Members, the Government have not made time for a debate dedicated to small business. We are glad that the debate is being held today, although it is late. Conservative Members would have preferred it if the debate had taken place on the Floor of the House. That would have given due recognition to the importance of this sector of our economy.

The Labour Government are now into their third year. I listened carefully to the Minister, who gave the impression that during those three years things had only got better for small businesses. In fact, the reverse is the case.

The Prime Minister characteristically pledged before and during the general election that this Government would cut red tape. He said that they would not impose burdensome regulations on business because they understood that successful businesses need to keep costs down. In November 1997, he discussed the importance of investing in people, skills and technology rather than regulation and the imposition of constant burdens on employers, and he added that he wanted to reduce costs and burdens. That signalled for the first time a different direction.

The information that the Minister cited from British Chambers of Commerce and the figures that just about every small business organisation has presented during the past year show that, as a result of the Labour Government's initiatives during their first two years in power, there are additional regulatory burdens on business, especially on small businesses. The problem is of such proportions that now, in year three, it is starting to do significant damage.

I share the Minister's enthusiasm for the event that she attended this morning, at which she presented small business awards. Through Women into Business, I run an annual business award scheme, so I know how encouraging it is to see businesses flourishing and being recognised for their success. However, I hope that the Minister will take seriously what she hears today. She should acquaint herself with something other than celebrating those who have done well; she should focus on those who are failing under new Labour.

The Government's record on business, enterprise, and especially small business, was summed up in the 13th report of the Trade and Industry Committee, which was published last year. It stated:

"From the situation as we saw it a year ago, where there seemed to be something of a policy vacuum on SMEs, we have moved to one where there is at least some risk of an excess of loosely connected and apparently uncoordinated policy initiatives shooting off in all directions, generating noise and interest, but not commensurate light."

This debate—the so-called annual small and medium-sized enterprises debate—should provide an opportunity for the Minister. I have heard nothing, apart from what she said about the future of e-commerce in this country, with which I agree, that can be described as anything other than abject complacency on the part of the Government.

The Minister will not be surprised to know that hon. Members of all parties have studied the information released by the British Chambers of Commerce in the past 24 hours. Its base line is constructed on compliance cost assessment figures supplied by the Government. If the Minister is saying that those assessments are wrong, as a result of putting right the mess that the Government made of at least 20 pieces of legislation, we would welcome that, but we shall press her for revised, accurate figures. She will understand our suspicion about the Government's figures on business, the cost to business, and support for small businesses, given that the 13th report of the Trade and Industry Committee questions the happy-clappy way in which Ministers use figures to repackage good news and, as we have heard this afternoon, suppress bad news. I give the Minister 10 out of 10 for consistency, because that is the approach not only of her and her Department, but of the whole Government.

What has happened in the past two to three years under new Labour? The British Chambers of Commerce, the Institute of Directors, the Centre for Policy Studies, the Federation of Small Businesses, the Forum of Private Business, the Confederation of British Industry, and all the other recognised business organisations, recognise the burden on business, as the British Chambers of Commerce described it, created by £10 billion of Labour red tape. The blame is laid clearly at the door of the Government. There is a burden barometer, which shows that, from day one, this Government have been ideologically driven. One of their first acts was to sign up to the social chapter, which allowed the application not only of new legislation but of retrospective legislation to which other European countries had signed up. That is beginning to hurt, and it is storing up problems for the future. If it hurts now, it will become very painful in the coming years.

The problem, of course, is that the smallest businesses feel the pain far more than those with an in-house lawyer, who sorts out the legal side of compliance, and a payroll department, which can deal with administration. The bigger businesses will also eventually feel the cost, which will filter through into competitiveness. The smaller companies feel the pain first, however, and they are beginning to shout. Instead of being complacent, the Minister should listen to what they are saying. This is not about tossing statistics between bodies—a million here or a billion there over two, three, four or five years—but about individual businesses and people. The Government have made a virtue of people. The Minister is right to say that people are important in business. Employers need to have highly skilled people and to ensure that morale is high.

What the Opposition predicted when we saw the tide of legislation that the Government have rushed to implement is beginning to materialise. The rhetoric was apparent from the start. In tandem with the rush to increase the cost, regulation and administration of small and medium-sized enterprises, the Government established the better regulation task force—not the deregulation or less regulation task force, but the better regulation task force. What a mockery that made of how they imposed the working time directive, the minimum wage and other horrors on business. There was nothing businesslike about the Government's actions. There was no recognition of the lead time that businesses need to change systems, brief their staff and comply with the law. That is an important consideration because most of the legislation imposes heavy penalties if the letter of the law is not followed.

Ms Hewitt: Is the hon. Lady aware that the British Chambers of Commerce told the Low Pay Commission that businesses recognise that a low-wage policy leads to a vicious circle of low morale, low performance and low productivity? Does she realise that the British Chambers of Commerce, unlike the Conservative party, supports a minimum wage and that the Confederation of British Industry described the introduction of the minimum wage as a model of how to legislate?

Madam Deputy Speaker (Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody): Order. Interventions must be brief, even if they are ministerial.

Mrs. Browning: Thank you, Madam Deputy Speaker.

The minimum wage was debated in the House, but having got it on the statute book, the Government have not been businesslike in their use of secondary legislation or in the advice that they have given to businesses on how they should apply the legislation in the workplace. They have shown no understanding of how businesses, especially small businesses, work. They must get to grips with the fact that it is a burden for businesses to read and apply, with only a few weeks' notice, what is contained in a document that has more than 100 pages. By definition, a burden is a cost on business. Individual documents might seem significant, but the cumulative effect of more than two years of a continual tide of regulation is starting to damage British business.

Ms Linda Perham (Ilford, North): Does the hon. Lady agree that part of the remit of regulation is to help and guide business, which is the case with telecom licences? The Conservative Government introduced about 3,000 regulations for each of the last three years of their Administration.

Mrs. Browning: I will come in a moment to what the Conservative party intends to do to save British business from the consequences of this tide of regulation. The hon. Lady is right: the point is how regulation is applied. Her intervention could not have come at a more opportune moment.

Ms Perham: I must be a plant.

Mrs. Browning: We will keep that between ourselves; it might not do the hon. Lady's career much good if the Whips hear that.

A report produced only last week by Peninsula, the Manchester law company, showed the biggest ever increase in the number of businesses seeking advice on how they should apply legislation and revealed that more than 32,000 more calls were made this year than last year. Businesses are spending more and more time that they could use to do business ringing up for advice and trying to find out how they can do the Government's business, which is to apply all the legislation that they are imposing. More than two years ago, the Opposition predicted that the burden on businesses would become so great that it would start to affect their success and competitiveness. Indeed, Peninsula predicted in its report that more business failures would result. That announcement comes on top of the Dun and Bradstreet report of 4 January, which clearly showed that business failures increased by more than 12 per cent. in 1999, which is the third largest increase in a decade. The report also revealed a fatality total of 830 businesses going under a week, which is the highest for five years.

[Mrs. Browning]

I remind the Minister of the economic scene that she set at the outset of her remarks. She spoke of low inflation, low unemployment and the right economic backdrop for business growth. If she believes that the economy is so wonderful and that the Treasury's economic management is so good, she must wonder why more and more businesses are going under. The two arguments do not correlate. What does she think the answer is? Why are more businesses going under in the wonderful economic environment that the Government claim to have provided? They will find that the answer lies in what they have done in just over two years. They have increased taxes on business and the cost of regulation.

Whatever the benefits of low unemployment and of lower inflation or lower interest rates—I remind hon. Members that interest rates are now creeping up—they are overtaken by the Government's own hands and by their intervention in taxing and regulating to such an extent that it is causing business damage. Unfortunately, predictions from organisations considering the trends show that we can expect those circumstances to get worse and not better during coming years. "Things can only get better," somebody once said; and Labour Members still believe it.

One of the things that Britain must do if it is to succeed and to use the excellent talent that it has in small firms is to enable small businesses to grow into medium-sized businesses. For many years, our competitors such as Germany succeeded in doing so, although circumstances there are not looking quite so rosy now. We have lessons to learn from such countries on how to grow small businesses into medium-sized businesses. Many factors, such as access to capital, are involved, and they are all subjects for legitimate debate.

Only last week, I visited a medium-sized company that has been kind enough to prepare for me some details of its regulatory burden. It currently employs 400 people and has grown from a small company to its present size. It has examined its revenue and regulatory costs in relation to its financial figures for the end of 1998. Subtraction of those costs from the company's revenue reveals that its regulatory burden is the equivalent of 8.4 per cent. of its operating overheads, excluding depreciation. The regulatory cost represents 46.3 per cent. of its profits after tax and is the equivalent of 193.6 per cent. of its corporation tax payments.

Despite the rosy picture of the economic climate painted by the Minister, other factors burden business. The factors are not obscure: they are immediately apparent to anyone when the regulatory burdens are broken down. Regulatory charges, environmental taxes, compliance costs, health and safety and employment burdens—and, gosh, employment legislation has grown so much in the past two years—represent a significant burden when added to the requirement to pay corporation tax and the other necessary charges on the company's accounts.

The Conservative party will take no lessons from new Labour. Neither business nor we shall be lulled into a false sense of security, feeling that all is well and that everything will get better. The Government will shortly precipitate a downturn typified by business failures unless they act.—[Interruption.] The Minister laughs. If she thinks that the Dun and Bradstreet figures are funny or if she is prepared to dismiss small business failure, fair enough. Let us say that that is the price to be paid for the happy-clappy-keep-'em-all-happy song. If she is not prepared to take the issue seriously, the problem that I have outlined will be accelerated over the coming two years.

Ms Hewitt: Is the hon. Lady aware that Dun and Bradstreet expect the number of business failures to fall this year

"as a result of the improvement in the economy"?

Mrs Browning: Whenever a statistic is heard, the Government, and especially this Department and this Minister do not want to believe it and so pluck another out of the air. The Minister will have seen the Dun and Bradstreet figures and heard what I said about the law firm that studied the problem of the burden placed on business in the Manchester area. The problems are having an effect not only individually on businesses but cumulatively, and they are starting to bite into the country's economic success.

We would not merely create more star chambers and similar bodies, holding dinners at Lancaster house as a first act. The new deregulatory hope for the country started with a dinner at Lancaster house with a few representatives of the companies in the FTSE-100—not many small businesses there. Is that the priority and the way in which deregulation will be advanced—with talk and proposals for better regulation, but with no commitment to rolling back regulation? The Conservatives will roll back regulation, making significant changes to the culture in Whitehall.

I was formerly a Minister in the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food—they know all about regulation there, believe me. The Minister has an opportunity to roll back regulation. If we are to have more than words, she will have to be pretty smart. We will introduce regulatory budgets, with every Department and Secretary of State reporting not only to the Cabinet Secretary but to Parliament. Departments will report on reductions in cash terms, against a declared budgetary target, in the regulations impacting on business for which they are responsible. Only by our reducing the cost impact on business will businesses start to feel the burden less. If the Minister does not act quickly, she will have passed the point of no return.

3.18 pm

Mr. Martin O'Neill (Ochil): The hon. Member for Tiverton and Honiton (Mrs. Browning) began by complaining about the delay in holding this debate. Listening to what she said, I thought that she could almost have been speaking on 2 May 1997 because she seemed to have ignored everything that the Government have sought to place on the agenda for the small business debate. She delivered a meaningless, spiteful rant about regulation and said nothing about anything else relating to small business. She sought to disparage the obvious facts about the improved economic climate of which my hon. Friend the Minister spoke at the start of the debate.

I remember visiting small businesses in my constituency during the 20 years for which I have been a Member of Parliament and being told that they had terrible problems with interest rates. Rates are now low; I would like them lower. I would like us to enter the European monetary system at the appropriate time, so that we may enjoy the interest rates that our colleagues in Europe currently have. I do not know whether the hon. Lady would like us to reduce the burden by taking that route. If she answered at all positively, I am sure that the bleeper would quickly go off. I do not know whether we would welcome her into our ranks as a bleeper refugee, but there is always rejoicing in heaven when a sinner repents.

I remember complaints about inflation of 15 to 20 per cent. in the early 1980s, about the problems of the burdens that were going to be on small businesses and about having to deal with high wage rises. Some have had to deal with big wage rises because of the introduction of the national minimum wage. Sadly, the working terms and conditions of people working in small businesses in this country have often been inferior to those of people working in larger businesses. They have had to put up with low pay, and holidays, time off and family-friendly conditions have been given grudgingly. The boss was delightful and he really liked the employees, but he usually exploited their proximity and close relations.

Such employees were often open to the abuse of their reasonable freedoms, including the right to be free from wage exploitation and poverty pay. If enforcing those freedoms requires detailed regulation because mean-minded employers will not meet their social and legal responsibilities, so be it. They must be told about such matters because, in the past, left to the free market, far too many employees of small businesses did not get a decent living wage.

Mrs. Browning: Why does the hon. Gentleman think that hon. Members of all parties are being inundated with correspondence from people saying how unfair the Government's parental leave directive is because it is unpaid? The wealthy and those on good salaries can take advantage of it, but not others. It is immaterial whether one supports parental leave. Is it not strange that the Government have introduced a popular measure but expected business to pick up the tab?

Mr. O'Neill: If the hon. Lady is suggesting that we should increase taxation to fund the measure—

Mrs Browning: I am not.

Mr. O'Neill: Most current public expenditure is paid for by taxation, which the hon. Lady's party never ceases to try to find means of reducing. It is a bit much for her to say that parental leave is good and that the Government should fund it. Those who run businesses must consider their social as well as their financial responsibilities. Those social responsibilities extend to their employees.

I should like to proceed to speak briefly about another matter, Mrs.—I mean Madam Deputy Speaker. I have known you for so long as "Mrs. Dunwoody" that your elevated title escapes me at times.

Madam Deputy Speaker: Order. I do not mind what the hon. Gentleman calls me, so long as he does not call me some of the things that I have been called in the Labour party.

Mr. O'Neill: I do not know whether I should call you comrade, Madam Deputy Speaker.

The debate ought to be taken seriously. The Conservatives could have used one of their Opposition day debates had they thought the subject that important. We have seen the emergence of the Small Business Service, the appointment of David Irwin and the encouraging willingness of the Government to study the American model of small business administration. The presence in the United Kingdom for the past 12 months of Philip Lader, the United States Ambassador, who was head of the Small Business Administration there, has been helpful. He did that work as a member of one of the early Clinton cabinets, because of the separation of powers and the way in which they run their Government. That kind of appointment is not possible in the United Kingdom, but we have a reasonable compromise. David Irwin is at the heart of the Government machine. He is not accountable in the sense of being required to come to the Floor of the House, but he can, and I am sure will before too long, be invited to the Select Committee, which I have the honour to chair. We are very interested in that.

Doors were opened to us in the United States through the good offices of Philip Lader. We were able to have lengthy discussions with several of the players in the Small Business Administration, which has been in operation since the 1950s. It was introduced by a fairly right-wing Republican Administration, led by President Eisenhower, but has built up over the years expertise in assisting small businesses and an ability to identify their problems. Its cumulative experience has allowed advice and assistance to be provided through a sophisticated mentoring scheme.

When, before the general election, we considered the operation of business links, we found it disturbing that its advice and mentoring service had several shortcomings. I do not want to be offensive to the people who were involved in it, but some were failed business people who did not have the get up and go to start a business again and were looking for the soft option of explaining to people how they had gone wrong and telling them, "Make sure you don't do as I did; do as I say." That is a perfectly legitimate view, but not really the positive approach for which one would hope. We want a mentoring scheme in which the mentors have been successful people, able to show best practice.

If we can do something about the insolvency legislation, which is, as it were, pencilled into the Government's agenda at present, we shall have a greater tolerance of business failure. Of course it is distressing to see businesses go to the wall. However, especially in the case of small businesses, we do not want the people involved, who often lose many of their assets and even their homes, to be denied access to financial support and even to the mainstream of business life. That is almost kicking people when they are down. A consensus exists and the draft legislation on the issue has been broadly welcomed. I hope that it will be presented to the House.

[Mr. O'Neill]

We should recognise that we need a climate of economic confidence in the country and in business, so that business people will be prepared to come back after things have not gone right for them. Some of the mentors whom we met in the United States said that they gave most support to, and most wanted to encourage, the folk who had failed—because they would not fail again, given half a chance; they would not want to go through the trauma. There are, in the bones of the Small Business Service, causes for optimism about those matters.

With respect to the payroll service, matters need to be cleared up. The Government were going to introduce something that might have involved the R-word, but cast their net wide, consulted, and came up with something else. One of the good things about them is that they occasionally find the time to pause and reflect. They are often big enough to admit that they may have got things wrong and there might be a better approach. The Conservatives' rather mean-minded approach of dwelling only on the imposition of particular types of regulation, in support of objectives with which they disagree, is unfortunate and is skewing the debate.

The Electronic Communications Bill is important, because if the American experience shows anything, electronic commerce can enable small businesses to widen and simplify their marketing through the use of websites and networking. Businesses are flourishing in a way that was never imagined by using those facilities. Admittedly, America is a big country and has always had the network of the catalogues—the Sears Roebuck culture—to a far greater extent than here. Women who worked in major textile mills in my constituency bought many of their clothes and Christmas presents through the Littlewoods catalogue, but in America many more people have been used to living in remote places, far from the main street store, and have chosen to shop in that way.

We do not have so much of the American communications-retailing culture, and we have the terrible problem of having to pay for local telephone calls. That has resulted in businesses being reluctant to become involved in electronic commerce, or to go on the net, because of the fear that keeping lines open for 24 hours a day, 60 minutes per hour, would cost a fortune. Indeed, an American to whom I spoke was incredulous when I explained our problems with the local call syndrome. He said that it was rather like going to a shopping mall and being given a meter that requires one to pay for every minute spent in the mall.

There are encouraging signs. Hon. Members on the Select Committee have successfully twisted BT's arm. It was no secret that we were to interview the Director General of Telecommunications at 10 am. Lo and behold, on the same morning BT produced the first package offering free internet access—not just for getting on the internet, but for using it. Admittedly, there is no such thing as a free phone call, just as there is no such thing as a free lunch. However, there will be more opportunities, through packages, for freedom from anxiety about an open telephone line capable of receiving calls 24 hours a day through e-mail.

Mr. Nick St. Aubyn (Guildford): Will the hon. Gentleman join me in regretting the feebleness of clause 10 of the Electronic Communications Bill? Does he agree that it should tackle the problem more effectively and that an attempt should be made to get BT to act faster and sooner? Without fast action we—I mean small businesses, in particular—will be losers in the matter of access to the net.

Mr. O'Neill: One of the hon. Gentleman's problems is that he has perhaps forgotten in his impatience that we live in a free enterprise economy and that it is not always possible, even for Governments who from time to time want to be interventionist, to interfere in the markets—especially regulated markets.

Mr. St. Aubyn: Monopoly markets.

Mr. O'Neill: No, it is not a monopoly market—perhaps it is oligopolistic, or has a dominant player, but there is a fair amount of competition. There are about 35 players in telecoms. I am groping for a figure, but my point is that the market is not helpful in several respects, because of the dominance of BT. However, BT is the big tanker that takes a while to turn around. It is turning because smaller players are coming into the game and nibbling away at its market share. It has moved, and the Government are to be congratulated on that. Nothing in law requires the Director General of Telecommunications to get BT to move.

The original question was whether the Government were doing anything. I said that it was the regulator's responsibility. It would be open to legal challenge were the regulator to be given the power to intervene and dictate to a single company in a free market.

The climate in telecommunications is changing. BT is moving. We had to kick it, shove it, embarrass it and abuse it in the Select Committee. A bit of rough trade goes on there from time to time—in the best sense of the term, I hasten to say. We have seen the beginning of a movement. When the biggest player moves, I think that there will be a significant change. We are putting the legislation in place. We have been able to avoid some of the worst excesses that were being forced on us by the forces of darkness in terms of key escrow and the restrictions on electronic commerce, but step by step the pieces are being put in place.

We must weigh up the initiatives that the Government are suggesting and the current economic climate. Only 12 months ago we were hearing sad noises about big business, the macro-economy and the whole British economy, to say nothing of the European economy, which Conservative Members do not like and know nothing about, although that does not prevent them from expressing opinions on it; ignorance has never been a barrier to expressing opinions in the House.

In the past 12 months we have seen a transformation and a consolidation in our economy. There is nothing to suggest that that will not continue in the months ahead.

The moaning and, as we say in Scotland, the girning and greeting that we have heard about regulation will be put into perspective and we will see that it is just a minor irritation in the development of small businesses, for which the Government deserve a great deal of credit and the support of the House.

3.37 pm

Mr. Brian Cotter (Weston-super-Mare): I want to fire two shots over the bows in both directions. I welcome today's debate. I was concerned that it would perhaps not take place and that it would clash with the Electronic Communications Bill, which many of us are interested in too. I must also refer to the appalling behaviour of Conservative Members last night, which resulted in the business being changed, but let me move on in a more constructive manner.

Several hon. Members rose—

Mr. Cotter: In the short time that we have I want to concentrate on the debate.

The Minister rightly referred to the economic background, which was helpful. I should repeat that I run a small business. It is an interest that I have declared, but perhaps I should declare it publicly again in this debate. Currently I am struggling to keep it well on the rails. I want to express a small concern about one aspect of the country's economic performance—the high value of the pound. It does not necessarily affect small businesses directly—it does not in my case—but it affects many of my customers, who find it increasingly difficult to trade. I shall not drift into a big discussion of how I feel that that could be improved, but the Minister knows some of the Liberal Democrat views about that.

As we all know, small businesses remain an extremely important part of the economy, with 3.7 million in the United Kingdom, and they have been an important sector for the work force. The debate gives me a good opportunity to talk about the Small Business Service, to which the Minister referred. I welcome it, because I hope that it will genuinely replace the past proliferation of bodies such as the training and enterprise councils, business links and enterprise agencies, which perhaps waste money and resources. As the Minister has said, some of those bodies are not performing particularly well, and we look to this new organisation to make up that deficiency.

I am worried that the chief executive, who will bear a great responsibility on the small business community's behalf, will not be directly responsible to Parliament, and we shall have to approach the Minister on such matters. The hon. Member for Ochil (Mr. O'Neill) referred to the United States example, where the chief executive responsible for small businesses is a member of the Cabinet. I hope that the new organisation will adopt a direct approach and, unlike past organisations, accept responsibility. I look forward to hearing the Minister's views on that.

Extensive reference has been made to regulation, which is of increasing concern to business. As the Minister and others will argue, regulation is necessary to create the conditions in which employees and businesses can thrive. In that respect, the Opposition's worries about the national minimum wage have proved to be totally without foundation. Nevertheless, I hope that the Small Business Service will examine regulation on behalf of business people.

The latest survey by the Forum of Private Business shows that employment regulation is an issue of importance that is second only to business rates. I shall not say too much about business rates this afternoon, except to note that many firms that the forum represents are particularly worried about that issue.

The need for deregulation is clear. Recent research by the Institute for Fiscal Studies found that administration costs fall disproportionately heavily on small businesses. The estimated administration cost of hiring one person was £330 for small businesses, and £404 for businesses inexperienced in the attendant bureaucracy. However, the equivalent cost for businesses that employ more than 5,000 people is only £5. That is a tremendous difference. Employees of a small business often have to fulfil a number of different roles, and I can attest to the difficulties that such businesses have in finding, employing and training suitable people.

A number of worries have been expressed about regulation. We support the working families tax credit in principle, but we are concerned about its implementation. Moreover, it has undoubtedly placed an extra burden on the small business community.

Despite the Minister's comments, hon. Members were concerned about the way in which the working time directive was implemented. There was insufficient debate in the House, and very little notice was given to business. Certainly, my small business received little information on it.

An announcement was made this week about consultation on a part-time workers directive. Again, the time scale is short: regulations must be enforced by 7 April. That will not allow sufficient time for the consultation to be properly carried out, for Parliament to have a proper opportunity to debate it, or for small firms and other firms to get advance notice of what is coming up.

Another matter of grave concern is the glib presentation of impact assessments relating to Bills. Often, impact assessments are not linked to Bills until shortly before Second Reading. Ideally, they should form part of the Bill when it is first published, so that the potential cost effects can be properly considered before it progresses. Furthermore, impact assessments are often put together in such a way as to be misleading. I intend to continue to address that matter on behalf of my party in future. For example, the impact assessments that were produced to accompany the Employment Relations Bill estimated the average cost to employers of implementing parental leave to be £140. However, that figure was reached by estimating the total costs to the 15 per cent. or so of employers that were likely to be affected, and then dividing them by the total number of employers. That figure was completely meaningless, and obscured the far more relevant figure of £935, which appears in black and white as the estimated cost to a firm of arranging cover for one individual taking parental leave. I should like to see more precise figures and a better impact assessment process. Impact assessments are often narrow in concept. I look forward to the Minister's response to those points, today or in the future.

[Mr. Cotter]

There should be an annual general impact assessment to consider all the regulations that are introduced and provide some clear figures on the total administrative burden that weighs on small businesses. The House should be able to consider and debate the costs on an annual rolling basis. The Government have made it clear that they intend to make regulation as fair and light as possible. They should have the courage of their convictions and allow us to assess the impact as the year goes on. I shall say no more about regulation, as I am sure that the subject will arise again.

Several Government actions have not been helpful. For example, the changes to capital gains tax made a mockery of the plans of many retiring small business owners who had anticipated that the sale of their business would provide a nest egg for their old age. A recent debate on sub-post offices revealed the great uncertainty that exists about their future. I am sure that other hon. Members have met sub-postmasters and mistresses who are worried about their nest egg and the way in which they were led to expect that certain aspects of their business would continue.

In the interests of giving other hon. Members a chance to speak, I shall refer only briefly to the Government's actions in respect of IR35, which have created difficulties for many small contractors. I merely flag up that I do not intend to lose sight of that. It was an unnecessary use of a sledgehammer to crack a nut, and it will return to haunt the Government in due course.

Consultation on legislation and impact assessments are crucial. People who run small businesses are slightly ahead of civil servants in their knowledge of the problems and difficulties involved. I welcome the interchange programme, whereby civil servants and others can acquire experience in companies, but the scheme relates only to large companies. They work for two years or more in the Shells and BPs of this world, but I suggest to the Minister that consideration should be given to expanding the interchange scheme to include the smallest companies so that civil servants and, perhaps, Ministers could sit alongside a small business owner—for example, the owner of a garage or small shop—for a week or two. They would then see for themselves the real problems facing small businesses. There is a great lack of knowledge about the smallest of businesses. That comes up time and again. Large businesses receive appreciation of their problems, but small businesses do not, as I know to my cost because I ran a small business in years past and had to do the VAT books and so on at 1 and 2 o'clock in the morning.

The hon. Member for Ochil referred to the Electronic Communications Bill. We all agree that electronic communication is a tremendous challenge and a great opportunity for small and other businesses but, as I said when discussing the Bill, it must be made absolutely clear, particularly to small businesses, that it is not simply a matter of obtaining a web site and plonking something on it. An article on e-commerce in The Guardian today stated that

"we're not quite there yet, US retailers made billions from wired consumers last Christmas but they also lost billions. One source estimated that poorly designed websites cost American retailers six billion dollars in potential sales".

I shall not continue, but there is much more in the article.

I make a plea for the Small Business Service to consider the matter seriously. The Minister said that she had opened a centre yesterday and referred to a firm that has done extremely well, but for every one that does extremely well, many struggle to take on new ways of business. I plead with the Minister to ensure that small businesses are able to appreciate the pros and cons of e-commerce opportunities.

The hon. Member for Ochil referred to mentoring and the concern that many of us feel about the quality of the advice given to small businesses and of mentoring schemes. I have been involved with the Prince's Youth Business Trust and I am sure that the Minister knows how effective that has been in following through its support for small businesses, shown in its success rate. In general, two thirds of small businesses in this country fail and only one third continue for more than five years and become successful. The British Chambers of Commerce stated that one of the aims of the Small Business Service is to encourage more start-ups. I would say, what about carry-ons? It is important to help firms to carry on, because it is no good having many start-ups if not many carry on. A crucial element is to ensure that business mentors are properly accredited. That has not happened in the past and an accreditation scheme should be put in place so that we can assess their worth and ability.

I want to give other hon. Members an opportunity to speak in this welcome debate. We must watch carefully the development of the Small Business Service, which I expect will replace the previous system and be more effective. Throughout the coming year I shall inquire or make speeches about progress in this regard.

3.55 pm

Mr. Tony Lloyd (Manchester, Central): The Minister made a profound point when she said that the Government's most important act was to create an economic climate in which small businesses could flourish. In fact, the Government have created a climate in which business can flourish. Small businesses flourish when they trade with larger businesses, and vice versa. It is vital that all parts of the economy have such opportunities. That is the single most important task that the Government have performed.

There was a brief but interesting exchange between the Minister and the hon. Member for Tiverton and Honiton (Mrs. Browning), the Opposition spokesperson. The hon. Lady said that we would have to go back five years to find a period when business failures were worse than they are currently. That was one of the last years of the previous Conservative Government, who had a disastrous record and who failed to create a climate in which small or larger businesses could function.

I warmly endorse my hon. Friend the Minister's comments on the importance of providing adequate services for the development of businesses among Afro-Caribbean entrepreneurs. Despite the fact that that community is now well established in this country, development of Afro-Caribbean businesses has been hindered. We need to examine why they have not grown and what can be done to rectify the problem. There are examples of good practice—I pay tribute to the Cariocca business park in my constituency, which is Afro-Caribbean led and which has helped to ensure that people have access to appropriate advice and mentoring. The important concept of mentoring was discussed by the hon. Member for Weston-super-Mare (Mr. Cotter). It is particularly important when there is a thinness of culture—people should have access to others who can add practical value in terms of management and business operation.

Dr. Ashok Kumar (Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East): My hon. Friend mentioned the Afro-Caribbean community. Does he agree that the Asian community has made a tremendous contribution to the business sector? Who would have believed 10 or 15 years ago that the success that it enjoys would have been possible? Despite the difficulties that ethnic minorities generally face, the Asian community has done well and we should recognise its tremendous spirit. Thanks are due to many Labour local councils and authorities for the help that they have given Asian businesses.

Mr. Lloyd: I join my hon. Friend in suggesting that Labour councils have a particularly good record. A quick walk around the centre of my constituency and the centre of Manchester would reveal the dynamism of Asian-run businesses. Asian businesses have bought older properties in the centre of Manchester and helped to ensure that it once again experiences enormous economic dynamism.

Perhaps I should be slightly pedantic and point out that that dynamism involves only a subset of the Asian community. My hon. Friend anticipated a point that I wanted to make. Such access is patchy. The Bangladeshi community, for example, does not enjoy the same business success as the Indian and Pakistani communities. We need to address the cultural phenomenon that might be involved.

I put in a special plea for the newer communities that arrived here recently, including the Somalian community. Its members lag a long way behind in the development of entrepreneurial skills. The nature of our economy in recent years means that they also lag behind in the access that they have to conventional employment. It is especially important to examine what can be done for more marginal communities, or for those most recently arrived. I hope that the Minister will consider that.

A number of inter-related issues influence small businesses. I am a little impatient with the view that the small business sector is monolithic; it is neither monolithic nor homogenous. Practice varies enormously within it, as all the studies indicate. The companies that we look to for growth are well defined: they are well managed, they tend to be newer and they are in an innovative sector. However, we have to be careful not to be over-enthusiastic about the small business sector. If we think, "Small business good, everything else not so good", a number of things will follow. First, we will ignore the real problems that affect small businesses, although the Government are now addressing those problems. Secondly, we will ignore the fact that outrageous practices exist among small businesses, which we must also address.

This country still lags behind in business innovation. That is not primarily a problem of small businesses. If we compare the best firms with the worst firms, however, we find that training costs range from £294 per employee per annum down to £34 per employee per annum. Sadly, the bulk of those at the top are larger firms and more innovatory companies, while smaller firms tend to be heavily clustered among those at the bottom. The failure of small firms to invest in training and innovation must be addressed. A big gap exists, so we should not be starry-eyed.

I recently had an opportunity to see how exporters operated, and was struck by the relative dearth of small British firms. Compared with German exporters, for example, British small firms are significantly under-represented. The Small Business Service has a significant role to play in export promotion, and in working with the DTI and the whole Government system to encourage small firms to be more export oriented.

We should also recognise that the management of small firms varies enormously. Some are well managed and dynamic, and look to growth. Some, however, will never grow and do not seek to grow, which we should also accept. We do not look to the sole trader to be the engine of growth. However, some firms, which are not well managed and do not look for anything more than stagnation, are grossly underperforming. That management issue should be addressed, because it has consequences for innovation and investment. It also has consequences for regulation, which I shall discuss in a moment. The Small Business Service should encourage dynamic management attitudes and the strategic management of firms.

I am extremely impatient with the rosy view that regulation is bad and deregulation is good. That is nonsense; it has no basis in common sense or economic efficiency. When small firms are asked whether they want to play on a level playing field or whether they want to compete with firms who are engaged in the most dodgy, outrageous practices, time after time good firms say that they want regulation that works. I shall give examples of unacceptable practices by small firms, which I hope the Opposition will join me in condemning. They are practices that have no place in modern society.

Mrs. Browning: I echo the hon. Gentleman's emphasis on the need for a level playing field. When the Employment Rights (Dispute Resolution) Bill went through the House, Conservative Members tabled an amendment to the effect that companies employing fewer than 50 people should be exempt from the legislation. That would have brought the regulations into line with those governing European companies, so that United Kingdom companies would not have been placed at a competitive disadvantage to those in mainland Europe. However, the Government rejected the amendment and set the level at 20 people rather than 50.

Is the hon. Gentleman worried that there is now no level playing field because the Government refused to accept a principle that we thought fair—that UK companies should work on the same basis as European Union companies?

Mr. Lloyd: At least one part of the hon. Lady's argument is simply wrong. All the evidence suggests that the United Kingdom does not have an over-regulated economy. The Minister referred to the OECD report, which makes it clear that, when measured against a comparable group of international traders in modern, efficient economies, Britain is at the bottom of the regulatory pile. That was an extensive study by the OECD, and we must take it on board in saying that Britain is not over-regulated.

[Mr. Lloyd]

There is always a problem with cut-off points for small firms. A firm employing 25 people is more likely to compete with a firm employing 15 than with a firm employing 10,000. These limits are extremely arbitrary. Moreover, a firm that would have been described as a small firm at the time of the Bolton report, a long time ago, employed considerably more people than a small firm does today. The definition of the term "small firm" has changed.

I shall cite the example of a shop in the north-west of England, in which four workers are employed. An employee who started work in June 1999 asked for, and was refused, paid holiday and was told that entitlement to paid holidays would begin only after 12 months' employment. The shop refused to allow its staff a meal break in an eight-and-a-half hour working day, although that is illegal. When the employee asked for a payslip, she was told merely that everything was in order. That is an example of a bad employer who is breaking the law and needs regulation.

Let us take the further example of a firm employing a 20-year-old. Instead of paying her £3 an hour to which she is entitled under the minimum wage legislation, it has dropped her wage to £2 an hour. I wonder whether the Opposition spokesperson can justify paying a 20-year-old £2 an hour as an acceptable living wage in today's world. I certainly cannot. When challenged about why he had not issued that employee with a payslip, the employer told her that it was because he could not afford to employ an accountant.

Those are examples of atrocious employers who need regulation. I make no apology for saying that I am convinced of the reasons why I am a member of the party of government, rather than the party of opposition, when I hear the arrant nonsense that regulation is bad and deregulation is automatically good. That describes not the better regulation that the Government want to introduce, but the deregulation that the Opposition favour. I am also convinced that the people of this country will continue to vote for the party of Government and not for the Opposition.

Mrs. Browning: A balance must be struck. If one is keen on deregulation, or a light touch of regulation, that does not mean that one is a total free marketeer. Is the hon. Gentleman aware that, during the previous Parliament, I tabled an amendment to a Conservative Bill that gave part-time workers the right to a payslip?

Mr. Lloyd: I congratulate the hon. Lady.

Mrs. Browning: Now you do.

Mr. Lloyd: I congratulate the hon. Lady on that. It is remarkable, however, that it took her own efforts to persuade the previous Government to introduce legislation whose importance is so obvious to all of us. Perhaps that explains why she is a little confused. She is a natural regulator who is now in the ideological trap of the Opposition and is having to work hard to justify her own unsupportable position.

Mr. St. Aubyn: Not only my hon. Friend the Member for Tiverton and Honiton but members of the previous Conservative Government should be appalled by the hon. Gentleman's comments on their efforts to tighten health and safety regulation. How does he reconcile Conservative Members' actions in that regard with his statement that they are against regulation?

Mr. Lloyd: I am happy to debate health and safety at any time. Under the previous Government, this country experienced a deteriorating health and safety record and the erosion of regulation. That especially affected small firms, whose employees are extremely vulnerable to a lack of regulation. Without health and safety inspectors, small and large firms did not perceive any pressure to maintain their health and safety records. More people in small and large firms continued to die under the previous Government because they ignored health and safety and underfunded the Health and Safety Executive. Labour Members do not need any lessons about that.

This is an important debate. We need to examine the role of small firms and how we can make them more dynamic. The Government are doing many of the right things, but I appeal to my hon. Friend the Minister: we must get away from a culture of saying that small firms are automatically dynamic and good when not all of them are dynamic and some are awful. In particular, we must get away from the idea that small firms are entitled for those reasons to plead for deregulation in all circumstances. We want better regulation and a bonfire of irrelevant regulation. We also want regulation that strikes a fair balance between the rights of employees, customers and other stakeholders and those of employers. My plea is that we should never lose sight of the fact that the Government must create that central balance. If we take the nonsensical view that regulation is bad and that deregulation is good, we do so at the expense of millions of our fellow citizens—not only employees but customers and other stakeholders—who will not thank us.

Madam Deputy Speaker: I call Mr. Leigh—I am sorry, I mean Mr. Chope.

4.13 pm

Mr. Christopher Chope (Christchurch): That reminds me of when I joined the House and was mistaken for my hon. Friend the Member for Gainsborough (Mr. Leigh) by a colleague who wanted to give me a drink and lobby me to vote for him for chairmanship of a Select Committee. As a new boy, I accepted the drink and said that I did not think that hon. Members who were not Select Committee members had votes on their chairmanship. My colleague then asked, "Who are you?" I was immediately forced to abandon my drink, and he rushed off to lobby the correct person. You are therefore not alone, Madam Deputy Speaker, in having muddled me up with another hon. Member.

It is a great pleasure to participate in the debate. Having served on the Health and Safety Commission during much of the previous parliamentary Session, I should tell the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) that his remarks about health and safety are far removed from the facts. I shall not go into the matter in detail, but I remind hon. Members that the health and safety record was improving as a result of the previous Government's policies.

I am also suspicious about the suggestion of the hon. Member for Manchester, Central that we should not go overboard in supporting small businesses. His remarks chimed conveniently with comments made by the Trades Union Congress in a letter discussed in the Trade and Industry Committee earlier this week. The letter stated:

"It is also questionable that small firms should have extra incentives simply by virtue of being small or because more small firms in the economy is automatically a good thing...the role of small firms in improving productivity growth, enterprise and innovation does not sit easily with the facts...In order to significantly raise national productivity and investment rates, it is the behaviour of the corporate and public sectors that is key."

That is the traditional view of the Labour party. It is obviously the view of the Trades Union Congress, which is concerned that more than half the people who work in this country are employed by small firms employing fewer than 100 people. I suspect that one reason why there has been so much delay in the Government's introduction of a substantive programme of assistance for small firms is that they were interested in window dressing, propaganda and seductive words before the general election. They found, when they got in, that the TUC and others—the big battalions, the corporate side and the public sector—were lobbying strongly against the interests of small firms and as a result they thought that the best thing would be to go slow on the matter. Thus, there was no proper debate last year, and this year's debate is being curtailed. It will be three hours rather than the five hours that the Government promised would be the norm every year during their tenure of office.

On the theme of actions speaking louder than words, and to illustrate the Government's indifference to the problem faced by a small firm in my constituency, I shall explain what happened to Coulton Instrumentation, of Christchurch, which wanted to export valves to another country. A representative of the firm telephoned the Department of Trade and Industry on 2 February 1999. He asked for the department responsible for exports to Iran, and was put through to someone on the middle eastern trade desk. He explained that the company was quoting for a project in Iran and needed advice, as it had never supplied Iran before. He described the goods involved and gave the name of the firm's customer to the gentleman on the DTI desk, who telephoned the same day and advised that the customer was known to the DTI and that there would be no problem in securing payment. The firm asked whether any special documentation was required for Iran and was told no. It was encouraged to go ahead and proceed with the business.

The firm was under the impression that it had received the complete picture and that the person to whom its representative had spoken was able to speak on behalf of the Iranian desk. It became clear after the firm had produced the goods and was in the process of exporting them that it was wrong to have accepted the information from the DTI at face value. On 12 August Customs and Excise at Heathrow stopped the control valves from going on the flight to Iran and wrote requesting further technical information. The firm telefaxed copies of the information requested by return and a few days later chased Heathrow customs to find out what was happening. A representative spoke to Mr. McFarland from the Customs and Excise export enforcement team and explained that the firm had contacted the Department of Trade and industry about the matter and had not been given any special instructions. His words were:

"If you go to the DTI Iran trade desk they will encourage you to export. But if you go to DTI export control, they will do their best to stop you. That is a very silly situation."

He said that the firm forwarded the documents to the DTI. On 19 August, the firm chased Heathrow customs again and was advised that it could be up to two weeks before it received a reply from the DTI. On 24 August, it received a letter from customs stating that the DTI had decided to request an export licence application. That was the first time that that small firm, which had not exported to Iran before, had heard that it needed to obtain an export licence. The matter did not end there. Even at that stage, the Department of Trade and Industry and the Government could not get their tackle in order to enable the export to proceed. After the firm contacted the DTI helpline to request an application form, it received information on how to apply, but no form. It repeated its request for an application form, which arrived on a computer disk.

The firm wrote to Iran to obtain the necessary end user's undertaking, which it had to telefax to the DTI for confirmation that the form had been completed correctly because the instructions were ambiguous. Ambiguity is a major burden on small business. The firm telephoned the DTI three times in one day for a response to the telefax. The last call was transferred to four different people. No one could help. It was eventually referred to the supplementary notes in the standard application form. By 20 September, some 11 days after the firm first asked for the information, no reply had been received and it had no alternative but to assume that the end user's undertaking had been completed correctly. The application form was then sent to the DTI with a covering letter explaining that the firm was short of time because its letter of credit was due to expire in three weeks. It asked for assistance in processing the application.

The DTI wrote back the following day confirming receipt of the document and allocating a reference number to the export licence application. Some 10 days later, the firm called the DTI to find out how the application was progressing. It was told that it would take between 10 and 20 days to process. The individual to whom the application had been allocated said that licence processing was a sensitive political issue and that other Departments had to give their approval. She advised that the application was booked to go to an interdepartmental committee meeting on 12 October. As the delay was being caused by three Government Departments and 12 October ws a long way away, the managing director of the small firm wrote directly to the Prime Minister and copied the letter to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. He described the efforts that had been made over many years to produce exports for Britain and appealed for intervention in this problem. The firm also wrote to its customer and requested an extension of the letter of credit. It was told over the telephone that all other European and American-owned suppliers to the project had made delivery on time without export control problems. It is a major issue that our firms are burdened with controls that their competitors do not have.

[Mr. Christopher Chope]

On 12 October, the firm contacted Mr. Peter Reed of Dorset business link. The hon. Member for Manchester, Central said that we need to get business links or the Small Business Service involved in helping small firms to export. I hope he listens carefully to what happened. Dorset business link spoke to Jayne Carpenter, the head of licensing at DTI export control, who was aware of the letter that had been sent to the Prime Minister. She advised that the application had to go before the interdepartmental committee and that the delay was outside her control. It is not much use having a small firms service that can intervene at the highest level of Government to remove red tape and bureaucracy and enable goods to be exported if the head of the relevant Department cannot assist.

On 13 October, the firm received a reply made on the Prime Minister's behalf by Mr. Coupland, the correspondence secretary at No. 10. He advised that the letter had been passed to the Department of Trade and Industry and that it would send back any comments direct. Fortunately, the firm received from its customer an extension of its letter of credit. On 14 October, it telefaxed the Department of Trade and Industry person allocated to deal with its application, to find out whether a decision had been made on the meeting that occurred on 12 October and whether an export licence had been granted. It was told in response that its licence had not been considered in that meeting but that another meeting was scheduled for 18 October.

On 15 October, the firm telefaxed the head of export licensing and asked for help to shorten the delay. She telefaxed back by return, apologising for the conflicting information and stating that although she was unable to give a definite time scale she thought that it would take roughly a further six to eight weeks for the application to be processed. She explained that the application had to be considered by an interdepartmental committee consisting of representatives from the Department of Trade and Industry, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Ministry of Defence.

In desperation, the firm sent another telefax to the Prime Minister explaining that the problems had increased since it had last written. It said that in its opinion the Department of Trade and Industry was unable to meet its obligations to exporting companies and asked again for the Prime Minister's personal intervention. By that time, the House had returned from the summer recess. I tabled four parliamentary questions to the Department of Trade and Industry about the licence application, and it is a fair summary to say that I received completely inconclusive replies. I emphasised in the questions that the issue had been drawn to the attention of the Ministers concerned and that I hoped that we would be able to resolve the problem and ensure that the export could be carried to a successful conclusion.

The firm was then told that it would take much longer for the application to be dealt with and that it should obtain yet another extension to its letter of credit. Having obtained an extension to 15 November, the firm was informed that the application would not be dealt with until between 1 and 15 December. It then obtained a further extension. You will not be surprised to hear, Madam Deputy Speaker, that the licence application was not dealt with by that time, which meant that by Christmas the company had still not received a yes or no to its application. The firm is keen to increase its export business—

Mr. Tony McWalter (Hemel Hempstead): Still?

Mr. Chope: The hon. Gentleman asks whether it is still interested, but I shall tell him what has happened now. It is now four months since the application was accepted for processing by the Department of Trade and Industry. Mr. Coulton, the managing director of the firm, wrote to me on 11 January. His letter states:

"Words will not begin to express my feeling of absolute frustration. This application has been the subject of four parliamentary questions, two letters to the Prime Minister and a letter to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, yet no one can advise when a decision will be made".

Unfortunately, the decision was made by his customer, who decided to cancel the order for the shipment of control valves, which was afterwards placed with a company in Germany. Mr Coulton wrote to Customs and Excise, which had been holding the goods since its intervention in August, stating that he would arrange for the valves to be collected and returned for disposal.

That is the reality of how joined-up government is treating small entrepreneurs eager to export and to back Britain. It is absolutely disgraceful that people write to the Prime Minister and to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry but receive no adequate response. I hope that the Minister will apologise unreservedly to the firm and ensure that it receives compensation for its ordeal. I hope that she will ensure that the systems are changed within Government so that timely decisions are taken on export applications. If ever there was a deterrent to small businesses trying to build export trade, that experience is surely an example of it.

I can regale the Chamber with another example from my constituency, of a different firm involved in selling replacement parts for aircraft. Some very large operators are engaged in that business; they can get an export licence from the Government that covers a range of products so that they do not have to make a licence-by-licence application. The firm in my constituency is too small to qualify for such a licence so it has to make applications to the Government case by case for permission to supply spares to aircraft in countries such as Pakistan and India.

The firm is at a disadvantage because other, larger firms can export on the basis of a list approved in advance. If the Government were interested in helping small businesses and creating a level playing field, one might expect that in return that firm would be able to get timely consideration of its applications, but it cannot.

The company keeps phoning me and telling me about its frustrations. It asks, "How can we possibly build a niche export business to provide spare aircraft parts if we do not get at least some assistance from the Government and the Department of Trade and Industry?"

I have given two examples of the Government seriously letting down small businesses in my constituency. My third example is of a completely different kind of small business: a doctor who runs a small general practice in West Moors. He wrote to me recently stating:

"The Department of Health has just issued yet another version of the NHS prescription form FP10."

The letter goes on to say:

"This is the third version we have had in the past year. The previous style was in use for 20 years or more. In the past we have at least been able to use up the old stock before switching to the new ones, but on this occasion we have been told to return the old stocks to the health authority for destruction. We have sent back a considerable number of boxes, several months supply."

The doctor wanted to be able to use the old forms. He suggested to the Department that supplies of cut sheet prescription forms could be produced to allow the use of modern laser printers—they are cheaper to run, and faster and more secure than the old slow and noisy dot matrix printers. He was told by the Government, who are geared to modern technology, that funds were not available for that purpose. That general practitioner was trying to get up to date and asking for prescription forms that he could use with his modern laser printer, but it was not possible.

That is another, real, live example that shows that for all the Minister's rhetoric about how the Government will encourage new forms of commerce and e-commerce they cannot even provide forms in a way that will enable my constituent, Dr. Blackmore, to operate more efficiently.

From my constituents' experience, the Government's performance in respect of small businesses is lamentable. From the proposals for the Small Business Service and the rough document that was issued yesterday—it was stapled together in what was obviously a last-minute, desperate measure—it is clear that there is no consistency about what is meant by a small firm. The people who will serve on the Small Business Service council will be representatives of not only small but medium-sized firms, yet we know that 94.7 per cent. of all the firms in this country have fewer than 10 employees. They are effectively microbusinesses. Another 4 per cent. have between nine and 100 employees. But it seems that the small firms body that is to be set up will be run by representatives of much larger firms. There is all the difference in the world, thankfully, between a microfirm and a small firm. If the Government are committed to small businesses, there is no need for medium-sized businesses to be represented on this new, small firms organisation.

We do not even know what the budget for the organisation is. As part of what I think is a concerted delaying tactic, the Government are again saying that they will leave it to the new organisation to work out its programme and prioritites. The chairman has only just been appointed and will not be paid until next month or the month after. Another six or nine months will pass before there is a clear policy and, by then, the Government will have been in office for three and a half years. If ever a Government should be indicted for not getting down to the business, this Government should be for their attitude towards small firms. Something serious must be done about that, and I hope that we shall have another debate on small firms soon, not in a year's time, so that we can hold the Government to account. At present, they think that they can rest on their laurels and on some clever wording.

In conclusion, I remind hon. Members of the statement that was made in the so-called "Small Business Action Update" issued in June 1998, on which much reliance was placed in our previous debate on small firms. It stated:

"On 25 March, the Minister for Trade announced a new package of export support which will mainly benefit small firms".

I hope that the Minister will realise from what I have said today that, whatever that package was, it was not fit for the purpose.

4.37 pm

Ms Linda Perham (Ilford, North): I am pleased to have been called to speak in this debate. Small business and enterprise has been a particular interest of the Select Committee on Trade and Industry in the past year and, as a member of that Committee, I have taken part in hearing evidence and have been fortunate enough to have the opportunity briefly to visit the United States, where we could compare, exchange and learn from experiences in the UK and the USA. My hon. Friend the Member for Ochil (Mr. O'Neill) has covered part of what we did there.

In this small business debate we are in a position to welcome the advent of the Small Business Service, which starts in April. This is a great step forward, which I hope will be acknowledged by small businesses throughout the country as an indication of the importance that the Government attach to them.

Barclays bank estimates that there were 470,000 new business start-ups in 1999. Others have said that the small business sector is of enormous importance to the UK economy, and I agree. The hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope) mentioned the statistics for small businesses. The Department of Trade and Industry's statistics for small and medium-sized enterprises in the UK show that 94.4 per cent. of businesses employ fewer than 10 people and 99.6 per cent. employ fewer than 100 people.

In London in particular the growth in jobs that has been achieved in recent years has been largely in the so-called microbusiness sector, to which other hon. Members have drawn attention. The latest figures from the Federation of Small Businesses in London show a growth of 14.4 per cent. among companies employing fewer than five people between 1995 and 1997. John Emmins, who chairs the FSB in London, said on 8 December 1999:

"We have always been convinced that any future growth in London's economy will come from the microbusiness sector, typically those firms employing between one and four workers. More importantly, it is from this sector that we can expect job creation which may lead to everyone's golden scenario, namely full employment."

The prospect of that golden scenario prompted many of us to enter the House and remains a policy priority for the Government.

[Ms Linda Perham]

However, that Federation of Small Businesses report, which is based on annual employment surveys, makes less happy reading in respect of the retail sector. The revitalising of our high streets is largely dependent on the growth of small traders. We have, after all, been famously called a nation of shopkeepers. There is growth, and there is enormous potential for further growth, but consistent help of the highest quality must be provided.

My hon. Friend the Minister mentioned encouraging the involvement of women in small and medium-sized enterprises. The Select Committee was heartened by its visit to the United States last May, when we met the head of the American small business administration, Ms Alvarez, and heard about its initiatives. As my hon. Friend the Member for Ochil said, Ms Alvarez's appointment to a Cabinet post demonstrates the importance that the USA Government place on small businesses. We also visited Sweden last month, and learned about the help that is given to Swedish women entrepreneurs.

The East London small business centre reported 255 business start-ups in the 18 months before December 1999, 42 per cent. of which are run by women. Ethnic minority businesses, which constitute an important sector in north-east London and elsewhere, as hon. Members have noted, accounted for 34 per cent.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Small Business and E-Commerce called for integration of the support offered to small businesses, and a drawing together of the different strands of provision that are funded by the Department of Trade and Industry, the European Union, the single regeneration budget, chambers of commerce and local government. Indeed, the Federation of Small Businesses has called for some time for a one-stop shop or single gateway for small businesses. The list of topics that need to be addressed is long, and includes credit, export advice, employment legislation, health and safety, value added tax, other taxation and insurance arrangements, benefits, national non-domestic rates and utilities. Bringing all relevant expertise under one roof will be difficult, but that is what the SBS—and, of course, small businesses—must try to do.

The need for integration will be quickly and specifically highlighted by the development of plans to spend funding achieved through European objective 2 status. Those areas that are granted such status will benefit fully from funding only if they enmesh their plans with those of other agencies and funding streams. The role of small businesses will not be maximised unless they are brought into the planning stage. In London, the detailed plan for objective 2—the programme complement document—must be ready by the end of the year.

Steps have also been taken in London to achieve a single franchise for the SBS. That has not been an easy task. The Government office for London has had to contact about 170 interested organisations, some 87 of which are business links partnerships. During the process that the Government office for London endorsed, Lord Sawyer was drafted in to chair the meetings. His brief included being able to which sounds like a cross between Dyno-Rod and Lennox Lewis. Hon. Members will note that I was careful to mention a British boxer.

"flush out hidden agendas and hold the ring",

I stated my commitment to the concept of business links partnerships during a debate in the House on 19 June 1998. Indeed, last year, in my own constituency, Business Links London East received a nationwide best practice accolade for providing a business support service that helped local business to improve turnover and profits.

Notwithstanding the general benefits of integration and partnership to which I have referred, I hope that the vital role of local government in supporting small businesses is given the recognition that it deserves. Councils are key providers of services such as planning, environmental health, licensing, car parking, town centre management and waste collection. Legislation will shortly impose on councils a statutory duty to develop local economies.

The importance of the contribution of local councils to economic development has never been greater. If the SBS is to achieve the success that we all wish for, it must obtain and maintain the best possible links with local government. In turn, local government will be failing itself and its supporters if it does not recognise the benefits of establishing a close relationship with the SBS at the appropriate level. It is inconceivable that any council's local economic strategy can be realisitic if it does not stress the importance of small and medium-sized enterprise.

We must tackle the integration of the regional development agencies. RDAs are being heralded in some quarters as the most dramatic development for UK businesses in many decades. If that is to be so, there must be a clear understanding of what is best done by the RDAs and where the SBS should concentrate its inevitably limited resources. In London, those questions will need to be addressed when the London development agency is up and running and the Greater London Authority and the Mayor are giving it the democratic guidance that it will require.

I have some queries about the SBS. Who will propose and approve its performance indicators? As the years go by, we shall need to know whether it is as successful as we hope and expect that it is going to be.

The SBS's remit is to help firms comprising up to 250 people. I am worried that too much emphasis may be placed on the higher end of the scale, thereby diluting the help that might otherwise be concentrated on the smaller firms. However, I have been somewhat reassured by the Minister's opening remarks, by the Government's reply to the Select Committee report—which recognises the need to develop a differentiated approach in supplying advice and services across the range—and by the announcement on 20 September 1999 of the Business Volunteers Mentoring Association to help start-up firms.

The SBS may have the specific expertise to assist co-operatives. If new mutualism is to be the exciting development that some have said that it will be, the SBS could act as a catalyst for the development of co-operative enterprises. However, it will need to have the relevant experience and skills if it is to do so.

My last two queries are about the level of funding of the SBS—especially given that it is not to have the payroll service—and whether the chief executive will be free to publish his views on regulatory legislation, particularly where he considers that small businesses' concerns have not been addressed.

I conclude by drawing hon. Members' attention to the excellent work that the Government have undertaken in encouraging small businesses. The tax regime has been improved by the new 10p rate of corporation tax and £20 million has been invested in venture capital to finance high technology businesses in their early stages. The great injustice of late payment, which is a real problem for small businesses, has been tackled. The SBS is clearly another major step in the right direction. All that good work means that a thriving small business sector will play a substantial part in the continuing success story that is the British economy under a Labour Government.

4.48 pm

Mr. Nick St. Aubyn (Guildford): It gives me great pleasure to speak in a debate on small business, as the chairman of a small business and someone who has been involved in the sector for 10 years. During that time, I had the experience of a company that hit the rocks, although I am glad to say that on that occasion nobody was hurt.

At one point, I had close contact with clothing manufacturers in Wales. Hon. Members who tell us about the effects of the national minimum wage should be aware that the minimum wage has lost the Welsh clothing industry thousands of jobs. Thousands of people have gone from low pay to no pay. Much as we want to see a high wage, high performance economy, the proper route to achieving that is through investment and the development of the real economy, rather than artificial measures that, unfortunately, often do far more harm than good.

E-commerce, will have an important impact on the small business sector. My hon. Friends and I regret the fact that Labour Members have no stomach for a fight and that the Minister and her colleagues preferred to give their hundreds of Labour Back Benchers an early night—none of them is here today—than to put yesterday's business through in the time available, so that we could have discussed the Electronic Communications Bill on the Floor of the House today. That is what happened during the past 24 hours and the many millions of people who want early implementation of the Bill will be disappointed that the Government gave it so little consideration when determining the business of the House this week. We know from the Second Reading debate on that Bill that the Government do not understand the importance of the sector. I am thinking of IR35 and the effect that the new tax rules will have on small businesses and information technology providers generally—there are many in my constituency—who were accused by the Minister in the House a few weeks ago of being tax dodgers.

It would be helpful if the Minister would clarify whether she believes that every small business man who takes legitimate steps to avoid taxation is behaving in the same way as people who illegally evade taxation. Does she consider those two actions as one and the same? If so, and if her Government intend to portray tax avoidance as illegal tax evasion, the framework within which small businesses must operate in this country will be so discouraging and difficult that many will give up entirely. People in the IT industry can often choose in which jurisdiction to operate and will decide to operate elsewhere. The Government's aspiration to gain the lion's share of e-commerce trade for the United Kingdom will remain merely that—an aspiration.

Related to that problem is that of the temp-to-perm regulations, which we await with great interest. I know from small firms in my constituency that many people believe that the Government do not understand the need in a flexible economy for the easy hiring and engagement of temporay employees or the value to businesses of being able to translate them into long-term employees without the sort of penalties which the Government initially contemplated with their original temp-to-perm regulations and which many fear will still come about when we see the full details shortly.

To put the matter in context, I have been advised by local firms that the cost of employing outside contractors to undertake IT work for a small business will rise by 25 per cent. on an hourly basis as a result of the implementation of IR35 and the expected temp-to-perm regulations. How can small businesses invest in new technology—we all agree that they must do so—when the Government are increasing their costs by 25 per cent. per hour? The Government are imposing that appalling burden on small businesses as we speak.

Mr. O'Neill: I am a wee bit at a loss. If I choose to employ a plumber, I like to think that he is paying his tax, which is reflected in the bill that I pay. Why should people in the IT business be different from the plumbers I employ to fix the sink in my house? Why should one group of workers be subsidised by the rest of us because of a loophole in the tax system, which the Government are now choosing to fill?

Mr. St. Aubyn: I am sure that every IT contractor would be delighted to be treated as a self-employed business man, as is the hon. Gentleman's local plumber. The problem is that self-employed IT workers are treated more like employees than like the local plumber. Although they are employed to fix problems in the system, they are not allowed to charge on the same basis as local plumbers. That explains why costs are going up and why the best and most able IT people, who use the current rules to accumulate capital to invest in their business and to employ more people, will leave our shores and find a better environment, such as that on the other side of the Atlantic, where their skills will be better appreciated. If that happens—there is every sign that it may—it will be the best rather than the majority of IT workers who will leave, although the others will suffer as a consequence.

I am deeply concerned about the cost of access to the internet. We heard earlier about how the gainsaying of the Select Committee on Trade and Industry persuaded British Telecom to move a small distance in the right direction. I am reliably informed that the current estimates are that British Telecom's windfall profits from IT connections are in the order of half a billion pounds a year. Another consequence of the IT revolution is that British Telecom's revenue from international traffic is probably much lower than it expected for the same period. However, a strategic issue is involved that goes beyond the interests of a monopolistic—or, as the hon. Member for Ochil pointed out, perhaps I should say oligopolistic—supplier. If businesses are to be connected to the net as quickly and effectively as their counterparts in other countries, those costs must be reduced dramatically. British Telecom's high connection charges have held up development, which has had on-going, long-term costs to our economy. That is a more important consideration than the individual interests of a firm, although those interests still deserve to be considered. The Government had an opportunity to deal with that issue in part III of the Electronic Communications Bill but they failed to do so, and that failure will return to haunt them. Britain has a golden opportunity to become the major player in Europe in the world of e-commerce, but the Government are losing that opportunity through their lethargy and inaction, and their failure to grasp the real and difficult issues that are involved.

[Mr. St. Aubyn]

I am aware that many other hon. Members want to speak so I shall conclude by making one more point. The changes that e-commerce involves are not encouraging for many small businesses. In the long run, the portals to commerce that the new framework will produce and the way in which distribution will be conducted mean that a small number of e-commerce companies will control the gateway to customers. It will be hard for many small businesses to get through that gateway at a price that gives them a decent return. If they are to do so, they must be allowed to have access to the new technology and to get on top of it as fast as they can. The Government failed to give them that opportunity because they failed to tackle the problems that I raised. Their failure will impoverish small businesses in this country.

4.58 pm

Dr. Ashok Kumar (Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East): I shall not respond to the doom and gloom that we have heard from the Tory Benches this afternoon. I want to bring optimism and light into this Chamber. I have much to say but, in view of the time, I shall try to be brief. I shall say a few words on the needs and aspirations of small firms in my constituency and explain how the Government's policies are helping them grow and prosper.

Only last week I was privileged to open the new premises of a small firm called TAS Fleet Trainers. It was started by one of my constituents, Lyn Treadgold, who spent a decade and a half working for others—and for herself—as a driving instructor before she realised that her talents could be used more laterally. The growth of two and three-car families means that there is a need for more driving instructors. Tighter insurance requirements and a tougher driving test, with a written exam built in, meant better driving instructors. Because of changes in the structure of daily work, more people are becoming more mobile in their working day. The growth in personal service industries has resulted in more people on the road, and more people meeting and working with other people in their homes, offices and workshops. However, the sheer growth of such mileage can have a down side. I read recently that 25 per cent. of all road accidents involve people driving as part of their work routine. That figure hides personal misery and linked insurance premiums and overheads.

Lyn Treadgold's idea was to combine her talents as an advanced training instructor with the needs of local companies for advanced fleet driving trainers. That training combined elements of advanced driver training with defensive car driving techniques, which cut down on road accidents and improved the overall quality of open road driving. Therefore, the road became a safer place for the general public and firms were helped to avoid pain and cost. Most importantly, it helped to keep people alive.

Lyn Treadgold's idea meant setting up her own business and employing other driving instructors. Local agencies in my area helped that idea become a reality. Tees Valley business link helped her with the initial business plan and her cost projections, employment services helped her find the right people to employ, and Redcar and Cleveland borough council, which is in my constituency, helped by providing premises in a small, easy-in easy-out business centre. The centre is based on a conversion of the old Redcar railway station, and the station offices, booking hall and concourse have been converted into a large number of individual units. The borough council also employs a centre manager and staff, who act as the front desk for the tenant. Lyn Treadgold was therefore helped by a government agency, a local business support system and a local authority. Those agencies, which worked in partnership with the banks, and, of course, Lyn Treadgold herself, turned this bright idea into reality.

I am sure that such stories are replicated all over the country, as older industrial structures based on large employers and mass production techniques change to a structure based on small firm creation, management buy-outs and spin-offs. Those structural changes have a big impact on areas such as Teesside, where heavy industry has been combined with developing technology. Our chemical industry is changing from being a big bulk producer dominated by a small number of world-class firms to one where smaller batch production of higher value-added products is becoming the norm. Our engineering industry once specialised in large fabrication for the old, heavy, iron and steel and shipbuilding industries, and has had to adapt historical in-built skills to cater for the new precise instrumentation needs of a steel industry that now competes on quality rather than quantity. Our offshore engineering sector is undergoing structural decline as the depletion of the North sea reserve gathers pace, but it has pioneered advanced undersea engineering techniques.

The workers in those industries still have those skills in their brains. Many of them are looking to apply them in newer, more advanced manufacturing techniques. Many of them are looking to sell their skills and ability through self-employment or starting their own firms. Society can also utilise many of those skills. For example, as a result of climate change, a large part of the UK and many parts of the developing world need new forms of flood defences and new techniques for marine management. The subsea engineering techniques developed by the Teesside offshore industry could be developed and adapted to help those regions and countries. I am sure that there are many other examples.

The Government's programme for small firm support will help those dreams to become a reality. I am particularly excited that much technically innovative work is being helped through by the expansion of the DTI's innovation budget. Locally, small firms and agencies, such as the Middlesbrough-based CAD/CAM centre, and high-technology centres, such as Cleveland Innovation, are making full use of the opportunities offered by this expansion, which they match with specialist European Commission funds to provide a comprehensive package of support for local companies and budding new Teesside innovators.

Such agencies can network with other local business centres to ensure that technical innovation goes hand in hand with the development of high-quality training and retraining facilities, and with bodies such as the local branch of business links, so that financial advice, mentoring and business plan development can be offered under one roof. Local authorities can also help through the provision of specialist accommodation, such as the Redcar business centre that I mentioned earlier, with direct finance through loans, grants or loan guarantees and with help in finding a way through the licensing or planning maze. The Government's plans to consolidate this by setting up a comprehensive Small Business Service based on the business links network must be welcomed.

I give a warm welcome to all the policy initiatives that the Government are adopting to help small businesses and their trading needs.

5.6 pm

Mr. Kerry Pollard (St. Albans): As chairman of the all-party small business group and from running my own microbusiness before I came to the House, which began with two employees and went up to 25 within four years, with a corresponding increase in throughput, I know how the small business sector operates and what it needs. I can remember hoovering up before I went home at night and putting the milk bottles out.

The small business sector is vital to the success of the British economy, with 38 million small businesses representing 55 per cent. of private sector employment and 45 per cent. of gross domestic product. Those figures highlight the importance of small businesses to our economic future as the engines of job creation and growth.

I am delighted that the Prime Minister recognised the importance of the sector by changing the ministerial post from Under-Secretary to full Minister of State. We are indeed fortunate to have such a high-calibre Minister in my hon. Friend. The small business sector also has friends in high places, with Ministers in the Treasury and the Department for Education and Employment who were former small business Ministers. The Government recently appointed David Irwin to head up the new Small Business Service, and I was pleased to hear his pledge to tackle the problem of red tape for small businesses as a matter of urgency.

The Government have introduced new employment legislation to create greater fairness at work, including the minimum wage, the working hours directive and the working families tax credit, but the cumulative effect of the deluge of new regulations is a matter of concern, with the full onus of compliance on the small business owner. In small firms with only a few workers, resources are taken away from the main task of making money to concentrate on employment and other legislation. The higher administrative burden for small businesses, particularly as compared with bigger businesses, adds greatly to the cost of compliance. I am therefore gratified that red tape is high on the new SBS agenda and that it will act as a single gateway for small firms, to ensure easy access to Government services.

The Government are firmly committed to stimulating the creation, competitiveness and growth of new and small business. The European awards for the spirit of enterprise have just been launched by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Energy and Competitiveness in Europe. Through that initiative, small and medium-sized enterprises can gain wider recognition and business exposure. The awards, which are backed in the UK by the DTI and across Europe by the European Commission, are made at regional, national and European level, giving us an opportunity to acknowledge new and developing businesses and encourage entrepreneurs. This year is the first time that the awards will be held in the UK, although they have been running in other European member states since 1991.

In my constituency, businesses are almost exclusively small and medium-sized, with many fine examples of enterprise and the growth of e-commerce. One example is Hocking NDT, a high-tech business that exports worldwide, which was started some years ago by Don Hocking from a shed in his garden. It now employs high-calibre people and is an important part of our local and regional economy. There are many similar companies.

Mr. Tony McWalter (Hemel Hempstead): Is he still in the shed?

Mr. Pollard: He has moved on to two sheds.

The all-party small business group with responsibility for furthering the interests of and providing feedback on small business in Parliament maintains close links with small business organisations such as the Forum of Private Business, the Federation of Small Businesses, which represents more than 180,000 independently owned small businesses throughout the United Kingdom, the Small Business Bureau, and the associations of chartered and certified accountants. Those groups have provided a great deal of relevant reserch that is useful to the Government in conjunction with the direct feedback that they receive from their small business members. They will want to work closely with the new SBS to co-ordinate further the support for the sector. All those groups are putting names forward for the council that will manage the SBS, contrary to what has been said.

In addition to the increased administrative burden and costs of compliance that are associated with red tape, a key problem for the small business sector is that of easier access to finance. Evaluation of the Government's small firms loan guarantee scheme is taking place with lenders. Furthermore, although I welcome the new 10p corporation tax rate for small companies and the extension of the 40 per cent. capital allowance for small and medium-sized enterprises to encourage investment and growth, I endorse the view that small businesses should be encouraged to retain cash in the business, perhaps by reducing tax rates on profits that are returned to it. I look forward to seeing further improvements in those measures to assist the small business sector.

[Mr. Pollard]

Madam Deputy Speaker: May I say that several hon. Members have made extensive use of copious notes? They know that the reading of speeches is not permitted, which I am sure they will bear in mind. I recognise that the use of notes is acceptable and prompts other than electronic reminders sometimes have to be used when an hon. Member makes a contribution. Does Mrs. Browning want to speak again?

Mrs. Browning: I do, Madam Deputy Speaker.

Two clear messages have come out of the debate. First, we can all flag up, with great pride and pleasure, successful businesses, especially smaller businesses, that are in our constituencies. Secondly, although we had a flourishing small business sector—the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) commented that we are known internationally as a low-regulation country—that did not happen by accident. We have that reputation because in the years of Conservative stewardship, we had specific policies that were aimed at creating a low-regulation country. We saw the definite advantages of that for the business sector and the overall growth of our national economy.

However, almost every business that I talk to mentions the cumulative effect of two years of relentless regulation. We hear the same cry from a range of businesses. Businesses from all sectors, large or small businesses, the Confederation of British Industry and organisations that represent smaller firms all send the same message: regulation is at the top of their list of concerns and they want the Government off their backs.

We heard a great deal about another Government task force that is determined to tackle regulation. I challenge the Minister on that. Our debate has rightly focused on the burden of regulation that is placed on small businesses. Week after week, the Opposition face another regulation that the Government want to add to the burden. Only last week, I prayed against the Minister's regulation to introduce statutory works councils at a cost to business of £850 million. In opposition, we must pray against regulations to bring to the House an open debate about the damage that the Government are doing.

From the contributions, especially from those of Ministers and other Government Members, it is clear that there is an ideological divide. We are pilloried for supporting deregulation. I am sorry to pick on the hon. Member for Manchester, Central, but what he said was pertinent. I gave him a clear example from the passage of what became the Employment Relations Act 1999. The Conservative party tabled an amendment to exempt from a regulation companies of fewer than 50 employees because companies of that size had such an exemption under equivalent European legislation. The Government opposed the amendment and made our companies reduce the ceiling to 20 employees.

The Government talk about the level playing field, but what is that if, when we compete with German, Italian or French companies, we find that we must work to different rules and that the Government deem it appropriate to handicap them further?

Mr. McWalter: Will the hon. Lady try to resist treating trade unions as if they are an encumbrance to business? Whatever the size of a business, good relations between trade unions and management are of real benefit, helping to secure improvements in health and safety, better conditions and a happier work force.

Madam Deputy Speaker: Order. Interventions must be brief.

Mrs. Browning: I shall resist doing what the hon. Gentleman referred to because there has been a clear change in the relationship between the trade unions and companies. That has arisen because of the trade union reforms under the Conservative Government of the 1980s, by which power was returned to trade union members.

Good communications between management and work force, whether via a trade union or not, do not require statutory works councils with their attendant costs. Those of us who, like me, worked in British manufacturing in the 1970s and early 1980s—I then proceeded to run my own business for 10 years—knew that there had been a sea change. That change was necessary both for the work force and for the management—I could be critical of managerial practices from the early 1980s. Much of the Government's action to put affairs on a statutory basis has been unnecessary.

The Government will be judged by their actions, not by their words. I have heard nothing to make me think that there will be fewer regulations for me to pray against or that the pound cost burden on business will lighten. I assure people that the Conservative party will put right the Government's failures when we come to office.

5.17 pm

Ms Hewitt: May I begin by asking for your assistance, Madam Deputy Speaker, with an intervention with the authorities of the House? We have had blessedly little hot air during the debate, but it would have been nicer had more heat come from the radiators in the Chamber.

Even in freezing temperatures, we have had an extremely interesting and valuable debate. I was impressed especially by the thoughtful and well-informed contribution of my hon. Friends the Members for Ochil (Mr. O'Neill), for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), for Ilford, North (Ms Perham), for Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East (Dr. Kumar) and for St. Albans (Mr. Pollard).

I should respond to the case of Coulton Instrumentation, raised by the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope). Of course, I apologise to

Mr. Coulton—he did not get the service that he should have had. Such problems happen even in the best-run businesses and Governments.

Mr. Chope: The problem is not that he failed once to get a service but that he was told repeatedly that he would get a service that was never delivered.

Ms Hewitt: I completely understand—the hon. Gentleman could hardly have made the point clearer. I shall personally get a report on what happened in the case and the reason for the delays.

I did not have time to mention British Trade International, a joint venture of the Department of Trade and Industry and the Foreign Office. It will put together all our export development and export support work and information about potential markets. It is already doing excellent work to support small businesses that want to move into new markets and is planning to put on line export control data for countries such as Iran, where restrictions are in place. I shall find out whether that information can be put on line even more quickly to ensure that businesses and people advising them have access to the most accurate and up-to-date information available.

I urge hon. Members who have constituents with urgent business problems of the sort under discussion not to waste time and to bring their problem to me. I do not promise that I can always provide a solution, but I promise that I shall try and that I will learn the lessons from such problems to try to ensure that the service is better in future.

Mr. Chope: What more should a constituent do than write directly to the Prime Minister, who promised that he was making contact with his own Government? I, too, took up the matter on the telephone, and spoke to a Mrs. Carpenter, although I was not going to mention that. I hope that the Minister is not suggesting that my constituent was at fault.

Ms Hewitt: Of course I am not, but as my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister is so exceptionally popular he receives an exceptional number of letters. It is therefore difficult to obtain fast replies, especially on complex problems. I am saying simply that if hon. Members speak directly to me or to one of my colleagues in the Department, we will try to sort out their problems quickly, which is what Mr. Coulton and others in his position needed.

The hon. Member for Tiverton and Honiton (Mrs. Browning) spoke about deregulation and suggested that the Government were not doing enough. She will not mind if I remind her of her words. She said that as a Minister in the previous Government she would be the first to say that they did not do very well on better regulation. Having admitted that the Conservatives did not get it right after 18 years, it is a bit much for her to complain that we have not got everything right in the first two and a half years. As she rightly said, there is a powerful Whitehall culture and a complex and deep-seated bureaucracy that will sometimes make regulations and guidance much too complicated and will fail to sort out some problems as quickly as they should be sorted out.

With the backing of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, we are trying to put in place powerful forces for better regulation. That is the point of the new ministerial panel, the new Small Business Service and the better regulation task force, and it is enormously important.

My hon. Friends the Members for Manchester, Central and for Middlesborough, South and Cleveland, East rightly referred to the entrepreneurialism of many Asian communities. In my constituency city of Leicester, the Indian community in particular has generated vibrant and dynamic small businesses, as well as rather large businesses, often from almost nothing, which is what many in that community had when they arrived in Britain. We must not only celebrate that and other such success but support enterprise in other Asian communities and in the Afro-Caribbean community, which have other problems.

I am happy to say that I shall soon announce the appointment of the chairman of the new ethnic minority business forum. I hope that its membership will soon be in place, to ensure an early meeting. That organisation will work alongside the small business council, and the two bodies, which will no doubt have some overlapping membership, will give the Government a sounding board and a direct voice on the experience of a range of small business people from exactly the sort of diverse background to which my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central rightly referred.

My hon. Friend the Member for Ochil and the hon. Member for Guildford (Mr. St. Aubyn) referred to the importance of bringing down the cost of telecommunications to enable business to connect more easily and cheaply to the internet. I entirely share their concerns; the cost of off-peak, weekend access to the internet, which a residential customer might use, is among the cheapest in the world, but the peak-hour, weekday access is undoubtedly too expensive. I want those costs to continue to fall much further and faster and I want a greater variety of tariff packages, including the option of a flat-rate subscription without a taximeter running for every extra minute of the call.

Mr. St. Aubyn: Will the Minister briefly explain why she has not tackled the problem in clause 10 of the Electronic Communications Bill?

Ms Hewitt: It is extraordinary that the hon. Gentleman should be asking us to propose a particular tariff structure on a private company in primary legislation. That is an absurd proposition. I did not realise that the hon. Gentleman was a devotee of various bits of old Labour, but there we are.

Mr. St. Aubyn: Will the Minister give way again?

Ms Hewitt: I am sorry; we are near the end of the debate. We will get the costs down and get the tariff packages right by driving competition further into the telecommunications marketplace, as we are doing, and by having tough and effective regulation, which Oftel is delivering. Last week, Oftel had a useful meeting with the internet service providers, with BT and with other interested parties. They will shortly settle interconnection charges with BT for internet access which will enable a range of tariff packages, including unmetered access, to be introduced within the next couple of months. After that, there will be the introduction of digital subscriber loop technology, local loop unbundling, third generation mobile and fixed access, broad band wireless, all of them intensifying competition in the local loop and bringing costs down. That is part of getting the infrastructure and the conditions right for business success. Our commitment to e-commerce success means that we will do that extremely energetically.

[Ms Hewitt]

The hon. Member for Tiverton and Honiton asked a question about the minimum wage and company directors. The minimum wage, rightly, does not apply to office holders, which includes directors of companies. She continued to complain about what she called over-regulation and what we know as fair standards for workers. It is not only Government Members who regret the position of the official Opposition on the matter; millions of employees and hundreds of thousands of small business owners regret the fact that we have an official Opposition who believe that wages should be allowed to fall through the floor, but do not believe that employers should have a right to paid holidays and a modest right to unpaid parental leave. It is an absurd position, but if the Conservative party had the chance to implement such beliefs it would mean a real fall in living standards for millions of ordinary people in this country who have benefited from the minimum wage and from the working families tax credit, which the official Opposition are also committed to repeal. That is not the way to create the conditions for business success.

The way to do that is to ensure that we get the macro-economic conditions right, as we are doing, and that we get the tax environment right, as we are doing by cutting corporation tax rates to their lowest ever and by introducing a 10p starting rate of income tax which will benefit the several million self-employed people who run small businesses.

The way to get the conditions right is to get the infrastructure right, as I said, and to ensure that we regulate when necessary and when the benefits clearly outweigh the costs, as my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central said, very eloquently. When we regulate, we will ensure that we do it in the most effective and simple way possible, always using the litmus test of thinking small first. That is precisely what we shall do to ensure that under our stewardship small businesses in our country continue to flourish and that more of them start, survive and succeed and become world beaters in their own right.

Question put and agreed to.

Adjourned accordingly at twenty-nine minutes past Five o'clock.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 10 January 2000

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Stalking

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will issue guidance to the Crown Prosecution Service on improving communications with the victims of stalking; and if he will make a statement. [104040]

The Solicitor-General: The Victim's Charter commits the police to keep all victims informed of developments in the case regardless of the nature of the offence. Currently, the CPS provides to the police information about prosecution decisions for them to forward to victims, or their families, as appropriate.

The CPS has a specific role in stalking cases to assist victims when the court has made a restraining order under the Protection from Harassment Act 1997, and when subsequently there is a need to seek a variation of the order. The victim is informed of any application to vary the restraining order and asked to express views and, if necessary, to attend. Again, however, the guiding principle is that the CPS communicates with the victim through the police.

The Home Office will shortly be issuing national 'good practice' guidelines to the police and other agencies resulting from the final evaluation of the "One Stop Shop" initiative, which was established to see how the Victim's Charter commitment to keep victims informed might best be met.

Following recommendations in Sir Iain Glidewell's report into the CPS and Sir William Macpherson's report into the death of Stephen Lawrence, the CPS is committed to adopting a more proactive role in communicating with victims. The Service is currently piloting arrangements for taking on responsibility to communicate direct with victims rather than via the police. The pilots will be evaluated before an implementation plan is devised.

PRIME MINISTER

United Kingdom European Delegations

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library the latest Information Bulletin on the activities of the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe and the Assembly of Western European Union covering the period May to October. [104032]

The Prime Minister: I have done so today.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Defence Systems Exhibition

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Government are taking regarding reports in connection with the 1999 Defence Systems Equipment Exhibition that an official at the Pakistan High Commission in London offered to sell anti-personnel mines destined for Sudan. [104296]

Mr. Vaz: The allegation that an official at the Pakistan High Commission offered to sell anti-personnel mines has been referred to HM Customs and Excise as the appropriate law enforcement agency and I have protested strongly to the Pakistani High Commission.

Konrad Kalejs

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) on what occasions (a) he, (b) Ministers in his Department and (c) his officials have discussed the case of Konrad Kalejs with the Australian authorities; and what was the nature of the discussions and information received; [104389]

(2) on what occasions (a) he, (b) Ministers in his Department and (c) his officials have discussed the case of Konrad Kalejs with the Latvian authorities; and what was the nature of the discussions and information received; [104391]

(3) on what occasions (a) he, (b) Ministers in his Department and (c) his officials have discussed the case of Konrad Kalejs with the United States authorities; and what was the nature of the discussions and information received; [104390]

(4) on what occasions (a) he, (b) Ministers in his Department and (c) his officials have discussed the case of Konrad Kalejs with the Canadian authorities; and what was the nature of the discussions and information received. [104377]

Mr. Vaz: Neither the Secretary of State nor FCO Ministers have had contact with their American, Australian, Canadian, or Latvian counterparts on the issue of Konrad Kalejs.

At the request of the Home Office, British officials in Riga and Canberra discussed Kalejs with host Governments. British officials passed a request for information from the American Embassy in London to the Home Office. Officials in Ottawa and Washington have been in contact with their host Governments.

The purpose of discussions with the Australian and Latvian authorities was to make them aware of developments in the Kalejs case, and to inform them of our readiness to pass on all relevant information, held by HMG.

The purpose of discussions with the Americans and Canadians was to ask that all relevant information they had on Kalejs be passed to authorities in Australia and Latvia.

The Latvian authorities informed us on 3 January that they were reopening their investigation into Kalejs, indicated that they had first investigated him in 1992, and said that they had since maintained close links with US and Canadian authorities.

The Australians informed officials that they did not have an extradition treaty with Latvia, but would consider any extradition request made.

British Diplomatic Posts (Costs)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the running costs of the British embassies in (a) Paris and (b) Washington. [104087]

Mr. Hain: The running costs for Paris include all Locally Engaged (LE) staff costs of subordinate Posts throughout France. Similarly Washington costs include LE staff throughout the USA. The total staff levels are 248 for Paris, of which 44 are UK based, and 535 for Washington, of which 55 are UK based. It is therefore not possible to draw proper comparisons between the running costs of the two Embassies. However, the ratio of 5:4 UK based staff between Washington and Paris is not considered unreasonable.

It is important to look at these figures in context: the FCO employs fewer staff and costs less to run than Birmingham City Council. The cost of running the FCO in London and at its 221 posts overseas amounts to less than one-third of one per cent. (0.3 per cent.) of all Government expenditure, and less than 0.15 per cent. of UK GDP. The total FCO budget costs each man, woman and child in Britain only 5p a day.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the annual running costs were of UK embassies in (a) the European Union and (b) the USA, in the last year for which figures are available. [104130]

Mr. Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 14 December 1999, Official Report, column 109W, specifically the answers to parts (a) and (b).

International Tribunal on War Crimes

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of British forces in providing information to the International Tribunal on War Crimes in Kosovo. [102342]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

The British Government are strong supporters of the work of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia in Kosovo (ICTY), as in other parts of the Former Yugoslavia. As part of KFOR, British forces have assisted the work of ICTY investigators, notably by providing a secure environment in which they can work. British service personnel were also involved, earlier this year, in debriefing Kosovar refugees, in Macedonia and elsewhere, and the information gained has been passed to the Tribunal.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Planning Approvals (New Homes)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to (a) limit and (b) reduce planning approvals for new homes in West Sussex. [104308]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The decision whether to grant planning permission for proposed new housing developments is, in the first instance, a matter for the local planning authority concerned. Applications shall be determined in accordance with the development plan for the area, unless material considerations indicate otherwise. In formulating their development plans local authorities must have regard to guidance issued by the Secretary of State. We expect to publish new national planning policy guidance on housing (PPG3), and final proposals for the new regional planning guidance for the South East (RPG9), soon.

Environmental Assessments

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many of the Bills published since the Queen's Speech were accompanied by a statement of their implications for the environment. [104271]

Ms Beverley Hughes: It is the Government's policy that environmental aspects should be considered fully alongside the economic and social considerations during the development or review of a policy. My Department stands ready to advise on appraisal and monitoring systems. But it is for individual Departments to set up their own systems to ensure that their policies take account of the environment and that, where necessary, environmental appraisals are carried out. The overall policy and its operation is monitored by the Green Ministers' Committee, which reports annually in July.

Since the Queen's Speech, the DETR has published two Bills, the Transport Bill and the Local Government Bill. The Transport Bill and a Regulatory, Environmental and Equal Treatment Appraisal were published on 1 December 1999.

The Local Government Bill provides a new discretionary power for local authorities to take steps which, in their view, promote the economic, social and environmental well-being of those who live, work in or visit their local area, in order to improve the quality of life locally. The remainder of the Bill addresses the way in which local authorities are organised and elected and carry out their business. In this case, no specific environmental impact statement has been published.

Driving Licences

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much the medical section of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency pays to private opticians to conduct sight tests and field tests. [104080]

Mr. Hill: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) has only just started to use private opticians. DVLA currently pays optometrists £35 to undertake each visual field test, which, on current volumes of tests, will amount to an annual total of £280,000.

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will encourage local authorities to publish the composition of their workforces in terms of standard age groups, ethnic origin and gender in their annual reports. [104015]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Under the provisions of the Local Government Act 1999, authorities will be required to report annually their performance against specified national performance indicators. Details were published on 23 December in "Best Value and Audit Commission Performance Indicators for 2000–2001". They include indicators on the representation of minority ethnic staff in the workforce and the proportion of women in senior management posts. There is no indicator in respect of the age breakdown of the workforce, but the indicators will be reviewed annually and updated in the light of consultation with the range of authority and customer interests.

Early Retirement

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many employees of his Department took early retirement packages, and at what total cost, in the financial year 1996–97. [104098]

Ms Beverley Hughes: In the financial year 1996–97, 462 employees of the Department of the Environment and the Department of Transport took early retirement. In addition, some 228 employees took early severance. It would not be possible to separate retirement and severance costs without disproportionate cost and effort, but the total costs of early retirements and severance in the year concerned was £23,322,610. This includes ongoing costs of departures from previous years.

Objective 1 Funding

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the requirements for match public funds from his Department for the EU Objective 1 regions of (a) Cornwall and Scilly, (b) Merseyside and (c) South Yorkshire for each of the seven years of the programme. [104301]

(2) what level of match public funds from his Department are available to EU Objective 1 regions for each of the next seven calendar years. [104305]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My Department will provide significant financial support for all three Objective 1 programmes through a number of funding mechanisms. These include the Single Regeneration Budget and New Deal for Communities, as well as mainstream funding made available to local authorities. Local partnerships can prioritise the use of these resources to fund projects jointly with the Structural Funds, thereby boosting their impact.

It is too early to estimate how much my Department's contribution is likely to be over the 2000–06 programme period. This will depend on the types of projects which local partnerships select for support over the programming period.

Strategic Rail Authority

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to appoint a representative to the Strategic Rail Authority from (a) the National Assembly for Wales, (b) the Northern Ireland Assembly, (c) the Scottish Parliament and (d) the United Kingdom Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [104144]

Mr. Hill: There are no plans to appoint such representatives to the Strategic Rail Authority. The Secretary of State has, however, consulted the Welsh Assembly and the Scottish Executive about Welsh and Scottish representation on the SRA. It is not intended that the responsibilities of the SRA will extend to Northern Ireland.

Homelessness

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received over the Government's plans to tackle homelessness. [102936]

Mr. Mullin: My Department has received a large number of representations in recent months from both interested organisations and members of the public, on a wide range of homelessness issues, and in particular on our recently published plans to tackle rough sleeping.

From its establishment in April 1999, the Rough Sleepers Unit consulted extensively with key partners as part of the development of its strategy, "Coming in from the Cold", which was published on 15 December 1999. Organisations that made representations during this process included other Government departments, local government, other statutory bodies including the Police and the National Health Service, key national and local voluntary organisations, the business community, faith leaders and rough sleepers themselves, as well as members of the general public.

Also, my Department has set up an official-level sounding board, which includes representatives from the Local Government Association, the Association of London Government, Shelter, the Chartered Institute of Housing, the National Housing Federation and other organisations with an interest in social housing, to discuss proposals for changes to policy on homelessness and the allocation of social housing. Our proposals are still at an early stage, but we intend to consult on them widely in due course.

Dog Identification Working Group

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he plans to initiate public consultations when the Dog Identification Working Group publishes its report. [104307]

Mr. Hill: The report of the Dog Identification Group is expected by the summer of this year. We will consider what the appropriate arrangements for consultation are to be nearer that time.

NATS

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how the figure of £350 million for the partial sale of NATS was calculated; and what plans he has to write off the outstanding debts owed by NATS. [104097]

Mr. Mullin: The estimate of £350 million in proceeds from the strategic partner in NATS is net of any debt restructuring and was calculated by our advisers in order to give Parliament a broad estimate of the possible proceeds from the proposed sale. The precise amount of the proceeds will be the subject of commercial negotiations with the strategic partner.

NATS loans from the NLF must be extinguished when the PPP is put in place so as to avoid any hidden subsidy to the PPP. This may be achieved by repayment, or by writing them off and replacing them with new commercial debt. Final decisions will be taken in consultation with the selected strategic partner when establishing an optimum capital structure for the company.

Ward Boundary Reviews

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what procedures exist for objections to be made, and appeals to be heard, in respect of proposals by the Local Government Boundary Commission concerning ward boundary reviews. [104228]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Representations, both for and against proposals, can be made at any time to the Local Government Commission (LGC) during the review process and to the Secretary of State after the publication of the Final Report and until an Order is made. It is vital for the integrity of democratic local government that the process of making local authority electoral arrangements should be, and be seen to be, fully independent. Therefore, it is the Government's policy that, unless there is compelling evidence available to it that the recommendations of the LGC may be flawed, it will accept them. However all representations received are fully considered before arriving at a final decision.

Waste Recycling

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of waste collected for recycling was exported in the last year for which figures are available, broken down into (a) glass, (b) paper, (c) plastics and (d) metals. [100941]

Mr. Mullin [holding answer 6 December 1999]: The table shows the percentage of waste collected for recycling in the United Kingdom that was exported in 1998.

Material	Percentage exported	Amount exported (thousand tonnes)
Glass	13	69
Paper and board	8	402
Plastics	24	40
Ferrous metals	36	3,193

Sources:
British Glass Federation; Paper Federation of Great Britain; British Plastics Federation; Iron and Steel Statistics Bureau; HM Customs and Excise.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will expand the new Home Energy Efficiency Scheme to include energy efficiency improvements to the fabric of buildings constructed with solid walls. [101426]

Mr. Meacher: Households eligible for the New Homes Energy Efficiency Scheme (HEES) who live in properties with solid walls will receive loft insulation and draught proofing under the scheme, to improve the energy efficiency of the building fabric.

With regard to the solid wall insulation, as I detailed in the answer I gave on Tuesday 19 October 1999, Official Report, column 491W, this does not appear to be appropriate for the packages of improvements to be offered under the new HEES. Therefore external or internal wall insulation measures will not be available under the scheme.

Instead, the New HEES packages available for these solid wall properties include higher levels of heating improvements than those for cavity walled homes, so providing similar reductions in fuel costs for both types of property.

Councillor Keith May

Sir Nicholas Lyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received as to the ability of Councillor Keith May to speak on behalf of his electorate in relation to former Land Settlement Association property; and if he will make a statement. [102716]

Ms Armstrong: I have received three representations about this matter—the request for a dispensation under section 97 of the Local Government Act 1972 from Councillor Keith May, a letter from the Head of Members' Services at Bedford Borough Council and a letter from the right hon. and learned Member himself. I replied to the right hon. and learned Member on 22 December 1999.

Departmental Productivity

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he is taking to increase the productivity and reduce the running costs of his Department. [103842]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Delivering efficient and modern public services is a key part of the Government's agenda for improving productivity. Greater efficiency is being sought therefore within the public sector to ensure that the most effective results are obtained from available resources. The Department's Public Service Agreement (PSA), set out in "Public Services for the Future", Cm 4181, includes a range of measures for taking this forward, both within the Department itself and in other public sector bodies.

Those measures which will help raise the Department's own productivity are listed at pages 29–31 of Cm 4181 and include:

"Better quality services" reviews over a five year period

Electronic Government measures. The Department's target is that 87 per cent. of its business transactions should be capable of being conducted electronically by 2002, subject to the private insurance industry and Post Office Counters Limited achieving their own individual targets sickness absence targets, and introducing measures to reduce the levels of sickness absence measures to reduce the incidence of fraud measures to improve procurement practice specific productivity measures for the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, the Highways Agency, Planning Inspectorate, Health and Safety Commission and Executive, and DETR Central.

In addition, the 1999–2000 business plan for the Planning Inspectorate includes a target to generate a 3 per cent. efficiency improvement in the use of running costs compared with the previous year. The Highways Agency also has a series of performance indicators related to running costs, listed under key target 17 at Annex B of its business plan for 1999–2000 (copies of which are available in the Library of the House).

The Department's gross running costs provision for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 is set out in its PSA. The productivity measures listed above will enable the Department to increase the quantity and quality of outputs delivered by its running costs expenditure over this period.

Flood and Coastal Defence

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many meetings his officials have attended with Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food officials on the joint review of flood and coastal defence funding. [103861]

Ms Beverley Hughes: My officials have attended one meeting with officials from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. The consultation document was agreed in correspondence and joint consideration is being given to the responses.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on the joint review of flood and coastal defence funding. [103862]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and my Department have received 54 representations from a range of bodies concerned with flood and coastal defence. Copies of the responses have been placed in MAFF's library at 3, Whitehall Place, West Block, London SW1A 2HH and are available for inspection.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to ensure the joint review of flood and coastal defence funding meets his Department's objectives on the water environment; and if he will make a statement. [103860]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The funding review is taking place in the context of Government policy on flood and coastal defence. The Environment Agency is making a full contribution to the review.

Correspondence

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will reply to the letter of 18 October sent by Nigel Petrie on behalf of Edison Mission Energy to Mr. L. Jaero of his Department; and if he will make a statement on how this issue has been handled by his Department. [103737]

Ms Armstrong: The letter concerned the rateable value to be prescribed for pumped-storage energy schemes as part of the current revaluation of non-domestic rates. There are no pumped-storage schemes in England. The values of the plants at Dinorwig and Ffestiniog, which were the subject of Edison Mission Energy's letter, will be prescribed by the National Assembly for Wales.

The letter followed a series of meetings between electricity producers and officials from the Department, the Scottish Executive, the National Assembly for Wales and the Valuation Office Agency.

The Department copied the Company's letter to the Valuation Office Agency, who advise both the Department and the National Assembly for Wales on rating matters. However, officials mistakenly thought that Edison Mission Energy was aware of the constitutional position and that they had written separately to the National Assembly. The letter was not, therefore, forwarded to the Assembly and no reply was sent to the Company.

I regret this misunderstanding, which came to light when the Company wrote again to the Department on 17 December. The Department replied on 20 December and copied both the letters of 17 December and 18 October to officials in the National Assembly for Wales and the Scottish Executive.

Countryside Bill

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from environmental groups concerning the proposed Countryside Bill. [103932]

Mr. Meacher: Since the announcement of the Bill in the Queen's speech on 17 November, I have received a number of representations from groups and individuals, many of which have environmental interests. Our proposals have been broadly welcomed. Particular attention is being paid to the scope of our proposals for rights of access and the implications for occupiers of land, the detail of the rights of way proposals and the scope of our proposals for wildlife and for sites of special scientific interest.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Drugs

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department is taking to tackle the problems caused by drugs in local communities. [103382]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Action by the Home Office is being taken forward as part of the Government's 10-year national anti-drugs strategy "Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain", published in April 1998.

The Home Office is contributing to the strategy on several fronts. The Department's Drugs Prevention Advisory Service (DPAS), which succeeded the Drug

Prevention Initiative on 1 April 1999, is actively promoting effective community-based drugs prevention and supporting the delivery of Aim 1 (helping young people resist drug misuse), and Aim 2 (protecting communities from drug-related anti-social and criminal behaviour) of the national strategy.

DPAS is the first Government drugs prevention organisation to cover the whole of England. It works closely with Drug Action Teams—the bodies charged with local delivery of the national strategy—to encourage and support the development of effective local prevention initiatives. DPAS also provides advice and support to community-based partnerships on how to address drug related problems within communities. In addition, it acts as a pressure point on other relevant initiatives and programmes such as community safety, crime reduction and community regeneration, to ensure that drug issues are included on those agendas.

The Home Office crime reduction strategy places a strong emphasis on breaking the link between drugs and crime. Many acquisitive crimes are connected to drug misuse. The crime reduction strategy has a particular focus on domestic burglary and vehicle crime. For example, funding is being made available to protect over two million homes in 500 high burglary areas over the next two years. Moreover, the Government introduced new legislation this month which provides for mandatory sentences of at least three years for third-time burglars. Targeted policing initiatives are also being adopted to tackle crimes like drug dealing in communities.

Other measures designed to break the link between drugs and crime include the piloting of Drug Treatment and Testing Orders under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998; the provision of £20 million to pump prime the establishment of arrest referral schemes across England and Wales to lead drug misusing offenders into treatment; and proposals to extend drug testing across the criminal justice system.

Gamma Hydroxy Butyrate

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to reclassify gamma hydroxy butyrate as a drug under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971; [103379]

(2) what steps he has taken to limit the availability of gamma hydroxy butyrate. [103375]

Mr. Charles Clarke: With regard to the question of the classification of gamma hydroxy butyrate (GHB) under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Benn) on 8 December 1999, Official Report, column 532W.

That reply mentioned the work of the Medicines Control Agency (MCA) to counter the illicit manufacture and sale of GHB, and it might be helpful to elaborate on this. In addition to investigating offences under the Medicines Act, the MCA has taken action on a number of fronts in recent months to reduce the supply of GHB. The Agency has issued an advertising alert to the Committee of Advertising Practice (CAP) and circulated briefing to all heads of police forces and all trading standards and environmental health offices. MCA officers have also targeted a number of sex shops and similar premises to educate owners on the law relating to the advertising and sale of GHB, and followed this up with regular compliance checks.

The National Criminal Intelligence Service (NCIS) also has a key role to play. The NCIS Drugs Section works with the chemical industry, the Home Office and police forces to gather intelligence on the illicit manufacture of drugs. In the last year this intelligence led to the discovery of eight illicit drug laboratories producing amphetamine, ecstasy and GHB.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the use of gamma hydroxy butyrate as a date rape drug. [103376]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There is currently little evidence of gamma hydroxy butyrate (GHB) being used to facilitate rape. Forensic Science Service analysis since March of last year of samples taken from 100 victims of sexual assault and rape where the use of drugs is suspected has identified GHB in four cases.

While the analysis has provided no direct linkage between GHB and the sexual offence, rape is clearly an extremely serious offence and it is important for the Government to have a clear understanding of the extent of the drug rape problem. With this in mind, the Home Office sponsored a Metropolitan police research initiative into drug assisted rape, which is due to be concluded in April 2000. Ministers will consider the findings and recommendations of this study.

Separately, a Home Office led review was set up at the beginning of 1999 to review the law on sex offences in England and Wales. As part of its considerations, the review is considering the law relating to consent, and circumstances where consent is not present. It is also considering whether the current offence of administering drugs to obtain or facilitate intercourse (section 4 of the Sexual Offences Act 1956) is still appropriate. The review expects to report its recommendations to Ministers in the spring, and we plan to publish a consultation paper shortly after this.

Police Grant

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the factors that determined the police grant (a) net expenditure and (b) percentage increase in real terms for Staffordshire in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99 and (iii) 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [103621]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Police grant allocations to individual authorities for the years in question were determined under a needs-based funding formula and were approved by the House of Commons. For 1997–98 and 1998–99 police authority expenditure levels were subject to capping limits on budget increases. For 1999–2000, no capping limits were set. The budget increase for that year was determined by Staffordshire Police Authority.

Net expenditure levels are determined by deducting income from gross expenditure. The percentage changes in real terms for the Staffordshire Police Authority for each of the years in question will reflect the application of Her Majesty's Treasury's Gross Domestic Product deflators.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average length of time taken by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate to process travel document applications; [103596]

(2) what steps he is taking to reduce the length of time taken by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate to process travel document applications. [103597]

Mrs. Roche: New applications have, since September, been dealt with under a fast track procedure and the majority are being resolved within four weeks of receipt. But there are around 7,000 applications made between January and August 1999 still outstanding. Work on these applications is progressing steadily but it will be some months before they are all cleared, due to a threefold increase in the number of new applications. The number of staff in the section has increased threefold in recent months, and output has increased fivefold.

Remand Places (Juveniles)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Youth Justice Board will assume responsibility for the procurement and provision of secure remand places for juveniles. [103868]

Mr. Boateng: The Youth Justice Board for England and Wales will assume responsibility for commissioning and purchasing places in secure accommodation for remanded and sentenced children and young people in April 2000.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the cost to local authorities in the last year for which figures are available of (a) providing secure remand places for juveniles and for the escort of juveniles for court appearances and (b) the reimbursement paid under Section 21 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. [103869]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Children and young people remanded to local authority secure accommodation are the responsibility of the local authority designated by the court. Information on the costs to local authorities of providing secure remand places and escorts for court appearances is not collected centrally.

The secure remand provisions in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 were implemented on 1 June 1999. On the basis of the claims so far submitted, the Home Office has paid local authorities nearly £500,000 for the additional costs incurred by them in such cases.

Drug Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his proposals for testing offenders and suspected offenders for drug use will include tests for (a) cannabis, (b) amphetamine, (c) ecstasy, (d) cocaine, (e) LSD and (f) heroin. [103744]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The detail of the proposal to extend drug testing across the criminal justice system is currently being formulated. One option under consideration is to concentrate testing on those who are misusing heroin and/or cocaine, at least initially, as these are the drugs which research shows are most closely linked to crime.

Prisoners (Under-18s)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women under the age of 18 years were serving a prison sentence in England and Wales on 1 November. [103728]

Mr. Boateng: The latest available provisional information is for 31 October 1999. On that date there were 1,689 sentenced males and 81 sentenced females aged 15–17 years in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales.

Information on the population of persons aged 15–17 years in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales is published in "Prison statistics England and Wales", a copy of which is in the Library.

Konrad Kalejs

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) on what occasions (a) he, (b) Ministers in his Department and (c) his officials have discussed the case of Konrad Kalejs with the United States authorities; and what was the nature of the discussions and information received; [104383]

(2) on what occasions (a) he, (b) Ministers in his Department and (c) his officials have discussed the case of Konrad Kalejs with the Canadian authorities; and what was the nature of the discussions and information received; [104385]

(3) on what occasions (a) he, (b) Ministers in his Department and (c) his officials have discussed the case of Konrad Kalejs with the Latvian authorities; and what was the nature of the discussions and information received; [104384]

(4) on what occasions (a) he, (b) Ministers in his Department and (c) his officials have discussed the case of Konrad Kalejs with the Australian authorities; and what was the nature of the discussions and information received. [104382]

Mr. Straw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office was asked by one of my officials on 30 December to inform the Australian and Latvian Governments promptly through our respective Missions of the fact that Konrad Kalejs was present here, that the Metropolitan police were making inquiries into his alleged involvement in war crimes in Latvia and that he might leave the United Kingdom at an early date. Action was taken on 4 January to update the information which had been given to the Latvian authorities.

My officials were also in direct contact with the Australian High Commission in London on several occasions in the week commencing 3 January in order to ascertain the status of inquiries by the Australian authorities about Mr. Kalejs and to alert them to his intended departure to Australia on 6 January.

An official also discussed developments with a member of staff at the Embassy of the United States on 6 January following a request for information on the case by the Embassy to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

There was no Home Office contact with the Canadian authorities.

Neither I nor any of my Ministerial colleagues have had any direct contact with the Australian, United States, Latvian or Canadian authorities about Konrad Kalejs.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the police have questioned Konrad Kalejs about alleged war crimes. [104380]

Mr. Straw: The conduct of this and any other criminal investigation lies within the operational responsibility of the relevant Chief Officer of Police, in this case the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. The Commissioner has told me that in the event it was not deemed appropriate to question Mr. Kalejs, since the view was taken that, under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, all this could not have been carried out in the circumstances of the case without arresting him.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons he is minded to deport Konrad Kalejs from the United Kingdom. [104388]

Mr. Straw: I was minded to deport Konrad Kalejs on the ground that his presence in the United Kingdom was not conducive to the public good. I reached that decision because I was satisfied that reasonable grounds existed to believe that Kalejs was complicit in war crimes committed in Latvia between 1941 and 1944. In coming to that decision I took account of all the evidence available to me, including that which had emerged from investigations carried out by the Australian, American and Canadian authorities, as well as the Metropolitan Police War Crimes Unit, in the early 1990s.

My decision that reasonable grounds existed to believe that Kalejs was complicit in war crimes was reached where necessary on the balance of probabilities. I was aware that for the police to mount a successful prosecution in the courts they would have been required to produce evidence to a different and far higher standard of proof. The Metropolitan Police have now confirmed that they have concluded that on the evidence available there were no grounds on which to charge Kalejs.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the police investigation into the allegations against Konrad Kalejs was completed. [104381]

Mr. Straw: I understand from the Metropolitan Police Commissioner that the Organised Crime Unit concluded its assessment of the information available relating to the allegations against Konrad Kalejs on 4 January. I was told on 31 December that on the available evidence, the Metropolitan Police Service believed that there were at that time no grounds for making an arrest of Mr. Kalejs, and in the light of this information Mr. Kalejs was served with a notice that I was minded to deport him. The commencement of this deportation process would not in any way have compromised any arrest or charge of Mr. Kalejs before his departure from the United Kingdom.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new (a) claims have been made and (b) evidence has come to light in the case of Konrad Kalejs since he served notice that he was minded to deport Mr. Kalejs. [104386]

Mr. Straw: I am not aware of any new claims which have been made relating to the alleged responsibility of Konrad Kalejs for war crimes since, on 2 January, I served notice that I was minded to deport him, and I am advised by the Metropolitan Police that no new evidence has been revealed to them since then.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has received about Konrad Kalejs's intended destination on leaving the United Kingdom. [104387]

Mr. Straw: Konrad Kalejs departed the United Kingdom from Heathrow Airport at 1100 hours on 6 January, on a flight bound for Melbourne via Singapore.

Asylum Seekers

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how (1) many appeals against asylum decisions were refused in (a) 1998 and (b) 1999; and what proportion this was of the total number of appeals in each year; [104042]

(2) how many asylum seekers whose appeals were refused in (a) 1998 and (b) 1999 have been deported; and what proportion of the total number of those whose appeals were refused this was in each year. [104045]

Mrs. Roche: In 1998 a total of 25,300 asylum appeals were determined by Adjudicators of the Immigration Appellate Authority. Of this total 21,100 appeals (84 per cent.) were dismissed. Information for 1999 is not yet available.

The requested information on the number of asylum seekers whose appeals were refused and deported is available only at disproportionate cost through the examination of individual case records.

Passport Agency

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the Passport Agency document,"Blueprint for the Future". [103960]

Mrs. Roche: Yes. The Passport Agency's document "Blueprint for the Future" has been produced to inform its staff of its plans for the future as set out in the Agency's Corporate and Business Plans 1999–2002, and its separate Action Plan. Copies of these Plans were placed in the Library on 6 December, and copies of the Passport Agency's "Blueprint for the Future" have now been placed there as well.

Police (Discipline Hearings)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide guidance to police forces about allowing officers facing disciplinary hearings the assistance, if requested, of a representative of the Black Police Association. [103919]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 8 December 1999, Official Report, columns 533–34W. The choice of representative at a discipline hearing is a matter for the officer concerned. It would be inappropriate for me to issue guidance suggesting who he or she should be.

Drugs (Prisons)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many occasions were recorded in each prison of the (a) illegal use and (b) supply of drugs in the past year. [R] [103913]

Mr. Boateng: The table gives provisional figures for the number of occasions in each establishment that all attempts of (a) the illegal use of and (b) the supply of drugs were recorded for the period January to November 1999.

Drug offences punished in prisons in England and Wales January-November 1999 [1,2]

Establishment	Unauthorised use of a controlled drug	Sells/delivers controlled drug
Altcourse	77	—
Askham Grange	14	—
Acklington	36	1
Albany	4	—
Aldington	44	1
Ashwell	251	—
Aylesbury	64	—
Belmarsh	222	—
Buckley Hall	214	1
Blundestone	63	—
Bedford	26	—
Brockhill	25	1
Bristol	107	1
Birmingham	479	1
Bullingdon	189	1
Brinsford	38	—
Blakenhurst	490	6
Bullwood Hall	42	—
Brixton	105	1
Chelmsford	71	1
Cardiff	169	—
Camp Hill	116	—
Cookham Wood	41	—
Coldingley	60	—
Castington	46	—
Channings Wood	79	—
Canterbury	70	—
Dartmoor	63	—
Drake Hall	42	—
Durham	38	—
Doncaster	4	1
Dorchester	36	—
Deerbolt	89	—
Dover	69	—
Downview	29	—
Erlestoke	186	—
Standford Hill	71	—
East Sutton Park	5	—
Everthorpe	280	—
Eastwood Park	39	—
Exeter	66	1
Elmley	230	2
Ford	93	—
Foston Hall	85	—
Frankland	107	—
Feltham	61	2
Full Sutton	80	—
Featherstone	245	1
Garth	118	—
Gloucester	109	—
Guys Marsh	209	—
Grendon	37	—
Glen Parva	151	—
Gartree	109	—
Hollesley Bay	89	—
Huntercombe	79	1
Hatfield	57	—
Hewell Grange	18	—
Holme House	119	1
Hindley	41	—
Hull	6	—
Highdown	266	1
Highpoint	114	7
Haverigg	158	—
Holloway	22	—
Kirkham	99	—
Kirklevington	38	—
Lancaster	109	—
Leicester	67	—
Leeds	379	3
Lancaster Farm	56	—
Lowdham Grange	169	—
Lindholme	391	5
Lincoln	153	—
Long Lartin	166	—
Latchmere House	13	—
Low Newton	39	—
Liverpool	513	1
Littlehey	140	—
Lewes	154	—
Leyhill	158	—
Moorland	109	—
Morton Hall	59	—
Manchester	341	—
Maidstone	100	—
The Mount	80	—
New Hall	48	—
Nottingham	51	—
Northallerton	32	—
North Sea Camp	64	—
Norwich	117	—
Onley	20	—
Portland	83	—
Parkhurst	99	1
Preston	199	1
Parc	297	—
Kingston (Portsmouth)	18	—
Pentonville	223	1
Rochester	21	—
Reading	14	—
Ranby	134	6
Risley	267	—
Send	24	—
Stafford	316	—
Stoke Heath	56	2
Stocken	223	2
Swaleside	105	—
Shepton Mallet	162	—
Swinfen Hall	29	—
Styal	48	1
Sudbury	112	—
Swansea	56	—
Shrewsbury	93	2
Thorn Cross	101	—
Usk	30	—
The Verne	55	—
The Weare	103	—
Wellingborough	229	1
Winchester	127	—
Wakefield	17	—
Wealstun	219	—
Woodhill	87	1
Wayland	129	2
Wymott	129	—
Werrington	5	—
The Wolds	104	—
Whitemoor	137	—
Wormwood Scrubs	73	—
Whatton	3	—
Wandsworth	134	1
Wetherby	34	—
All	14,722	62

[1] Provisional figures
[2] Includes attempts

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison staff or officials, indicating the grades, have been charged with or convicted of allowing the supply of illegal drugs in prison in the last year. [R] [103914]

Mr. Boateng: Three prison staff have been charged with or convicted of allowing the supply of illegal drugs in prison during 1999. The grades of these staff are one industrial, one instructional officer and one prison officer.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for each of the buildings under his Department's control how many rooms are set aside for (a) ethnic minority religious use, (b) pregnant and nursing mothers and (c) smokers. [102340]

Mr. Straw: Records for the Home Office estate are not held centrally. My six central London headquarters buildings have between them one room for ethnic minority religious use, two rooms for mother and baby facilities and 11 rooms for smokers. Each building also has first aid facilities. These serve a total population of about 3,900 staff, including the United Kingdom Passport Agency, Police Information Technology Organisation and Her Majesty's Prison Service.

Building	Room number	Size (m^2)
Queen Anne's Gate
Smoking rooms
1st floor	167	19.1
6th floor	665	29.2
8th floor	833	21.5
Mother and baby facilities
3rd floor	301a	7.7
Clive House
Muslim prayer room
4th floor	407	25.3
Smoking room
3rd floor	330	40
Grenadier House
Smoking room
4th floor	408	33.2
Mother and baby facilities
Ground floor	GO2	13.8
Horseferry House
Smoking rooms
1st floor	124	24.4
2nd floor	245	16.8
4th floor	410	19.9
7th floor	760	15.2
Abell House
Muslim advisers room
7th floor	706	17
Smoking room
2nd floor	225a	17
Cleland House
Smoking room
3rd floor	317	18
Works in hand to create another in Cleland House

Stalking

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what provision there is for the psychiatric assessment of persons convicted of stalking under the Protection from Harassment Act 1997; [104038]

(2) if he will issue guidance to police forces on improving communications with the victims of stalking; and if he will make a statement; [104039]

(3) if he will make a statement on the notification to (a) the police and (b) the courts of changes of name or address by persons subject to a restraining order under section 5 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997. [104041]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Anyone convicted of an offence under the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 is entitled to seek psychiatric help voluntarily, but the Act itself makes no provision for the court to compel anyone to seek such an assessment.

I have commissioned research into the effectiveness of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997, and will respond to any recommendations for changing the Act once I have seen the report. I have no plans to make a statement on this subject before that time.

Detention Centre

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the specific planned location of the new detention centre for those held under the Immigration Act 1999; and what progress has been made towards its opening. [104083]

Mrs. Roche: All immigration detainees are held under the Immigration Act 1971 as amended. If my hon. Friend is referring to the powers in the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 to make regulations enabling a person granted temporary admission to be required to reside at accommodation provided by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary there are no immediate plans to make such regulations.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letters to him dated 23 August, 7 October and 11 November from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mr. Mohammed Abdullah and Mrs. Nargis Begum. [104068]

Mrs. Roche: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary wrote to my right hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Gorton on 5 January 2000. I am sorry for the delay in replying.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letters to him dated 4 August, 16 September and 19 November from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. N. Doski. [104069]

Mrs. Roche: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary wrote to my right hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Gorton on 5 January 2000. I am sorry for the delay in replying.

Drug Treatment and Testing Orders

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answers to the hon. Member for Aylesbury of 26 November 1999, Official Report, columns 241–42W, concerning drug treatment and testing orders, when he will write to the hon. member for Aylesbury about drug treatment and testing orders. [104135]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I wrote to the hon. Member on 17 December 1999.

European Convention on Human Rights

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 13 December 1999, Official Report, column 8W, concerning training in respect of the European Convention on Human Rights, for what reason his answer did not deal with training given to the Prison Service. [104149]

Mr. Boateng: Information about training given by the Prison Service in respect of the European Convention on Human Rights was omitted from my answer of 13 December owing to an administrative error. I apologise to my hon. Friend for this oversight.

The information he required is that the Prison Service intends to provide all personnel working in prison establishments and at headquarters with information about the Human Rights Act 1998, which incorporates the Convention into United Kingdom law. Training will be provided as necessary.

Metropolitan Police Service

Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary's report on the recent inspection of the Metropolitan police service, which he directed as a result of recommendation four of the Macpherson Inquiry. [104164]

Mr. Straw: I have today published the Inspection Report and copies have been placed in the Library.

Posthumous Conception

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to amend the law relating to the registration of births of children conceived after the father's death; and if he will make a statement. [100620]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The question as to whether a man can be named on a birth certificate as the father of a child conceived after the man's death is governed by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990. Among other things the Act provides that where > "the sperm of a man, or any embryo the creation of which was brought about with his sperm, was used after his death, he is not to be treated as the father of the child".

The legal status of children conceived using posthumous insemination was one of the issues considered by Professor Sheila McLean in the course of her "Review of the Common Law Provisions Relating to the Removal of Gametes and of the Consent Provisions in the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990". Professor McLean recommended that consideration should be given to an amendment to the 1990 Act which would, in effect, permit the child to have a "legal" father where his sperm was used posthumously.

Professor McLean reported to Ministers in 1998 and we have since conducted a public consultation on the recommendations made in her report. We expect to be able to respond shortly to Professor McLean's recommendations, including our views on any possible amendments to the 1990 Act.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Table Tennis

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on potential conflicts of interest involving the Chairman of the English Table Tennis Association. [104170]

Kate Hoey: I am fully aware of the concerns which have been expressed in respect of the operation of the English Table Tennis Association (ETTA) and the role of its Chairman. These issues have been investigated by Sport England and the National Audit Office. As a result, the ETTA has taken a number of steps, including changes to its rules, committee structure and constitution, in order to prevent the risk of conflicts of interest arising and of members gaining unfair commercial advantage. In particular, it has set up a trade committee, upon which the Chairman does not sit, to deal with any business in which the chairman might have a commercial interest. The ETTA is also on the "watch list" of Sport England's Management Audit Department and is therefore subject to regular review and monitoring. This has indicated that all of the required operational procedures are being fully implemented by the ETTA. Sport England is also satisfied, having investigated a number of specific complaints, that there has been no misuse of public funds in respect of the ETTA. However, in view of the concerns which have been expressed in the past about the ETTA, the Chairman of Sport England has, at my request, agreed to carry out a further review of the progress being made towards the original recommendations made to the ETTA by the National Audit Office and Sport England. I have asked my officials to discuss the review with Sport England's Management Audit Department and report back to me as soon as it has been undertaken.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if the finding of the Press Council on the English Table Tennis Association has been brought to his attention; and if he will make a statement. [104036]

Kate Hoey: I am aware that a complaint was made to the Press Complaints Commission (PCC), the successor body to the Press Council, on behalf of Alan Ransome, Chairman of the English Table Tennis Association (ETTA) in relation to an article by John Goodbody in The Times on 14 December 1998. I have read the PCC's subsequent adjudication and they concluded that Mr. Ransome's complaints did not amount to a breach of the Code of Practice.

The Government do not generally comment on specific cases brought before the PCC. We remain of the belief that an effective voluntary Code of Practice for the print media, overseen by the PCC, is the best way of ensuring high editorial standards.

National Stadium

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will publish the contracts between Sport England and Wembley National Stadium Ltd. relating to the development of the national stadium. [102420]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 13 December 1999]: The Lottery Funding Agreement is the only contract between Sport England and Wembley National Stadium Ltd., and the Football Association is also party to that contract. Publication of the contract is primarily for the parties to the contract.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what meetings he (a) has had and (b) plans with members of the UK Athletics Technical Team who worked with Wembley National Stadium Ltd. on the design of the new National Stadium at Wembley. [103587]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 20 December 1999]: My right hon. Friend and I have met representatives of UK Athletics to discuss a wide range of issues relating to the National Stadium project. Neither of us, however, has met or plans to meet the UK Athletics Technical Team.

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was the value of the Government grant for the development of Wembley Stadium. [103754]

Kate Hoey: No direct Government funding has been provided for the development of Wembley Stadium. Sport England has made available a Lottery award of up to £120 million for the national stadium project.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much his Department paid DLA Ellerbe Beckett for producing their report on the new Wembley Stadium. [103588]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 20 December 1999]: The report was commissioned by UK Sport from DLA Ellerbe Beckett at our request at a cost of £35,000.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will publish the correspondence between his Department and Sport England in relation to the redevelopment of Wembley Stadium. [102419]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 13 December 1999]: No. Much of the material contained in the correspondence was given on the understanding that it represented confidential communications between the Department and Sport England.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the revised timetable for a decision on the rebuilding of Wembley Stadium. [102144]

Kate Hoey: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced his decision on the rebuilding of Wembley Stadium on 22 December. A copy of that announcement has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which of his Department's Ministers and officials attended the meeting of the National Stadium Monitoring Committee on 20 May. [103591]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 20 December 1999]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the then Minister for Sport, and three officials from my Department attended the National Stadium Monitoring Committee meeting on 20 May 1999.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the dates and locations of the meetings of the National Stadium Monitoring Committee at which Ministers or officials of his Department were present. [103590]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 20 December 1999]: There have been three meetings of the National Stadium monitoring committee: on 17 February 1999 and 15 July 1999 at the DCMS offices; and on 20 May 1999 at the House of Commons.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many days interested parties were given to study the DLA Ellerbe Beckett report on the future of Wembley Stadium before he made his statement to the House of 1 December. [103592]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 20 December 1999]: We received the DLA: Ellerbe Beckett report on Monday 29 November and following consideration of its contents made it available on 1 December to interested parties shortly before the statement made in the House by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Departmental Productivity

Mr. Cr[illegible]: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action he is taking to increase the productivity and reduce the running costs of his Department. [103845]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Comprehensive Spending Review last year resulted in a number of structural changes within the public bodies sponsored by DCMS, which will result in increased efficiency. At the same time, the Department took on a new, strategic role in its sectors, and a much higher profile in the regions, with dedicated staff in all Government regional offices. This was against the background of a running cost allocation which was flat over the three years of the financial settlement. Among specific initiatives designed to increase efficiency and effectiveness, we are rationalising our estate so that a greater proportion of staff are in one building; co-locating divisions to increase the capacity for sharing support services; and undertaking a number of reviews of our services as part of the Modernising Government agenda. We have established the Quality, Efficiency and Standards Team (Quest) in order to identify and spread good practice in administration across the Department's NDPBs.

Resorts Task Force

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is the remit of the Resorts Task Force; who will serve on it; and how they will be appointed. [104277]

Janet Anderson: The English Tourism Council (ETC) is establishing a Resorts Task Force to tackle the problems facing resorts. It will include people with experience in tourism and, in particular, resorts, local government, planning, investment, design and economic development. Peter Moore, ETC board member and Managing Director of Center Parcs is chairing the Task Force and is currently assembling the team.

Civil Servants (Subsequent Employment)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he has made a ruling on whether an official whose name has been given to him has contravened the Civil Service rules relating to subsequent employment. [104037]

Mr. Chris Smith: No; my Department is in correspondence with the former official concerned.

Departmental Employees (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of the total workforce in his Department is of ethnic minority origin; and what steps he is taking to encourage the employment of people from the ethnic minorities in his Department. [102738]

Mr. Chris Smith: My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office set out in her reply of 16 December, Official Report, column 264W, the corporate action that the Civil Service is taking to encourage the employment of people from ethnic minorities. My Department currently does only a limited amount of direct recruitment, but makes use of welcoming statements to encourage applications from under-represented groups. As part of the Department's commitment to provide a workplace free from discrimination, all staff receive equal opportunities awareness training and are encouraged to treat others with courtesy and respect. On 1 April 1999, 8 per cent. of the department's workforce declared themselves as being from an ethnic minority background. We will now be working closely with the Cabinet Office to widen the pool of potential recruits and increase interchange opportunities in order to increase the representation of ethnic minorities in DCMS.

International Sporting Events (Select Committee Report)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what further response he plans to make to the report of the Culture, Media and Sport Committee, "Staging Professional Sporting Events", HC (1998–99) 124; [103589]

(2) what action he has taken to implement the recommendations of the report from the Culture, Media and Sport Committee, "Staging International Sporting Events", HC (1998–99) 124. [103593]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 20 December 1999]: The Government welcomed the extensive report of the Culture, Media and Sport Select Committee into Staging International Sporting Events, and our response of 8 September stressed our full commitment to bringing major international sporting events to this country and to ensuring they are staged successfully. A key response to the recommendations directed at the Government was the appointment of the Minister of State, Cabinet Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Makerfield (Mr. McCartney), to a coordinating role across different Departments for the Government's interests in the successful delivery of the 2002 Commonwealth Games and associated activities. Also in hand are assessments of the impact of major events on participation in sport; assessment of the economic impact of major events; and improving the quality and contribution of British postholders in international governing bodies. Through UK Sport's major events strategy, we are continuing to work with all stakeholders to make Government support for events more effective.

SCOTLAND

Sexual Offences

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he took before July in response to the report of the Scottish Office Central Research Unit in 1992 on sexual history and sexual character evidence in Scottish sexual offence trials. [103740]

Dr. Reid: The crimes of clandestine injury to women and incest were added in section 28 of the Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act 1995 to the categories of sexual offences in respect of which evidence of sexual character or sexual history would be inadmissible without the consent of the court. These were two crimes which the research report suggested should be within the scope of the legislation.

European Convention on Human Rights

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the First Minister about additional training for (a) the police and (b) the Prison Service in Scotland since the incorporation of the European Convention on Human Rights into United Kingdom domestic legislation. [103611]

Dr. Reid: Training of the police and Prison Service in Scotland is devolved and I have not discussed this issue with the First Minister.

Hughes Report (Dunblane)

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the availability of Inspector Hughes's report to the Cullen Inquiry into the Dunblane tragedy. [104011]

Dr. Reid: Sergeant Hughes's report was made available to the Cullen Inquiry as a production. The report contains sensitive information about children (not the children of Dunblane) who attended a summer camp run by Thomas Hamilton in 1991 and alleged offences against them. For these reasons it was considered appropriate that the production should remain closed for 100 years with the Crown Office dealing with any requests for special access meantime.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reason the application from Axgro Foods of West Butterwick, near Gainsborough for regional selective assistance which was referred to him by the DTI, reference RSA/99/0116, for relocating their factory to Misterton Bassetlaw was rejected; for what reason the firm was informed at 4 p.m. on 20 December that they had to submit evidence by 22 December; and if he will make a statement. [104175]

Mr. Caborn: Axgro Foods Limited applied for a Regional Selective Assistance (RSA) grant on 25 November 1999. All RSA applications are considered against published criteria, which include conditions that grant can be made available only to projects that contribute positive benefits to both the regional and national economy. The European Community restricts assistance to some industries in which there is over-capacity. These restrictions apply to some fishery and agricultural products.

On 20 December the Government Office for the East Midlands, responsible for the appraisal of this case, contacted the company to advise that the application may be subject to EC restrictions. It asked the company to provide additional supporting information, which was received on 22 December.

An indicative offer of RSA was made to Axgro Foods Limited on 23 December, which is subject to a full appraisal and clarification on the issue of possible EC restrictions.

Assisted Areas (Food Production)

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assistance his Department provides for firms involved in food production who wish to relocate to constituencies which have assisted area status. [104174]

Mr. Caborn: Regional Selective Assistance is my Department's main instrument for offering direct financial assistance to companies investing in the Assisted Areas. It covers most manufacturing and some service industries, but some sectors including agricultural food production are subject to EU restrictions.

Copyright

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's role in negotiations on the Internet caching aspects of the draft EU Directive on Copyright in the Information Society. [104081]

Dr. Howells: My Department's role is to consider the views of all interested parties on the mandatory exception to reproduction rights proposed in the draft Directive which is relevant to some kinds of caching, and to seek solutions in the negotiations on the Directive which are as fair as possible to all concerned. We wish to ensure both that the activities of service providers such as caching are not impeded, and also that owners of copyright and related rights are properly protected in the on-line environment.

Export Licences

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will provide details of licences granted to Sidem Ltd. for the export of small arms to Turkey since 2 May 1997. [104157]

Dr. Howells: The export of small arms is controlled under entries ML1 and PL5018 in the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, as amended, commonly known as the Military List. The entry in the legislation under which the export of goods is controlled is known as their rating. The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated, and no standard or open individual licences covering goods with the relevant ratings are recorded as having been issued to this company between 2 May 1997 and 3 January 2000 for the export to consignees or end-users in Turkey.

This information should be considered in light of the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Kingswood (Mr. Berry) on 27 July 1999, Official Report, columns 307–08W.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department is required to grant permission before a foreign company can export weapons manufactured under a licensed production agreement with a British company; and if he will list the actions taken (a) by his Department and (b) in conjunction with British Aerospace, to ensure that foreign companies manufacturing Heckler and Koch weapons using British Aerospace technology under licensed production agreements adhere to export control requirements within their licence agreements. [104295]

Dr. Howells: As I stated in answer to my hon. Friend on 22 March 1999, Official Report, column 117W, companies wishing to license overseas production of their products do not require DTI approval, nor are they required to notify DTI of arrangements entered into. The control of exports from another country of goods manufactured in that country under such an arrangement is a matter for the competent authorities of the Government concerned.

Furthermore, as stated previously, the issue of controls on licensed production overseas was raised in a number of the responses to the White Paper on Strategic Export Controls, and is therefore being considered in the review of the White Paper proposals in light of the results of the consultation.

Cash Machines (Charges)

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the banking industry on advertising charges for the use of cash machines. [104285]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has corresponded with the British Bankers Association about charges for cash machines. My officials have also met representatives of Barclays Bank, the Nationwide Building Society and the British Bankers Association to discuss this issue.

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to ensure clearing bank cash machines pre-notify customers of charges. [104284]

Dr. Howells: My Department is currently discussing the issue of charges for bank cash machines with the banking industry, HM Treasury and Don Cruickshank's team.

Our approach to this issue was set out by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 13 December 1999, Official Report, column 16W.

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many clearing banks pre-notify charges for cash machine withdrawals. [104286]

Dr. Howells: I understand that banks generally inform their customers about such charges by letter or when cash cards are issued.

While some banks' cash machines give a general on-screen warning to the effect that a particular card issuer may levy a charge, I am not aware of any bank which indicates on-screen how much any charge will be.

World Trade Organisation

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry who represented Her Majesty's Government at the meeting of the General Council of the WTO held in Geneva on Friday 17 December. [104105]

Mr. Caborn: The Deputy Permanent Representative of the United Kingdom Mission in Geneva attended the meeting of the WTO General Council. However, it is the European Commission that represents and speaks on behalf of the European Union and its member states at meetings of the WTO General Council.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the minutes of the meeting of the General Council of the WTO held in Geneva on Friday 17 December will be published. [104106]

Mr. Caborn: The minutes will be circulated to WTO members in January. They will be made available to the public by the WTO secretariat eight months after circulation in accordance with a WTO General Council decision dated 26 July 1996. We are pressing in the WTO, through the European Union, for an elimination of the delay between initial circulation and derestriction as part of our broader WTO transparency aims.

Objective 1 Funding

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what level of match public funds from (a) his Department and (b) the Department for Education and Employment are available to EU Objective 1 regions for each of the next seven calendar years. [104306]

Mr. Caborn: It is not possible to identify match funding from DTI sources for the next seven calendar years since the Department's current expenditure plan runs until the end of the financial year 2000–01. Spending for following years will be determined as part of the next spending review. The DTI has many programmes which may provide match funding in Objective 1 regions, eg Business Links, Foresight, Smart, LINK. Regional Government Offices can advise potential applicants for European structural funding on all of these.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the requirements for match public funds from his Department for the EU Objective 1 regions of (a) Cornwall and Scilly, (b) Merseyside and (c) South Yorkshire for each of the seven years of the programme. [104351]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to answer given on 10 November 1999, Official Report, column 637W.

Responsibility for identifying match funding is a matter for the partnerships in the regions concerned.

The Government decided two years ago on the levels of public spending for all departments for a three-year period. We shall review spending plans and bids in the next spending review for the period 2001–04.

The Regional Government Offices are best placed to advise the partnerships on the sources of departmental funding which can be used to match Structural Funds. The Government is updating and improving guidance on match funding. Given that UK annual public expenditure on industry, agriculture and employment alone is around ten times as much as annual commitments from the structural funds, there should be no difficulty for projects in finding match funding.

Post Office

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if Parcelforce will continue to have preferential customs clearance facilities following the implementation of the Post Office White Paper proposals. [104250]

Mr. Alan Johnson: There are no plans to make changes to Post Office customs procedures in the forthcoming Post Office Bill. Customs are in discussion with Parcelforce concerning international clearance facilities at their new Coventry depot.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if Parcelforce's compulsory purchase powers will be retained following the implementation of the Post Office White Paper. [104249]

Mr. Alan Johnson: It is intended that these powers will be retained by the Post Office but extended to other licensed Universal Service Providers.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what progress the Post Office has made in implementing the cost-based accounting system proposed in the Post Office White Paper; [104179]

(2) what assessment he has made of progress made by the Post Office towards meeting the February 2000 deadline for the implementation of transparent accounting. [104178]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Post Office is making good progress in implementing the necessary cost-based accounting systems and it is expected that the EC Directive 97/67 deadline requirements for transparent accounting will be met.

Stamps

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) first class stamps and (b) second class stamps were sold in (i) 1995, (ii) 1996, (iii) 1997 and (iv) 1998. [104251]

Mr. Alan Johnson: I understand from the Post Office that it is not possible to record the numbers of first and second class stamps sold because stamps are sold through independent retailers as well as through the Post Office network. The Post Office have supplied the following figures for the numbers of first and second class stamps produced:

Billion

Year	First class	Second class
1995–96	2.4	1.9
1996–97	2.7	2.1
1997–98	2.5	2.1
1998–99	2.2	2.2

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account he took of EU proposals for a reduction in the postal monopoly when approving the increase in price of the first class stamp. [104182]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Post Office have referred their proposals for letter tariff increases to the Post Office Users' National Council for consultation as statutorily required. My right hon. Friend will consider in due course any views and comments received from the Council.

Postal Services Commission

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria will be used to appoint members of the Postal Services Commission. [104180]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The criteria for members of the Postal Services Commission are set out in the advertisements for those posts and the information for candidates sent to those expressing an interest. Copies of these are being placed in the Library of the House.

Ilisu Dam

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations Her Majesty's Government have received in relation to the proposed Ilisu Dam from (a) Syria, (b) Iraq and (c) other Middle Eastern countries. [104071]

Mr. Caborn: Syria raised the issue with our Embassy in Damascus in March 1999. They have also raised it on one occasion with British Trade International and most recently (on 23 December) when the Syrian Ambassador called on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

There have been no representations from Iraq.

The League of Arab States has also informally raised the issue by telephone with the Export Credits Guarantee Department.

Oil and Gas Production

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's policy towards oil and gas companies which hold fallow fields in the United Kingdom Continental Shelf. [103112]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 20 December 1999]: The Department's Oil and Gas policy is to encourage exploration and development on the UKCS whilst allowing licence groups the option of which discoveries are brought to development. They are encouraged to relinquish any acreage considered unprospective or non-commercial. A review of fallow blocks and discoveries is currently under way.

The Oil and Gas Industry Task Force has established LIFT (Licence Information for Trading), an on-line information service which allows licensees to advertise licences and assets for sale, trade or form-in. LIFT will encourage more asset trading, by enabling companies to realise their value in a cost-effective way.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Research Contracts

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many research contracts have been let by his Department since May 1997; what is the value of each contract; and in each case whether the contract included (a) a departmental veto over publication of the research results, (b) departmental control over the date of publication of the research results and (c) a requirement that the final research results incorporate departmental amendments. [100155]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 6 December 1999]: The information for the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments is contained in a table, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. This covers the period up to the date of devolution.

Robert Hamill

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at what time on 27 April 1997 the location of the fatal attack on Robert Hamill in Portadown was cordoned off by Royal Ulster Constabulary officers. [101856]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 December 1999]: The RUC have advised that the scene was cordoned off at 07.27 hours on 27 April 1997.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at what times on 27 April 1997 the Royal Ulster Constabulary officers who were present at the scene of the fatal attack on Robert Hamill in Portadown signed written statements regarding the incident. [101857]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 December 1999]: The RUC have advised that the actual times at which police officers signed written statements regarding the fatal attack on Robert Hamill are not recorded. However, they have confirmed that all statements were made during the morning of 27 April.

Seamus Ludlow

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make available to the Irish judicial investigation into the 1976 murder of Seamus Ludlow (a) the interview notes made by the RUC relating to men arrested but not charged in 1999 and (b) case papers prepared for the DPP. [101872]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 December 1999]: To date there has been no request for such information. Should one be received it will be considered in accordance with procedures, regulations and legal constraints.

Security Patrols

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patrols were carried out in the last month for which figures are available, broken down by (a) police division and (b) corresponding district council constituency areas, indicating which of those patrols were accompanied by a military presence. [101878]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 December 1999]: The following table shows the number of RUC patrols accompanied by the armed forces during the month of November 1999. It is not possible to provide the total number of RUC patrols or to relate these to district council areas.

RUC accompanied by military patrols—November 1999

Division	Number of accompanied patrols
A	0
B	0
D	0
E	0
G	20
H	402
J	102
K	157
L	383
N	6
O	5
P	22

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures he can require from local authorities about the composition of their work forces in terms of (a) standard age groups, (b) ethnic origins and (c) gender. [104012]

Mr. Mandelson: Responsibility for this subject has been devolved to the Northern Ireland Assembly and is therefore no longer a matter for the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Patten Commission

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Patten Commission's report on policing in Northern Ireland. [103958]

Mr. Ingram: On 9 September 1999 the Patten Commission issued their report and the Secretary of State announced that the Government accepted their findings in principle. A copy of this statement has been placed in the Library of the House. As required by the Belfast Agreement, the Government consulted with various parties. Although the formal period of consultation ended on 30 November 1999, decisions have not yet been made on the proposals. It is the Secretary of State's intention that an announcement on Government decisions taken in light of the consultation process, and the next steps, will be made in due course.

Royal Ulster Constabulary (Kosovo)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the role played by the Royal Ulster Constabulary in Kosovo and Bosnia. [103725]

Mr. Ingram: In accordance with the provisions of Section 8 of the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998, the Royal Ulster Constabulary have seven officers serving with the United Nations International Police Task Force in Bosnia where they are monitoring the performance of the Bosnian police service. Sixty RUC officers are also with the United Nations Mission in Kosovo where they are undertaking an executive policing role pending a new Kosovan police service being trained and ready to take over law enforcement there.

Departmental Productivity

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he is taking to increase the productivity and reduce the running costs of his Department. [103853]

Mr. Mandelson: My Department is fully committed to seeking efficiency savings and living within agreed budgets. It is determined to achieve efficiencies in all areas of activity and reductions in support services where possible. A comprehensive review of running costs was completed during 1999 and its recommendations for savings, mainly in support services, are being assessed and implemented. More generally, efficiency plans are an integral plan of annual plans for all parts of the Department.

The Northern Ireland Office will play a full part in taking forward the Government's plans for modernising the delivery of services and reforming the Civil Service. In line with these initiatives it is preparing a programme for Better Quality Services Review over the next five years, to include quinquennial reviews of its agencies and non-departmental public bodies, which will seek to identify the most effective and economical ways to deliver its services. It has already begun action to improve procurement arrangements, to reduce sickness absences, to guard against fraud and to increase the use of electronic business with the Department.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Asylum Appeals

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the average waiting time in (a) 1998 and (b) 1999 for (i) a hearing and (ii) a decision in respect of appeals against asylum decisions. [104043]

Jane Kennedy: The Immigration Appellate Authority has been unable to monitor the average waiting time for a decision in respect of appeals against asylum decisions. The following table details the average waiting times for a hearing.

Category of hearing	1998	1999
Certified	11	5
Substantive	26	6
Detained	4	4

Note:
Average waiting time shown in weeks

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many asylum seekers are currently awaiting the (a) hearing and (b) outcome of a hearing of an appeal against an initial refusal of their claim for asylum. [104046]

Jane Kennedy: The Immigration Appellate Authority does not hold separate statistics for these two categories. There were a total of 4,327 asylum appeals outstanding before adjudicators as at 31 December 1999.

There are in addition, 2,245 asylum appeals outstanding before the Tribunal as at 31 December.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many appeals against initial asylum decisions were heard in (a) 1998 and (b) 1999. [104044]

Jane Kennedy: The number of asylum appeals determined by adjudicators in (a) 1998 was 25,322 and in (b) 1999 was 19,461.

Either-way Cases

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what has been the average time taken from first hearing to verdict in contested cases triable either way which were tried in the magistrates' court, for each of the last five years where data is available. [R] [104233]

Jane Kennedy: Information on the time taken in magistrates courts proceedings is collected by the Lord Chancellor's Department's Time Intervals Survey. The survey collects data on indictable (including triable either way) cases completed in a sample week of each February, June and October. During 2000 the frequency of the survey will increase to four times a year. The survey records the date of the first listing but does not record the date of the first hearing.

The average time taken from first listing to verdict for defendants in contested triable either way cases which were tried in magistrates courts was 113 days in February 1999 and 104 days in June 1999.

These figures use information collected for the first time in 1999 following an enhancement to the survey. Equivalent figures for previous years are not available.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what has been the average time taken from first hearing to transfer in contested cases triable either way, except those prosecuted by the Serious Fraud Office, which were transferred to the Crown court in each of the last five years where data are available; [R] [104234]

(2) what has been the average time taken from first hearing to verdict in contested cases triable either way, except those prosecuted by the Serious Fraud Office, which were transferred to the Crown court, in each of the last five years where data are available. [R] [104235]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not available. Cases involving notices of transfer to the Crown court under section 53 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 cannot be separately identified in the data collected on time taken in court proceedings.

European Convention on Human Rights

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what additional training the judiciary in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) Scotland have been given since the incorporation of the European Convention on Human Rights into United Kingdom domestic legislation. [103610]

Mr. Lock: (a) The Judicial Studies Board for Northern Ireland has held five lectures on several European Convention on Human Rights topics since February 1998. In mid-January 2000 there will be a further Human Rights Act lecture, followed in late January, February and March by three case study events covering civil law, family law and criminal law respectively. In addition, the Board is presently considering possible topics for inclusion in a series of Human Rights Act lectures and has secured the agreement of Judge Nicolas Bratza, the British judge at the European Court of Human Rights, to deliver the Board's 2000 Annual Address.

(b) This is a matter for the Scottish Executive.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Internet

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list those primary and secondary schools and further education colleges in (a) Shrewsbury and Atcham and (b) Shropshire which have given students access to the Internet since 1 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [102460]

Mr. Wills: There are no centrally held statistics of school connection to the Internet by MP's constituency area. Figures are available for schools in England and are shown in the following table:

Percentage of schools connected to the Internet

Year	Primary	Secondary
1997	5	47
1998	17	83
1999	62	93

All colleges of further education have internet connections.

Information provided by Shropshire Local Education Authority indicates that all secondary schools currently have access to the Internet and that the 100 primary schools remaining are due to be connected to the Internet by the end of March 2000.

Sure Start

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the (a) mean and (b) median time taken for the approval of those Sure Start applications that have been approved. [103026]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 16 December 1999]: Of the 15 local Sure Start programmes approved to date, the mean time taken to approve them from receipt of final delivery plans was eight weeks. The median time was also eight weeks. This included time spent consulting relevant departments centrally and regionally and seeking further information from some local programmes.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the start point data on (a) low birth weight and (b) hospital admissions as a result of serious injury, for each approved Sure Start application. [103006]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 16 December 1999]: The following table shows the start point data for (a) low birth weight babies and (b) hospital admissions as a result of serious injury, gastro-enteritis or a respiratory infection, for the 15 Sure Start programmes approved to date.

16 Sure Start programmes announced at 15 December 1999	Start-point data on low birth weight babies less than 2,500g (unless stated)	Admissions to hospital as an emergency during their first year of life with gastro-enteritis, a respiratory infection or a severe injury
Birmingham	11%	[1]—
Blackpool	8 babies	[1]—
Bristol	7.28%	[1]—
Copeland	6.5%	[1]—
Derby	62 babies	Gastro-enteritis 7, Respiratory infection 19, Severe injury 8 (including one death)
Hastings	6%	Aged 0–4 years: Gastro-enteritis 23, Respiratory infection 40, Injury (including poisoning) 20
Leicester	2.6% (less than 1,500 g)	[1]—
Manchester	9%	[1]—
Mansfield	12 babies	[1]—
North Tyneside	17.8%	131 admissions to hospital (excluding asthma), 84 for accidental injury and a further 72 seen at A&E for minor ailments
Oldham	8.2%	[1]—
Oxford	10 babies	[1]—
Sheffield	[1]—	[1]—
Sunderland	4.48%	Respiratory infection 36, (diagnosis codes J00-J99), Gastro-enteritis 3 (diagnosis codes A084 & A09), Severe injury 0 (diagnosis codes S00-T98 plus a stay of 2 plus days)
Thurrock	[1]—	[1]—

[1] Will be collected by April 2000

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the 60 Sure Start areas correspond to (a) electoral wards and (b) local authority areas. [103005]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 16 December 1999]: Sure Start areas are very much smaller than local authority areas. The majority of Sure Start areas do not correspond to electoral wards, though some do, with others covering a number of wards. We are in the process of mapping the Sure Start areas in a Geographical Information System which will permit a precise answer to this question.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how each of the 14 indices is weighted when calculating the index of deprivation used in assessing need for Sure Start areas. [103002]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 16 December 1999]: The Index of Local Deprivation contains 12 indicators, to which two further indicators, low birth weight babies and births to teenage mothers, were added specifically for the purpose of identifying Sure Start districts. All 14 indicators are afforded equal weight in calculating the overall index.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of the population of England is covered by the 60 Sure Start areas announced to date. [102199]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 December 1999]: It is estimated that 1.8 per cent. of the population of England is covered by the 60 Sure Start areas announced to date.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of the population of England will be covered by Sure Start areas by March 2002. [102198]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 December 1999]: There will be 250 local Sure Start programmes in place by March 2002. Assuming these are of similar size to the 60 trailblazers, it is estimated that 7.5 per cent. of the population of England will be covered by Sure Start areas by March 2002.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the size of each grant awarded to each Sure Start area. [102200]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 December 1999]: The total amount of grant currently allocated for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 is £66,205,685. I have placed a breakdown by programme in the Library.

Departmental Research Contracts

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many research contracts have been let by his Department since May 1997; what is the value of each contract; and in each case whether the contract included (a) a departmental veto over publication of the research results, (b) departmental control over the date of publication of the research results and (c) a requirement that the final research results incorporate departmental amendments. [100145]

Mr. Wills [holding answer 6 December 1999]: Full details of the Department's research contracts and their value are presented in the Department's Annual Report on Research. The 1997 and 1998 Annual Reports are lodged with the House of Commons' Library. The 1999 report will be published shortly. In the absence of this, a list of research contracted since May 1997 is attached.

The results of research are routinely published in line with the requirements of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. The Department aims to publish or release for publication at least 80 per cent. of research reports within 16 weeks of receiving a final draft from its contractors.

There is no veto over publication of the findings and Ministers are informed of intentions to publish. Contractors are not required to incorporate Departmental amendments. The wording of DfEE research contracts was revised in October 1998 to make this point clearer to contractors.

Quigley Report

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the Quigley report on student finance will be published. [104151]

Mr. Wicks: The Teaching and Higher Education Act 1998 requires that report to be laid before each House of Parliament not later than 1 April 2000.

Voluntary Aided Schools (Hendon)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which voluntary aided schools in Hendon have received additional capital allocations; for what purpose; and how much, in each case, since 1 May 1997. [103030]

Jacqui Smith: On 1 May 1997, there were 12 Voluntary Aided (VA) schools in the constituency of Hendon and the following table lists the schools that have received approval for new capital work since that date.

£

School name	Project description	Date approved	Total[1]
The Annunciation RC Infant	New windows	July 1997	11,999
	New entrance	July 1997	12,997
	Window and door replacement	May 1998	13,141
	Work to entrance	May 1998	13,159
The Blessed Dominic RC Primary	Library accommodation	October 1999	21,963
	Work to covered link	May 1997	1,703
Hasmonean Primary	Replace dilapidated buildings	January 1999	480,000
Independent Jewish Day	Classroom extension	June 1999	162,282
	Replacement fire escape	March 1998	2,761
	Work to covered link	July 1998	12,923
St. John's CE Infant	External work	June 1999	12,220
St. Joseph's RC Infant	New windows	May 1999	17,068
St. Joseph's RC Junior	Toilets (NDS)	October 1997	16,441
	New windows	May 1999	73,379
	Office improvements	November 1997	4,879
St. Mary's CE Junior	Roof renewal	April 1999	121,645
	Work to cavity trays	August 1997	2,181

£

School name	Project description	Date approved	Total [1]
St. Paul's CE Primary	External handrail	July 1998	8,272
	Infants WC and cloakroom	April 1998	13,269
	Security fencing	August 1997	13,511
	New windows	June 1997	8,258
St. Vincent's RC Primary	Infants toilets	August 1998	13,000
	Single site consolidation	January 1999	1,819,035

[1] Figures represent 100 per cent. of governor's costs. Actual grant paid will be at 85 per cent. of the sums shown

Formula capital grant for all schools will be introduced on 1 April 2000. VA schools in Hendon, including the five former GM schools which joined the VA sector on 1 September 1999, will receive formula capital allocations totalling £134,839 for 2000–01.

Personal and Social Education

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his policy on the teaching of (a) six to 11-year-olds and (b) 11 to 16-year-olds about homosexuality as part of personal and social education. [103338]

Jacqui Smith: The Government have now published a new framework for PSHE designed to help pupils develop into confident, healthy and responsible individuals and help them to deal with difficult moral and social questions that arise in their lives and in society, including addressing issues such as homophobic bullying. The Government support teaching through this framework.

Gamma Hydroxy Butyrate

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he has taken to raise awareness of the dangers of gamma hydroxy butyrate in schools. [103378]

Jacqui Smith: Drug education is a statutory requirement at all key stages of National Curriculum science. The detailed content and organisation of drug education programmes is a matter for individual schools, geared to the specific local needs and circumstances of their pupils, and should include all drugs and substances open to misuse, including gamma hydroxy butyrate (GHB).

To support the Anti-Drugs Strategy, our national framework for PSHE will set drug education within a broader context of personal and social development, which will help to equip young people with the knowledge, skills and confidence to resist pressure to misuse drugs.

Age Diversity

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to publish the initial survey of employers and older people carried out prior to the publication of the Code of Practice on Age Diversity in Employment. [103905]

Ms Hodge: The initial survey was carried out to provide a baseline against which findings from the subsequent surveys could be measured. We intend, therefore, to publish the baseline information in the Spring alongside the findings from the second wave survey.

Disability Discrimination Act

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement concerning the operation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 in relation to the responsibilities of financial institutions when providing services. [102939]

Ms Hodge: The Disability Discrimination Act makes it unlawful to discriminate against disabled people by treating them less favourably than people who are not disabled, or by failing to make reasonable adjustments when services are impossible or unreasonably difficult to use. Financial institutions have the same responsibilities under the Act as other providers of services to the public. The Code of Practice which we published on 29 June 1999 explains these duties and gives practical guidance on how to prevent discrimination against disabled people. The British Bankers' Association (BBA) has also published its own guidance—"implementing Part III of the Disability Discrimination Act: BBA guidance on banks' responsibilities to their customers from October 1999"—with examples specific to the banking sector. It has also published a leaflet for customers entitled "The New Disability Legislation: What You Can Expect from Your Bank".

Child Care

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many net child care places have been created in the first two quarters of the financial year 1999–2000 by the early years development and childcare partnerships in (i) the parliamentary constituency of Birkenhead, (ii) the four parliamentary constituencies of the Wirral, (iii) the parliamentary constituencies of the City of Liverpool and (iv) the parliamentary constituencies of Merseyside. [104227]

Ms Hodge: The number of net child care places created are as follows:

Constituencies	Number of net places
Birkenhead	[1]19
Wirral	349
City of Liverpool	278
Merseyside	855

[1] The figure for Birkenhead does not include childminder places as these are not broken down to constituency level, but a proportion of the 138 childminder places created in the Wirral area will be in the constituency of Birkenhead.

School Building

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many school building projects in England are currently being funded through public private sector partnerships; and what is his forecast for the number of new projects to be started in 2000–01. [104172]

Jacqui Smith: Contracts have been awarded on eight schools' projects in England under the Private Finance Initiative, six of which are for building projects covering new or replacement single schools and two of which are Local Education Authority (LEA) wide service contracts. A further 34 projects, covering both single schools and groups of schools, have been approved by the Treasury's Project Review Group (PRG), 13 of which will receive support in 2000–01. In addition, 15 LEAs have been invited to submit business cases for projects, covering both single schools and groups of schools, to be considered for support at future PRG meetings.

A total of £1.3 billion of PFI Credits has been provided for schools' projects in England up to 31 March 2002, including the £100 million announced in the pre-Budget statement.

A further 16 Public Private Partnerships (PPP) are currently being supported by £10 million of New Deal for Schools (NDS) grant. PPPs to be supported through NDS grant in 2000–01 and 2001–02 will be announced in the Spring.

In total, over 700 schools will have benefited from different forms of PPPs by 31 March 2002.

National Curriculum (Disapplied Pupils)

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to exclude disapplied pupils from the total number when calculating the percentage of pupils achieving specific levels on the National Curriculum assessments. [104262]

Jacqui Smith: We have no such plans. The National Targets enshrine our determination to improve educational standards among all children. Published figures on the performance of our schools and of the country as a whole reflect that by showing the progress of all pupils through the National Curriculum attainment levels.

The National Curriculum tests are designed to be accessible to the vast majority of children. With the range of special arrangements for assessment available to schools only a very small number of children are unable to participate in the tests. There is also a real danger that excluding disapplied pupils from the calculations could by itself lead to an undesirable increase in the number of children excluded from the National Curriculum and its assessment. Our policy is supported by the National Advisory Group on Special Educational Needs.

Access-to-work Scheme

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is the total budget allocated for informing disabled people and employers about the access-to-work scheme; and what the breakdown of that expenditure is; [103356]

(2) if his Department has produced a marketing strategy for the access-to-work scheme; [103357]

(3) what is the total budget allocated for advertising the access to work scheme; and what is the level of expenditure allocated to advertising on (a) radio, (b) television, (c) newspapers and (d) journals and trade magazines. [103358]

Ms Jowell: Responsibility for the subject of these questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. Leigh Lewis to Mr. Roger Berry, dated 10 January 2000:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply direct to your questions about the Access to Work programme. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

For the current financial year, we have allocated £450,000 to marketing and promoting the full range of our services for disabled people and their employers. This includes Access to Work, although we do not reserve a specific amount within that total for Access to Work. We carefully consider advertising options but do not allocate specific amounts to advertising on radio, television, newspapers or journals and trade magazines. We are spending £350,000 of the budget on national promotions and the rest is being spent to promote disability programmes and services at regional and local level.

Our publicity strategy is to raise awareness of the whole range of support available to disabled people and their employers from our disability services. Thus we generally market these services collectively to give a coherent picture of the support available. We produce, for example, leaflets, audio tapes, videos, posters, advertisements and articles for publication in a range of general and specific disability journals. All such generic advertising includes information on the Access to Work programme. For example, in March 1999, we worked closely with the British Deaf Association to produce a British Sign Language video—Make it Work—about our programmes and services. We used three case studies in the video, two of which specifically promoted Access to Work. We have distributed the video to every Jobcentre and to 1,000 external organisations including clubs, organisations and collages for deaf and hearing impaired people.

The leaflets we produce are freely available from Jobcentres, Disability Service Teams and at marketing events, and we produce them in alternative formats. There are specific leaflets for disabled people and employers promoting Access to Work. Disability Employment Advisers use these leaflets on visits to employers to ensure they are aware of Access to Work.

We also promote our services, including Access to Work, at many national, regional and local marketing events. For example, we have recently held promotions at the Institute of Personnel and Development Conference and Exhibition, the Confederation of British Industry Conference, and the Access Ability, National Information Day. Access to Work was the central theme of the two employment workshops at the Access Ability event.

In addition to our own promotions, the Government's current "See the Person" campaign is designed to raise awareness of the positive contribution disabled people are able to make. The campaign refers directly to the support Access to Work can provide to those in work.

I hope this is helpful.

University Fees

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make it his policy to charge university students in the nations of the United Kingdom by different means dependent on (a) their university location, (b) the place they have (i) lived in and (ii) studied at and (c) the place of their birth. [104309]

Mr. Wicks: The Secretary of State is responsible for the funding of Higher Education in England and Wales. Students currently pay fees of up to £1,025 depending on an assessment of their financial circumstances. These arrangements are fair, just and equitable.

Pre-school Education

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will add Northumberland to the list of authorities with high social need to which funding is provided for new pre-school education places for three-year-olds. [103476]

Ms Hodge: We are making available £390 million over three years to double the number of three-year-olds able to access a free early education place to 66 per cent. This year we are making available £40 million to create around 48,000 new free places. This has been allocated to 57 local education authorities with the greatest social need. From April 2000, we will be providing a further £100 million to increase the number of new places to 83,000. These funds will be distributed across all local education authorities, including Northumberland.

Departmental Productivity

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action he is taking to increase the productivity and reduce the running costs of his Department. [103846]

Mr. Wills: Delivering efficient and modern public services is a key part of the Government's agenda for improving productivity, and improved administrative efficiency is a key means of ensuring the most effective results are obtained from departmental running costs. The Department's Public Service Agreement, which is available in the Library of the House within "Public Services for the Future: Modernisation, Reform, Accountability" (CM 4181), sets out its running costs provision for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 and the productivity measures that will enable it to increase the quantity and quality of its outputs over that period. Revised targets are being drawn up for a new Public Service Agreement and supporting Service Delivery Agreement that will be published after the completion of the 2000 Spending Review.

School Closures

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the name of the adjudicator appointed to consider the disputed closure proposals for Milfield, Kirknewton and Acklington schools in Northumberland will be announced; by what date representations relating to these closure proposals need to be submitted; and whether arrangements will be made for the Adjudicator to visit the areas served by the schools. [103475]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Office of the Schools Adjudicator has today received objections to the proposed closure of Milfield, Kirknewton and Acklington schools in Northumberland. Any representations should already have been sent to Northumberland LEA. The Adjudicator allocated to deal with the case is Dr. Alan Billings.

Rural Youth Employment

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures he is taking to tackle youth employment in the countryside. [103194]

Ms Jowell: The Department's policies are generally individual focused and would therefore respond to need wherever it exists. We are raising standards of education to equip young people with the skills and knowledge they need to be able to take up jobs; assisting unemployed young people to acquire employability skills and find work through the New Deals for unemployed claimants; and helping those on inactivity benefits get back into the labour market and from there into employment through other welfare to work programmes such as the New Deal for Lone Parents.

As well as these, the Government are delivering macroeconomic stability so there can be increasing employment opportunities for all; and making work pay through various tax and benefit reforms.

All these measures should contribute to reducing youth unemployment in the countryside.

New Deal (Age Restrictions)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his plans to modify age restrictions under the New Deal, indicating the date from which all changes will take effect and the categories of restrictions which will remain after limiting the payment of £10 per person per week above benefit levels for unemployed people taking up job opportunities on such schemes. [103299]

Ms Jowell: From April 2001, we intend to introduce a substantially strengthened New Deal for long-term unemployed people aged 25 and over, which will provide high quality, job-focused opportunities, including job search help, training and work experience. The detail of these arrangements will be decided in light of the lessons learned from the current New Deal 25 plus pilots. We are also reviewing the support available in England under work-based learning for adults to ensure that we meet the aim set out in the White Paper, "Learning to Succeed", that there should be greater coherence with other support for unemployed people, once responsibility has transferred to the Employment Service in April 2001. A similar review is being undertaken in Wales.

New Deal

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many young people have participated in the New Deal in each region of the United Kingdom in the (a) current and (b) last year. [101301]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 6 December 1999]: The following table shows the number of young people who have started New Deal in each of the Employment Service regions in Great Britain. New Deal started in January 1998 in the first 12 Pathfinder areas, followed by the main roll out across Great Britain in April 1998. The 1999 figures are to the end of September.

	1998	1999
Office for Scotland	22,617	17,095
Northern	16,073	11,010
North West	30,728	20,704
Yorkshire and Humber	25,783	16,802
Office for Wales	13,615	9,310
West Midlands	20,501	15,600
East Midlands and Eastern	17,913	12,782
South West	12,607	9,191
LASER	52,992	36,334
Great Britain total	212,829	148,828

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the independent expert studies which he has commissioned into each of the New Deal programmes. [102102]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 9 December 1999]: We have an independent programme of evaluations of the New Deals. The independent studies which have been commissioned into each of the New Deal programmes are as follows:

Evaluation studies	Independent contractor
New Deal for young people
1. Qualitative Research with individuals:
(i) Pathfinder Gateway (ii) Pathfinder Options (iii) Pathfinder Follow-Through (iv) National Gateway (v) National Options (vi) National Follow-Through	National Centre for Social Research (NSCR)
2. Quantitative Survey of individuals: Stages 1 and 2	Policy Studies Institute/British Market Research Bureau
3. Case Studies of Delivery and Impact	Tavistock Institute
(i) Pathfinder Case Studies
(ii) National Case Studies
(iii) Audit of 30 Partnerships
4. Qualitative Research with employers Stages 1 and 2	NCSR
5. Quantitative Survey of employers	NCSR/Institute for Employment Research (IER)
6. Survey of Leavers to Unknown Destinations	NCSR
7. Evaluation of Intensive Gateway Trailblazers	Ecotec
8. Evaluation of New Deal for Musicians	Community Economic Development Associates
9. New Deal Gateway: A Labour Market Assessment	Institute for Employment Studies (IES)
10. Literature Review: Employers	Institute for Employment Research (IER)
11. Literature Review: Labour Market Programmes for Young People	Policy Studies Institute (PSI)
12. Macro-economic evaluation of the impact of NDYP on the labour market	PSI and the National Institute for Economic and Social Research (NIESR)
New Deal for the Long Term Unemployed
1. Quantitative Survey of individuals receiving pilot and national provision	PSI
2. Qualitative research with individuals in pilot and national areas	NCSR
3. Case Studies of implementation and delivery in national areas	Tavistock Institute
4. Case Studies of implementation and delivery in pilot areas	IES
5. Quantitative survey of participating employers in pilot and national areas	NCSR/IER
6. A macro-economic evaluation of the impact of NDLTU on the labour market	NIESR and PSI
New Deal 50plus
An extensive programme of research has been commissioned to assess the effectiveness of New Deal 50plus. It includes qualitative work with individuals and with Employment Service and Benefits Agency employees, a longitudinal survey of individuals and a qualitative survey of employers. All the work is being carried out by the Institute for Employment Studies (IES).
New Deal for Lone Parents
NDLP National Programme (Phase 3) Evaluation
(i) Qualitative research with Lone Parents	Cragg, Ross, Dawson
(ii) Client Satisfaction Survey	Martin Hamblin Research
(iii) Case Studies on Delivery	GHK Economics and Management
(iv) Employer Research	NCSR
(v) Quantitative research with lone parents	(contractor to be confirmed)
(vi) Macro-evaluation	(contractor to be confirmed)
NDLP Phase 3 Innovative Pilots Evaluation
(i) Evaluation of Innovative Pilots	Centre for Regional Economic and Social Research (CRESR) Sheffield Hallam University
New Deal for Partners of the Unemployed
No contractors have yet been appointed for the evaluations of New Deal for Partners of the Unemployed (voluntary programme) or for NDPU Joint Claims for JSA.

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many long-term unemployed people who have entered the New Deal have found full-time employment in each of the past two years. [101311]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 6 December 1999]: In 1998, 62,900 young people gained employment from the New Deal for young people and 6,300 under the New Deal for long-term unemployed people aged 25 and over. To September 1999, the equivalent figures for this year are 92,700 and 20,500 respectively.

Professor Barber

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what date Professor

Barber gave a presentation to a group of officials in the Education Department in Washington DC; and what were the names of the officials who attended. [103140]

Ms Estelle Morris: Professor Barber gave a presentation to a group of officials from the Education Department in Washington DC on 11 August 1999. The seminar, which was organised by Emma Harrell on behalf of Terry Peterson, Counselor to the Secretary of Education, allowed an informal, round-table exchange of ideas with officials from the US Department of Education. Roughly 12–15 officials attended. No formal record of attendance was kept but those invited were:

Michael Smith—Acting Deputy Secretary of Education

Michael Cohen—Senior Advisor to the Secretary of Education

Susan Frost—Special Advisor to the Secretary, Office of the Secretary

Terry Dozier—Special Advisor on Teaching, Office of the Secretary

Carol Rasco—Senior Advisor to the Secretary and Director of America Reads Challenge, Office of the Secretary

Judith Johnson—Acting Assistant Secretary, Office of Elementary and Secondary Education

Kent McGuire—Assistant Secretary, Office of Educational Research and Improvement

Alan Ginsburg—Planning and Evaluation Service Director, Office of the Secretary

William Kincaid—Comprehensive School Reform Demonstration, Office of Elementary and Secondary Education

Jim Kohlmoos—Deputy Assistant Secretary, Office of Elementary and Secondary Education

Susan Wilhelm—Education Program Specialist, Office of Elementary and Secondary Education

Patricia McNeil—Assistant Secretary, Office of Vocational Adult Education

Linda Roberts—Director of Education Technology, Office of the Deputy Secretary

Mario Moreno—Assistant Secretary, Office of Intergovernmental and Interagency Affairs

Menahem Herman—Partnership for Family Involvement in Education Coordinator, Office of Intergovernmental and Interagency Affairs

Judith Heumann—Assistant Secretary, Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services

Lenore Garcia—International Affairs Director, Office of the Under Secretary.

If we are to create a truly world-class education service, it is vital that we have a broad international perspective against which to benchmark our levels of achievement. It is important to keep in touch with, and learn from, best practice and innovations from abroad. The USA, because of its size and diversity, provides many instructive examples.

HEALTH

Departmental Transport

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has spent on ministerial transport in each of the last two years. [98694]

Yvette Cooper: In accordance with the terms of the "Ministerial Code" and "Travel by Ministers", Ministers are required to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. For Ministers in the Department, this is done through the Government Car Service.

For information on spend on the Government Car Service, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office, on 25 November 1999, Official Report, columns 199–200W.

Meningitis Immunisation

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to extend immunisation against meningitis to young people on industrial placements prior to university entry. [98725]

Yvette Cooper: While on placements, the risk for these young people from meningococcal disease is the same as for the adult population. Next year, when they either return or go on to higher education, they may be eligible for immunisation. We are seeking advice from the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, the Government's independent expert advisory committee, on the use of meningococcal vaccine for young people who have not already been vaccinated at school and who will be first year students at the start of the 2000–01 academic year.

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children have been immunised with the meningitis vaccine since the current immunisation programme was introduced. [100605]

Yvette Cooper: Data on how many children have been given the new meningococcal Group C conjugate vaccine are not yet available.

Immunisation of young people aged 15, 16 and 17 years began from 1 November. Immunisation of babies when they are due for their routine vaccines at two, three and four months and around 13 months began from 29 November. Coverage data for meningococcal Group C conjugate vaccine will be collected through the routine quarterly COVER/Körner returns for children up to five years of age. The earliest these routinely collected data will become available will be November 2000, but we expect coverage data on some other catch-up age groups to be available earlier. The exact timescale will depend on vaccine supply and how the immunisation programme rolls out next year.

From the start of the programme up to and including Friday 26 November, a total of 1,734,560 doses of meningococcal Group C conjugate vaccine had been issued to general practitioners or National Health Service trust pharmacies throughout the United Kingdom.

Nutrition

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which officials in his Department have overall responsibility for malnutrition and nutrition in primary and secondary care and for the interface between public health, hospital and community directorates. [99283]

Yvette Cooper: Nutrition is dealt with by both the Department and the Joint Food Safety and Standards Group (JFSSG). The JFSSG is responsible for providing the scientific basis and information for nutrition policy including defining a balanced diet and nutrient needs of the population and monitoring dietary intakes. The policies relating to prevention of malnutrition in the community—primary care, social care etc. and clinical care are within the remit of the Department.

Departmental officials are: Dr. Elizabeth Wilson who leads on clinical nutrition, that is the diagnosis and treatment of malnutrition, and Amy Edwards, who deals with the public health aspects of good nutrition and prevention of malnutrition in the community. The JFSSG official is Dr. Roger Skinner.

Pertussis Whole Cell Vaccine

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department changed its advice given in paragraph 24.4.5 of the 1996 advice booklet, "Immunisation Against Infectious Diseases", that local reactions and pyrexias occur less often after acellular pertussis vaccine than after whole cell vaccine. [99446]

Yvette Cooper: The advice that local reactions and pyrexia occur less often after acellular pertussis vaccine than after whole cell vaccine was first included in the 1996 edition of the Department of Health memorandum "Immunisation Against Infectious Diseases". This information had recently become available from a departmental funded study that directly compared different acellular vaccines with the United Kingdom whole cell vaccine. The study was subsequently published and copies of the paper have been placed in the Library (Miller E. et al. Effect of schedule on reactogenicity and antibody persistence of acellular and whole cell pertussis vaccines: value of laboratory tests as predictors of clinical performance. Vaccine 1997; 15(1): 51–60.).

Post Offices

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the principal activities of his Department and its agencies which provide business for (a) Crown post offices and (b) other post offices; if he will assess whether the level of business generated in each case is likely to increase or decrease over the next five years; and which new areas of business for post offices are likely to be developed by his Department and its agencies over the same period. [99557]

Yvette Cooper: The Department has a number of activities providing business for Crown and local post offices.

Crown post offices issue leaflets called "Health Advice for Travellers" to customers on request, check customers self-completion of form CM1 contained in the leaflet and issue properly completed and authorised Form E111 to entitled persons. These documents entitle the holder to free or reduced cost emergency health care in other European Economic Area states.

Main post offices also display a poster and two leaflets informing the general public about entitlement to help with health costs. They distribute approximately one million leaflets per annum.

Crown and other post offices pay cash refunds of prescription charges when presented with a properly completed claim form by a patient or his/her representative.

Crown and other post offices distribute milk tokens under the Welfare Food Scheme on behalf of the Department. Milk token issues through post offices are expected to decrease over the next five years.

Targets for electronic delivery of services (50 per cent. by 2005, 100 per cent. by 2008) represent a real opportunity for additional business for the Post Office network across all public services delivered by central government. Moreover, equivalent targets are now being set for local government, and there is an opportunity for the Post Office network to gain further business in delivery of services which are the responsibility of local government.

External Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been spent by his Department on external consultants and advisers since May 1997 funded from (i) his Department's programme provision and (ii) his Department's running costs. [99485]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 24 November 1999]: Total expenditure on external consultants and advisers, by the Department of Health and its Agencies[1], since May 1997 to 31 September 1999, is as follows:

[1]Excludes the Medicines Control Agency whose consultancy is funded through its trading fund and not from either running costs or programme spend.

	£ million
Department of Health	[1]20.69
Agencies	[2]3.08

[1] Only running costs
[2] Of this total, £126,570 only is from programme spend

Colo-rectal Cancer

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what clinical trials have been carried out on the use of Irinotecan in colo-rectal cancer treatment; if the chemical use of this drug will be approved by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence; and if he will make a statement. [99642]

Yvette Cooper: Irinotecan is a promising new agent for the treatment of advanced colorectal cancer which is being considered for possible referral to the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE). Two large randomised trials recently reported in the Lancet have indicated that irinotecan can give a small but significant benefit when used as a second line treatment. The Medical Research Council, which receives its funding from the Department of Trade and Industry, has recently given the go ahead for a major randomised trial in advanced colorectal cancer which aims to clarify the advantages and disadvantages of irinotecan and oxaliplatin, another new agent. The trial will consider not only response and survival but also quality of life and cost-effectiveness. The first patients should be randomised into the trial before the end of the year.

Further information on projects and trials relating to irinocetan can be found on the National Research Register. This is available in the Library and most medical libraries on CD Rom and on the Internet: http://www.doh.gov.uk/nrr.htm.

NICE published its first year work programme on 4 November and includes the development of wider guidelines on particular areas of treatment and appraisals of particular treatments and technologies.

Body Piercing

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent representations he has received on the need for further regulation of body piercing; [99889]

(2) what plans he has for further regulation of body piercing. [99890]

Yvette Cooper: The Government believe there should be primary legislation introduced to give local authorities outside London powers to regulate the hygiene and cleanliness of cosmetic body piercing businesses, when parliamentary time allows.

We have received a small number of letters from hon. Members, local authorities and members of the public about the further regulation of cosmetic body piercing businesses.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to encourage a greater awareness of the early signs of prostate cancer in men. [99871]

Yvette Cooper: We are concerned to promote awareness of prostate cancer and its symptoms. The Department and the Health Education Authority currently produce a range of literature on cancer in men, including prostate cancer, to raise men's awareness of the risks.

Hospital Infection Procedures

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of control of infection procedures in hospitals in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement on the standards set for such procedures in hospitals in other EU member states. [99892]

Yvette Cooper: We are determined to make sure that the National Health Service tackles the problem of hospital acquired infection. A review of infection control arrangements in all acute NHS Trusts has recently been undertaken by Regional Epidemiologists which will be used to improve services locally as appropriate. The emphasis the Government places on infection control in the NHS is reflected in the National Priorities Guidance 1999–2000 to 2001–02. This sets out the need to ensure that appropriate arrangements for the control of infection are in place. Health Service Circular 1999–049 (Resistance to Antibiotics and other Antimicrobial Agents, issued in March 1999) also addresses the need to strengthen prevention and control of communicable disease and infection control processes. On 22 November the Minister of State, Department of Health, my hon. Friend the Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Denham), launched new risk management and organisational control standards for the NHS including standards for hospital infection control. Compliance with these is the responsibility of chief executives and NHS trust board members.

The problem of infection control is a major concern at European level. A Commission resolution was agreed in June this year which cited infection control as an important part of the battle against antibiotic resistance. Within Europe hospital infection control arrangements vary from member state to member state and details are not held centrally.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps he has taken and what discussions he has held, with a view to increasing the percentage of urgent breast cancer referrals that are included within the two week consultation pledge; [100004]

(2) what steps his Department has taken to make general practitioners aware of the need for urgent referrals of patients with suspected breast cancer to be received by the hospital within 24 hours in order to be covered by the guarantee that they will be seen by a specialist within two weeks. [100003]

Yvette Cooper: Guidance on the need to refer urgent referrals within 24 hours was issued to primary care leads, health authorities, National Health Service trusts and local medical centres through regional leads in December 1998. This has been augmented by additional guidance and the issue of revised breast cancer referral guidelines sent to all general practitioners in September 1999. This has been supported by action at local and regional levels to establish clear referral criteria and referral pathways so that those patients being referred urgently under the two week standard can be identified quickly and referred appropriately. We will continue to monitor the proportion of urgent referrals received within and outside 24 hours and to work with the professions to enable the maximum number of women to benefit from this high standard of care.

Cervical Smears

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent steps his Department has taken to analyse the potential impact of new technologies in improving the accuracy of diagnosis of cervical smears. [100255]

Yvette Cooper: We are aware of a number of new technologies under development, which are closely monitored by the National Health Service cervical screening programme. For example, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence have been asked to consider the evidence and advise on whether liquid-based cytology would offer worthwhile benefits.

We welcome any new technology that would improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the cervical screening programme. However, before any technology is introduced we must be sure that it is safe and effective, and that quality standards can be maintained.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for making the Neopath Autopap for cervical screening available in (a) the NHS and (b) Grimsby NHS Trust. [100338]

Yvette Cooper: The Tripath Autopap system (previously Neopath Autopap system) is currently being evaluated by the National Health Service cervical screening programme.

We welcome any new technology that would improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the cervical screening programme. However, before any technology is introduced we must be sure that it is safe and effective, and that quality standards can be maintained.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date he expects the Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones to produce its report. [100269]

Yvette Cooper: The group is expected to report in spring 2000.

Smoking-related Illness

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the estimated cost to the NHS in treating people suffering from illness as a result of smoking in each of the last five years. [100765]

Yvette Cooper: This information is not available on a year by year basis, but a study "Cost Effectiveness of Smoking Cessation Interventions" by the Health Education Authority, in collaboration with the University of York published in 1997 estimated the annual cost to the National Health Service of treating smoking related disease caused by smoking was between £1.4 billion and £1.7 billion for England.

St. John's Wort

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if all products containing St. John's Wort are deemed medicinal by the Medicines Control Agency. [100777]

Yvette Cooper: Products containing the widely used herbal remedy, St. John's Wort are classified as medicinal products by the Medicines Control Agency if they satisfy the definition of a medicinal product in Article 1.2 of Directive 65/65/EEC. The MCA does not deem all products containing St. John's Wort to be medicinal products. However, it does deem any product containing St. John's Wort at therapeutic dosage levels to be a medicinal product, because it may be administered with a view to modifying physiological function in human beings. A herbal remedy containing St. John's Wort may be exempt from licensing if it satisfies section 12 of the Medicines Act 1968.

COMA Inquiry

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the results of the COMA inquiry into fortifying bread with folic acid will be announced. [100822]

Yvette Cooper: The report entitled "Folic acid and the Prevention of Disease" prepared by the Working Group of the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy, is expected to be published soon. The report focuses primarily on the role of folic acid in the prevention of neural tube defects.

Cancer Centres

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the designated cancer centre for surgery in each region of England. [102461]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 December 1999]: The National Cancer Director, Professor Mike Richards, is developing a national approach to the evaluation of cancer services with regions, to ensure that we have a consistent approach nationally to the delivery of cancer care.

There are currently no rigid criteria for the designation or accreditation of cancer centres. Early implementation of the Calman/Hine recommendations reflected the different starting points across the country and allowed an evaluation of services to fit local circumstances.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many AS1 emergency calls were received by the London Ambulance Service on 26 October; how many AS2 urgent requests for ambulances were received on that date; and what is the (a) average and (b) longest time taken to respond to calls in each category. [102777]

Ms Stuart: The London Ambulance Service received 2,576 AS1 emergency calls and 373 AS2 urgent requests for ambulances on 26 October 1999.

The average time taken to respond to AS1 calls on that date was 9.9 minutes and the longest time was more than 30 minutes.

Information is not collected in this way for AS2 requests. However, the average time of arrival at hospital was four minutes later than the time specified by a general practitioner and the longest time was approximately 21 minutes after the time specified by a GP.

Terminally Ill Patients (Support Services)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support is provided by his Department for partners and near relatives of terminally ill patients. [102536]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 December 1999]: Support for families and carers of terminally ill patients is an integral part of the principles and practice of palliative care. The Department of Health has distributed three documents providing guidance on key issues facing the dying and their carers. These documents were already widely used by the voluntary sector. The three documents which were issued under cover of HSC 1998/115 are:

i) Guidelines for Managing Cancer Pain in Adults.

ii) Changing Gear—Guidelines for Managing the Last Days of life in adults

iii) Palliative care in the hospital setting.

Professor Mike Richards, the new National Cancer Director, has identified supportive care as one of his key priorities and will over the coming months work closely with health care professionals and voluntary organisations to assess how supportive care services can best be provided to all patients.

In addition, the National Lottery New Opportunities Fund is making available £23 million for the prevention and palliative care element of the "Living with Cancer Programme" in England over the next three years. This initiative will be launched in January 2000.

Drug Tariff

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many products have been transferred from Category A of the Drug Tariff to Category D; and what was the cost per head of population in each category for the last financial year for each health authority area as recorded by the Pharmaceutical Pricing Authority. [102388]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 15 December 1999]: Products move in and out of Category D. There are 175 preparations/pack sizes classified as Category D in the December 1999 edition of the Drug Tariff, of which 104 were classified as Category A in the December 1998 edition of the Drug Tariff.

The net ingredient cost per head of population in 1998–99 of Category A and Category D drugs in each health authority is shown in the table.

The net ingredient cost per head of population for Category A and Category D drugs by health authority, 1998–99

£

Health authority in which item was dispensed	Category A	Category D
Avon	9.00	0.80
Barking and Havering	9.00	0.70
Barnet	8.30	0.60
Barnsley	11.00	0.90
Bedfordshire	9.00	0.60
Berkshire	7.50	0.60
Bexley and Greenwich	8.20	0.70
Birmingham	9.70	0.90
Bradford	10.60	0.90
Brent and Harrow	9.00	0.70
Bromley	8.90	0.70
Buckinghamshire	8.20	0.70
Bury and Rochdale	11.00	0.90
Calderdale and Kirklees	10.50	0.90
Cambridge and Huntingdon	7.00	0.60
Camden and Islington	9.00	0.70
Cornwall and Isles of Scilly	10.20	0.80
County Durham	13.00	1.10
Coventry	9.90	0.70
Croydon	6.80	0.60
Doncaster	10.80	0.80
Dorset	10.10	0.80
Dudley	8.80	0.70
Ealing, Hammersmith and Hounslow	8.30	0.70
East and North Hertfordshire	10.00	0.70
East Kent	9.10	0.80
East Lancashire	10.60	0.90
East London and The City	9.10	0.80
East Norfolk	9.40	0.80
East Riding	9.10	0.70
East Surrey	7.90	0.60
East Sussex, Brighton and Hove	10.30	0.90
Enfield and Haringey	7.90	0.60
Gateshead and South Tyneside	14.50	1.20
Gloucestershire	8.00	0.60
Herefordshire	8.00	0.70
Hillingdon	8.80	0.70
Isle of Wight	10.40	0.80
Kensington, Chelsea and Westminster	7.20	0.60
Kingston and Richmond	7.40	0.60
Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham	8.50	0.70
Leeds	10.10	0.90
Leicestershire	8.40	0.80
Lincolnshire	9.20	0.70
Liverpool	12.60	0.90
Manchester	11.10	1.00
Merton, Sutton and Wandsworth	7.20	0.60
Morecambe Bay	11.60	1.00
Newcastle and North Tyneside	13.30	1.00
North and East Devon	10.10	0.80
North and Mid Hampshire	7.30	0.60
North Cheshire	10.60	1.00
North Cumbria	11.70	0.90
North Derbyshire	10.00	0.90
North Essex	8.50	0.70
North Nottinghamshire	10.60	0.80
North Staffordshire	10.40	0.80
North West Anglia	8.60	0.70
North West Lancashire	12.10	0.90
North Yorkshire	9.80	0.80
Northamptonshire	9.20	0.90
Northumberland	12.50	1.00
Nottingham	8.90	0.70
Oxfordshire	8.30	0.70
Portsmouth and South East Hampshire	10.10	0.80
Redbridge and Waltham Forest	8.20	0.70
Rotherham	10.40	0.90
Salford and Trafford	11.00	0.90
Sandwell	10.40	0.90
Sefton	11.70	0.90
Sheffield	11.60	1.10
Shropshire	8.70	0.70
Solihull	9.30	0.80
Somerset	8.60	0.80
South and West Devon	10.90	0.90
South Cheshire	9.80	0.80
South Essex	7.80	0.70
South Humber	9.90	0.90
South Lancashire	8.90	0.80
South Staffordshire	8.70	0.80
Southampton and South West Hampshire	9.30	0.70
Southern Derbyshire	10.40	0.80
St. Helens and Knowsley	12.90	1.10
Stockport	9.70	0.90
Suffolk	9.10	0.70
Sunderland	13.90	1.00
Tees	12.40	1.00
Wakefield	11.80	1.10
Walsall	10.30	0.80
Warwickshire	8.70	0.60
West Hertfordshire	10.20	0.70
West Kent	7.80	0.70
West Pennine	10.10	0.90
West Surrey	7.70	0.60
West Sussex	9.50	0.80
Wigan and Bolton	10.30	0.90
Wiltshire	8.20	0.70
Wirral	11.00	0.90
Wolverhampton	10.30	0.90
Worcestershire	9.10	0.70
England	9.50	0.80

Notes:

1. The data cover all prescriptions dispensed in the community in each Health authority, ie by community pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors, and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered in England.
2. The net ingredient cost is the basic cost of a drug and does not take account of discounts, dispensing costs, fees or prescription charges income.
3. The resident population for 1998, estimated by the Office for National Statistics, has been used.
4. The information was obtained for each preparation/pack size classified in the Drug Tariff as Category A or D for each month in the period April 1998 to March 1999 and aggregated to provide an annual total.
5. Data rounded to nearest 10p.

Infertility

Ms Church: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment his Department has made of the psychological effects of infertility; [102678]

(2) how many written representations have been received by his Department in respect of infertility treatment and service provision since May 1997; [102675]

(3) when he will announce the results of his Department's survey of health authority provision of infertility services; and if he will make a statement; [102676]

(4) if he will provide guidance to health authorities as to their responsibilities in respect of the funding of infertility guidance. [102677]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 16 December 1999]: The Department has received 319 written representations in respect of infertility treatment since May 1999.

It is planned that a short report detailing the results of the Department's survey of health authority provision of infertility services will be available in February 2000. The results of that survey are currently being considered by Ministers.

The Department has not commissioned any research specifically on the psychological effects of infertility. However, we do fully appreciate the distress suffered by infertile couples. This is clearly evident from the written representations received by the Department.

Uraemia

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) cases of and (b) deaths caused by uraemia there were among NHS patients in (i) 1995, (ii) 1996, (iii) 1997, (iv) 1998 and (v) the first six months of 1999. [103049]

Mr. Denham: The table shows the number of finished consultant episodes for patients with a primary diagnosis of Uraemia. The remainder of the hospital information requested is not yet available.

Year	Number
1995–96	40,294
1996–97	44,618
1997–98[1]	49,194
1999–2000[1,2]	18,590

[1] Data for 1997–98 onwards are provisional—no adjustments have as yet been made for shortfalls in the data, i. e. it is ungrossed.
[2] First six months.
Source:
Hospital Episode Statistics

Statistics are collected by the Office for National Statistics for deaths in England and Wales caused by renal failure (uraemia). They are not broken down to distinguish National Health Service from non-NHS patients, however. The following figures therefore include all such deaths:

Year	Number
1995	2,959
1996	2,759
1997	2,658
1998	2,662
1999	[1]1,337

[1] Provisional figures for January to June

CJD Victims

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to improve care for victims of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease; and if he will make a statement. [102889]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 16 December 1999]: I refer my hon. Friend to the statements made by the Minister of State, Department of Health, my hon. Friend the Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Denham), in the adjournment debate on the care of variant CJD (vCJD) patients which took place in Westminster Hall on 1 December 1999, Official Report, columns 109–116WH, in which he set out the measures in place or planned to improve the care provided for vCJD patients.

Environmental Radiation

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what calculation of radiation dose from plutonium to tracheo-bronchial lymph nodes was used to inform the Fourth report of the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment. [102846]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 16 December 1999]: The Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE) asked the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) to calculate radiation doses to the tracheo-bronchial lymph nodes of young people resident in the village of Seascale in Cumbria, who were aged 0 to 25 years. The doses calculated were for the period of time at which discharges of radioactive material from the Sellafield site were either at their highest (1975) or when the inhalation dose was at its highest (1955). However, even in the most pessimistic case in 1955, the total equivalent dose to the thoracic lymph nodes from natural background radiation is greater than that estimated from plutonium.

Radioactive Discharges

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department's funded project, entitled Geographical variations in childhood cancer incidence generally and in relation to nuclear installations, has ascertained the level of childen's exposure to radioactive isotopes discharged from nuclear-licensed sites in England and Wales. [102845]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 16 December 1999]: This project is examining the variations in the incidence of childhood cancer in Great Britain for the period 1969 to 1993 and is based on 33,000 cases. The analyses will include geographical proximity to nuclear licensed sites. The independent advisory Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment will consider the results of this study when it is completed, together with current evidence of population radiation exposure.

Ionising Radiation

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what areas of research the Radiological Protection Research Programme has identified as being necessary to the development of policy in the field of low-level ionising radiation. [102847]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 16 December 1999]: The Department's Radiological Protection Research Programme is currently funding research aimed at improving the assessment of the health risk from exposure to both ionising and non-ionising radiation. The programme covers a broad range of molecular, cellular, biological and epidemiological studies. When the individual studies are complete they will be submitted for publication.

Overseas Doctors (Greater London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors from overseas are working in National Health Service hospitals in the Greater London area. [103729]

Mr. Denham: At 30 September 1998, there were 2,760 doctors in the London Regional Office area who qualified outside the European economic area.

Note:

Figures are rounded to the nearest 10

Source:

Department of Health medical and dental workforce census.

Health Visitors

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many children under five years of age are living in the area covered by Parkside Community Health Trust; [103360]

(2) how many children in (a) Brent, (b) Harrow, (c) Kensington and Chelsea and (d) Westminster have no named health visitor; [103359]

(3) how many full-time equivalent health visitors carrying a clinical case load are employed by Parkside Community Health Trust. [103361]

Mr. Denham: All children under five who are known to the health service in Brent, Harrow, Kensington and Chelsea and Westminster have a named health visitor. There is a system of general practitioner attached health visitors plus a named health visitor for refugees, homeless and travellers.

There are 29,493 children aged less than five years resident in the area covered by Parkside Health NHS Trust. Data from Brent and Harrow Health Authority indicate a total under five population of 18,561 and data from Kensington and Chelsea and Westminster Health Authority indicate an under five population of 10,962.

A total of 88.48 whole time equivalent (WTE) health visitors are employed by Parkside Health NHS Trust of which 42.41 WTE are in Brent and 46.07 WTE are in Kensington and Chelsea and Westminster. Currently there are 8.9 WTE vacancies, 2.9 WTE in Brent and 6 WTE in Kensington and Chelsea and Westminster. Agency health visitor staff are covering these vacancies.

Correspondence

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Ashford of 25 September and 4 November; and if he will make a statement on the performance of the correspondence sections of his Department. [103858]

Yvette Cooper: I replied to the hon. Member's letter on 5 January.

The Department's Ministerial Correspondence Unit works very hard to ensure that letters from hon. Members are turned around as quickly as possible. As recorded on 11 June 1999, Official Report, columns 403–06W, the Department's performance against its Service First target of 20 working days in replying to correspondence from hon. Members is 61 per cent. We are aware of the need for improvements in this area and work is currently underway to address this.

Alder Hey Hospital

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the terms of reference for the independent inquiry into the removal of children's organs at Alder Hey hospital; and to what timescale it will operate. [103753]

Mr. Denham: The independent inquiry team's terms of reference are to inquire into the circumstances leading to the removal, retention and disposal of human tissue, including organs of the body, from children at the Royal Liverpool Children's Hospital National Health Service Trust (and its predecessor NHS organisations) who have undergone post mortem examinations; to inquire into the extent to which the Human Tissue Act 1961 has been complied with; to examine professional practice and management action and systems, including what information and in what form that information was given to the children's parents or, where relevant, other family members in respect of the removal, retention and disposal of tissue; to examine the role of the NHS and other bodies or persons involved; to consider other issues relating to the above matters as necessary; to report to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State by the end of March and make such recommendations as are appropriate.

Patents

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what use he has made of Crown immunity to avoid liability for breach of commercial patents on medical products. [R] [103301]

Ms Stuart [holding answer 20 December 1999]: The Crown has no general immunity from proceedings in respect of infringement of a patent. However the Patents Act 1977, sections 55 to 59, allow the use of patented inventions for the services of the Crown without the consent of the patent owner. If these provisions are relied on, compensation for loss of profit has to be paid.

Law reports show the equivalent provisions in the Patents Act 1949 were used in 1961 by the then Minister of Health in respect of the anti-biotic tetracycline, but officials in my Department are not aware that these provisions have been relied on in recent years as regards medical products.

Illegal Drug Addiction

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he has in place to address illegal drug addiction. [103243]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 21 December 1999]: Challenging targets for tackling drug misuse have been set by the United Kingdom Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator in his "First Annual Report and National Plan" published in April this year. These will help to achieve the objectives of the Government's 10-year drugs strategy "Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain". £70.5 million additional resources are being made available to health and local authorities over the next three years for drug treatment services. A further £18 million over three years will support drug prevention activity, particularly amongst young people.

Ante-natal/Neo-natal Screening

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the use of (a) ante and (b) neo-natal screening. [103652]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 21 December 1999]: Ante and neo-natal screening procedures can be vital in the detection of impending illness and onset of disease, where these allow for early and effective intervention. There are many screening procedures, some of which have the potential to build upon the current screening programme.

We look to the National Screening Committee for the United Kingdom to appraise screening programmes, current and proposed, against a set of internationally recognised criteria and to advise on additions or changes.

Pregnancy Advice Centres

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to regulate pregnancy advice centres which do not refer clients on to medical procedures. [103668]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 21 December 1999]: It is not possible or practical to regulate the activities of every place, outside the National Health Service, that provides advice and information to women on pregnancy matters.

We do maintain a register of pregnancy advice bureaux that provide a medical consultation and refer women on for abortion. This list of registered places is publicly available and will shortly be on the Department's website.

Life Fertility Programme

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to fund the Life National Hotline and the Life Fertility Programme. [103669]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 21 December 1999]: Decisions on applications received for funding under Section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 from 2000–01 onwards have not yet been made.

Routine Admissions (Suspension)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those NHS trusts which have suspended routine admissions for at least (a) one week and (b) two weeks over the Christmas and New Year period. [104281]

Ms Stuart: The information requested is not held centrally. The decision to suspend routine admissions would have been made at local level based on guidance on planning for winter and the millennium holiday period issued earlier last year.

Health Authority Funding

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will express in per capita terms the (a) actual and (b) percentage funding increases for each health authority in England in 2000–01. [104171]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is shown in the table.

Health authority	Cash increase per capita (£)	Cash increase Percentage
Avon	40.44	6.90
Barking and Havering	42.77	6.39
Barnet	41.78	6.58
Barnsley	50.91	7.62
Bedfordshire	42.19	7.62
Berkshire	39.16	7.35
Bexley and Greenwich	43.00	6.22
Birmingham	43.22	6.48
Bradford	46.53	7.19
Brent and Harrow	43.32	6.38
Bromley	40.69	6.60
Buckinghamshire	38.02	7.24
Bury and Rochdale	47.85	7.26
Calderdale and Kirklees	42.51	6.64
Cambridgeshire	38.85	7.14
Camden and Islington	59.45	6.79
Cornwall and Isles of Scilly	42.38	6.55
County Durham	48.04	7.04
Coventry	45.47	7.21
Croydon	41.64	6.85
Doncaster	46.97	6.98
Dorset	40.02	6.25
Dudley	41.33	6.93
Ealing, Hammersmith and Hounslow	47.06	6.70
East and North Hertfordshire	38.68	6.91
East Kent	41.71	6.22
East Lancashire	48.67	7.10
East London and the City	62.63	8.02
East Riding	43.20	6.96
East Surrey	37.49	6.21
East Sussex, Brighton and Hove	42.59	6.25
Enfield and Haringey	44.80	6.53
Gateshead and South Tyneside	51.04	7.18
Gloucestershire	37.57	6.31
Herefordshire	39.43	6.67
Hillingdon	42.24	6.73
Isle of Wight	45.58	6.21
Kensington, Chelsea and Westminster	62.49	8.50
Kingston and Richmond	39.05	6.22
Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham	54.63	6.85
Leeds	43.79	6.81
Leicestershire	41.33	7.41
Lincolnshire	41.59	6.83
Liverpool	49.26	6.57
Manchester	50.40	6.60
Merton, Sutton and Wandsworth	42.70	6.31
Morecambe Bay	42.16	6.37
Newcastle and North Tyneside	48.89	6.89
Norfolk	40.24	6.65
North and East Devon	39.90	6.32
North and Mid Hampshire	34.75	6.57
North Cheshire	41.34	6.38
North Cumbria	43.23	6.92
North Derbyshire	41.98	6.77
North Essex	38.98	6.68
North Nottinghamshire	43.87	7.12
North Staffordshire	47.23	7.24
North West Lancashire	47.36	6.79
North Yorkshire	39.38	6.71
Northamptonshire	37.52	6.44
Northumberland	44.66	7.01
Nottingham	45.47	7.46
Oxfordshire	37.16	7.09
Portsmouth and South East Hampshire	39.95	6.69
Redbridge and Waltham Forest	42.24	6.22
Rotherham	47.96	7.28

Health authority	Cash increase per capita (£)	Cash increase Percentage
Salford and Trafford	45.79	6.56
Sandwell	48.37	7.14
Sefton	46.18	6.53
Sheffield	45.37	6.64
Shropshire	40.11	6.89
Solihull	38.36	6.53
Somerset	39.83	6.66
South and West Devon	41.37	6.42
South Cheshire	38.60	6.40
South Derbyshire	41.45	6.95
South Essex	41.68	7.05
South Humber	39.96	6.24
South Lancashire	39.89	6.48
South Staffordshire	37.53	6.63
Southampton and South West Hampshire	39.48	6.68
St Helen's and Knowsley	49.33	7.14
Stockport	40.24	6.52
Suffolk	37.08	6.42
Sunderland	50.55	7.20
Tees	49.32	7.34
Wakefield	45.50	6.95
Walsall	47.42	7.28
Warwickshire	36.83	6.22
West Hertfordshire	38.84	6.52
West Kent	37.17	6.41
West Pennine	46.53	7.00
West Surrey	36.55	6.26
West Sussex	42.09	6.76
Wigan and Bolton	47.83	7.28
Wiltshire	36.15	6.31
Wirral	46.36	6.54
Wolverhampton	48.60	7.35
Worcestershire	36.92	6.47

Notes:
1. Crude population figures supplied by the Office for National Statistics have been used to calculate the per capita figures.
2. Amounts include increases to targeted funding for Health Action Zones.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Carers

17. Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to improve the level of benefits paid to carers. [102947]

20. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to help carers. [102950]

Mr. Bayley: We are committed under the National Carer's Strategy to keeping financial support for carers under review, which we are doing.

Social Exclusion

21. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what further resources are proposed to reduce social exclusion. [102951]

Mr. Bayley: Over this Parliament we are investing an extra £40 billion in health and education, and we will be spending an additional £6 billion a year by the end of this Parliament in new measures to tackle child poverty.

It is this Government that have made tackling poverty and social exclusion its priority. We are currently examining resources in the spending review and will make an announcement next year.

25. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the Government's plans to tackle poverty and social exclusion arising out of welfare dependency. [102955]

Mr. Bayley: A key element in our strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion is to reduce the number of people claiming out-of-work benefits by helping people find work.

The proportion of people living in working age workless households doubled between 1979 and 1997—this is the legacy we inherited and the challenge we face. It is a problem we are committed to overcome through our programme of welfare reform.

One-Stop Benefits

22. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how the one-stop benefit trials are progressing. [102952]

29. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on progress so far with the ONE pilots. [102959]

Angela Eagle: The ONE service began operating in four pilot areas on 28 June 1999, and in eight more areas on 29 November. The early signs from the pilots appear encouraging but it will, of course, take time to make a full assessment of the impact. When robust and reliable data are available we will, of course, make it public.

Minimum Income Guarantee

23. Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to ensure maximum take-up of the minimum income guarantee by those entitled to it. [102953]

Mr. Rooker: We are committed to taking action to find more effective ways of encouraging eligible pensioners to claim their entitlement to the minimum income guarantee. We will announce details of a national programme shortly.

NIRS2

24. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the number of pensioners still affected by the NIRS2 computer problems. [102954]

Mr. Rooker: It is estimated that currently there are up to 83,000 pensioners who are still affected by current and past NIRS2 computer problems. The Benefits Agency anticipates that this backlog will be cleared during the course of 2000.

New Deal (Lone Parents)

26. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made with the New Deal for Lone Parents; and if he will make a statement. [102956]

Angela Eagle: The New Deal for Lone Parents is providing active support to help lone parents move into work. In the first year of the national programme over 104,000 lone parents have attended interviews; 89 per cent. of these have agreed to participate in the programme; and over 28,000 lone parents have obtained jobs. In his pre-Budget report the Chancellor announced a package of improvements to the programme to build on the success of NDLP so far.

Computer Systems (Benefits)

27. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to unify his Department's computer system for benefit payments with that of the Inland Revenue. [102957]

Mr. Rooker: There are no plans to unify the Department's computer systems with those of the Inland Revenue. However, this Department, the Inland Revenue, the Department for Education and Employment and local authorities are working together to ensure that joined-up client-focused welfare services can be offered to all.

Millennium Compliance

28. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if his Department experienced computer problems at the start of the new millennium. [102958]

Angela Eagle: There was only one minor incident across the whole range of the Department's 33 main computer systems, after the Millennium Date Change. This problem, which affected the transfer of certain specific Social Fund cases between offices, has since been fixed. Two of the Department's 783 administrative support systems had problems, which have also been fixed. This outcome follows the Department's substantial work to prepare for this event.

Pension Provision

30. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps have been taken by the Government to promote personal provision of pensions. [102960]

Mr. Rooker: We published a Green Paper in December 1998, setting out our proposals for pension reform. Our proposals will help everyone build up a decent second pension. The reformed system will ensure that all those who can save for a second pension will be able to do so.

For people who have access to them, occupational pensions remain the best option; we have already implemented some of the measures we proposed to strengthen and support occupational pension schemes in the Welfare Reform and Pensions Act 1999. Further measures are in the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill currently before Parliament.

The new stakeholder pensions will be a secure, flexible, and value for money way to help up to 5 million people who do not have access to an occupational pension and for whom personal pensions can be unsuitable to save for their retirement. Stakeholder Pensions will be designed to help those on middle incomes—around £9,000-£20,000 a year—but will benefit those on higher incomes as well. The legislation to put in place the basic framework for stakeholder pension schemes is included in the Welfare Reform and Pensions Act 1999. We are continuing to consult on key areas of detail which will be set out in secondary legislation and we expect to publish draft Regulations shortly.

We are reforming the State Earnings Related Pension Scheme through the introduction of the State Second Pension. This will give a dramatic boost to the pensions of low earners, carers and some long-term disabled people. Legislation is included in the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill.

We are also improving the quality of general and personal information on pensions. We are working in partnership with employers and the pensions industry to provide annual combined pension forecasts of current and projected state and private pension rights. A combined statement will give individuals a clearer indication of what sort of retirement income they might expect and enable them to make informed decisions about the level of savings they need to make.

In June 1998, we also published a series of pensions information leaflets. These provide concise and accessible information in plain English about the pensions choices available to individuals. The leaflets relate to decisions individuals need to take at various life stages. The leaflets met the Plain English Campaign Crystal Mark standard and have been awarded the Money Management Council Quality Mark for providing clear and unbiased information on money matters. The leaflets have been promoted through marketing activity. The Financial Services Authority also provide more detailed information on certain financial issues, which complements the Departmental leaflets.

Disability Living Allowance (Mobility Component)

31. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have lost the mobility component of their disability benefit in each of the past two years. [102961]

Mr. Bayley: 114,400 awards of the mobility component of Disability Living Allowance stopped in 1997–98, and 129,900 in 1998–99. These figures are equivalent to around 7 per cent. of recipients. Awards stop in various circumstances, for example when recipients die, go to live abroad permanently, or experience a significant improvement in their ability to get around.

Pensioners Benefits

32. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to help pensioners with small second incomes who do not qualify for benefits. [102962]

Mr. Rooker: During our process of modernising and reforming welfare, we will consider all the components that make up the benefit system with a view to ensuring that the least well-off pensioners share in the rising national prosperity.

Fraud

33. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement indicating which of his anti-fraud targets he is likely (a) to meet and (b) not to meet by the end of the current financial year. [102963]

Mr. Rooker: As published in the Public Service Agreement, for the first time we have set a single outcome target to reduce fraud and error in the two major benefits,

Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance, by 30 per cent. by March 2007, with at least a 10 per cent. reduction by March 2002.

State Pension Uprating

34. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the April 2000 uprating of the state pension. [102964]

Mr. Rooker: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made a statement on new rates of benefit, including State Retirement Pension, to apply from next April in a Written Answer on 9 November 1999, Official Report, columns 564–78W.

Child Poverty

35. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the level of child poverty in Britain. [102965]

Mr. Bayley: Far too many children's lives are blighted by poverty and social exclusion. That is why the Prime Minister has made it our aim to eradicate child poverty in the next 20 years.

Disablement Benefits

36. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to improve the quality of medical assessments as part of integrating testing for disablement benefits. [102966]

Mr. Bayley: The qualifying criteria for the various benefits for sick and disabled people vary and may need to be assessed separately on different occasions. The development of an integrated medical assessment would be complex and there are no immediate plans to introduce such an assessment.

The issue of the quality of medical assessments in general is, however, taken very seriously. Standards relating to experience, qualifications and training are set out in the Benefits Agency's contract with the SEMA Group, which provides medical services. The work of all doctors is also subject to regular audit against nationally determined standards which are agreed by the Department's Chief Medical Adviser.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the total spending on housing benefit (a) in 1996–97 adjusted for inflation and (b) projected for 1999–2000. [102942]

Angela Eagle: Housing benefit expenditure is expected to fall from £12 billion in 1996–97 to £11.2 billion in 1999–2000 in real terms.

Departmental Employees (Disabled People)

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of the total workforce in his Department is registered as disabled; and what steps he is taking to encourage the employment of disabled people in his Department. [102044]

Mr. Bayley: Existing data indicate that 4.1 per cent. of employees in the Department have stated that they have a disability.

This Department has put a range of measures in place to encourage the employment of people with disabilities, using the Cabinet Office "Programme for Action to Achieve Equality of Opportunity in the Civil Service for Disabled People". This sets out action checklists for all departments, covering the recruitment, retention and career development of people with disabilities. In addition, this Department participates in the "Positive about Disabled People Symbol" scheme (known as the "two ticks" symbol).

Departmental Employees (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of the total work force in his Department is of ethnic minority origin; and what steps he is taking to encourage the employment of people from the ethnic minorities in his Department. [102728]

Mr. Bayley: Existing data indicate that 5.83 per cent. of employees in the Department are of minority ethnic origin.

My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office set out in his reply of 16 December 1999, Official Report, column 264W, corporate action that we are taking to encourage the employment of people from minority ethnic groups. This Department aspires to improve the diversity of its work force at every level and has put in place a range of measures specifically to encourage the employment of people with minority ethnic backgrounds and address current under-representation, particularly at senior levels.

In addition to our plans to improve in the area of recruitment, we have a number of initiatives for developing the talent already in the Department. We are committed to achieving our goals by setting realistic but stretching targets by 31 March 2000 which will be underpinned by action plans encompassing imaginative outreach and positive action initiatives. Some specific examples are:

working closely with the Employment Services to gain better understanding of the barriers restricting people from minority ethnic groups from applying for jobs;

liaising with ethnic groups and ethnic community leaders to identify the scope of potential recruitment candidates and work towards breaking down perceived barriers. Producing equal opportunities policy statements in different languages has assisted in this respect; targeting schools and universities with a high percentage of minority ethnic students; taking part in careers fairs to attract minority ethnic undergraduates who may be suitable for fast stream development;

participating in the Windsor Fellowship Scheme, which is run by an educational trust to introduce minority ethnic undergraduates as student placements to prepare them for management careers;

working with organisations to offer its managers as mentors to minority ethnic students (in 1999, a BA manager was voted Mentor of the Year by the NMC).

Winter Fuel Allowance

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans the Government have to extend the £100 winter heating allowance to disabled people below the age of retirement. [103864]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the Written Answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mrs. Gilroy) on 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 325W.

Council Tax Rebate Allowances

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received about changes to the calculation of non-dependant income contributions to council tax rebate allowances; and if he will make a statement. [103723]

Angela Eagle: While we have not received any representations on this issue, we have recently announced changes to the non-dependant deductions scheme. These changes were included in the annual benefit uprating package which was announced to the House on 9 November. From April 2000, non-dependant deductions for Council Tax Benefit will increase by 7 per cent., which is in line with average council tax increases. The income thresholds at which the level of deductions are set will, as is customary, rise by the ROSSI index (1.6 per cent.).

Information Technology Services Agency

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what conditions he has identified as reasonable cause to terminate outsourcing contracts for the Information Technology Services Agency in terms of (a) cost, (b) delay and (c) failure to meet operational needs. [103623]

Angela Eagle: The Department is in detailed discussions and negotiations with its preferred IT supplier, Affinity. This work will not be complete before February and it is not until then that the detail of the contracts, in respect of termination, will have been finalised.

We intend to make sure that sufficient contractual safeguards are in place in the event that the service provider fails to meet the contractual service requirements. Termination is one of the safeguards under discussion.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he next plans to meet trade union side representatives to discuss plans for outsourcing at the Information Technology Services Agency. [103624]

Angela Eagle: The Department has met with representatives from the Trade Union Side (TUS) at both Agency and Departmental level since the initial announcement regarding the future IS/IT Strategy for the Department. I also met with representatives of Departmental and Agency TUS on 25 November to discuss their concerns regarding the decision to outsource.

Regular meetings between the Agency and the local TUS are taking place and a schedule of meetings, up to the end of March, has been agreed. A consultation framework has also been agreed between ITSA and TUS.

The working relationship with the TUS in ITSA and consultation process is well established. We are being kept informed of all significant outcomes of meetings with TUS. We have no current plans to have further meetings with the TUS on this matter.

Appeal Tribunals

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what remuneration, pensions and allowances are paid by his Department to persons who are appointed under the Social Security Act 1998 to act as members of an appeal tribunal; and if he will make a statement. [103731]

Angela Eagle: My right hon. and noble Friend The Lord Chancellor has set up a panel of persons to act as members of appeal tribunals and has made all appointments to it. The panel has 67 full-time members (excluding the President of appeal tribunals), all of whom are legally qualified. There are 1,971 part-time members with legal, medical and financial qualifications and with experience of dealing with the needs of disabled persons.

Full-time panel members are salary paid. The average annual salaries at November 1999 were £99,022 for panel members heading the six regions within the Appeals Service and £83,146 for the remaining full-time members. Travelling and, where applicable, subsistence allowances are also payable to full-time panel members where they are required to attend a tribunal hearing away from their normal venue.

As judicial appointments, full-time panel members belong to the Judicial Pensions Scheme but some have elected to have their pension benefits paid by analogy with the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme.

Part-time panel members are paid on a daily or sessional (half day) basis. The current rate of fees is set out in the following table:

£

	Fee per session	per day	Preparation fee[1]
Legally qualified	138.50	277.00	[2]30.00 [3]60.00
Medically qualified (non-specialist)	103.00	206.00	—
Medically qualified (specialist)	126.00	252.00	[2]27.00 [3]54.00
Financially qualified	118.50	237.00	—
Experience of disability	63.50	127.00	—

[1] Preparation fees are payable to legally qualified panel members and medical specialists who hear appeals relating to Industrial Injuries Scheme benefits, Severe Disablement Allowance and Vaccine Damage

[2] Per session

[3] Per day

Pensions are not payable to part-time panel members, but they may claim travel expenses for journeys between their home and tribunal venues. Where applicable, subsistence allowance is also payable.

Other fees and allowances payable include training fees, lengthy attendance fees and fees for sessions which are cancelled.

Benefits (Scotland)

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Scotland, under the age of 18 years, are in receipt of (a) Income Support, (b) Housing Benefit, (c) Jobseeker's Allowance and (d) Lone Parent Benefit as part of Child Benefit. [103866]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Number of people under 18 in Scotland who receive Income Support, Housing Benefit, Jobseeker's Allowance and Lone Parent Benefit as part of Child Benefit

Benefit type	Claimants aged 16 and 17
Income Support (August 1999)	2,100
Housing Benefit (May 1998)	[1]700
Jobseeker's Allowance (August 1999)	600
Lone parent addition as part of Child Benefit (August 1999)	700

[1] The Housing Benefit figure is based on a 1 per cent. sample and therefore subject to a high degree of sampling error. For example, the estimate of 700 could lie within the range of approximately 200 to 1,200.

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. Income Support, Jobseeker's Allowance and Child Benefit figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample and as such subject to a degree of sampling error.
3. Precise figures cannot be provided because the figures have been extrapolated from small samples and will therefore be subject to a high degree of sampling error.

Sources:

Income Support Statistics Quarterly Enquiry, August 1999—5 per cent.
Jobseeker's Allowance Statistics Quarterly Enquiry, August 1999—5 per cent.
Housing Benefit Management Information System, annual 1 per cent. inquiries taken on the second Thursday of May 1998.
Child Benefit Computer System—5 per cent. sample.

Invalid Care Allowance (Scotland)

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people in Scotland have become ineligible for invalid care allowance on the grounds of age in each of the last five years; [103865]

(2) how many people in Scotland have received invalid care allowance in each year since 1991. [103759]

Mr. Bayley: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what advice is given to assessors and adjudicators on applications for Disability Living Allowance on the mobility and care needs of those suffering from achondroplasia; [103642]

(2) what account is taken of the needs of persons suffering from achondroplasia in framing criteria for Disability Living Allowance. [103641]

Mr. Bayley: Entitlement to Disability Living Allowance (DLA) depends on the extent to which a severely disabled person needs help with personal care, requires supervision or has difficulty getting around. People with achondroplasia have access to DLA in the same way as other severely disabled people.

Guidance on the likely effects of a large range of disabling conditions is contained in the Disability Handbook issued to all decision makers. The Disability Living Allowance Advisory Board provides decision makers with regular updates and information on other conditions, to be used in conjunction with the Handbook. Advice, in this form, on the likely effects of achondroplasia and associated complications, was issued in August 1995.

In addition to the training and written guidance that decision makers receive, they also have access to advice from doctors, if they need further information relating to any medical condition or combination of conditions.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security after what period data about payments made by absent parents is routinely erased from CSA records. [103116]

Angela Eagle: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Richard Livsey, dated 23 December 1999:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency.

The account history information on the CSA computer system is subject to an archiving process. This process examines account transactions that have reached a completed status ie. for a given charge there is a receipt and an associated payment out. Once these completed transactions are 365 days old they are marked as eligible for archiving and removed from the online system to the archive database.

Data that is held in the archive database is available for retrieval as a hard copy report. There is currently no processing which deletes this data from the system archive database.

The CSA business requirement in respect of deletion of financial data states that the information must be retained for the current financial year and the succeeding six. As CSA initial action only commenced in June 1993 the Agency does not have any financial data that has surpassed this age.

The Agency intends to examine the need to delete archived data next year however, any data removed will be subject to the appropriate business rules as noted above.

I hope this is helpful.

Basic State Pension

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the value of the basic state pension for (a) single pensioners and (b) pensioner couples, for each year between November 1979 and April 2000; and what it would have been if it had been uprated in line with the higher in each year of average earnings or prices. [103956]

Mr. Rooker: The information is in the table.

£ per week

Uprating date	Single pensioner actual rates	Single pensioner increased by higher of earnings or prices	Pensioner couple actual rates	Pensioner couple increased by higher of earnings or prices
November 1979	23.30	23.30	37.30	37.30
November 1980	27.15	27.60	43.45	44.20
November 1981	29.60	30.90	47.35	49.50
November 1982	32.85	33.50	52.55	53.65
November 1983	34.05	36.40	54.50	58.30
November 1984	35.80	38.25	57.30	61.25
November 1985	38.30	41.60	61.30	66.60
July 1986	38.70	43.45	61.95	69.60
April 1987	39.50	45.90	63.25	73.50
April 1988	41.15	49.50	65.90	79.25
April 1989	43.60	53.85	69.80	86.20
April 1990	46.90	59.05	75.10	94.55
April 1991	52.00	65.50	83.25	104.85
April 1992	54.15	70.50	86.70	112.85
April 1993	56.10	73.90	89.80	118.30
April 1994	57.60	76.25	92.10	121.95
April 1995	58.85	78.85	94.10	126.10
April 1996	61.15	81.95	97.75	131.05
April 1997	62.45	85.40	99.80	136.55
April 1998	64.70	88.90	103.40	142.15
April 1999	66.75	93.25	106.70	149.10
April 2000	67.50	97.45	107.90	155.80

Notes:

1. The Retail Price Index (all items) has been used as published by the Office for National Statistics.
2. Average Earnings Index Whole Economy (Non Seasonally Adjusted) as published by the Office for National Statistics.
3. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 5p at each uprating.
4. From April 1994 the basic rate of retirement pension has been increased by 50p on a single person and 20p on a pensioner couple to reflect VAT on fuel.
5. The figures for November 1979 to November 1982 have been calculated using actual increases in Retail Prices Index rather than forecast increases.

Opportunity for All

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each of the 32 indicators in Opportunity for All which of the other indicators and targets are Opportunity for All targets. [103484]

Mr. Rooker: We placed further information on the indicators of success in the Library of the House on 21 September to coincide with the publication of "Opportunity for All". There are no specific "Opportunity for All" targets. The paper placed in the Library shows where there is a corresponding Government target for each of the 32 indicators.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what baseline information has been developed for those indicators without baseline data in Opportunity for All. [103714]

Mr. Rooker: We are currently developing the baselines for those indicators without baseline information and will report on their development in the second annual report on the Government's Strategy for Tackling Poverty and Social Exclusion.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reason men aged 60 to 65 years are entitled to receive the winter fuel bonus if they are claiming Jobseeker's Allowance or Income Support. [103486]

Angela Eagle: Those men aged 60 or over in receipt of Income Support or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance which includes a pensioner premium have been eligible for winter fuel payments since the scheme began. They are among the poorest elderly people and as such we decided that they should be eligible for this help.

We have announced that winter fuel payments will be extended to everyone aged 60 and over from next winter. The payments will be backdated to the start of the scheme.

Child Benefits

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total allocation for his Department in 1996–97 and projected for 1999–2000 on child benefits. [102943]

Angela Eagle: Expenditure on Child Benefits for the financial year 1996–97 amounted to £6,941 million. It is estimated that expenditure for 1999–2000 will reach £8,286 million.

Note:

1. Figure for 1996–97 includes One Parent Benefit (£317 million).
2. Figure for 1999–2000 is planned expenditure and it includes Lone Parent Addition of £128 million.

Source:

Departmental Report

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what records his Department holds for current recipients of Invalid Care Allowance on the duration of their claim. [104142]

Mr. Bayley: The information is in the table.

Recipients of Invalid Care Allowance (ICA) as at 21 July 1999

	Number of carers	Percentage of total recipients
Less than 1 year	64,486	17.2
1 to 2 years	61,302	16.4
2 to 5 years	127,403	34.1
5 to 10 years	88,234	23.6
Over 10 years	32,594	8.7
Total	374,019	100

Source:
ICA Unit, 100 per cent. count

Child Support

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list each of the categories of family that will be worse off as a result of the child support measures contained in the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill; if he will list in each case the number of (a) families and (b) children so affected; and if he will estimate the average loss for each group. [104141]

Angela Eagle: The impact of the child support reforms will depend on a number of different factors, including the level of child support liability, whether this liability is being paid and whether the parent with care is on benefit. Over one million children will benefit from the reforms. However, in order to forecast which individual families are likely to be better or worse off as a result of the changes, we would need to establish the extent to which the non-resident parent is compliant now and estimate future compliance. We have not made such estimates; these could be provided only at disproportionate cost and we are not confident that the results would be reliable.

It is inevitable that there will be differences in liability between the current and the new schemes. Under the new scheme we will get more parents paying more of what is due for their children. Payments of maintenance are already fully ignored in Working Families Tax Credit. Parents with care on Income Support will see the benefit of maintenance for the first time. They will gain up to £10 a week through the introduction of the new child maintenance premium. The payment of regular, reliable maintenance will also form a foundation on which parents with care can consider options for work.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the likely completion date of the computer system being prepared for the Child Support Agency; and if it is his policy not to implement the new maintenance formula contained in the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill until that computer system is in place. [104139]

Angela Eagle: We have always made clear that we intend to introduce the new child support system as soon as possible, but that will not be before the end of 2001 at the earliest. We are determined not to repeat the failures of the current system by introducing reforms too quickly or before new IT systems are ready.

State Second Pension

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate, for each of the 10 financial years starting from 2003–04, (a) expenditure on SERPS if the state second pension were not to be introduced, (b) expenditure on SERPS if the state second pension were to be introduced, (c) expenditure on the state second pension, assuming implementation in 2003–04 and a move to a flat rate scheme in 2008–09 and (d) the additional cost of national insurance rebates to those earning less than £9,000 per annum on each of the two alternative regimes proposed in his recent consultation document. [104140]

Mr. Rooker: The information is contained in the following tables. It is based on the assumptions that the State Second Pension will be introduced in April 2002 and that it will move to a flat-rate scheme in 2006–07 (five years after Stakeholder Pension Schemes are introduced). Costings based on introduction of the State Second Pension in April 2003 and a move to a flat-rate scheme in 2008–09 are not available at this time.

All figures are expressed in 1999–2000 price terms and are rounded to the nearest £0.1 billion. The Low Earnings Threshold in State Second Pension is set at £9,500 pa for that year.

Expenditure on SERPS if the State Second Pension were not introduced

	£ billion
2002–03	5.8
2003–04	6.2
2004–05	6.6
2005–06	7.0
2006–07	7.4
2007–08	7.8
2008–09	8.2
2009–10	8.6
2010–11	8.9
2011–12	9.2

Expenditure on SERPS if the State Second Pension were to be introduced in April 2002

	£ billion
2002–03	5.7
2003–04	6.2
2004–05	6.6
2005–06	7.0
2006–07	7.3
2007–08	7.7
2008–09	8.0
2009–10	8.3
2010–11	8.6
2011–12	8.8

Expenditure on the State Second Pension, if introduced in April 2002 and followed by a move to a flat-rate scheme in 2006–07

	£ billion
2002–03	0
2003–04	0
2004–05	0
2005–06	0.1
2006–07	0.2
2007–08	0.3
2008–09	0.5
2009–10	0.6
2010–11	0.8
2011–12	1.0

The additional cost of national insurance rebates to those earning less than £9,500 pa based on the first approach contained in the recent consultation document The Structure of Rebates for the State Second Pension

	£ billion
2002–03	0.1
2003–04	0.2
2004–05	0.2
2005–06	0.2
2006–07	0.3
2007–08	0.3
2008–09	0.3
2009–10	0.3
2010–11	0.3
2011–12	0.3

Note:
These extra rebates are for those contracted-out of the State Second Pension via Contracted-Out Salary Related schemes, Contracted-Out Money Purchase schemes and Appropriate Personal Pension schemes. The figures do not include additional rebates paid to people earning between £9,500 and £21,600

The additional cost of national insurance rebates to those earning less than £9,500 pa based on the second approach contained in the consultation document

	£ billion
2002–03	0
2003–04	0.1
2004–05	0.1
2005–06	0.1
2006–07	0.1
2007–08	0.1
2008–09	0.2
2009–10	0.2
2010–11	0.2
2011–12	0.2

Note:
These extra rebates are for those contracted-out of the State Second Pension via Appropriate Personal Pension schemes. The figures do not include additional rebates paid to people earning between £9,500 and £21,600 between £9,500 and £21,600

Stakeholder Pensions

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made in developing proposals for stakeholder pensions. [104429]

Mr. Darling: Stakeholder pensions are intended to fill the gap for the many people who can afford to save for their retirement but do not currently have a suitable means of doing so. Following passage of the Welfare Reform and Pensions Act 1999, which sets the framework for stakeholder schemes, and extensive consultation on the detailed arrangements, we have now made decisions in a number of key areas. I am placing in the Library the Government's response to the consultation. The paper, "Stakeholder Pensions—Outcome of the Consultation" is also available in the Vote Office. The main points are:

Schemes will only be able to charge in one way, on the value of the member's fund, and will not be allowed to charge more than 1 per cent. a year. No extra charges can be made if the member stops paying in, or wishes to transfer to another scheme.

Schemes will accept any contributions of £20 or more.

Schemes must provide information and explanatory material to potential members, but will not be required to offer individual financial advice within the 1 per cent. charge. Schemes may provide individual advice within the charge limit if they wish, or charge a separate fee.

Schemes will be able to set up with a board of trustees, or can be run by an authorised stakeholder scheme manager.

Employers will generally be required to give access to a stakeholder scheme from October 2001, unless they already offer a suitable alternative. Employers with fewer than five staff will initially be exempt from this requirement, but the arrangement will be reviewed in three years' time. Employers who arrange group personal pensions and who make a contribution of at least 3 per cent. of earnings will also initially be exempt, subject to review after three years.

Existing rebates for Contracted-out Money Purchase Schemes and Appropriate Personal Pension schemes will apply to stakeholder pension schemes.

Specific requirements will be incorporated in secondary legislation, on which we shall consult in draft shortly.

BA Security and Investigation Service

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many staff BASIS have employed in each area for each of the last 12 months; [103482]

(2) what is the full complement of staff at each BASIS office and on 1 December how many of these posts were vacant; [103483]

(3) how many BASIS staff at each area office have been with BASIS for 12 months or more. [103485]

Mr. Rooker: The information is in the tables.

Number of staff BASIS have employed in each area for each of the last 12 months

	Business Development Team	Southern	Northern	National Intelligence
1998
December	33	144	83	28
1999
January	33	143	83	27
February	31	146	83	31
March	33	143	82	31
April	34	138	79	39
May	34	139	79	44
June	37	138	77	44
July	34	139	76	43
August	33	154	74	50
September	34	143	73	52
October	32	148	71	53
November	35	147	74	57

Numbers for the full complement of staff at each BASIS office and the number of vacancies

Office/Team	Full complement	Staff in post	Vacancies
Business Development Team (BDT):
BDT	34	35	0
Southern area:
Nottingham	19	17	2
Birmingham	19	17	2
Cardiff	19	15	4
London:
Team 1	21	21	0
Team 2	21	16	5
Team 3	21	14	7
Team 4	21	14	7
Team 5	21	15	6
Team 6	21	16	5

Numbers for the full complement of staff at each BASIS office and the number of vacancies

Office/Team	Full complement	Staff in post	Vacancies
Northern area:
Scotland	19	16	3
Newcastle	19	12	7
Leeds	19	18	1
Manchester	19	18	1
Liverpool	19	10	9
National Intelligence Unit:
Identity Fraud Management Unit	26	21	5
Financial Investigation Unit	5	3	2
Giro Validation	16	6	10
National Intelligence Unit	29	27	2
Totals	388	311	[1]78

[1] A further recruitment exercise was carried out throughout October and November 1999. The interviews will be taking place in the next few weeks with a view to filling the vacancies.

Numbers of BASIS staff at each area office who have been with BASIS for 12 months or more

Team	Number
Business Development Team	15
Southern	99
Northern	53
National Intelligence	15

DEFENCE

Written Questions

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many questions for written answer he replied to by means of a letter placed in the Library rather than by a substantive answer in the Official Report in (a) Session 1998–99, (b) Session 1997–98 and (c) Session 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [99840]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Out of a total of 2,351 Commons written questions tabled to Defence Ministers during Session 1998–99, our database records that 198 were answered by means of a letter placed in the Library rather than by a substantive reply in the Official Report. The database did not capture such information prior to the 1998–99 Session, and consequently it could only be provided at disproportionate cost for previous sessions.

Defence Housing Executive

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of developing the new national computer network within the Defence Housing Executive. [100288]

Mr. Kilfoyle: It is assumed that this question refers to Project DOMIS, the PFI procurement which is intended to replace the Defence Housing Executive's (DHE's) existing computer system to provide an enhanced housing service to members of the armed services and their families.

The system will link DHE's 202 offices throughout mainland UK and provide a modern, efficient housing allocation service together with improved management information.

The Project has not yet reached the stage of placing a contract. The costs to date of the in-house team and consultants who are developing the requirements amount to £2.1 million.

RN Vessels (UN Operations)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Royal Navy vessels have been involved in United Nations operations in the last two years; and how long was each operation. [101663]

Mr. Hoon: No Royal Navy vessels have operated directly under UN command in the last two years, but they have supported a number of UN mandated operations or enforced UN security resolutions.

HMS Glasgow joined Australian-led forces operating in support of the UN mandated International Force in East Timor (INTERFET) from 18–30 September 1999.

HMS Cumberland, Nottingham, Newcastle, Coventry, Birmingham and Exeter have participated in the Multinational force enforcing sanctions against Iraq under UN Security Council Resolution 665.

Humanitarian patrols of the Iraqi no-fly zones, in support of UN Security Council Resolution 688, have also been carried out by aircraft operating from HMS Invincible in February and March 1999. Aircraft operating from HMS Invincible who was replaced by HMS Illustrious also carried out patrols of the Iraqi no-fly zones over the period January to March 1998.

Air Sea Rescue Service

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the UK Air Sea Rescue Service. [101333]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 6 December 1999]: I can only comment upon the military Search and Rescue (SAR) contribution, as the overall responsibility for civil SAR rests with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Although the primary responsibility of the military SAR force is to rescue downed military aircrew, in peacetime the force also makes a significant contribution to rescuing civilians.

The Strategic Defence Review (SDR) confirmed that the operational side of the RAF SAR should be maintained as a military task, with the priority of rescuing service personnel in the United Kingdom and surrounding seas. The military SAR force continues to provide an unequalled service with a capability which is second to none.

The feasibility of contractorising the maintenance of SAR aircraft will be examined as part of the Sea King replacement strategy.

HMS Chatham

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of the refit of HMS Chatham; and if he will make a statement. [101670]

Mr. Spellar: Expenditure to date on HMS Chatham's refit is some £22 million, which includes an element for additional work which could not have been foreseen before the refit began. Final payment will be made on completion of the guarantee period, which expires in December 2000.

HMS Brave

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of HMS Brave being held in extended readiness. [101671]

Mr. Spellar: HMS Brave entered extended readiness in April 1999. Since then, £0.38 million has been spent in keeping her in this state. This figure includes the cost of preparations for extended readiness and the cost of the tow from Devonport to Portsmouth. The estimated cost to hold her in extended readiness for the next year will be a further £0.4 million.

Forces Legal Aid

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if (a) staff (i) in the NAAFI, (ii) in DERA and (iii) of civilian contractors and (b) their dependants are eligible for forces legal aid; [102585]

(2) for each of the three armed services, who is eligible for forces legal aid; and what are the criteria which must be met; [102587]

(3) what is the sum available this year for legal aid in respect of each armed service; and what sums will be available in the next three years to take account of proposed legislation in the Armed Forces Discipline Bill [Lords]; [102586]

(4) under what circumstances civilians are eligible for forces legal aid. [102588]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 13 December 1999]: Legal aid is available, from Service sources, for those who are to be tried by court-martial, who wish to appeal to the Courts-Martial Appeal Court, who are to be tried by a standing civilian court (the equivalent of a magistrates court which sits outside the UK), or who are to be tried by a criminal court outside the UK for an off-duty offence.

The criteria that must be met by anyone applying for Service legal aid are that they must be subject to Service law (that is, are bound by one of the three single Service Discipline Acts), and assistance must be in the interests of justice. Individuals will be required to show that they have insufficient means to obtain assistance without help from public funds (and, in the case of an incident abroad, that the host country has no equivalent scheme for non-nationals). Depending on their personal means and commitments, individuals will be required to provide a personal contribution. The MOD scheme broadly mirrors the criteria applied by the civilian legal aid authorities in England and Wales.

Those covered under the Service scheme are Service personnel in the UK and overseas, and attached civilians (including defence Agency personnel) and dependants abroad. However, there has been a long-standing policy that UK personnel employed abroad by a number of specified organisations, including the NAAFI, can make use of the Service legal aid scheme, subject to the funds being subsequently repaid. (It is a matter for the organisations concerned whether they or the individuals involved undertake the required reimbursement.) Civilian contractors, whether engaged either in work in the UK or abroad, are not eligible for Service legal aid as they are not subject to Service law.

The sums available this year for Service legal aid are £100,000 for the Royal Navy, £770,000 for the Army and £146,000 for the Royal Air Force.

The increase in Service legal aid as a result of the legislation proposed in the Armed Forces Discipline Bill will depend on the number and nature of cases handled.

Army Foundation College

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where the new Army Foundation College is to be based. [102579]

Mr. Spellar: At the present time no conclusions have been reached as to the site for the new Army Foundation College.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the site for the new Army Foundation College is designated (a) green field or (b) brown field. [102578]

Mr. Spellar: It has not yet been determined where the new Army Foundation College is to be and therefore the designation of its site is not yet known.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the conclusions of the value for money exercise conducted in determining the location of the new Army Foundation College. [102580]

Mr. Spellar: The information contained in the Investment Appraisals that have so far been undertaken in examination of the options for a second Army Foundation College will form the basis of advice to Ministers and are being withheld at present under Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies have spent on external consultants and advisers since May 1997. [102073]

Mr. Kilfoyle [holding answer 13 December 1999]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Principle Anti-air Missile Systems

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many medium-range Principle anti-air missile systems the United Kingdom has developed in the last three years. [103033]

Mr. Kilfoyle: One.

Troop Movements

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK troops will be transferred from East Timor to (a) Brunei and (b) the UK at the end of December. [103060]

Mr. Hoon: All UK troops, with the exception of two UN Monitoring Observers, returned from East Timor before the end of December. A total of 284 troops were transferred from East Timor, with 46 returning to the UK and 238 returning to Brunei. The withdrawal started on 8 December, following confirmation from the INTERFET Commander, Major-General Cosgrove, that their tasks were complete. The final contingent of Gurkhas arrived back in Brunei on 10 December and UK-based troops arrived home on 17 December.

Asymmetric Warfare

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received on the United Kingdom's asymmetric warfare; and if he will make a statement. [103032]

Mr. Spellar: My Department continually monitors and assesses threats to UK interests, whether they are conventional in nature or "asymmetric". The analysis influences our defence policy and planning to ensure that British defence capability is well placed to respond to the threats and opportunities we face now and may face in the future. The subject of asymmetric warfare is so broad as to appear frequently in representations and debates on defence and security policy.

DERA (PPP Proposals)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a list of the organisations and individuals who responded to the consultation document on the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency public private partnership proposals published by his Department in May. [103183]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I have today placed in the Library of the House a list showing all the non-Governmental organisations that have provided written responses to the DERA PPP consultation document. Some responses, for example from trade associations, represented a consolidated view from a number of organisations consulted as part of their own consultation process. Similarly, a number of organisations and individuals responded orally through participation in consultation events. For reasons of confidentiality, the list does not include the names of individuals who responded on a personal basis, either to the Ministry of Defence or through their Member of Parliament.

Gulf Veterans

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what meetings officials from the Gulf Veterans' Illnesses Unit were held with officials of the United States Department of Veteran Affairs between January and December 1998; (a) on what dates and (b) where each meeting took place; and for which section of the United States Department of Veteran Affairs the officials who attended each meeting worked. [103149]

Mr. Spellar: During 1998, officials from my Department's Gulf Veterans Illnesses Unit visited Washington DC on the following occasions: 16–18 February; 14–20 June; 26 September-3 October and 23–26 November. They would have met officials representing the US Department of Veterans Affairs on these occasions. In the time available, it has not proved possible to trace records of the meetings to establish in which sections of the Department of Veterans Affairs these officials worked. I will write to the hon. Gentleman if this information can be found.

In addition to the above, a member of the Gulf Veterans Illness Unit (GVIU) based in Washington DC maintains continuous dialogue with United States Department of Veterans Affairs colleagues.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times Ministers in his Department met members and officials on the United States Government between 2 May 1997 and 1 January 1998; on what dates and at which locations; and which (a) Ministers and (b) US counterparts and officials attended each meeting. [103181]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Between 2 May 1997 and 1 January 1998, MOD Ministers met US Government members and officials on the following occasions:

Date	Minister
For the Armed Forces
4 July 1997	The right hon. John Dalton, Secretary US Navy—in UK
15 October 1997	Dr. John Hamre, Under Secretary—in US
16 October 1997	The hon. Togo West, Secretary of the Army—in US
Defence Procurement
1 July 1997	Joe Reeder, US Secretary of State of the Navy—in UK
6 October 1997	The hon. John Dalton, Secretary of the Navy—in US
6 October 1997	Dr. John Hamre, Deputy Secretary of Defense—in US
8 October 1997	The hon. William Cohen, Secretary of Defense—in US

Full records of the officials present at these meetings are not kept.

Departmental Productivity

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he is taking to increase the productivity and reduce the running costs of his Department. [103847]

Mr. Spellar: Delivering efficient and modern public services is a key part of the Government's agenda for improving productivity. Greater efficiency is being sought within the public sector to ensure that the most effective results are obtained from available resources. The Ministry of Defence's (MOD) Public Service Agreement (PSA) sets out the objectives, key targets and resources for the MOD and the Armed Forces, and includes a range of measures to ensure that the budget allocated to defence purchases the maximum capability for the Armed Forces and fulfils the plans set out in the Strategic Defence Review.

The key measures from the PSA that will help raise the Department's productivity are shown below:

The MOD is committed to achieving efficiency savings of 3 per cent. a year (as a percentage of the operating costs efficiency baseline) for the period 1998–99 to 2001–02. In support of this, savings of at least £15 million a year are generated from ideas implemented through MOD's GEMS scheme, one of the most successful staff suggestion programmes in the UK.

The appointment of a Chief of Defence Logistics, followed by the creation of a unified organisation to provide logistic support to all three Services, will help to achieve a reduction in book value of non munitions stockholdings of £2.2 billion by April 2001.

The MOD is reforming its procurement organisation through the creation of the Defence Procurement Agency and implementation of the Smart Procurement Initiative. The DPA has been set a target to reduce its operating costs by 20 per cent. by 2001–02.

The Department is committed to slimming down its central headquarters organisation, which has already reduced by 30 per cent. since 1990; and to reducing the planned number of office buildings to be occupied to two (from 24 in 1990).

The Department is developing a strategy for better management and utilisation of the overall defence estate, including the realisation of gross receipts of more than £700 million from the sale of surplus property.

MOD will regularly and systematically review all services and activities not directly associated with front line forces over a five year period in line with Government policy, "Better Quality Services". The Department will pursue private sector involvement in MOD business, where it provides best value for money, through Public/Private Partnership initiatives.

The MOD is on track to meet the targets described above. The Defence White Paper 1999 (Cm 4446) and the Ministry of Defence Performance Report 1998–99 (Cm 4520), which were published on 20 December 1999, describe the progress that has been made in implementing the Strategic Defence Review and against the targets set in the MOD's PSA.

Departmental Employees (Early Retirement)

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many employees of his Department took early retirement packages and at what total cost, in the financial year 1996–97. [103362]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Early departure packages are available for staff over 50 years of age (classed as retirement) and under 50 years of age (classed as severance). The total number of early leavers, including voluntary and compulsory redundancies, caused by reductions and geographical relocations (but excluding Trading Fund Agencies) were 1,712 in Financial Year 1996–97. The total is broken down by category in the table.

Retirement category	Category sub-total	Total
Approved early retirement	—	109
Actuarially reduced retirement	—	11
Compulsory early retirement/Severance:
CER on Structural grounds	30	—
CER on Redundancy grounds	595	—
CES on Structural grounds	14	—
CES on Redundancy grounds	443	—
CER/CES total	—	1,082
Flexible early retirement/severance:
FER on Structural grounds	73	—
FER on Limited Postability	6	—
FES on Structural grounds	1	—
FES on Limited Postability	5	—
FER/FES total	—	85
Voluntary redundancy
Voluntary Redundancy (CER terms)	214	—
Voluntary Redundancy (CES terms)	211	—
Voluntary Redundancy total	—	425
Total		1,712

Financial Year 1996–97 represented the final round of the Department's "Options for Change" review and most of the early leavers left as a consequence of the review. The total cost to the Ministry of Defence in Financial Year 1996–97 was £61.181 million. This represents the cost of the initial and annual compensation, and any lump sum payments for retirements that took place in that year. The annual compensation payment for staff over 50 years of age at the point of leaving continues to be met by the MOD until individuals reach the minimum retirement age of 60 years.

Antonov 124–100

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what length of runway is required for the Antonov 124–100 when fully loaded. [103104]

Mr. Kilfoyle [holding answer 20 December 1999]: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Sir Robert Walmsley to Mr. Lindsay Hoyle, dated 10 January 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence in which you asked what length of runway is required for the Antonov AN 124–100 when fully loaded. This matter falls to me for answer within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

According to Antonov promotional literature, when fully loaded the An124–100 requires a runway length of 3,000 metres.

Territorial Army Land (Crosby)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what representations he has received from the Territorial Auxiliary and Volunteer Reserve Association in Hightown regarding the purchase of access land; [103748]

(2) if he will make a statement on the land owned and managed by the Territorial, Auxiliary and Volunteer Reserve Association in Hightown (Crosby), Merseyside. [103747]

Mr. Spellar: The Territorial Auxiliary and Volunteer Reserve's (TAVRA) rifle range at Altcar is accessed via a private road that passes through land that was sold in July 1998 to two parties. It has not been possible to reach an agreement to renew the right of way to the rifle range with one of the landowners. My Department is therefore considering options to resolve this difficulty. In the meantime, the rifle range is being accessed through a secondary entrance as a temporary measure.

Joint Rapid Reaction Force

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of the Joint Rapid Reaction Force Exercise in Oman, scheduled for October 2001, on (a) the timetable for a decision on the FTA programme and (b) the assessment of the merits of the A400M aircraft. [103110]

Mr. Kilfoyle [holding answer 20 December 1999]: We have always known that A400M would not be available in the short term and the Joint Rapid Reaction Force exercise in Oman in 2001 has not, therefore, been a factor in our assessment of the aircraft or of the FTA programme.

Gurkha Pensions

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has completed his examination of Gurkha pensions. [103638]

Mr. Spellar: The examination of Gurkha pensions and gratuities is now complete. Within the terms of the Tri-Partite Agreement (TPA) between India, Nepal and the UK Gurkha pensions will be increased to allow for a welfare related cash uplift to take account of Indian Government benefits in kind that will at least double the pension payments for all Gurkha pensioners. Increases will be introduced from 1 April 2000. Pension increases will continue to be paid immediately after 15 years service and, where appropriate, passed on to the widow and then a child up to the age of 25 years. Pensions will be reviewed in the normal way and will benefit from cost of living increases each year. The Nepalese Government have made representations throughout this examination and both the Nepalese and Indian Governments have been notified of the increases.

Sandhurst

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what percentage of officers accepted for training at Sandhurst Military College in each of the last five years received their secondary education in (a) independent and public schools and (b) maintained schools, broken down by company. [103871]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not available in the form requested. An estimated breakdown of the secondary education of British Officer Cadets at the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst for each of the past five financial years is as follows:

	Welbeck College		State schools		Independent schools		Overseas schools
Financial year of entry	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Total
1994–95	27	4.4	284	46.6	277	45.5	21	3.5	609
1995–96	23	3.6	332	51.7	273	42.5	14	2.2	642
1996–97	24	3.6	341	51.3	293	44.1	6	1.0	664
1997–98	26	4.4	299	50.2	259	43.4	12	2.0	596
1998–99	22	3.7	289	48.7	274	46.1	9	1.5	594

Welbeck College is the Army's 6th Form College. The majority of its students are from the State sector.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what percentage of officers accepted for training at Sandhurst Military College have been discharged for medical reasons before completing their training, broken down by company, in each of the last five years. [103870]

Mr. Spellar: The information is not available in the detail requested. The numbers of British Officer Cadets who have been medically discharged from the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst, in each of the last five calendar years, are as follows:

Calendar year	Numbers medically discharged	Total in training
1995	40 (6%)	686
1996	26 (4%)	642
1997	[1]22 (3%)	751
1998	[1]19 (3%)	663
1999	[1]6 (1%)	598

[1] There are a number of cadets who are still undergoing treatment/remedial training and who may yet be medically discharged

Gulf War (Friendly Fire)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities his Department provided for the US Army Depleted Uranium Assessment Unit to investigate the medical results and contamination data relating to British troops injured or killed by friendly fire in the Gulf conflict. [103654]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 21 December 1999]: None. The US Department of Defense informs us that there is no "US Army Depleted Uranium Assessment Unit". The Ministry of Defence is not aware of any "friendly fire" incidents during which British troops were injured or killed by depleted uranium-based ammunition during the Gulf conflict.

Unexploded Grenade (Falkirk)

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the incident on 15 December when schoolboys discovered a grenade near the Forth and Clyde Canal at Falkirk; and if he will make a statement about public safety in respect of other ammunition in that area. [103916]

Mr. Spellar: A World War 2 vintage No. 36 Mills bomb, common issue during that period, was discovered in the area of the Forth and Clyde Canal near Falkirk High School by pupils from the school on Wednesday 15 December 1999 following excavation work at the site. An Explosive Ordnance Disposal team from the Army was immediately called to the scene and successfully destroyed the device. There has been no recorded training with weapons previously in the vicinity of the school and it has not been possible to identify the reason for the grenade being there.

With respect to other arms and ammunition in the area, I can confirm that, wherever arms and ammunition are stored on an Army establishment, this is done in accordance with the appropriate regulations. These are written to ensure that arms and ammunition are secure at all times. I can assure you that the arrangements at the nearby Territorial Army Unit at Grangemouth (153 Workshop Coy REME (V)) are in accordance with these regulations.

Type 45 Destroyer

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the 12 Ship Programme for the Type 45 Destroyer will (a) start and (b) be completed. [103924]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Type 45 Destroyer programme is already under way and on 23 November 1999 BAE Systems was appointed as Prime Contractor and awarded a contract to complete the Preparation For Demonstration phase. As regards the delivery programme for the Type 45 warships, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 6 December 1999, Official Report, column 342W.

Horizon Project

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost was of UK involvement in the Horizon Project; and what the cost of withdrawing from the project was. [103925]

Mr. Kilfoyle: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir Robert Walmsley to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 10 January 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the cost of UK involvement in the tri-national Horizon Frigate Programme. This matter falls to me to answer within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

As was made clear in evidence to the House of Commons Defence Committee on 16 June 1999, the UK did not withdraw from Horizon. The three countries involved agreed not to proceed to the next phase. Phase 1 of the Horizon Programme (project Definition and Initial Design) was subsequently completed at the end of October 1999. It was also mentioned in evidence that about £100M that had been spent on Horizon (including spend on NFR90 and other studies). This figure covered UK expenditure on the Programme up to 31 March 1999 and I expect the final amount to be under £120M.

Until the contract for the Demonstration and First of Class Phase of the Programme is placed, I am unable to say precisely how much of the investment in Horizon will translate into the national Type 45 programme but I can confirm that our plans for the Type 45 Destroyer build on the work accomplished in the design definition phase of the Horizon Programme and the Prime Contractor has indicated that he will pull through some 70% of the Horizon output (Horizon costs were shared equally between the three nations).

Nancekuke Base, Cornwall

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what substances are currently stored at the Nancekuke military base in Cornwall. [103942]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Substances currently stored at the former Chemical Defence Establishment Nancekuke, now RAF Portreath, are limited to Petroleum Oils and Lubricants which support the RAF role, together with some agricultural chemicals owned and used by a tenant farmer.

Staff Recruitment

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy for agencies acting on behalf of his Department to recruit senior staff on the basis of open competition only; and if he will make a statement. [103902]

Mr. Kilfoyle: My Department currently has 42 agencies. The Chief Executives of 28 of these have already been or will, next time around, be appointed following an open competition. The remaining 14 Chief Executives are all military officers.

In addition, a number of Chief Executives have chosen to recruit senior staff at Senior Civil Service, grade 6 and grade 7 levels by open competition on fixed term appointments, within the authority laid out in their Agency Framework Documents.

In line with Sir Richard Wilson's recent report to the Prime Minister on Civil Service Reform, my Department has a target over the next five years to achieve a 10 per cent. year-on-year increase in open competitions for middle and senior managers across the Department, particularly aimed at bringing in new thinking and people who have skills that are currently in short supply.

Territorial Army

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the total cost of full-time permanent staff instructors in each of the last three years in the Territorial Army; [103930]

(2) what the total cost is of full-time personnel commanding Territorial Army units in the current financial year. [103928]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Kosovo

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Temporary Field Accommodation has been fully deployed in Kosovo; and if he will make a statement. [103763]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 21 December 1999]: It is currently envisaged that the Temporary Field Accommodation (TFA) project in Kosovo will be completed in February 2000.

Faslane Shiplift

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 19 June the shiplift at Faslane has been used by (a) submarines and (b) surface ships; and if he will make a statement. [103411]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 21 December 1999]: Since 19 June 1999, the Shiplift at HM Naval Base Clyde has been used for the operational dockings of one surface ship (Minor War Vessel) from 22 June to 2 July, and one submarine (SSBN) from 7 July to 8 August. The facility has been non-operational since 1 September while essential Y2K compliance work was undertaken on the lift control and protection system. The replacement system completed the commissioning phase on 17 December.

Broadsword

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Salisbury of 29 November 1999, Official Report, column 4W, on the Territorial Army Joint Services Adventure Sail Training Vessel Broadsword, if he will list each repair and its cost since the refit in May 1998. [103406]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 21 December 1999]: The Joint Services Adventure Sail Training Vessel Broadsword returned from the Transglobe Inter-Service global yacht race on 10 December. The original estimate for likely repair work associated with this race was £14,000. Since its refit, including the period of the race, a total of £32,844 has been spent on repairs, as shown in the following table:

£

Country of repair/main areas of repair	Cost of repair
United Kingdom
Deck, generator and communication equipment	2,572
Antigua
Battery charger unit, electrical repairs, generator and main engine	2,224
Panama
Main engine	1,240
Acapulco
Minor Miscellaneous items	200
Honolulu
Mast, communication equipment, generator, water system and structural	6,714
Hong Kong
Sail	2,172
Singapore
Batteries, sails, electrics, general repairs	4,908
Capetown
Installation of gas system, sails, electrics, general repairs	6,691
Rio de Janeiro
Main engine, fresh water tanks	4,916
Antigua
Generator, main engine	507
Azores
Water tank, batter charger and generator	[1]700

[1] Estimated

Training Fleet

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in respect of the Joint Services Adventure Sail Training Fleet (a) what have been the running costs in each of the past five years, (b) what is (i) the current market value and (ii) the replacement cost of each vessel in the fleet and (c) if he will consider replacing the fleet with a PPP arrangement with leased yachts and instructors. [103409]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 21 December 1999]: The running costs for the Joint Services Adventure Sail Training Fleet in each of the past five years are:

Year	£ million
1994–95	0.890
1995–96	0.920
1996–97	1.017
1997–98	0.996
1998–99	1.238

These costs include low level and routine maintenance and repair. Higher level upkeep (levels 3 and 4 maintenance) figures for the previous three years are:

Year	£000
1996–97	[1]383
1997–98	[2]756
1998–99	[2]654

[1] Upkeep only
[2] Upkeep and repair

The figures for 1997–98 and 1998–99 include the cost of upkeep (major refit) work to comply with the Maritime and Coastguard Agency Code of Practice for Sail Training Vessels. Costs for earlier years can be provided only at disproportionate effort since funding specific to JSASTC can be isolated only by examining all bills received for minor warship repair work in this period.

The training fleet currently operates 14 × Victoria 34 and 8 × Nicholson 55 sail training craft. The market value of each vessel will vary according to individual condition and the availability of similar vessels also on the market. The current market value for the Victoria 34s is estimated at £60,000 and £100,000 for the Nicholson 55s.

Replacement costs are estimated to be £150,000 for a Victoria 34 and £800,000 for a Nicholson 55. These are current market prices (new) and include VAT. No replacements are included in the current procurement programme.

We have no plans at present to replace the fleet with a PPP arrangement.

Correspondence

Sir Peter Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he proposes to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Fareham to his predecessor, dated 24 February, about ensuring secure future supplies of ammunition for British forces. [104316]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Royal Navy Vessels (Asbestos)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's annual budget is for removal of asbestos from Royal Navy vessels. [104319]

Mr. Spellar: There is no specific annual budget for the removal of asbestos from Royal Navy vessels as it is planned to undertake the majority of this work during scheduled maintenance periods and refits. However, it is estimated that the total cost of the programme to eliminate asbestos, wherever practicable, will be about £7.5 million. This includes the cost of replacement stocks.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information senior officers on Trident submarines are given on the specific yields and likely targets of the missiles they are responsible for. [104077]

Mr. Hoon: The Trident missiles on which our nuclear deterrent is based have been de-targeted since 1994. In the circumstances of our having to use our nuclear weapons,

HOUSE OF COMMONS PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES (HANSARD) ● 1999-2000
CHADWYCK-HEALEY Vol. 342 cols. W95 - 284 10 - 20 January 2000

members of the patrolling submarine crew would be provided with the information they need to discharge their duties. I am withholding the details of this information under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information relating to defence, security and international relations.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had, and with whom, on the application of international humanitarian law to the use of Trident. [104072]

Mr. Hoon: I have had no specific discussions on the application of international humanitarian law to the use of Trident. The United Kingdom's minimum nuclear deterrent is consistent with international law.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the application of the Nuremberg Principles to military personnel ordered to use, or to threaten the use of, nuclear weapons; [104075]

(2) what measures he has taken to make military personnel who operate Trident aware of their obligations under international law since the International Court of Justice delivered its Advisory Opinion on nuclear weapons; [104076]

(3) how a member of the armed services would obtain an account of the Government's submission to the International Court of Justice on the legality of its nuclear deterrence policy; and if he will place a copy of the submission in the Library. [104078]

Mr. Hoon: The United Kingdom's minimum nuclear deterrent is consistent with international law. It follows that UK military personnel engaged in the operation or support of Trident are acting legally under the Nuremberg Principals. This has been made clear down the chain of command, and members of the Armed Services who seek further guidance on these issues can in the first instance do so through their chain of command.

Guidance on the Law of Armed Conflict for the Armed Services is set out in the draft Joint Service Manual on the Law of Armed Conflict (Joint Service Publication 383) currently under preparation. We aim to publish this later this year, as we pledged at the 50th Anniversary Conference of the International Red Cross in November 1999. When it is published a copy will be placed in the Library of the House. The relevant section on Nuclear Weapons was reconfirmed following the 1996 Advisory Opinion of the International Court of Justice on the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons. It reads:

> "There is no specific rule of international law, express or implied, which prohibits the use of nuclear weapons. The legality of their use depends upon the application of the general rules of international law, including those regulating the inherent right of self defence and the conduct of hostilities. Those rules cannot be applied in isolation from any factual context to imply a prohibition of a general nature. Whether the use, or threatened use, of nuclear weapons in a particular case is lawful depends on all the circumstances. Nuclear weapons fall to be dealt with by reference to the same general principles as apply to conventional weapons. However, the new rules introduced in Additional Protocol I [to the Geneva Conventions] are not intended to have any effect on and do not regulate or prohibit the use of nuclear weapons."

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment his Department has carried out of the long-term effects of a 100 kiloton Trident on a military target; [104074]

(2) what assessment his Department has carried out of the effects of a 100 kiloton Trident warhead detonation on the civilian population living near military targets. [104073]

Mr. Hoon: The Trident missiles on which our nuclear deterrent is based have been de-targeted since 1994. Our judgment of the minimum level of deterrence required is supported by comprehensive computer modelling which enables us to assess the effects of nuclear detonations. A number of factors are taken into account in this assessment. As Lord Robertson made clear to my hon. Friend the Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 4 February 1998, Official Report, column 655W, these include the yield and design of the weapon used; the accuracy of the delivery system employed; the nature and construction of the target; the characteristics of the surrounding terrain; the height of the detonation; and geological and weather conditions. I am withholding information on UK nuclear warhead yield under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, relating to defence, security and international relations.

Storm Shadow Cruise Missile

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of developing the Royal Ordnance Augmented Charge for the UK's Storm Shadow Cruise Missile. [104111]

Mr. Kilfoyle: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir Robert Walmsley to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 10 January 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence which sought information on the cost of developing the Royal Ordnance Augmented Charge for the UK's Storm Shadow air launched stand-off missile. This matter falls for answer within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

The Augmented Charge was initially developed under private venture funding by Royal Ordnance. However, the adaption of this warhead for Storm Shadow is being undertaken as part of the Storm Shadow contract between ourselves and Matra BAe (Dynamics) UK Ltd. The Matra bid was submitted on a competitive basis, and we therefore have no visibility of the detailed cost breakdown of the warhead element.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Aircraft Carrier Group Deployment

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the operational reasons for cancelling a deployment by an aircraft carrier group to the USA and Caribbean from February to April 1999. [104153]

Mr. Spellar: HMS Invincible had been scheduled to participate in the US-led Joint Task Force Exercise in the western Atlantic between mid-February to early March 1999 but the deployment was cancelled. HMS Invincible was instead sent to the Gulf region on an operational deployment. The reason for deploying HMS Invincible to the Gulf at that time was announced to the House by the Secretary of State for Defence on 14 January 1999.

Although we were unable to send a carrier to the Joint Task Force Exercise, the Royal Navy still made a significant contribution to the exercise. Commander United Kingdom Task Group and his staff participated in the exercise and the ships HMS Montrose, HMS Marlborough, HMS Sutherland together with RFA Oakleaf also participated. HMS Norfolk also contributed to this exercise while assigned to NATO's Standing Naval Forces Atlantic.

STANOC Centre

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many personnel are assigned to the STANOC centre; on what date it was established; and from which subheads of which votes its funds are taken. [104318]

Mr. Spellar: The Army's Surveillance, Target Acquisition, Night Observation and Counter-Surveillance Centre (STANOC) was formed in 1971. The current establishment is two officers and four other ranks. The Centre is funded by the Adjutant General's Top Level Budget under the following Votes and subheads:

Vote 1

Army Manpower—subhead 1B1

Travel and Subsistence—subhead 1E1

Stationery—subhead 1L9

IT—subhead 1F5.

Minister for the Armed Forces (Speech)

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the speech given by the Minister for the Armed Forces on European Security and Defence to the French German UK Seminar at the Institut de Haute Education de la Defense Nationale (IHEDN), Paris, on 30 November. [104162]

Mr. Spellar: I am grateful for the hon. Member's interest in the recent seminar held at the Institute de Haute Education de la Defense Nationale (IHEDN) in Paris, which formed part of our "Outreach" programme of bilateral defence assistance to Central and Eastern Europe and was organised jointly with the French and German governments. I am pleased to tell him that I have arranged for a copy of my speech to the seminar to be placed in the Library of the House.

HMS Westminster

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the withdrawal of HMS Westminster from Flotex and the In Year Budget Management Measure. [104152]

Mr. Spellar: The withdrawal of HMS Westminster from Flotex 99 needs to be set in the context of a very busy operational year for the Royal Navy and a sharp increase in fuel prices. This has resulted in some adjustment of planned activities as part of normal cash management action to ensure that the Fleet stays within its allocated budget this year.

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what data he has collated on the local environmental effects of the use of depleted uranium with respect to (a) human and (b) other life forms. [104263]

Mr. Spellar: The existing scientific literature on the possible hazards of depleted uranium (DU) is extensive. In 1993, the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's Radiation Protection Service, then the Defence Radiological Protection Service, published a summary report of its assessment of the radiological and chemical hazards of DU. The report explained that there are two types of hazard posted by the use of DU: a radiation hazard, although DU is a low specific activity material (as defined by the International Atomic Energy Agency); and a chemical toxicity hazard, which is similar to that posed by other heavy metals, such as lead.

A Ministry of Defence paper entitled "Testing for the presence of depleted uranium in UK veterans of the Gulf conflict: The Current Position" was published on 19 March 1999. This paper describes the scenarios in which UK troops may have been exposed to DU in the Gulf and outlines the possible health effects of exposures.

In December 1993, the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency commissioned the independent environmental consultants W. S. Atkins to conduct an environmental impact assessment of DU firings on Ministry of Defence ranges in the UK. The consultants' report was published in 1995 and concluded that the radiation doses to members of the public and the associated risks from exposure to DU released in the environment, were extremely low. These conclusions were, and continue to be, sustained by comprehensive monitoring programmes at both sites.

In addition, the joint UN Environment Programme/UN Commission on Human Settlements issued its report "The Kosovo Consequences for Environment" on 5 October 1999. The report assessed the potential effects on human health and the environment arising from the possible use of depleted uranium during the 1999 Kosovo conflict.

Copies of all of these documents have been placed in the Library of the House.

Finally, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to my hon. Friend the Member for Barnsley, West and Penistone (Mr. Clapham) on 2 November 1999, Official Report, column 89W, concerning a further review by the Ministry of Defence on the health effects of DU.

Chinook Crash

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the recommendations made by the Air Accidents Investigation Branch following the accident involving RAF Chinook 2D576 in 1994; and if he will make a statement regarding the implementation of these recommendations. [104051]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

GM Foods

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the research work funded by his Department associated with the farm-scale trials of GM crops. [101750]

Ms Quin [holding answer 9 December 1999]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 14 December 1999, Official Report, columns 184–85W, where this project is listed in the table under code RG0116.

CAP Payments (Worcestershire)

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the total value to Worcestershire farmers of CAP payments for (a) the 1998 calendar year and (b) the 1998–99 financial year. [103028]

Ms Quin: The total value of all CAP payments (including the Agri-Environment Schemes) to farmers in Worcestershire are estimated to be of the order of £22.5 million in the 1998 calendar/financial year. The differential between the calendar year and financial year would be small since three quarters of the payments relate to Arable Aid payments which are made between October and the end of December.

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farms in Worcestershire received CAP payments in the (a) 1998 calendar year and (b) 1998–99 financial year. [103174]

Ms Quin: The number of farms receiving CAP payments in the 1998 calendar year in Worcestershire was approximately 1,390. Figures for the financial year are not recorded, but the figures would be expected to be similar.

Egg Producers

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what financial assistance from the Government are available to British egg producers to market their products (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in the rest of the EU; and if he will make a statement. [103303]

Ms Quin: My right hon. Friend announced in September a package of aid which included £1 million to help primary producers in England improve their marketing, levels of collaboration and competitiveness. This commitment was implemented through the launch on 11 October of the Agriculture Development Scheme 1999, a non-capital support measure open to all sectors of the agri-food industry, including egg producers.

By the deadline for applications of 30 November, 160 applications, seeking £8.1 million in grant, had been received, including several from the egg sector. In light of this level of interest my right hon. Friend announced on 13 December that the budget for the scheme would be doubled to £2 million, if the quality of the applications supported the increase. We aim to announce decisions over the award of grant early next February.

Egg producers will also have the opportunity to benefit from the allocation of more than £40 million over the next seven years to support better marketing and processing of agricultural products, under the EU Rural Development Regulation.

Chicken Imports

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of animal welfare standards among chicken producers who supply the UK from (a) Thailand, (b) Brazil and (c) other countries. [103290]

Mr. Morley: Under Article 8 of Directive 98/58/EC the EU Commission is charged with producing a report comparing animal welfare conditions in the EU with those in non-member countries supplying the Community.

Bovine Somatotropin

Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the moratorium on the use of BST in (a) the UK and (b) the EU; and if he will make a statement. [102762]

Ms Quin: A report by the Government's independent scientific advisory body, the Veterinary Products Committee (VPC), was published on 11 October and a copy of the report was placed in the Library of the House. We accepted the VPC's advice to support a continuation of the moratorium or equivalent measures which prohibit the use of recombinant BST. The European Commission has proposed a ban on the use of the recombinant BST with effect from 1 January 2000. The Government supports that proposal.

Pet Passports

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, in relation to the pet passport scheme, the French Government have agreed to his Department's officials carrying out inspections in French ports. [102713]

Ms Quin: Discussions regarding arrangements for the surveillance of carrier activities participating in the pet passport pilot scheme to be introduced next year are still continuing.

Departmental Employees (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of the total workforce in his Department is of ethnic minority origin; and what steps he is taking to encourage the employment of people from the ethnic minorities in his Department. [102604]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 13 December 1999]: As at 1 April 1999, 6.3 per cent. of permanent staff in core MAFF (4.4 per cent. of staff in MAFF including its Agencies) had declared themselves to be of ethnic minority origin.

We encourage the employment of people of ethnic minority origin by a wide range of measures including the use of ethnic minority media as a means of advertising vacancies and attending a number of careers fairs aimed specifically at ethnic minority audiences. We have also recently reviewed and re-issued our Outreach Guidance.

Fish Stocks

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Ministry has made of the reason for the decline in fishing stocks in the last three years by (a) stock and (b) area. [103666]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 December 1999]: Not all fish stocks have declined in the past few years. For example, the large western mackerel stock has increased since 1994, and the Norwegian spring-spawning herring has doubled in size over the same period and has also extended its distribution.

Most of the whitefish stocks however remain at or near historically low levels. This is associated with high levels of fishing mortality. In the North Sea, the recent assessments indicate some reduction of fishing mortality on roundfish, which will help to restore those stocks.

All fish stocks are subject to great variations in the numbers of young produced each year. This variation is caused by changes in the size of the mature adult stock and annual changes in the environment being more or less favourable to the survival of larval fish. So even though stocks may be at generally low levels good or bad recruitment of young fish will cause the stocks to increase or decrease over periods of a few years.

Against this background of variation, some sea areas have experienced a general warming. While this may be favourable for some stocks, such as sole, it has apparently adversely affected the production of young cod, especially in the North Sea and in the Irish Sea.

Fisherman (Prosecutions)

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many prosecutions there have been of fishermen landing at United Kingdom ports by (a) area, (b) weight of fish and (c) value of fish landed in each of the last five years. [103663]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 December 1999]: Offences may be committed by fishermen at sea and on landing into the United Kingdom ports and abroad. Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Designated Fishing Ports

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the additional cost to his Ministry of operating the designated fishing ports scheme. [103665]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 December 1999]: The cost of operating the designated fishing ports scheme in respect of whitefish and shellfish landings made by UK vessels over 20 metres has been contained within the existing resources for fisheries enforcement.

Fur Farming (Prohibition) Bill

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has (a) made to and (b) received from other European Governments about compatibility of the Fur Farming (Prohibition) Bill with the European Convention on Human Rights. [103553]

Mr. Morley: No such representations have been made or received.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set out the basis for his Department's statement on the compatibility of the Fur Farming (Prohibition) Bill with the European Convention on Human Rights; and if he will place the relevant documents in the Library. [103552]

Mr. Morley: The Government's view is that the Fur Farming (Prohibition) Bill is compatible with the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR). There are overriding moral arguments in favour of a ban and a general public interest in removing this particular source of livelihood. This has to be balanced against the interests of those whose source of livelihood is being removed and the Bill respects the ECHR by provision of a two to three year winding-down period, compensation for certain categories of loss, and the reference of disputes on compensation to arbitration or the Lands Tribunal. In the Government's view, the balance struck between the demands of the general interest in this matter and the interests of the individuals directly affected is a fair one.

Quota Allocations

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the Government's reply to the eighth report from the Agriculture Committee, Session 1998–99 on Sea Fishing (HC 141–1) page ix, if he will make a statement on the expression, "with fishermen's interests protected by the legal concept of legitimate expectation". [103157]

Mr. Morley: The rules under which quota allocations are made available to producer organisations and other groups within the fishing industry are the subject of annual consultation with industry representatives. Throughout the 1990s allocations have been linked to previous fishing activity. For most quota stocks, with the introduction of fixed quota allocations, this is now the catches made during the reference period 1994–96.

TREASURY

Objective 1 Funding

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the requirements for match public funds from his Department for the EU Objective 1 regions of (a) Cornwall and Scilly, (b) Merseyside and (c) South Yorkshire for each of the seven years of the programme. [104302]

Mr. Timms: Responsibility for identifying match funding is a matter for project applicants and for the partnerships in the regions concerned. This ensures local ownership and commitment to the projects.

There are numerous possible sources for match funding including local authorities, Government schemes, the voluntary sector and the private sector.

The regional Government Offices are best placed to advise the partnerships on the sources of Government Departments' funding which can be used to match Structural Funds. The Government are updating and improving guidance on match funding.

Queen Mother (Coin)

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans Her Majesty's Government have to issue a coin to commemorate the hundredth year of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth, The Queen Mother. [104427]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Her Majesty The Queen has been graciously pleased to approve my recommendation that a crown piece should be issued this year in celebration of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth The Queen Mother achieving her hundredth year. Collector versions of the coin will be available from early in the new year and the coin will also be available, later in the year, from banks and post offices at its face value of £5.

Census

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the draft Census Order for England and Wales will be laid before Parliament, if questions on religion, ethnic group and income are to be included in the proposed content of the Census; and if he will make a statement. [104428]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Draft Order in Council providing for a Census to be taken in England and Wales on Sunday 29 April 2001 has today been laid before Parliament. This Order specifies the persons by whom and with respect to whom returns are to be made and the topics on which questions are to be asked.

The Government's proposals for the 2001 census were published in a White Paper (Cm 4253) in March this year. All the topics that were then proposed for England and Wales are included in the draft Order with the exception of religion. A change to the Census Act 1920 is necessary to permit a question on religion to be asked. A Bill to amend the Census Act to this effect was introduced in the House of Lords on 16 December 1999. If this is passed in time it is planned to include a question in the 2001 Census.

A question on ethnic group is proposed in the Draft Census Order. The ethnic group question was one of the main successes of the 1991 Census, and the question for the forthcoming census has since been extensively researched and tested, both to meet users' requirements for additional information about people of mixed origin and sub-groups within the "White" population, particularly the "Irish", and to be as acceptable as possible to respondents. The new response categories are to provide optimum comparability with information from the 1991 Census question while, at the same time, attempting to improve response to the question among the many different ethnic minority communities.

Consultation with users about requirements for information from the census has indicated that there is widespread support for the inclusion of an income question from key Government Departments, local government and others. But the strength of such requirements must be balanced against the possible public disquiet about the acceptability of such a question in a compulsory Census, the doubts about the reliability of the information collected, and the availability of possible alternative sources of the information. The Draft Order for England and Wales therefore does not include an income question.

A copy of the 2001 Census Form will be included as part of the Census Regulations to be made following the Census Order.

As the Census is a devolved issue, similar arrangements are being made in Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Windfall Tax

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total value of receipts since May 1997 from the windfall tax on the privatised utilities. [104256]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by the former Financial Secretary my hon. Friend the Minister for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche), to my hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths) on 28 January 1999, Official Report, column 344W.

Red Diesel

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 433W, concerning diesel fuel, (103015), what guidance has been issued to road hauliers regarding the use of Norwegian diesel. [104145]

Mr. Timms: No specific guidance has been issued in respect of Norwegian diesel. Notice 75, 'Fuel for diesel vehicles', issued by Customs and Excise gives advice on what fuels can be legally used in a diesel-engined road vehicle. This notice is freely available from Excise and Inland Customs Advice Centres.

Art Sales

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the likely effect of the introduction of a pre-eminence standard for claims for the conditional exemption of works of art on the number of works being sold. [101854]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 7 December 1999]: None.

Departmental Productivity

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to increase the productivity and reduce the running costs of his Department. [103857]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Treasury's Public Service Agreement includes the following range of measures for increasing productivity within the Department, and hence saving running costs:

a programme for reviewing all services and activities systematically over five years under the Better Quality Services initiative announced in the Modernising Government White Paper. The Public Service Agreement commits the Treasury to completing 60 per cent. of reviews by March 2003.

an information strategy review, examining internal business processes and best working practices, and adoption of recommendations on better inter-departmental co-ordination.

a reduction in the number and length of unfilled vacancies.

a new robust system for recording sickness absence.

moving to electronic publishing of information material previously published on paper.

increasing the proportion of business undertaken electronically in accordance with Government targets.

- a review of the application of procurement techniques to expenditure, including electronic procurement of standard goods, paying suppliers electronically, and collaborating in joint procurement projects when they offer better value.

The Treasury's gross running costs provision for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 is set out in its Public Service Agreement. The productivity measures listed above will enable the Department to increase the quantity and quality of outputs delivered by its running costs expenditure over this period.

Gold Reserves

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the value of the gold held in the national reserves. [104260]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Table 2 of the Quarterly Report on UK Official Holdings of Foreign Currency and Gold for the period July to September 1999, published on 2 December 1999, provides a breakdown of the size and composition of the United Kingdom's reserve holdings, including gold.

Economic Policies

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, (1) pursuant to Cm 4181, page 115, No. xiv, what criteria he will use to determine whether high-growth business start-ups are successful; [104348]

(2) pursuant to Cm 4181, page 115, No. xi, how he will measure improvement in the value for money in public procurement; [104347]

(3) pursuant to Cm 4181, page 114, No. iii, by how much he aims to reduce the variability of the economic cycle, and on what measurement; [104322]

(4) pursuant to Cm 4181, page 115, No. viii, how the productivity of (a) the public services overall and (b) individual departments will be measured year on year; [104321]

(5) pursuant to Cm 4181, page 115, No. x, how he will measure the acceptance of the standard framework for public private partnership contracts; [104346]

(6) if he will make a statement on the UK's preparations for entering the euro, with particular reference to Treasury performance target xxxii in Cm 4181; [104350]

(7) what criteria he uses to define successful business start-ups, referred to in Cm 4181; [104279]

(8) how achievement of the Treasury performance targets numbered xvii, xx, xxvi and xxix to xxxi, set out in the Public Service Agreements, Cm 4181, will be judged. [104323]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information on how Departments' performances will be assessed against the targets set out in Cm 4181 was published in "The Government's measures of success Output and Performance Analysis" HM Treasury 31 March 1999. The document is also available on the Treasury's website.

Pensions Mis-selling

Mr. Andy King: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many claims arising from the mis-selling of pensions are outstanding; and what assessment he has made of the timescale for their resolution; [104314]

(2) how many claims arising from the mis-selling of pensions have been resolved to date; [104315]

(3) how many people have been affected by the mis-selling of pensions in the last 10 years. [104313]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The regulators split the industry's work on the personal pension mis-selling review into two phases. During phase 1 firms were required to address the most urgent cases, where for example pensioners had died, or retired, or were close to retirement. Phase 2—which began in 1999—addresses less urgent cases, mostly younger people.

The mis-selling of personal pensions took place during the period April 1998-June 1994 and the statistics given in this answer cover the mis-selling over that period. It is not practical to provide figures for the period from January 1990. The people affected by personal pension mis-selling are those who were mis-sold a pension and who were subsequently entitled to redress.

The phase 1 review has led to offers of redress to 410,000 people. About 17,000 phase 1 cases are outstanding. This represents about 2 per cent. of all the cases included in the phase 1 review. These are typically difficult cases or cases which have only recently been identified as proper to phase 1. The Financial Services Authority closely monitors the firms responsible for these outstanding phase 1 cases.

The total population to be examined under phase 2 is in excess of 800,000. About 114,000 cases have already been dealt with, and offers of redress have been made in about 90,000 cases. About 700,000 further cases are likely to be dealt with during the rest of the phase 2 review. Not all of these investors will be entitled to redress. The timetable is for all phase 2 case reviews to be completed by June 2002.

It is too soon to say how many investors overall are likely to be offered redress under the two phases of the review.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 11 January 2000

TREASURY

National Savings Agency

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the National Savings Agency by March 2000. [104622]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Following a prior options review in 1995, National Savings became a next steps agency in 1996. The Government announced then that the next five-yearly review would take place by March 2000.

I have asked my officials to set this review in motion. It will be conducted in accordance with the latest guidance from the Cabinet Office's Modernising Public Services Group.

The terms of reference of the review are: to review the performance of National Savings since it became an agency in 1996, and to advise Treasury Ministers on the options for the future status of National Savings, with a view to securing the best outcome for the public sector and for the wider economy.

In considering these options, the review will take into account the views of affected stakeholders and assess the implications for:

the net cost/benefit to the public sector and to the UK economy as a whole;

the Government's wider funding policy objectives;

developments in the wider public sector, including the "Modernising Government" White Paper;

the retail savings market, including the impact of new technology;

the wider policies of the Government, including its policy on savings and on social exclusion;

National Savings' business relationships, including the outsourcing contract with Siemens Business Services and its contract with Post Office Counters Ltd.;

the staff of National Savings;

the need for, and requirements of, legislation; and the speed with which change can be implemented.

Once this first phase of the analysis is complete, and the outcome agreed, the second phase of the review will build on the earlier analysis to identify where changes are needed to improve future delivery of Government objectives, and to determine how best to implement those changes.

The review will be conducted by the Treasury working in collaboration with National Savings. The first phase will conclude by March 2000.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Bilateral Concordat

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish the bilateral concordat between the Department of Social Security and the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales. [104452]

Mr. Darling: I am pleased to announce that the First Secretary and I have agreed the text of the concordat between the Department of Social Security and the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales. Copies of the concordat have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses, and the text will be available on the DSS website in both English and Welsh.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Sub-post Offices

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from Salisbury District Council about the future of sub-post offices. [104118]

Mr. Alan Johnson: None.

Objective 2 Status

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received on the criteria for granting Objective 2 status. [103288]

Mr. Caborn: Following the submission of our proposed Objective 2 areas to the European Commission in October, we received a few representations from MPs and local authorities requesting further details on the criteria used. In addition, the Isle of Wight has brought judicial review proceedings challenging the Objective 2 proposals submitted to the European Commission.

Postal Services Commission

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultation with industry will be undertaken in the appointment of (a) the members, (b) the Chairman and (c) the Chief Executive of the Postal Services Commission. [104181]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Chairman and ordinary members of the Postal Services Commission are being appointed in accordance with the Code of Practice of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. For the Chief Executive post civil service procedures are being used.

Nuclear Industry

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from (a) trade unions and (b) former workers in the nuclear power industry about health and safety risks in relation to outsourcing. [104147]

Mrs. Liddell: There have been none.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many production incidents were reported at Magnox and advanced gas-cooled reactors in 1999; how many reactors had to be shut down; and for what length of time. [104137]

Mrs. Liddell: There are 35 reactors operating at 16 nuclear power stations across Great Britain. During 1999, production was interrupted by unplanned shutdowns (either automatic or by power station operators) on 78 occasions. All except 15 of these were for 10 days or less. The remainder ranged from 10 to 259 days.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff have been shed by the nuclear power industry since its privatisation; and what reports he has received from the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate in respect of (a) Magnox and (b) advanced gas-cooled reactors visited in 1999 concerning the (i) number of redundancies and (ii) adequacy of training of employed contractors. [104136]

Mrs. Liddell: Since the privatisation of British Energy in 1996, it has shed just over 1,000 jobs. The Health and Safety Executive's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate have not published any reports on either redundancies or the adequacy of training of employed contractors. I understand that the Health and Safety Executive will shortly be publishing its safety management audit of British Energy.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he has taken in response to the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate's findings on the impact of staff redundancies on the safety of the nuclear power industry; and if he will make a statement. [104146]

Mrs. Liddell: I have not received any report from the Health and Safety Executive's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate on the impact of staff redundancies on safety in the nuclear power industry.

SMART Budget

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the gross funding allocated by the Government for the SMART budget for (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–00. [103221]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 20 December 1999]: The budgets for the SMART programme excluding the winding down of Regional Enterprise Grants and the transfer of residual commitments from the Department of Environment to DTI were as follows:

Year	£ million
1997–98	23.9
1998–99	27.3
1999–2000	31.6

Coal (Imports)

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what tonnage of imported steam coal was landed at Hunterston Port in Ayrshire, Scotland in the years (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99; and in which countries it originated, giving the tonnages for each country. [102605]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 13 December 1999]: Information on imports of coal by port and country of origin are available only for trade from outside the EC. Similar information on intra-EC trade is not collected.

Data on steam coal imports into Hunterston are not recorded separately. However, imports into Greenock Port which includes Hunterston are available and are set out as follows, together with imports through all Scottish ports.

Steam coal imports from outside the EC

Million tonnes

Port	Country of origin	1996	1997	1998
Greenock[1]	Australia	—	0.3	0.7
	Colombia	0.7	0.9	1.0
	South Africa	0.1	0.3	1.0
	Others[2]	0.1	—	—
	Total	0.8	1.5	2.7
All Scottish ports	Australia	—	0.3	0.7
	Colombia	0.7	0.9	1.0
	South Africa	0.1	0.3	1.0
	Others[2]	0.1	—	—
	Total	0.9	1.5	2.7
All UK ports		8.4	10.1	12.2

[1] Greenock includes the following ports: Annan, Barcaldine, Campbeltown, Faslane, Finnart, Furnace, Garlieston, Hunterston, Islay, Oban, Palnackie, Stranraer.
[2] Others are Indonesia, Poland and the United States of America
[3] Less than 50,000 tonnes
[4] Nil

PRIME MINISTER

Joint Cabinet Consultative Committee

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what plans he has to review the application of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information in respect of the Joint Cabinet Consultative Committee; [104112]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 353W, concerning attendance at the Joint Cabinet Consultative Committee on 13 December, what steps he plans to take in respect of persons disclosing information about attendance at Joint Cabinet Committees to the Press. [104117]

The Prime Minister: I have no such plans.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister how many breaches of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information have been identified in respect of the Joint Cabinet Consultative Committee since its inception. [104115]

The Prime Minister: None. The code would be breached only by a refusal to disclose information which should properly be made public.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

SRB (West Midlands)

15. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the impact of the Single Regeneration Budget in tackling disadvantage in the West Midlands. [103266]

Ms Armstrong: There has not been a central Government evaluation of the impact of the Single Regeneration Budget (SRB) in the West Midlands. However, the national evaluation of the first two rounds of the SRB includes case studies on two West Midlands SRB partnerships—the West Midlands Industrial Club and Regenerating Wolverhampton.

Nature Conservation

16. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps his Department is taking to afford greater protection to sites of importance for nature conservation; and if he will make a statement. [103267]

Mr. Meacher: In line with proposals in the Government's Framework for Action on Sites of Special Scientific Interest, officials have set up a Local Sites Review Group, comprising a wide range of interested bodies. This will consider the issues associated with the identification, protection and management of local sites and report its conclusions early this year.

East Coast Main Line

17. Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has in respect of the upgrading of the east coast main line from Edinburgh to Aberdeen. [103268]

Mr. Hill: There are no plans at present. However, we have asked the Franchising Director to replace passenger franchises that expire within the next three to four years in order to generate new investment and service improvements. Discussions for a new Great North Eastern Railways franchise, including future infrastructure and service requirements for the entire East Coast Main Line, will be starting soon with Seacontainers the current operator and Virgin Rail Group in conjunction with Stagecoach.

32. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on what measures he proposes to take to upgrade the east coast main line service between Edinburgh and Aberdeen. [103284]

Mr. Hill: There are no plans at present. However, we have asked the Franchising Director to replace passenger franchises that expire within the next three to four years in order to generate new investment and service improvements. Discussions for a new Great North Eastern Railways franchise, including future infrastructure and service requirements for the entire East Coast Main Line, will be starting soon with the current operator and any other interested parties.

Waste Disposal (East Sussex)

18. Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on waste disposal, with particular reference to East Sussex. [103269]

Mr. Mullin: The Government's policy for sustainable waste management, including waste disposal, is set out in the draft national waste strategy, "A Way With Waste". The final version will be published shortly and we expect local authorities throughout England to have regard to its goals in developing strategies for managing waste in their areas. I understand plans are being developed in East Sussex to meet the goals set out in "A Way With Waste", and I welcome this.

Rough Sleepers

19. Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on how he intends to reduce the number of rough sleepers on the streets. [103271]

23. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to ensure that people do not have to sleep rough on the streets. [103275]

Ms Armstrong: On 15 December, we published the Government's strategy for reducing the numbers of rough sleepers in England by at least two thirds by 2002. Copies of the document "Coming in from the Cold" are available in the Library.

London Underground

20. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the latest estimated date for the finalisation of the Government's plans for London Underground. [103272]

Mr. Hill: London Underground has made good progress in developing the public private partnership: bids for the deep-tube lines are due back in March; expressions of interest for the sub-surface lines are due later this month; (and those for the property partnership are due in February). We have consistently made clear that we will not be bound by specific dates for the completion of the PPP.

Regeneration Programmes

21. Ms Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what support he is providing to encourage local people to take an active part in regeneration programmes. [103273]

Ms Beverley Hughes: We are working with the relevant national, regional and local bodies to encourage local people to take an active part in the regeneration of their local communities. We are providing funding support, in particular for capacity building and community involvement, through our domestic regeneration programmes and European Structural Funds in eligible areas.

Coalfield Areas

22. Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to regenerate former coalfield areas. [103274]

Ms Beverley Hughes: On 1 December 1998 at the second Coalfields Conference in Peterlee, County Durham, the Deputy Prime Minister announced a 10 year programme to regenerate coalfield communities with an investment package of £354 million over three years. A fuller breakdown of this investment and further steps to be taken are set out in "Making the Difference—A new Start for England's Coalfield Communities: The Government's Response to the Coalfields Task Force Report".

The Deputy Prime Minister published a further report at the third Coalfields Conference in Wigan on 18 October 1999, in less than a year since Peterlee, setting out progress on delivery of the recommendations of the Coalfields Task Force. Copies of both these documents have been placed in the Library of the House.

Single Regeneration Budget

24. Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the impact of the Single Regeneration Budget in combating disadvantage. [103276]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Analysis from the interim national evaluation of the first two rounds of the Single Regeneration Budget (SRB) has shown that the initiative is delivering a good mix of economic, social, community and environmental benefits in deprived areas. Taking into account the severity of the problems in SRB partnership areas, these benefits are being delivered cost effectively.

Eastern Regional Development Agency

25. Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from the Eastern Regional Development Agency. [103277]

Ms Armstrong: The East of England Development Agency (EEDA) has submitted its strategy for the East of England, "Moving Forward" and its Corporate Plan. It has also commented on draft Planning Policy Guidance 11 and on Round 6 of the Single Regeneration Budget.

Planning Inspectorate

26. Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his proposals to improve the Planning Inspectorate's service to the public. [103278]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The Planning Inspectorate strives continuously to improve its service to the public. They have dramatically improved handling times for deciding planning appeals and are well on the way to achieving the Public Service Agreement targets which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced in March 1999. Improvements to the procedure for processing planning appeals will be implemented during 2000–01. A consultation paper on proposals to improve the processing of enforcement appeals was published last month. The Inspectorate are converting all of their guidance leaflets into Plain English and have been awarded seven crystal marks by the Plain English Campaign. The Inspectorate will continue to invest in new IT systems and will be relaunching their website shortly.

Housing

27. Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to encourage local planning authorities to build new homes in existing town centres. [103279]

Ms Beverley Hughes: We are revising our planning policy guidance on housing (PPG3) to encourage more housing to be provided in town centres and the conversion and reuse of buildings not currently in housing use, and the re-use of premises above shops. We have commissioned research to identify the impediments to mixed-use and housing developments in town centres, the results of which will be published later this year.

Train Overcrowding

28. Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he next plans to meet the Health and Safety Executive to discuss train overcrowding. [103280]

Mr. Hill: I have no plans to discuss train overcrowding with the Health and Safety Executive, who regard this issue as primarily one of passenger comfort and not safety.

Construction Industry

29. Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on improving innovation and quality in the construction industry. [103281]

Ms Beverley Hughes: We are working closely with clients and the supply side to improve the performance of the construction industry by stimulating innovation and process improvement along the lines recommended in Sir John Egan's report "Rethinking Construction".

Demonstration projects to a value of around £3 billion have been put forward covering almost every aspect of construction by local authorities, housing associations, central Government Departments and agencies and by many private sector clients and suppliers.

National Air Traffic Services

30. Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of (a) proposals from the airlines for the corporate restructuring of the NATS and (b) the prospect of achieving consensus on such proposals across the wider air transport industry. [103282]

Mr. Mullin: The Government have not received any formal proposals from the airlines about the restructuring of NATS. The NATS PPP will be put in place following a competitive tender process and, should they choose to bid, any proposal from the airlines will be considered as part of that process. The responses to our consultation on the NATS PPP show that there is broad support for the Government' s proposals from the aviation industry.

Climate Change

31. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on climate change. [103283]

Mr. Meacher: Climate change remains high on the Government's agenda and we are pressing ahead with the development of an ambitious UK climate change programme, a draft of which will be published shortly for consultation. We have already introduced many new and innovative policies that will reduce our emissions of greenhouse gases.

Passenger Information

33. Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on measures taken to provide the travelling public with a one-stop national passenger information system. [103285]

Mr. Hill: The national public transport information system is being developed by partnerships of transport operators and local authorities.

Government have provided Supplementary Credit Approvals to local authorities of £1 million in 1998–99 and £3.3 million in 1999–2000 to assist with the capital requirements of the project.

The service is expected to be introduced progressively throughout Great Britain during 2000.

Planning System (Competition)

34. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his policy is on taking account of competition issues within the planning system. [103286]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The planning system is expected to be positive in promoting competition while ensuring the protection of the environment and amenity. It is required to treat all applications for planning consent even-handedly and to determine them on their planning merits.

Playing Fields

35. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his Department's policy to discourage the development of playing fields currently being used for sport. [103287]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Planning Policy Guidance note 17: Sport and Recreation already emphasises the special significance of playing fields and that they should normally be protected. The Town and Country Planning (Playing Fields)(England) Direction 1998 requires referral to the Secretary of State of planning applications for development of local authority-owned playing fields or those currently, or in the previous five years, in educational use, where Sport England has objected but the local planning authority is minded to grant permission. The Secretary of State then has the opportunity to call in the application for his own determination.

School Crossing Patrols

36. Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to increase the powers of school crossing patrols. [103289]

Mr. Hill: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions announced on 18 November 1998 that School Crossing Patrols would be given increased powers so that they can help any child or adult across the road and that the time restrictions on when they can operate will be removed.

The proposal to extend the powers of school crossing patrols was included in our White Paper, "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone". It is a clear commitment. We will implement this proposal when a suitable legislative opportunity arises.

Local Authority Purchases (Inflation Rate)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the current rate of inflation for the basket of goods and services purchased by local authorities. [103259]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Employee costs account for more than half of local authorities' costs, and this year's pay settlements affecting local authorities are in the region of 2 to 3.6 per cent. Local authorities will continue to benefit from the low inflation and stable economy being delivered by the good economic management this Government provides as well as the predictability that the three year settlement has provided.

Climate Change Levy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received from industry and business concerning the effects of the climate change levy. [103270]

Mr. Meacher: We receive many representations from business on the climate change levy and have been taking these into consideration in our development of detailed proposals. We have also issued a number of consultation papers, the latest—which invites comments on the Government's proposals for a £150 million business energy efficiency programme and tax relief scheme for investment in energy saving technologies—was published on 9 December 1999. Copies are available in the Libraries of the House.

Trams (Croydon)

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to issue an exemption order for the fleet of trams to be introduced into service in Croydon in respect of the provisions of the Rail Vehicle Accessibility Regulations 1998. [104620]

Mr. Hill: As my predecessor explained in her answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, East (Mr. McNulty) on 9 March 1999, Official Report, column 167W, we are expecting to receive a number of exemption applications from train and tram operating companies whose designs for new rail vehicles were well advanced prior to the 1998 Regulations coming into force.

We have received an application from Tramtrack Croydon Ltd. relating to the new trams they wish to introduce on Croydon Tramlink. The exemptions have been discussed with our statutory advisers, the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee. An exemption Order relating to the exemption of these trams was laid in Parliament yesterday. Copies are available from the Library.

The exemptions will not prevent disabled people from using the new trams or trains. Indeed, we believe that their introduction will make a significant contribution to improving mobility opportunities for disabled people.

Rural Bus Challenge 1999

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will announce the results of the 1999 Rural Bus Challenge competition. [104623]

Mr. Prescott: I am pleased to announce today approval of the 58 projects listed below which were submitted as bids by local authorities in this competition. This follows careful consideration of a total of 124 bids submitted by authorities. Funding for the successful bids will total £16.78 million. A Special Grant Report under Section 88b of the Local Government Finance Act 1988 will be put forward for Parliamentary approval as soon as possible.

Authority	Value (£)	Title of Bid
Bath and NE Somerset	801,127	Enhanced Bus Services
Buckinghamshire	985,000	Easybus Project
Cheshire	632,388	Demand Responsive Rural Community Transport Strategy
Cornwall	100,000	The Helston-Redruth Branch Line Bus Service
	57,270	The Gorran and District Ring-and-Ride Service
Cumbria	722,000	Cumbrian Connexion
Derbyshire	155,000	Public Transport Information Technology
Devon	640,000	Buses are Cool
East Riding	423,300	MediBus Network
East Sussex	102,000	North Lewes District Rural Taxibus Partnership
Gloucestershire	998,900	IMPACT—Improving Accessible Transport
Greater Manchester	312,000	Rural Transport Operators
Hampshire	169,457	Fully Integrated Brockenhurst
Herefordshire	78,000	Home Hopper
Hertfordshire	107,000	Accessible Taxis Rural Areas Partnership
	180,000	Multi-purpose Accessible Vehicles in Rural Areas
Kent	381,000	Swale Unified Network (SUN)
Lancashire	106,733	Rural Intelligent Bus Stop System
	280,999	Garstang "Super 8" Variable Route Minibus Service
Lincolnshire	940,962	Spalding-Kings Lynn
	680,687	Lincoln-Boston
Merseyside	12,600	Satellite Tracking and Communications Equipment
Norfolk	478,800	Quality Bus Partnership (Kings Lynn-Hunstanton)
North Lincolnshire	88,095	Brigg Bus Stop Infrastructure Improvements
North Yorkshire	43,200	Whixley Area Community Transport Project
Northamptonshire	221,850	East Northants Community Bus and Trailer Project
	204,550	Cross County Quality Bus Partnership
	61,550	Wellinborough Rural Door-to-Door Service
Northumberland	74,000	Access to Journey Planner
Oxfordshire	62,192	Cotswold Line Taxi-Bus Interchange
	229,100	Wheelchair Accessible Express Coach Feeder and Dial-a-Ride Service in South Oxfordshire
	426,000	Cherwell Valley Taxi-Bus Scheme
	285,000	Integrated Rural Taxi-Bus Links to Bicester North Railway Station
Redcar and Cleveland	5,000	Minibus Turning Circle
Shropshire	21,600	Bike-Bus Demonstration Project
	21,900	Community Transport Information System
Somerset	90,823	West Somerset Social Car Scheme
	25,582	Wells—Priddy Postbus
	225,195	Continuation of Mendip Flexibus Funding
South Gloucestershire	540,300	Strategic Interchange and Local Access Hubs
South Yorkshire	40,478	Hampole and Skelbrooke
	1,342,275	South Rotherham Transport Strategy
Staffordshire	117,500	Gnosall Community Links
Stockton on Tees	12,000	Bus Facilities at Yarm Station
Suffolk	305,122	Wheels Within Wheels
Telford and Wrekin	174,000	Rural Transport Links—The Wrekin Rider
Torbay	142,990	South Devon Hospital Hopper Bus
Tyne and Wear	361,550	Transpods
Warrington	60,000	Car Share Co-ordinator
Warwickshire	155,088	Flexi Bus Routes
West Berkshire	75,700	Taxi-Bus
West Sussex	218,000	Demanding Public Transport
West Yorkshire	208,928	Denby Dale
Wiltshire	642,450	Trans-Wilts Express
	453,160	Royal United Hospital Demand Responsive Taxi-Bus Service
	58,000	Wigglybus
Worcestershire	404,049	Route Enhancement: Service 382
	36,500	Bus Passenger Escort Scheme
58 Schemes	16,778,950

Garden Composters

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what evidence he has obtained as to whether councils which have provided, free, subsidised or cost price garden composters have ensured the equipment has been used for 12 months or longer. [104294]

Ms Armstrong: None. This is a matter for individual councils.

Fluorescent Lights

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of used fluorescent lights from Government buildings are recycled. [104293]

Mr. Meacher: The percentage is small. Only some 25,000 fluorescent tubes have been recycled under the Government-wide call off contract which the Disposal Sales Agency awarded to Biffa Waste Services Limited in June 1998. The potential market was estimated at 800,000 tubes a year. But contracts of this nature take time to bed down. The extra cost of recycling is deterring some premises managers from using the contract. Others are bound by existing contracts and must wait until they expire. The time intervals for replacing tubes can also vary between two and several years depending on circumstances. There are also logistical considerations such as storage space. Efforts continue to encourage managers to use the contract.

Commonhold Legislation

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce commonhold legislation. [104264]

Mr. Mullin: As was announced in the gracious speech given on 17 November 1999, Official Report, columns 4–7, the Government will be publishing a draft joint Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Bill for consultation during this session. The Commonhold aspects of the draft Bill are the responsibility of my right hon. noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor.

Footpath Network

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to include the pedestrian footpath network in London within the scope of his report on improving rights of way in England and Wales. [104261]

Mr. Mullin: Our consultation paper, "Improving Rights of Way in England and Wales", was sent to all the local authorities in London and a number of London organisations. We are considering their responses carefully, together with almost 2000 others, in preparing new legislation on rights of way.

Tenants

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance he has given to local authorities about improving the quality of life of their tenants through estate management. [104052]

Mr. Mullin: This Department has been represented on several of the policy action teams (PATs) set up in response to the Social Exclusion Unit's report "Bringing Britain together: a national strategy for neighbourhood renewal", including PAT 5 on Housing Management and PAT 8 on Anti-social Behaviour. PAT 5 found that good housing management is crucial in ensuring that tenants in social housing enjoy a high quality of life. The work of both teams will feed into the Social Exclusion Unit's overall strategy on neighbourhood renewal, to be published later this year.

The quality of life for tenants can be greatly improved by involving tenants more effectively and more thoroughly in the management of their homes, including tenant management if that is what the tenants themselves want. From April this year all councils will be introducing tenant participation compacts. This Department published guidance for local authorities in June last year to help them develop, implement and review their local compacts.

We are also broadening our programme of grants paid under section 16 of the Housing and Planning Act 1986 to promote and develop greater participation. Guidance on the full range of grants available for this purpose will be published in the spring.

Under Best Value, local authorities will need to review their housing services, including those relating to estate management, with a view to securing improvements, having regard to a combination of economy, efficiency and effectiveness. This Department will shortly be publishing guidance for local housing authorities on the application of Best Value to housing.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what administrative measures are available to enforce tenancy agreements between local authorities and their tenants. [104053]

Mr. Mullin: Tenancy agreements set out both the rights, and responsibilities, of tenants. Local authorities should ensure that their agreements are clear and unambiguous, so that there can be no doubt about the standards expected and the circumstances in which the authority will take action if there are problems. In the event of a breach of a tenancy agreement, local authorities may wish to begin possession proceedings using the grounds set out in Part I of Schedule 2 to the Housing Act 1985 (as amended by the Housing Act 1996).

Local authorities may, alternatively, wish to seek an injunction against the tenant concerned to prevent further breaches of the tenancy agreement. The 1996 Act enables the courts to attach a power of arrest to such an injunction if there is violence, or a threat of violence.

Environmental Schemes

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what criteria were applied in determining how many and which environment schemes would be deleted from proposals put to him by the Environment Agency and South West Water; under what statutory authority that decision was made; whether the criteria relating to pollution of the water environment are the same in every region; and if he will make a statement. [104161]

Mr. Mullin: Proposals for investment by water companies in schemes to protect and improve the environment in England were put to the Secretary of State by the Environment Agency as part of the Periodic Review of water company price limits. This is a non-statutory process, led by Ofwat, which sets the price framework by reference, among other factors, to foreseen investment needs over the forthcoming pricing period, in this case 2000–05.

The Director General of Ofwat requested guidance from Ministers about the level of investment which companies should be required to make to achieve environmental objectives within this period. We were advised in that task by the Environment Agency, which put forward a list of specific proposals for consideration. A large proportion of these arose from the need to meet statutory water quality standards, many of them arising from European legislation. All these schemes were included in the programme as a matter of course. On other parts of the programme, principally schemes to improve river water quality and those to improve intermittent sewage discharges, it was possible for the Government to exercise a degree of discretion over the timing or the nature of the objectives.

In "Raising the Quality", which was published in September 1998, we indicated a general aim to eliminate at least half the existing shortfall in compliance with river quality objectives by 2005 and to accelerate the rate of improvement for intermittent discharges, so that at least two thirds of remaining unsatisfactory discharges would be improved by 2005. Within these national objectives, however, the Government made clear it would take a view on the pace of investment for particular companies taking account of the need to avoid unacceptable impacts on water prices in different parts of the country, and to reflect local environmental priorities.

In the south west, where customers were already experiencing water bills considerably higher than for any other water company, and which already had the highest rate of compliance with river quality objectives in England, we decided to undertake a lower proportion of investment to meet river quality objectives and improve intermittent discharges than elsewhere. These decisions were based on assessments of the costs and benefits of the investment schemes concerned. However, the south west will still benefit from a substantial environmental programme, which includes further improvements to protect bathing waters and shellfish waters, key priorities for the region.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the reduction in carbon dioxide emissions over a 10 year period that would be achieved by replacing two 1,200 MW coal-fired power stations with two gas-fired power stations of the same capacity. [104274]

Mr. Meacher: My Department estimates that replacing two 1,200 MW coal fired power stations by two gas fired power stations of the same capacity would save about 75 million tonnes of carbon dioxide over a ten year period, assuming the power stations would operate on base load.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Political Parties (Donations)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to ensure that large donations to political parties are declared. [104183]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Part IV of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Bill will give effect to our manifesto commitment to require the disclosure of large donations made to political parties. The registered treasurer of a political party will be required to report to the Electoral Commission, on a quarterly basis, the source and amount of donations of £5,000 or more accepted by the central organisation and of £1,000 or more accepted by a constituency association or other sub-unit of the party's organisation.

In the immediate run up to a general election, reports must be submitted on a weekly basis. All donations so reported would be included on a register of recordable donations, which will be open to public inspection.

In addition, Part IX of the Bill amends the Companies Act 1985 so as to strengthen the requirements on companies to disclose, in the directors' report, donations to political parties which, in aggregate, exceed £200 in a financial year.

Correspondence

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to letters to the Asylum Directorate from Powell and Co., dated 17 May, 17 June, 8 July, 17 September and 19 October, concerning a constituent (Home Office reference D282723) of the hon. Member for Erith and Thamesmead; and if he will make a statement. [99771]

Mrs. Roche [pursuant to her reply, 25 November 1999, c. 179W]: I now understand that, owing to a regrettable oversight, the Immigration and Nationality Directorate did not send a reply to the letter of 17 May from Powell and Co. There is no trace of any further letters from the solicitors. On 30 November, a final reply was sent to Powell and Co., and I wrote to my hon. Friend on 22 December.

Car Parks

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made toward the improvement of car parks under the secured car parks scheme. [104266]

Mr. Charles Clarke: As at 31 December 1999, 544 car parks in England and Wales had achieved awards under the secured car parks scheme. Car parks with award status have shown substantial reductions in crime, with a sample showing average reductions of 70 per cent.

Additional Government funding of £150 million over three years for closed circuit television has been made available. Improving car park security was a priority for the first round and 31 bids with a car park element (and a capital value of £3 million) were approved under fast-track procedures. In addition, an award of £1.95 million has been made to London Underground to upgrade 58 car parks to award status.

Escaped Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women prisoners (i) have escaped from custody during their sentence in each of the last five years and (ii) have not been recaptured. [104048]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is set out in the tables. The numbers of escapes exclude recaptures within 15 minutes where no further offence has been committed. Figures are for financial years and the escape figures for 1999–2000 show the position to the end of December 1999. The recapture data are as accurate as possible, but some escapers may be recaptured or be arrested for other offences and re-enter the system without a link to the previous incident being made or reported.

	Escapes from prisons		Number of escapers not recaptured at 31 December 1999
Year	Male	Female	Male	Female
1995–96	52	0	5	0
1996–97	33	0	7	0
1997–98	22	1	0	0
1998–99	27	1	2	0
1999–2000	21	4	3	0

	Escapes from escorts		Number of escapers not recaptured at 31 December 1999
Year	Male	Female	Male	Female
1995–96	68	2	6	0
1996–97	98	0	4	0
1997–98	82	0	22	0
1998–99	57	5	14	1
1999–2000	49	2	15	0

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what support he has offered to local authorities accepting asylum seekers. [104258]

Mrs. Roche: The Government have made special grants available to local authorities to help meet unavoidable additional costs incurred in accommodating and supporting asylum seekers under the Children Act 1989 and the National Assistance Act 1948 who are not otherwise entitled to social benefit. On a weekly basis, these grants are currently up to £150 for a single adult and £220 for a family. The responsibility for the payment of these grants—except those for unaccompanied asylum seeking children—passed to the Home Office in April 1999. Home Office officials have also provided direct support over the past year to the Local Government Association (LGA) and local authorities to devise and operate arrangements to disperse asylum seekers away from those areas under most pressure.

With effect from 1 April 2000, the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 provides for destitute asylum seekers and their dependants to be supported and accommodated by the National Asylum Support Service (NASS). Through regional consortia, local authorities will still have a key role to play in co-ordinating the provision of accommodation and support services to destitute asylum seekers in their area. To help achieve what is known as the enabling role, Regional Consortia will be eligible to receive up to £40,000 this year and up to £100,000 annually thereafter in grant.

Puppy Farmers

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action his Department is taking in respect of unscrupulous puppy farmers. [104393]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Commercial dog breeding establishments have to be licensed by local authorities under the Breeding of Dogs Act 1973, as amended by the Breeding and Sale of Dogs (Welfare) Act 1999. It is an offence to be in breach of any of the licence conditions aimed at ensuring satisfactory welfare standards for the dogs involved. There are inspection powers for suspected unlicensed premises under the Breeding of Dogs Act 1991.

The Home Office has recently issued guidance to local authorities about administration and enforcement of this legislation.

Metropolitan Police (Disciplinary Hearings)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is the policy of the Metropolitan Police henceforth to allow officers facing a discipline hearing the assistance, if requested, of a representative of the Black Police Association in addition to the Police Federation. [103917]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Metropolitan Police Commissioner informs me that it is Metropolitan Police policy to comply with the Police Regulations, and Home Office guidance, on disciplinary hearings.

The Police (Discipline) Regulations 1985, which cover incidents occurring before 1 April 1999, provide that a member of a police force may assist the legal representative at the hearing. The Police (Conduct) Regulations 1999, for incidents after 1 April 1999, provide that in addition to having his or her case conducted by a legal representative, the officer may be accompanied at the hearing by a member of a police force or a friend. The role of the friend is to assist the officer in defending the case.

If the officer asks to have more than one friend present at a misconduct hearing, the presiding officer will base any decision on representations from the officer concerned. If the request is agreed, the second friend will be acting as an observer and not a second advocate to question witnesses on behalf of the officer concerned.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department from what date all members of the Metropolitan Police discipline tribunals involving accusations of racism will have had anti-racism training. [103918]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Metropolitan Police Commissioner informs me that all of his officers who are eligible to sit on police discipline tribunals as assessors under the Police Act 1996 have received training in the relevant Home Office guidance and regulations, including dealing with racially discriminatory behaviour.

DEFENCE

DERA (PPP Proposals)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent meetings Ministers in his Department have had with members and officials of the United States Department of Defense to discuss the public private partnership proposals for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency; on what date; at which locations; which UK Ministers attended each of these meetings; which members of the United States Government attended these meetings; and for which section of the United States Department of Defense the officials who attended each meeting were working. [103182]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Since 24 August 1999, the Minister for Defence Procurement, Baroness Symons, has met with the following US representatives to discuss the DERA public private partnership proposals:

(a) Hon. L. Buchanan, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Research, Development and Acquisition, on 13 September 1999 in London;

(b) Hon. P. Hoeper, the Assistant Secretary of the Army for Research, Development and Acquisition, on 14 September 1999 in London;

(c) Mr. A. Money, the Assistant Secretary of Defence (C31) on 1 October, in London; and

(d) The DoD's nominated focal point for the DERA Public Private Partnership, Dr. C. Dorman, the Chief Scientist of the Office of Naval Research, on 22 November 1999, in London.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when and where British officials and military personnel met US Government officials to discuss the future of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency; and if he will list the names and job descriptions of the British participants. [103407]

Mr. Kilfoyle [holding answer 21 December 1999]: Throughout the DERA PPP process there has been substantial and widespread discussion with US Government officials, by a considerable number of British officials and military officers, at meetings in the UK, the US and in other countries during, or in the margins of, multilateral meetings.

A full list of all meetings which may have included discussions on the future of DERA between US Government officials and British participants is not held centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost. However the key meetings held specifically to discuss DERA PPP are summarised as follows:

(a) During the 4–6 November 1998 Mr. G. H. B. Jordan, Deputy Under Secretary (Science and Technology) and Mr. T. Jagger, Director of the DERA Partnering Team briefed a targeted audience of senior DoD political appointees and officials, single service commands and laboratories and government laboratories and agencies.

(b) Mr. C Balmer, the MOD Principal Finance Officer accompanied by Mr. Jordan, Sir John Chisholm, the Chief Executive of DERA and Mr. Jagger visited the US to brief a similar audience at the start of the consultation process, from the 3–7 May 1999.

(c) Mr. Jagger, accompanied by members of MOD's International Research Collaboration division visited the US on 24–28 May 1999.

(d) US DoD officials visited the UK in July and held discussions with Mr. K. Tebbit, the MOD Permanent Secretary, Mr. Balmer, Mr. Jordan, Lieutenant General Sir Edmund Burton, the then Deputy Chief of Defence Staff (Systems), Mr. Jagger, Sir John Chisholm and members of their staffs.

(e) Mr. Balmer and Mr. Jagger visited Washington during September to hold further discussions with the DoD.

(f) The DoD's nominated focal point for DERA PPP visited the UK during 15–24 November and held discussions with Mr. Balmer, Mr. Jordan, Vice Admiral Sir Jeremy Blackham, the Deputy Chief of Defence Staff (Equipment Capability), Mr. J. Howe, Deputy Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency, Mr. Jagger, Sir John Chisholm and members of their staffs.

Nancekuke Base, Cornwall

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on health problems suffered by former workers at the Nancekuke base in Cornwall. [103940]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 11 November 1999, Official Report, columns 707–08W, concerning the survey conducted by the Registrar General which showed that, up to 1969, the mortality of persons who had been employed at Nancekuke was rather less than the average for England and Wales as a whole. This report was published in full in the answer given to the former hon. Member for North Cornwall (Mr. Pardoe) on 2 November 1970, Official Report, columns 294–95W. I also refer my hon. Friend to my previous answer concerning the review of sickness and absenteeism among persons employed at Nancekuke which did not yield any valid conclusions.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Government's decision to allow early release of a document concerning health risks to workers at the Nancekuke base in Cornwall during the 1950s and 1960s. [103939]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The document to which my hon. Friend refers was a report of sickness and absenteeism among persons employed at Nancekuke from 1952 to 1969. The review was conducted by the Registrar General and mentioned briefly in an answer to a question from the former hon. Member for North Cornwall (Mr. Pardoe) on 2 November 1970, Official Report, columns 294–95W. The study, which was not classified, was among a number of papers at the Public Record Office which were authorised for early release by the Office for National Statistics in response to a request from a reporter.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from former workers at the Nancekuke base in Cornwall regarding health risks caused by their contact with poisonous substances during the 1950s and 1960s. [103938]

Mr. Kilfoyle: One claim for compensation has been received by my Department from a former worker at Nancekuke who was accidentally exposed to Sarin GB. I am not aware of any other representations to my Department. I am, however, aware of the two other claims made through the then Department of Health and Social Security in the early 1970s.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the report released by the Office for National Statistics concerning health risks to workers at the Nancekuke base in Cornwall during the 1950s and 1960s. [103941]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The report referred to was based on a review of sickness and absenteeism among persons employed at Nancekuke from 1952 to 1969. While the results could be taken to imply greater absence among industrial staff for some illnesses than might have been expected from the national figures available, the data were considered insufficiently robust to be used as firm evidence of increased ill-health among staff and the results were not published formally. Recent re-examination of the results supports the original conclusions concerning the inadequacy of the data.

Type 45 Destroyer

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he expects to let the contract for the Type 45 Destroyer; and what the timescale is for the various elements; [103922]

(2) when he expects to let the contract for the second Type 45 Destroyer; to whom it will be let; and what the timescale is for the various elements of the contract. [103923]

Mr. Kilfoyle: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir Robert Walmsley to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 11 January 2000:

I am replying to your questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about contract placement for the first and second Type 45 destroyers. This matter falls to me to answer within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

As you are aware, the contract to complete Preparation for Demonstration (PFD) for the Type 45 was placed with Marconi Electronic Systems (MES, now BAe SYSTEMS) on 23 November 1999. BAe SYSTEMS have also been appointed as the Prime Contractor for the Type 45 Programme. It is currently planned to place the Demonstration and First of Class Manufacture (DFM) contract with the Prime Contractor towards the end of 2000, to meet an in-service date for the first-of-class ship of 2007.

The detailed contractual arrangements for the build of the first and subsequent ships of the class remain under consideration with the Prime Contractor and I am therefore unable to be precise about the timing of the contract for the second T45 destroyer or to whom it would be awarded. However, value for money will be the prime factor in any such arrangement and in this regard we are keen to ensure that we retain our ability to conduct effective competition for follow-on Type 45 destroyers. To this end, both Marconi Marine (YSL) Ltd and Vosper Thornycroft will be involved in the PFD contract and, subject to satisfactory progress, also in the subsequent DFM contract with a view to allowing the efficient construction of Type 45s at both yards.

Defence Equipment Exhibition

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what actions his Department took to prevent Pakistan Ordnance Factories from exhibiting brochures at the Defence Systems Equipment International '99 Exhibition at Chertsey; [104158]

(2) what assessment his Department made of Pakistan's ordnance factories' production, with particular reference to anti-personnel land mines, before it was invited to the Defence Systems Equipment International '99 Exhibition. [104298]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Pakistan Ordnance Factories stand at Defence Systems Equipment International '99 (DSEi99) Exhibition was reviewed by MOD officials and, at that time, no literature promoting Anti-Personnel Mines was found. No specific action was therefore required or taken to prevent the company from exhibiting brochures at DSEi99.

Attendance of companies at the show was a matter for the organisers, DSEi Ltd., who assured HMG that they would require that all exhibitions and promotional material would comply with UK legislation, including the Landmines Act 1998, and Government policy. HM Customs and Excise are currently investigating an allegation that Pakistan Ordnance Factories referred to anti-personnel landmines in their promotional material.

Spearfish Torpedoes

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received in the last six months on the mid-life of the Spearfish MoD O warshot heavyweight torpedoes; and what response he has made to suppliers concerning the performance of the torpedoes. [104110]

Mr. Kilfoyle: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Sir Robert Walmsley to Mr. Mike Hancock dated 11 January 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what representations he has received in the last six months on the mid-life of the Spearfish MoD O warshot heavyweight torpedoes; and what response he has made to suppliers concerning the performance of the torpedoes. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

The main production contract for the supply of the Spearfish Mod O warshot torpedo was placed with GEC-Marconi Ltd (now part of BAe Systems) in December 1994 and deliveries commenced in June 1999. The performance of the torpedoes is being assessed via a series of in-water Production Qualification Trials (PQTs) designed to test discrete aspects of performance within the overall performance requirements of the contract.

BAe Systems is also currently undertaking concept studies to provide support for the SPEARFISH Mod O Heavyweight Torpedo Mid-Life Update programme. No representations have been received from any other supplier about the Mid-Life Update programme.

Joint Rapid Reaction Force Vessels

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what specification was set out in the invitation to tender for the Joint Rapid Reaction Force Roll-On-Roll-Off vessel PFI contract regarding the (a) use by bidders of UK seafarers, (b) commitment to recruitment by bidders of seafarers from traditional UK maritime communities, (c) use by bidders of non-UK seafarers, (d) commitment of bidders to the training initiatives recently announced by the Government, (e) training opportunities for officers and ratings to be provided on the vessels and (f) management of the health, safety and employment welfare of crews. [104088]

Mr. Kilfoyle: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Sir Robert Walmsley to Mr. Ivan Henderson, dated 11 January 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the specification set out in the invitation to tender for the Joint Rapid Reaction Forces Roll-on-Roll-Off vessel PFI contract. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

Under PFI arrangements, it will be for bidders to provide and manage the service, including the provision of appropriately-trained crews. The invitation to tender did not cite a specification for the issues listed in the question, although bidders have been asked to price the provision of British seamen who would be eligible for call-out as Sponsored Reserves. Bidders would be free to crew the vessels as they wished when trading commercially. A decision on whether or not the MoD requires the use of Sponsored Reserves for Joint Rapid Reaction Forces operations or exercises will be taken in the light of the evaluation of the bids.

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will announce the award of the PFI contract for the Joint Rapid Reaction Force Roll-On Roll-Off vessels. [104090]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Our current intention is to place a contract in summer 2000 for Roll-on Roll-off vessels to support the Joint Rapid Reaction Force.

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contingency plans have been made to meet the needs of the armed forces in the event of any delay in (a) the awarding of the PFI contract for the Joint Rapid Reaction Force Roll-On Roll-Off vessels and (b) the delivery of the vessels. [104091]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The project is on track to achieve the placing of the contract in summer 2000. We have always planned to provide an interim service from October 2000, through charter arrangements, until the new service was available. In the event of a delay to the delivery of the vessels, these arrangements could be extended to cover the gap.

EU Defence Expenditure

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current annual level of defence expenditure of each member state of the European Union. [100834]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

RUC Special Branch

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officers attached to RUC Special Branch in September joined the Special Branch in (a) each of the last 10 years, (b) the previous 15 years and (c) the previous 20 years. [101883]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 December 1999]: This information is not readily available and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

European Convention on Human Rights

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what additional training (a) the police and (b) the Prison Service in Northern Ireland have been given since the incorporation of the European Convention on Human Rights into United Kingdom domestic legislation. [103612]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 January 2000]: A committee chaired by a senior detective has been established within the RUC to examine all aspects of human rights, including training. There has already been close liaison with developments at National Police Training level and contact with the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission. Planning is at an advanced stage for every officer and member of civilian staff to receive training prior to the full implementation of the Human Rights Act 1998.

With regard to the Northern Ireland Prison Service, its strategy is to promote human rights awareness through training and development policies and strategies. The preservation of an individual's human rights throughout their time in prison custody is a running theme in much of the current training programme. Specifically in relation to the Human Rights Act, Prison Service senior managers and members of staff have already attended a range of training courses and seminars on human rights issues. Steps are also being taken to identify the wider extent of individual training requirements and to deliver appropriate training.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

World Cup 2006

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the official engagements carried out by Ministers in support of the England World Cup 2006 bid, indicating the cost to his Department of the support given. [103863]

Kate Hoey: The Government have offered their full support to the Football Association's bid to host the FIFA World Cup in 2006, and various Ministers have hosted a number of receptions on behalf of the bid team. All the receptions hosted by Ministers from his Department were at the expense of the FA bid team.

My predecessor also undertook a number of overseas visits relating to the bid where his expenses were paid for by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. These are as follows:

Date	Venue	Purpose	Total cost £
10–11 June 1997	Paris	Tournoi de France	1,910
10–11 October 1997	Rome	England v Italy Qualifier	2,203
25–31 October 1997	USA\Trinidad\Costa Rica	World Cup Campaign for 2006 with FA	20,434
4–5 December 1997	Marseilles	World Cup Draw	1,211
5–18 February 1998	Tokyo\Seoul\Bangkok	Winter Olympics\Campaign for 2006	21,553

Date	Venue	Purpose	Total cost £
21–23 March 1998	Tunisia	World Cup Campaign for 2006 with FA	0.00
26–29 March 1998	Paraguay\Argentina	World Cup Campaign for 2006 with FA	8,786
19–22 April 1998	Qatar	World Cup Campaign for 2006 with FA	9,150
10–11 June 1998	France	World Cup Campaign for 2006 with FA	379
10–11 July 1998	Paris	Reception at French Embassy by FIFA	1,218
27–29 August 1998	Monte Carlo	Salle Def Etoiles—SCMC UEFA Gala dinner	564
1–2 September 1998	Switzerland	Meeting with President Samaranch and Sepp Blatter	964
5–6 October 1998	Spain	World Cup Campaign for 2006 with FA	1,301
23 October 1998	France	Council of Europe Hearing of Bosman Ruling	421
1–5 November 1998	Cameroon\Mali	World Cup Campaign for 2006 with FA	6,283
12–13 November 1998	Malta	World Cup Campaign for 2006 with FA	45
17 March 1999	Brussels	2006 Bid Meeting	537
22 April-1 May 1999	Nigeria\Botswana\Johannesburg	World Cup Campaign for 2006 with FA	8,922
7–8 May 1999	Malta	2006 plus UK\Malta Sports Week	1,035
25 May-27 June 1999	Barcelona	Championships League Cup Final plus 2006	294
14–17 June 1999	Qatar	World Cup Campaign for 2006 with FA	4,530
6–13 July 1999	Washington, USA	2006 with Anti Doping Discussions	11,040
Total			102,780

Although most of the receptions and visits were specifically related to the 2006 bid, some also encompassed the promotion of British sport as a whole, and fulfilled the duties of the Minister for Sport in this area.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Gibraltar

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the immigration policy operated by the Gibraltar Government in relation to same sex couples; and if he will make a statement. [104107]

Mr. Vaz: Under the 1969 Gibraltar Constitution, the Government of Gibraltar pursue an immigration policy separate from that of the UK, subject to the constraints of EC law.

It is not the policy of the Gibraltar Government to exempt non-EU partners of residents, same sex or otherwise, from the criteria and considerations applicable to applications for residence visas for non-EU nationals generally.

Embassies (Running Costs)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much of the annual running costs of UK embassies in (a) the European Union and (b) the USA relate to (1) diplomacy, (2) business, (3) visas and (4) other activities, in the last year for which figures are available. [104086]

Mr. Hain: In 1997–98 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's running costs were split between (1) diplomacy, (2) commercial work, (3) visas and (4) other activities in the following way:

Percentage

	Diplomacy	Commercial work	Visas	Other activities
European Union
Vienna	29	12	5	54
Brussels	39	28	3	31
Copenhagen	30	27	8	36
Dublin	32	17	3	48
Helsinki	31	28	1	40
Paris	20	16	5	59
Bonn	26	2	0.06	72
Athens	18	17	3	62
Rome	20	9	3	68
Luxembourg	38	12	2	49
The Hague	30	22	0	47
Lisbon	21	27	5	48
Madrid	22	16	2	60
Stockholm	36	24	6	34
USA
Washington DC	63	5	1	31

In subsequent years breakdown of embassy activity is by FCO Objectives, in line with Resource Accounting and Budgeting.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of human rights concerns in Zimbabwe; and what action Her Majesty's Government are taking to address these. [104573]

Mr. Hain: Respect for human rights in Zimbabwe has improved since the low point of the Matabeleland atrocities in the 1980s. Zimbabwe has an active civil society and independent press (albeit harassed at times). However, there have been some serious lapses in the last two years which have coincided with the decline in the economic situation. The arrest and torture of the two Standard journalists in January shocked Zimbabweans as well as the international community.

Freedom of assembly is enshrined in the Constitution. The Government have previously used emergency powers to ban strike action, although a Parliamentary Legal Committee subsequently declared the ban to be unconstitutional.

Zimbabwe is a party to all the international human rights conventions, except the convention against torture. Torture, mainly beatings, is regularly used by the police (understaffed and lacking in training) to secure criminal convictions. There is an independent judiciary.

Where there is evidence of human rights abuses, we raise our concerns with the Zimbabwe authorities. In addition, we actively promote freedom of expression by training journalists in the UK. Earlier this year we held a conference on media freedom in Harare. We support a number of NGOs working with the Zimbabwe police to enhance their respect for human rights. We also support good governance projects, and provide equipment and research material to NGOs working to improve people's access to law. We are encouraging the Zimbabweans to accede to the convention against torture.

Federal Republic of Yugoslavia

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken to control the export of television broadcast equipment to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia; and if he will make a statement. [104574]

Mr. Vaz: As of 5 January 2000, we have introduced an amendment to the Export of Goods (Control) Order to control the export to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) of television cameras, transmitters, codecs and transposers, satellite earth stations and up-and-down link equipment and transmission link and relay equipment. All applications to export these goods will be considered on a case-by-case basis.

We have introduced the control because of our concerns that companies based in the UK may consider supplying this equipment to the state-run television company in the FRY. This company is a propaganda tool of the Milosevic regime and has been consistently used by the regime to defend and promote its repressive policies, most recently and noticeably during the Kosovo crisis.

Wassenaar Arrangement

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the results of the 1999 Assessment of the Wassenaar Arrangement and the role played by the UK. [104575]

Mr. Vaz: The 1999 Assessment of the operation of the Wassenaar Arrangement was concluded at the Arrangement's annual Plenary in Vienna on 1–3 December. The agreed public statement on the Plenary is available on the Arrangement's website (www.wassenaar.org).

We welcome the decision by Participating States to expand the scope of their reporting on their transfers of certain types of conventional arms. As a result, arms pillar reporting requirements in the Wassenaar Arrangement will now for the first time extend beyond those in the UN Registrar of Conventional Arms. We also welcome the Plenary's decisions to structure the information exchange on the basis of global and regional views—as a result of a proposal by the UK—and to mandate the introduction of a secure electronic information system. These steps will greatly increase the value and accessibility of information exchanged by Participating States.

Despite these positive developments, we regret that proposals to include other types of arms in the reporting requirements, including small arms and light weapons, warships of 150–750 metric tonnes displacement and missiles of less than 25km range, were not agreed due to opposition from a small minority of Participating States. We also regret that the Plenary did not agree that Participating States should provide details of decisions to refuse the transfer of military equipment, or details of end-users in all denial notifications for dual-use goods. We continue to believe that these improvements would significantly enhance the ability of Participating States to identify potentially destabilising transfers or accumulation of conventional arms and dual-use goods.

Throughout the course of the 1999 Assessment, most of which was taken forward in the Arrangement's General Working Group under UK chairmanship, the UK has been at the forefront of efforts to increase the effectiveness of the Wassenaar Arrangement. In particular we co-sponsored and lobbied in support of proposals for a substantive increase in arms pillar transparency. We will continue this year to work for the further expansion of reporting requirements, to include in particular transfers of small arms and light weapons. We will also consider the scope for expanding our existing commitment to volunteer details of our transfers of certain types of conventional arms which are not covered by the mandatory reporting requirements.

CABINET OFFICE

Private Sector Secondments

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many staff were seconded from the private sector to her Department in (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999 and (c) May 1999 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the companies from which staff have been seconded. [103604]

Mr. Stringer: The numbers of private sector secondees to the Cabinet Office over the last three years follow.

(a) For the period May 1997 to April 1998, five staff were seconded in from BT, Lloyds Bank plc, Marks & Spencer plc, Nat West Bank plc, and KPMG.

(b) For the period May 1998 to April 1999, six staff were seconded in from Andersen Consulting, Marks & Spencer plc, McKinsey & Co., Nat West Bank plc, and Price Waterhouse.

(c) From May 1999, 16 staff are, or have been, seconded in from Andersen Consulting, Barclays Bank plc, BT, Carillion, Hay Management Consultants, KPMG, Marks & Spencer plc, McKinsey & Co., Microsoft Corporation, Nat West Bank plc, Oracle plc, PricewaterhouseCoopers, Unilever, Wragge & Co. Solicitors, and Zurich Financial Services.

Outsourcing Arrangements

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what arrangements she has made to ensure (a) the continued input of expertise and (b) the effective monitoring of the implementation of the recommendations of the review of major Government IT projects after the expiry of Anne Steward's secondment to the Government. [104243]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The recommendations to improve the delivery of major Government IT projects being developed by the Cabinet Office review team will include a clear statement of which parts of Government will be responsible for their implementation and monitoring.

The study team is consulting widely to draw on the range of expertise available within the Government, and in the private sector and public sector overseas, as its work progresses. It is also considering mechanisms to ensure that expertise is available to public sector projects in the future.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what estimate her Department has made of the impact on the ability of Government Departments to assess bids for the outsourcing of their operations of having previously outsourced all or part of their IT operations. [104244]

Mr. Ian McCartney: All Departments are required to conduct detailed analysis of the costs and benefits of any outsourcing arrangement, including its impact on all aspects of their operation.

The team set up in the Department's Central IT Unit to review major Government IT projects is examining issues relating to the outsourcing of IT functions. The team will make recommendations to ensure that Government IT projects, including outsourcing deals, perform better in the future when it concludes its work in May 2000.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) if she will issue guidance to Government Departments on monitoring the rate of retention of staff of companies to which work has been outsourced by them in the 12 months following the date of the outsourcing; [104245]

(2) what estimate her Department has made of the impact on the Departments' ability to employ former staff employed by an outside organisation under outsourcing arrangements if that organisation fails to renew its contract with the Department; [104247]

(3) what employment protection applies to former staff of Government Departments who are employed by outside organisations as a result of outsourcing arrangements when the organisation concerned fails to have its contract renewed with the Department; [104246]

(4) what guidance she issues to Government Departments concerning the terms and conditions of employment of staff who as a result of outsourcing are employed by sub-contractors of the organisation to which the relevant operation has been outsourced. [104248]

Mr. Stringer: I published, on Friday 7 January 2000, a "Statement of Practice for Staff Transfers in the Public Sector". This follows a public consultation undertaken last year which received widespread support.

The Statement of Practice sets out the Government's policy for ensuring fair and consistent treatment of employees' rights where the public sector is the employer or client in a contracting-out or subsequent retendering situation. The guidance does not require Departments to monitor the rate of retention following a transfer. The approach adopted in the "Statement of Practice", which has the support of unions, public and private sector employers and contractors, is to utilise the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment)—TUPE—Regulations which give individual employment protection rights to employees affected by the relevant transfer.

Contracting-out and subsequent retendering will all be conducted on the basis that staff will transfer and TUPE should apply, unless there are genuinely exceptional reasons not to do so. Under TUPE, an employee's contract is carried across from the transferring employer along with his or her accrued period of service. Terms and conditions of employment cannot be made less beneficial as part of this process and employees cannot normally be lawfully dismissed where the reason is the transfer. Under this approach, staff of Government Departments should transfer to a contractor with TUPE protections and, where a contract is not renewed (by either the contractor or contracting authority), former staff of Government should transfer with TUPE protections to the new contractor. Similar considerations would also apply to sub-contracting.

Copies of "Statement of Practice for Staff Transfers in the Public Sector" are in the Libraries of the House.

HEALTH

Embryology

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans Her Majesty's Government have to propose legislation to prevent the setting up of commercial establishments purporting to select the sex of a baby by embryology. [99751]

Yvette Cooper: Any treatment involving the use of human embryos outside the body is governed by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990. The Act provides that such treatment cannot take place without a licence issued by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority (HFEA).

In January 1993 the HFEA issued a public consultation document on the issues raised by sex selection and the ways of achieving it using assisted conception techniques. Following the consultation, the HFEA decided that licensed infertility clinics could carry out sex selection for medical reasons only in cases where a woman risked having a child with a life-threatening, sex-linked disease. Sex selection for social reasons is not permitted.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of regional variations in the diagnosis and treatment of prostate cancer; and if he will make a statement. [99872]

Yvette Cooper: We are aware of regional variations in the diagnosis, treatment and survival of cancers, including prostate cancer. Data have been published in the report by the Office For National Statistics "Cancer Survival Trends" which provides evidence that cancer survival in adults in England and Wales is generally lower among patients in more deprived groups than those in more affluent groups. Equity of access was a founding principle of the National Health Service and is central to Government policy. It is one of the main aims of the new health strategy set out in the White Paper "Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation".

Professor Mike Richards, the National Cancer Director, will spearhead the drive to modernise all aspects of cancer care, including addressing regional variations in survival rates. His role will be to ensure people in this country have faster, fairer cancer care. He will work in partnership with doctors, nurses, general practitioners, other health professionals and the voluntary sector to improve prevention and modernise cancer services to help ensure equitable access to high-quality cancer care.

By December 2000 all urgent GP referrals of suspected prostate cancer should be seen by a consultant within two weeks of referral. Work is under way to develop national standards and performance indicators for rollout from April 2000, and the National Institute for Clinical Excellence will be commissioning outcomes guidance on four further cancer sites over the next two years. Urological cancers (including prostate cancer) will be the first of these.

E.coli

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the reported outbreaks within the UK over the last year of E coli 0157 poisoning. [100203]

Yvette Cooper: Information on reported outbreaks of E.Coli 0157 within England and Wales have been collected by the Public Health Laboratory Service since 1992. The table gives details of all general outbreaks of E.Coli 0157 infection in England and Wales reported to the PHLS Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre and Laboratory of Enteric Pathogens in the period November 1998-October 1999 (inclusive). However, the PHLS can only provide data for England and Wales.

Information on data for Northern Ireland and Scotland should be sought from their respective administrations.

Year	Month	Region	Place of outbreak
1998	November	West Midlands	Hospital
1999	February	Northern and Yorkshire	Community (Dairy)
1999	March	Northern and Yorkshire	Community (Retailer)
1999	April	Trent	Farm
1999	May	North West	Community (Dairy)
1999	May	South East	Community (Butcher)
1999	May	Northern and Yorkshire	Hospital
1999	May	Wales	Farm
1999	July	Trent	Prison
1999	July	North West	Public House
1999	July	Wales	Camp Site
1999	August	South West	Beach
1999	August	Wales	Community (Butcher)
1999	September	South East	Restaurant
1999	September	North West	Nursing Home
1999	September	Northern and Yorkshire	Community
1999	October	London	Nursery

Note:
All data are provisional.

Borderline Products

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the Government's assessment of the public response to the Medicines Control Agency's proposals for classifying borderline products, as published in its consultation letter MLX 249. [100254]

Yvette Cooper: As a result of the public response to the consultation proposals, we announced on 16 July that changes would be made. The three principal changes are as follows:

the draft regulations will include an express requirement for full disclosures of the reasons for the Medicines Control Agency's provisional and final determinations;

the review panel to look at the MCA's provisional determinations and advise the licensing authority—the licensing authority will be independent of the MCA;

if a final determination is challenged, the MCA will have to prove in any criminal proceedings that the product is a medicinal product.

NHS Expenditure (Barnet)

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total expenditure on all national health services in the borough of Barnet in each of the last five years. [100215]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 29 November 1999]: The information is not available in the format requested. Information on expenditure on National Health Service services is not collected by borough.

Expenditure figures for Barnet Health Authority for 1996–97 to 1998–99 are available as follows. Before 1996–97 funding was allocated to Family Health Services Authorities and HA's separately. Comparable figures are not available. The figure for 1996–97 includes drugs expenditure. Since 1997–98 the majority of drugs expenditure has been accounted for by the Prescription Pricing Authority and cannot be identified by HA. For consistency, the figures have been adjusted to reflect this.

£000

Year	HA total expenditure [1, 2]	HA expenditure (adjusted) [3]
1996–97	210,456	193,573
1997–98	209,238	208,437
1998–99 (provisional)	209,462	208,671

[1] Figures are taken from HA annual accounts which are prepared on a resource basis and therefore differ from cash allocations in each year. Comparisons between years may be distorted by expenditure carried over from the previous year.
[2] These are not the total amounts spent on health care. General dental services expenditure is separately accounted for and cannot be analysed by HA over the three years.
[3] Figures have been reduced by the amount of non-cash limited prescribing expenditure accounted for by the HA in each year.

Oncology Drug Expenditure

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what progress has been made in assessing the report on the level of oncology drug expenditure in the United Kingdom by the Campaign for Effective and Rational Treatment, and if he will make a statement; [100596]

(2) if he will begin to collate data from health authorities on their spending on oncology drugs; and if he will make a statement. [100595]

Yvette Cooper: Professor Mike Richards, the National Cancer Director, will shortly begin to collate data on the provision of chemotherapy and will be discussing with the National Institute for Clinical Excellence the need to make available, early, clear guidance on the effectiveness of new and emerging cancer drugs. Professor Richards has already started to meet key professional groups to discuss how they can best work with him to start to address the challenging cancer agenda and is planning to meet the Campaign for Effective and Rational Treatment early in the new year.

Malnutrition

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next plans to meet the British Association for Parenteral and Enteral Nutrition to discuss the public health aspects of malnutrition. [100632]

Yvette Cooper: I am aware of several letters from hon. Members enclosing invitations to meet the British Association for Parenteral and Enteral Nutrition. I will reply to these shortly.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the level of malnutrition among hospital patients in the United Kingdom. [100630]

Yvette Cooper: The number of admissions to National Health Service hospitals in England with a diagnosis of malnutrition during the financial year 1997–98 was 6,293.

Source:

Hospital Episode Statistics.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost saving of early detection and treatment of malnutrition among hospital patients. [100631]

Yvette Cooper: In 1992 the King's Fund reported that nutritional support of malnourished patients could lead to reduced complication rates and reduced length of hospital stay. They estimated that this might lead to a saving of up to £266 million annually in Britain.

Birth Weights

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) babies born by in-vitro fertilisation and (b) other babies, in each of the last 20 years, weighed (i) over 3,000 g, (ii) over 2,500 g but less than 3,000 g, (iii) over 2,000 g but less than 2,500 g and (iv) less than 2,000 g. [100814]

Yvette Cooper: The information that is available has been placed in the Library.

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the relative cost-effectiveness of treating cold-related illnesses through the eradication of fuel poverty via energy efficiency improvements. [100820]

Yvette Cooper: Through the introduction of the New Home Energy Efficiency Scheme and other initiatives, we are working to combat fuel poverty. Energy efficiency improvements are an effective means of tackling the many health problems related to cold conditions in homes. Our aim is to improve health, reduce health inequalities and ensure that vulnerable households need no longer risk ill health due to a cold home.

Cancer (Death Rates)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanism he proposes to monitor the proposed target to reduce the death rate from cancer by 20 per cent. by 2010. [101422]

Yvette Cooper: The target is to reduce the death rate from all cancers among those aged under 75 years by at least 20 per cent. by the year 2010. Progress towards this target will be monitored annually using data from cancer death registrations collected and published by the Office for National Statistics.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements (a) he and (b) Ministers in his Department have put in place for the taking and keeping of minutes of meetings between Ministers and people outside his Department. [102380]

Yvette Cooper: Decisions on the format of minutes of meetings will depend on the nature of the discussion.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for each of the buildings under his Department's control how many rooms are set aside for (a) ethnic minority religious use, (b) pregnant and nursing mothers and (c) smokers. [102332]

Yvette Cooper: In the eleven buildings where the Department is the major Government occupier, there are no rooms set aside specifically for ethnic minority religious use. A total of three rooms are available exclusively for pregnant and nursing mothers, and 27 rooms for smokers.

Royal Marsden and Christie Hospitals

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (a) how many patients were treated, (b) what was the number of (i) beds and (ii) consultant surgeons and (c) what was the revenue budget for the financial year 1998–99 for (A) the Royal Marsden Hospital in London and (B) the Christie Hospital in Manchester. [102514]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 13 December 1999]: The figures for the number of patients treated and the number of beds for 1998–99 are not yet available. However in view of the unique factors affecting the Royal Marsden Hospital, such as the major complex surgery undertaken, the different case mix and the higher building and capital costs, a simplistic comparison of the data for both hospitals would not produce any meaningful results.

As at 30 September 1998, the Christie Hospital and the Royal Marsden Hospitals had 2 and 7 consultants respectively, whose first speciality was recorded in the Surgical Group. However, there are a number of consultants based in hospitals across Manchester and Salford who have operating rights at the Christie Hospital but who will not be included in the centrally collected statistics.

The 1998–99 revenue income for the Christie Hospital is £57,347,000, and for the Royal Marsden Hospital it is £74,873,000.

Cancer Treatment

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many additional (a) oncologists and (b) other consultants specialising in the care of cancer will be recruited under his plans for treating cancer. [102768]

Yvette Cooper: Professor Mike Richards, the National Cancer Director, has identified the need to review the cancer workforce as his top priority. He is currently discussing workforce, skill mix, and recruitment and retention issues with professional groups to enable patients to receive faster and fairer access to cancer services.

Needle Exchange Services

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Government-funded needle exchange services are available for drug addicts (a) in the North-West region and (b) in England and Wales. [102699]

Yvette Cooper: This information is not available centrally for England or the North-West region.

Information from local sources is that there are about 45 Government-funded needle exchange schemes based in agencies in the North-West region. In addition, there are pharmacy schemes and mobile outreach teams (which may be Government-funded needle exchange services); no reliable information on these is available.

Information for Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the First Secretary for Wales.

Food Safety

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that local authorities do not reduce levels of service under the Food Safety Act 1990 prior to the commencement of the Food Standards Agency's operation. [103297]

Yvette Cooper: Decisions on the provision of food law enforcement services are for local authorities in the light of local circumstances. Officials are involved in discussions with the local authorities' co-ordinating body on food and trading standards about the arrangements which will operate for the planning, monitoring and audit of local authority enforcement when the Food Standards Agency is established next year.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the expenditure per head of population for shire county local authorities on their public health functions under the Food Safety Act 1990 for the latest year for which figures are available. [103296]

Yvette Cooper: County councils do not provide public health services under the Food Safety Act 1990. Certain food law enforcement functions are the responsibility of County councils but information on such expenditure is not separately identifiable in the returns received centrally.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he gives to public analysts for setting sampling rates for samples taken for analysis under the Food Safety Act 1990. [103298]

Yvette Cooper: There is no central guidance on a specific level of sampling to public analysts or local authorities. Decisions on the provision of food law enforcement services are for local authorities in the light of local circumstances.

Gamma Hydroxy Butyrate

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to raise awareness of the dangers of gamma hydroxy butyrate. [103377]

Yvette Cooper: Information on the dangers of gamma hydroxy butyrate is included in the leaflets "The Score" (targeted at 14–16 year olds) and "D-MAG" (targeted at 16 and upwards) produced by the Health Education Authority as part of a campaign on behalf of the Department which aims to educate 11–25 year olds and parents about the dangers of drug misuse.

In order to further raise awareness regarding the dangers and physical effects of gamma hydroxy butyrate, the Medicines Control Agency has issued briefings to Heads of Police Force Intelligence Bureaux, Trading Standard Officers and Environmental Health Officers. This action was supplemented by a series of presentations by the MCA, in conjunction with the National Criminal Intelligence Service, to the 43 regional police forces throughout the country.

Departmental Productivity

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to increase the productivity and reduce the running costs of his Department. [103849]

Yvette Cooper: The Department's running cost allocations for financial years covered by the comprehensive spending review (1999–2000 to 2001–02) assumed that pressures arising from price inflation would be absorbed by efficiency and productivity gains of 3.5 per cent. a year. These gains are being delivered through the Department's better quality services programme, use of its organisational development function and through a range of internal and external reviews and inspections (including peer reviews of internal resource allocation).

"Fit for the Future?"

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the cost implications for residential homes for the elderly of the proposals contained in the consultation document, "Fit for the Future?" ; and if he will make a statement. [103471]

Mr. Hutton: The Department commissioned Laing and Buisson to work on a cost-benefit analysis of the standards to ascertain the likely burden on providers. Additional information was gathered from heads of inspection regarding the current standard of provision. Information from these studies was published in the consultation document "Fit for the Future?", together with a draft regulatory impact appraisal.

Overhead Powerlines

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to test the validity of the scientific research underlying recent studies into the link between overhead powerlines and skin cancer. [103600]

Yvette Cooper: In research published recently in the International Journal of Radiation Biology, scientists from Bristol University reported observations of increased deposition of natural radionuclides near power lines. The authors suggest that this might lead to an increased risk of skin cancer for people living under high voltage powerlines. This research was financed in part by the Department.

The Department will consider the results of this study in the context of other work in this area and has asked for views from the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB). The NRPB's Advisory Group on Non-ionising Radiation is reviewing the research in this area and will report in the New Year.

Care Homes

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private nursing homes and residential homes there were in the United Kingdom in (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 1999. [103836]

Mr. Hutton: The numbers of independent residential and nursing care homes in England at 31 March 1997 and 1998 are 26,600 and 26,700 respectively. Data for 1999 are not yet available. Information for the remainder of the United Kingdom is a matter for the relevant devolved authorities.

Negative Pressure Therapy

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent guidelines he has issued to health authorities on the use of negative pressure therapy. [R] [103096]

Yvette Cooper: The Department has not issued any specific guidance on the use of negative pressure therapy.

The most appropriate method of wound care should be determined by a clinician.

BCG Vaccine

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if resources allocated to the BCG vaccination programme have been transferred (a) in the short term and (b) permanently to the vaccination programme for meningitis. [103396]

Yvette Cooper: Funding for the meningococcal Group C immunisation programme has come from a separate source to that used to fund the BCG immunisation programme. We are aware that some health workers, especially school nurses, involved in delivering BCG vaccine, are currently involved in the meningococcal Group C immunisation programme in schools. Up to £9 million of new money is being made available to health authorities to support the meningococcal Group C immunisation programme, in addition to the central purchase and supply of vaccine at no cost to health authorities.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the level of stocks of BCG vaccine in the NHS. [103392]

Yvette Cooper: BCG vaccine has been in limited supply for a number of months due to severe manufacturing problems encountered by the sole United Kingdom licensed source, Medeva Pharma Ltd. Stocks are now being delivered. Until manufacture resumes to viable quantities, stocks are being used specifically for those at highest risk.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to give priority to Brentwood when stocks of BCG vaccine become available. [103399]

Yvette Cooper: While BCG vaccine is in limited supply from the manufacturer, Medeva Pharma Ltd., stocks are being used for those at highest risk. Priority of supply is made on the basis of clinical need, not geographical location. Brentwood will be treated equally with other areas according to the risk.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which health authorities do not provide BCG vaccinations as a routine procedure. [103646]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 21 December 1999]: BCG immunisation against tuberculosis at age 10–14 is nationally recommended as routine. We are aware that a small number of health authorities have not been providing routine BCG immunisation for all 10 to 14-year-olds. We do not keep records of which health authorities do not routinely immunise 10 to 14-year-olds.

Health Services (Age Discrimination)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he has in place to combat age discrimination in the provision of health services. [103244]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 21 December 1999]: Discrimination of any kind—whether it is on the basis of age, race or gender—is completely unacceptable in the National Health Service. Treatment should rest entirely on clinical need. We are determined to provide older people with care that meets their needs—fast, efficient and sensitive. Already we have extended the annual immunisation programme for influenza to ensure that everyone aged 75 and over can have the flu vaccine free of charge. Over the next three years we will be expanding cataract services to increase the number of cataract operations from 170,000 a year currently to 250,000 a year—this will benefit thousands of older people. From 1 April this year all people aged 60 and over are entitled to free eye tests, regardless of income or health status. We are also developing a National Service Framework (NSF) for Older People. This, for the first time, will set national standards for the care of older people, driving up the quality and reducing variations in that care. The NSF will be published next year.

Cancer Patients (Fertility Treatment)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the decision to deny women cancer patients access to their stored eggs. [103653]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 21 December 1999]: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority is responsible under the terms of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 among other things for licensing decisions for the storage of human eggs. The Act provides for appeals to be made to the Authority in certain circumstances where an applicant is not satisfied with a licensing decision. I understand that an appeal will be heard by the Authority later this month.

Musculoskeletal Conditions

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve services to people suffering from arthritis and other musculoskeletal conditions. [102840]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 21 December 1999]: I refer my hon. Friend to the comments I made during the adjournment debate on arthritis on 13 December 1999, Official Report, columns 126–30.

High-security Hospitals (Staffing)

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes there have been in the figures for vacancies in high-security hospitals for (a) nurses, (b) nursing assistants, (c) occupational therapists, (d) forensic psychologists and (e) psychiatrists since his answer of 26 May 1999, Official Report, columns 159–60W. [104345]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available centrally. The high-security hospitals are well advanced on a programme of full integration with the rest of the National Health Service. The integration process is now being taken forward at a local level and workforces issues are a matter for local consideration.

Generic Drugs

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the change in the cost of generic drugs in the last year and its effect on the NHS. [104010]

Ms Stuart: During 1999 the Drug Tariff price of the top two hundred generic drugs dispensed in the community rose by over a third on average. On 21 December we announced additional in-year funding of £90 million to help the National Health Service manage the pressures from generic prices on health authority budgets.

The Government have put in place a fundamental review of the way generics are supplied to the NHS to see whether existing arrangements best serve the service and to identify possible alternatives. The conclusions of the programme of work are expected by the summer.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Higher Education Funding Council

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for the future chairmanship of the Higher Education Funding Council for England. [104621]

Mr. Wicks: My right hon. Friend has appointed the current chairman, Sir Michael Checkland, to serve for a further year until 30 September 2001. We are very grateful to Sir Michael for his contribution to the work of the council over the last three years and for his willingness to continue to serve as chairman.

Education Action Zones

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will report on the progress of the first round of education action zones. [104451]

Ms Estelle Morris: These zones have now been running for 12 to 16 months and the early signs are that they are doing well. The summer 1999 exam results show that the zones are raising standards in these disadvantaged areas. At Key Stage 2, there was a 6 per cent. average improvement in English and 12 per cent. improvement in maths in EAZ schools compared to national increases of 5 per cent. and 10 per cent. There was a 2 per cent. average improvement in the numbers of pupils gaining 1 GCSE A*-G grade in EAZ schools compared to a national increase of 1 per cent.

The Comptroller and Auditor General yesterday placed in both Libraries of Parliament audited financial accounts for the 1998–99 financial year for four of the first round zones. These show that, even in their first seven months of operation, the zones attracted significant additional funding to education from the private and public sectors.

Ufi Ltd.

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will set out the framework, including controls, within which the Department will provide financial support to Ufi Ltd. [104449]

Mr. Wicks: Ufi Ltd. is a private company limited by guarantee established by the Secretary of State in October 1998. The company is seeking charitable status. By making use of information and communications technologies it will encourage innovative and cost-effective ways to learn.

The Department exercises a number of controls over Ufi Ltd. The company's Memorandum and Articles of Association were approved by the Secretary of State. The Secretary of State also has the right to appoint the Chairman and between 30 and 49 per cent. of the Board Directors/members of the company, and to approve the appointment of the Chief Executive.

The Funding Agreement between the Secretary of State and Ufi Ltd. provides for a number of checks and controls on the spending of public funds. It specifies that a Financial Plan, which sets out the company's financial proposals and reflects the guidance the Secretary of State may give Ufi Ltd., shall be submitted to the Secretary of State annually. The Financial Plan must take into account guidance issued by the Secretary of State annually. The Financial Plan must be approved by the Secretary of State and it is subsequently monitored by the Department. The Financial Plan relates Ufi Ltd.'s costs to its activities in the year covered by the plan. The Funding Agreement and the Financial Plan provide the basis for financial support.

In recognition of the market in which Ufi Ltd. will operate, the company will own the assets it creates (mainly intellectual property rights on learning products) and retain any receipts from the disposal of assets. The Department will take account of any income received by the company as a result of Government investment, including asset disposal proceeds, in fixing the level of future financial support. This regime will apply only so long as the company receives Government support; any such income received by the company after it has achieved financial independence will be treated as its own.

The Funding Agreement also provides for UfI Ltd.'s intellectual property rights to be assigned to the Secretary of State if the Funding Agreement is terminated due to UfI Ltd.'s breach of contract or insolvency. The Memorandum of the company provides that if the company is wound up or dissolved the Secretary of State has a right of veto over the disposition of any remaining assets.

Higher Education Students

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate the additional annual cost of support for students attending higher education institutions in England if the support arrangements applicable in 1979, including grants uprated by inflation, were to be applied to the number of students in the 1998–99 academic year. [101950]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 13 December 1999]: The student support system for English and Welsh students has changed significantly over the past 20 years and the levels of grant received by higher education students in 1979 are not known precisely. However, assuming that approximately 800,000 eligible English and Welsh students in 1998–99 received the main rates of maintenance grant for the academic year 1978–79 uplifted for inflation over 20 years, we estimate that they would receive slightly less on average in real terms than from the current loans and grant fee package.

If these 800,000 eligible students had been offered a grant for maintenance and free tuition instead of the current package of a repayable loan for maintenance and private contributions towards the cost of tuition, the additional costs to the Department might have been about £660 million; and we estimate that such a system would cost about £1.6 billion more than full implementation of the new arrangements for fees and income-contingent loans applying for students starting in the current (1999–2000) academic year.

Our student support policies share the costs of higher education more equitably between students who benefit from it and the taxpayer. That has enabled us to halt the decline in investment in higher education and helped provide for a 22 per cent. increase in cash funding by 2001–02.

LEA Administrative Costs

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 6 December 1999, Official Report, column 416W, on local education authority administration costs, if he will list, for each local education authority, the percentage of its education budget spent on administration, ranked in decreasing order. [102859]

Ms Estelle Morris: The following table gives, for each local education authority in England, information on administration expenditure, encompassing central management and administration and service, strategy and regulation costs, in decreasing percentage order for the financial year 1997–98.

Expenditure on administration by LEAs in England for financial year 1997–98

LEA number/name	Expenditure on central management administration and service strategy and regulation costs (£000)	Total education expenditure (£000)	Administration as percentage of total education expenditure
201 London, City of	640	3,045	21.02
856 Leicester City	16,577	144,189	11.50
813 North Lincolnshire	5,227	68,560	7.62
204 Hackney	8,037	109,663	7.33
320 Waltham Forest	7,579	104,170	7.28
826 Milton Keynes	5,128	71,491	7.17
202 Camden	6,018	85,137	7.07
203 Greenwich	8,318	119,500	6.96
355 Salford	6,808	100,302	6.79
213 Westminster, City of	5,143	79,172	6.50
319 Sutton	3,825	59,135	6.47
211 Tower Hamlets	8,867	138,041	6.42
305 Bromley	4,638	72,825	6.37
921 Isle of Wight	3,233	53,117	6.09
312 Hillingdon	3,878	64,706	5.99
307 Ealing	6,576	111,613	5.89
308 Enfield	6,959	121,535	5.73
922 Kent	27,805	490,388	5.67
303 Bexley	4,780	84,328	5.67
210 Southwark	6,505	115,502	5.63
825 Buckinghamshire	10,175	183,122	5.56
205 Hammersmith and Fulham	3,631	66,525	5.46
315 Merton	3,745	68,753	5.45
206 Islington	5,222	96,680	5.40
803 South Gloucestershire	5,222	97,604	5.35
837 Bournemouth	2,252	42,824	5.26
390 Gateshead	4,343	85,753	5.06
801 Bristol, City of	7,427	150,630	4.93
340 Knowsley	3,518	72,887	4.83
846 Brighton and Hove	4,044	84,308	4.80
836 Poole	1,736	36,198	4.80
393 South Tyneside	3,208	66,931	4.79

Expenditure on administration by LEAs in England for financial year 1997–98

LEA number/name	Expenditure on central management administration and service strategy and regulation costs (£000)	Total education expenditure (£000)	Administration as percentage of total education expenditure
805 Hartlepool	1,899	39,627	4.79
207 Kensington and Chelsea	2,409	50,930	4.73
865 Wiltshire	5,915	125,183	4.73
212 Wandsworth	3,823	81,418	4.70
802 North Somerset	3,502	74,918	4.67
301 Barking and Dagenham	3,782	82,155	4.60
381 Calderdale	2,882	63,093	4.57
806 Middlesbrough	2,890	64,150	4.51
857 Rutland	374	8,377	4.46
845 East Sussex	7,767	174,200	4.46
209 Lewisham	5,355	123,671	4.33
841 Darlington	1,656	38,586	4.29
916 Gloucestershire	6,431	151,161	4.25
391 Newcastle upon Tyne	5,210	124,861	4.17
925 Lincolnshire	7,965	192,649	4.13
314 Kingston upon Thames	1,887	45,821	4.12
800 Bath and North East Somerset	2,685	65,303	4.11
384 Wakefield	4,961	123,743	4.01
382 Kirklees	6,401	160,668	3.98
930 Nottinghamshire	16,335	410,159	3.98
341 Liverpool	8,431	214,669	3.93
937 Warwickshire	6,914	176,695	3.91
313 Hounslow	3,902	100,550	3.88
929 Northumberland	4,918	127,147	3.87
344 Wirral	5,324	137,692	3.87
310 Harrow	3,444	90,658	3.80
931 Oxfordshire	8,468	224,742	3.77
318 Richmond upon Thames	2,302	61,268	3.76
936 Surrey	11,662	311,806	3.74
812 North East Lincolnshire	2,573	69,514	3.70
861 Stoke on Trent	3,484	95,220	3.66
420 Isles of Scilly	48	1,315	3.65
840 Durham	7,556	207,933	3.63
354 Rochdale	3,124	86,880	3.60
933 Somerset	6,492	182,668	3.55
352 Manchester	7,160	201,489	3.55
905 Cambridgeshire	8,392	236,410	3.55
373 Sheffield	6,408	185,078	3.46
357 Tameside	2,935	86,124	3.41
302 Barnet	4,021	118,117	3.40
855 Leicestershire	7,991	234,971	3.40
334 Solihull	2,960	87,664	3.38
372 Rotherham	3,626	108,887	3.33
923 Lancashire	19,887	600,316	3.31
808 Stockton on Tees	2,562	77,953	3.29
820 Bedfordshire	4,738	145,643	3.25
811 East Riding of Yorkshire	4,057	125,270	3.24
304 Brent	2,883	89,318	3.23
359 Wigan	4,094	127,446	3.21
356 Stockport	3,434	106,917	3.21
850 Hampshire	13,474	422,229	3.19
342 St. Helens	2,519	78,961	3.19
938 West Sussex	8,767	275,954	3.18
810 Kingston upon Hull, City of	3,464	109,040	3.18
831 Derby City	2,428	76,492	3.17
333 Sandwell	4,199	132,886	3.16
383 Leeds	9,419	298,406	3.16
311 Havering	2,623	83,266	3.15
821 Luton	2,436	77,349	3.15
903 Berkshire	8,404	267,657	3.14
316 Newham	4,267	135,924	3.14
336 Wolverhampton	3,464	112,340	3.08
919 Hertfordshire	11,744	381,000	3.08
306 Croydon	3,604	117,322	3.07
815 North Yorkshire	6,894	226,612	3.04
851 Portsmouth	1,952	64,417	3.03
380 Bradford	6,516	215,243	3.03
370 Barnsley	2,555	84,761	3.01
351 Bury	2,173	72,152	3.01
350 Bolton	3,284	110,539	2.97

Expenditure on administration by LEAs in England for financial year 1997–98

LEA number/name	Expenditure on central management administration and service strategy and regulation costs (£000)	Total education expenditure (£000)	Administration as percentage of total education expenditure
309 Haringey	3,431	115,506	2.97
807 Redcar and Cleveland	1,907	65,203	2.92
332 Dudley	3,070	109,300	2.81
343 Sefton	3,611	129,018	2.80
330 Birmingham	13,139	474,930	2.77
928 Northamptonshire	5,848	219,386	2.67
866 Swindon	1,485	56,529	2.63
371 Doncaster	3,477	132,740	2.62
358 Trafford	1,906	73,978	2.58
908 Cornwall	4,839	191,084	2.53
911 Devon	9,049	379,671	2.38
317 Redbridge	2,566	111,188	2.31
835 Dorset	3,066	132,855	2.31
932 Shropshire	3,549	159,324	2.23
353 Oldham	2,343	106,845	2.19
906 Cheshire	8,888	409,158	2.17
335 Walsall	2,258	106,613	2.12
816 York, City of	1,359	64,254	2.12
935 Suffolk	5,309	255,730	2.08
909 Cumbria	3,581	172,573	2.08
926 Norfolk	5,349	261,104	2.05
830 Derbyshire	4,688	246,721	1.90
918 Hereford and Worcester	4,791	255,477	1.88
394 Sunderland	2,218	121,571	1.82
331 Coventry	2,518	148,766	1.69
392 North Tyneside	1,217	79,219	1.54
915 Essex	5,872	423,907	1.39
852 Southampton	1,058	80,828	1.31
208 Lambeth	768	101,093	0.76
860 Staffordshire	2,243	301,949	0.74
Total	678,572	18,898,737	3.59

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had since May 1997 relating to the 16-hour rule and further education colleges; and if he will make a statement. [103647]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 21 December 1999]: We have received a number of representations from individuals and organisations regarding further education colleges and the 16-hour study role in Jobseeker's Allowance. These were mainly in response to the White Paper "Learning to Succeed" published in July 1999, where we introduced proposals for a new system of post-16 learning which is responsive to the needs of individuals, companies and communities. The White Paper, and the Learning and Skills Council Prospectus which was published in December, set out our plans for the new Learning and Skills Council which will ensure a co-ordinated and coherent approach to post-16 learning.

We have taken positive measures to increase the opportunities for study among unemployed people. The New Deal for Young People aged 18 to 24 forms a key part of the Government's Welfare to Work agenda and comprises four options, all of which contain an element of training. The Full-Time Education and Training Option offers opportunities for young people to study full-time in order to enhance their prospects of finding a job. In June 1998 we introduced Education and Training Opportunities under the New Deal for those aged 25 and over. These allow people unemployed for two years or more to undertake full-time employment-related courses for up to a year whilst continuing to receive Jobseeker's Allowance.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Pesticides

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the applications received by the Pesticides Safety Directorate for the use of (i) glufosinate ammonium and (ii) glyphosate on genetically modified herbicide resistant crops, for each application giving (a) the name of the applicant, (b) the crop for which approval is sought, (c) the date the application was received and (d) the date at which the decision by the Pesticides Safety Directorate will be announced. [101749]

Ms Quin [holding answer 9 December 1999]: At present, for reasons of commercial confidentiality, details of any application for the approval of a pesticide are not made publicly available unless and until approval itself is given. We are, however, to review the current arrangements to see if there is scope for greater openness and transparency.

Religious Slaughter

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has

(a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the enforcement of the law with regard to (a) Halal and (b) Shechita religious slaughter; and if he will make a statement. [102257]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 14 December 1999]: No research into the enforcement of the law with regard to religious slaughter has been commissioned or evaluated by my Department.

Enforcement of welfare at slaughter legislation, including in relation to religious slaughter, is the responsibility of the Meat Hygiene Service and the State Veterinary Service.

Beef Sales

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of the meat and meat offal products of bovine animals that were banned under the beef bones Regulations SI 1997/2959 will be eligible for sale under the draft regulations he intends to use to lift the ban on beef on the bone. [102059]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 9 December 1999]: The Beef Bones (Amendment) (England) Regulations 1999, which came into force on 17 December, permit the retail sale of all bone-in beef and beef bones for human consumption. In accordance with the advice of the Chief Medical Officers that it would not be prudent to lift the controls of manufacturing uses of bone-in beef and beef bones, these continue to apply. No information is available on the relative percentages these represent of the products banned under the original Regulations, but my primary concern is the protection of public health, based on the scientific and medical advice I receive. This significant relaxation of the beef bones controls has been warmly welcomed.

Fish Stocks

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to what extent primary quota stocks have been affected by (a) environmental change, (b) sea water temperature change, (c) fishing effort and (d) seals and other predators, in the last three years. [103667]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 December 1999]: It is not possible to distinguish the exact changes attributable to environmental change and those due to sea water temperature change alone. Any temperature-related changes will in any case not be the same for all species. Cod stocks, for example, are likely to benefit from colder conditions while sole stocks may suffer severe losses from cold sea water temperatures as happened in the winters of 1962–63 and 1995–96.

The general increase in fishing effort over the past decades is primarily responsible for the low level of commercial stocks. However, the recent poor production of young cod stocks is likely to be attributable to a combination of low adult stock size and unusually warm sea temperatures.

The effects of seals and other predators on fish stocks have been the subject of multispecies research in the North Sea. Here, over four million tonnes of fish are eaten annually by other fish. In comparison, fish consumption by seals is estimated at less than 200,000 tonnes of which a significant amount is young fish and sandeels.

Farmers (Regulatory Burden)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received from farmers concerning the level and cost of regulations affecting farming in (a) the UK and (b) other EU member states. [103398]

Ms Quin: In September 1999 we invited the NFU and other interested organisations to identify burdens that affected business. We now have reports from the three working groups we set up to look at the three priority areas and will be studying these carefully to see where we can change requirements in the UK and where we need to press for changes in Brussels. Reports on other more specific areas identified for review will become available for similar consideration over the next few weeks.

Over-30-Months Scheme

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for changes to the Over-Thirty-Months Scheme. [103353]

Ms Quin: In due course (following advice from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee) it may be appropriate to discuss the Over-Thirty-Months Scheme with European partners on the over-thirty-month rule. In the meantime the Government's planning assumption is that the Scheme will continue for the foreseeable future.

Livestock Slaughter Regulations

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to remove restrictions in livestock slaughter regulations; and what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of introducing an intermediate stamp to allow abattoirs to slaughter 40 units a day. [103389]

Ms Quin: These issues were addressed in the report of the Meat Industry Red Tape Working Group which was published on 13 December 1999. A copy is available in the Library of the House and on the MAFF internet site. The Government are now considering the Working Group's recommendations and will give its response in the new year.

Meat Hygiene Service

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to increase the use of information technology within the Meat Hygiene Service. [103395]

Ms Quin: The Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) uses a large number of information technology (IT) systems as part of its everyday operations and has an ongoing IT strategy to develop and use additional systems as a means of improving efficiency.

To this end, the MHS is currently developing a number of initiatives, one of which relates to the use of scanning technology. For example, all Hygiene Assessment System (HAS) scores contained in the HAS Supplement of the November 1999 edition of the Meat Hygiene Enforcement Report were collated for the first time by the MHS using scanning technology. The MHS now intends to extend its use of this technology to other areas.

Abattoirs and Meat Processing Plants

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in what proportion of the time official veterinary surgeons spend in abattoirs and meat processing plants they are not engaged in inspection duties. [103400]

Ms Quin: Only a very small proportion (estimated at around 1 per cent.) of the time spent by Official Veterinary Surgeons (OVSs) in abattoirs and meat processing plants is not engaged on inspection duties.

The remainder and vast majority of the time charged by OVSs in abattoirs and meat processing plants is spent on carrying out statutory inspection duties or on activities which directly support them. These duties include: ante mortem and post mortem inspection and hygiene supervision; the supervision of SRM controls; the supervision of animal welfare; and associated administrative activities. The Meat Hygiene Service does not analyse time in plants below that directly chargeable to operators.

Farm Subsidies (Wiltshire)

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total value of approved payments to Wiltshire farmers for (a) the 1998 calendar year and (b) the 1989–99 financial year; and if he will list by value to Wiltshire farmers CAP schemes supporting market prices but which do not involve payments made directly to them. [102899]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 20 December 1999]: The total value of approved payments to Wiltshire farmers for the 1998 calendar year and the 1998–99 financial year is as follows:

£000

	1998 Calendar	1998–99 Financial
Arable Area Payments Scheme	32,116	32,700
Environmentally Sensitive Area	309	376
Sheep Annual Premium Scheme	1,400	1,348
Suckler Cow Premium Scheme	2,254	2,288
Farm Woodland Premium Scheme	180	181
Farm Woodland Scheme	75	75
Organic Aid Scheme	116	140
Nitrate Sensitive Area	42	42
Countryside Stewardship Scheme	612	576
Habitat	156	156
Countryside Access Scheme	2	2
Beef Special Premium Scheme	3,572	3,661
	40,834	41,545

CAP schemes supporting market prices which benefit UK farmers but do not involve payments made directly to them are as follows. It is not possible to record the impact of these support measures on a county basis.

	Price
(1) The rates for the purchase of intervention commodities for the 1999 marketing year are:
Beef	euro 3,475 per tonne (this is the intervention price but the maximum buying in price is determined by reference to market prices and tenders submitted)
Cereals	euro 119.5 per tonne (rising by monthly increments between November and May to a maximum of euro 126.9 per tonne)
Dairy:
Butter	euro 2,953.8 per tonne (maximum buying in price—amount paid dependent on tender)
Skimmed Milk Powder	euro 2,055.2 per tonne
(2) The rates for Private Storage Aid are:
Pigmeat	euro 463 per tonne (maximum)
Sheepmeat	euro 1,400 per tonne
(3) In addition farmers also benefit indirectly from the following trader-based schemes designed to support the agriculture market
Liquid Skimmed Milk for Stockfeed	euro 58 per tonne
Skimmed Milk Powder for Animal Feed	euro 715.1 per tonne
School Milk Subsidy:
(wholemilk)	euro 29.44 per 100kg
(Skimmed Milk)	euro 18.58 per 100 kg
Casein Production Subsidy	euro 6.42 per 100kg of Skimmed Milk
NPO Butter	euro 105 per 100kg
Butter for Manufacture	rate of aid varies depending on fat content of butter
Aid rate for 80% fat butter between	euro 880–920 per tonne
82% fat butter	euro 910–950 per tonne
Cream	euro 380–400 per tonne
Flax	euro 815.86 per HA
Hemp	euro 662.88 per HA
Dehydrated Fodder	euro 68.83 per tonne
Fruit and Vegetable Withdrawals:
Cauliflowers	euro 8.38 per 100kg
Apples	euro 9.94 per 100kg
Pears	euro 9.46 per 100kg

	Price
Fruit and Vegetable Operational Programme
Assistance is payable at 50 per cent. of actual approved expenditure, subject to an annual ceiling set between 2.5–4.5 per cent. of the producer organisation's marketed production
Starch	euro 52.66 per tonne
Grape Must:
British Wine	euro 0.2379 per kg
Home Wine Kits	euro 0.3103 per kg
Hops	euro 480/hectare
Seeds
Cereals	Range euro 14.37–17.27 per Quintal
Oilseeds	Range euro 20.53–28.38 per Quintal
Grasses	Range euro 19.20–83.56 per Quintal
Leguminous Plants	Range euro 75.11 per Quintal
Sugar in Chemical
Industry	euro 459.16 per tonne
Sugar Storage Costs	euro 3.30 per tonne
Cane Refining Scheme	euro 29.20 per tonne

Note:
All rates are paid in £ sterling using the Euro Conversion Rate (ECR) in force on the operative date

Food Labelling

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the rules which (a) require and (b) allow food manufacturing companies to display the country of origin on their packaging for food sold in supermarkets; and if he will make a statement. [102190]

Ms Quin [holding answer 13 December 1999]: (a) The Food Labelling Regulations 1996 SI No. 1996 1499 (as amended) require origin marking where failure to provide such information might mislead the purchaser to a material degree as to the food's true origin.

The following measures contain product specific rules on origin marking:

The Common Agricultural Policy (Wine) Regulations 1996 SI No. 696 (as amended).

The Food Safety (Fishery Products and Live Shellfish) (Hygiene) Regulations 1998 SI No. 994.

The Agricultural and Horticultural Act 1964 (as amended).

The Natural Mineral Water, Spring Water and Bottled Water Regulations 1999 SI No. 1540.

The Eggs (Marketing Standards) (Amendment) Regulations 1991 SI No. 1396.

Council Regulation (EEC) No. 1906/90 laying down the rules on poultry meat.

Council Regulation (EEC) No. 1374/98 which relates to imports under GATT.

(b) Voluntary origin labelling must comply with rules controlling false and misleading descriptions (the Food Safety Act 1990 and the Trade Descriptions Act 1968). In the case of beef there are detailed rules in the Beef Labelling (Enforcement) Regulations 1998.

Chlormequat

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the application of public health regulations to imports of chlormequat-sprayed pears into the UK. [103294]

Ms Quin: The Pesticides (Maximum Residue Levels in Crops, Food and Feeding Stuffs) (Amendment) Regulations 1997 set a maximum residue level (MRL) from chlormequat in pears of 3.0 Mg/Kg. The MRL originates from an EC Directive. The general provisions of the Food Safety Act 1990 also apply.

Earlier from this year, the Government's routine monitoring programme for pesticide residues in food showed that some imported pears contained residues of chlormequat substantially above MRL. We immediately contacted the authorities in the importing countries and received assurances that they had put measures in place to ensure that future exports complied with MRL. This included a ban on the use of chlormequat in pears grown in Belgium and severe restrictions on its use in the Netherlands. We are continuing to monitor the situation and will not hesitate to take further action if necessary.

Live Cattle Exports

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many live cattle were exported to European Union member states in 1999. [104255]

Ms Quin: None. The export of live cattle from the UK is prohibited by European Union legislation.

Animal Health Care Costs

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the annual expenditure on veterinary and other health care for animals (a) by pet owners, (b) by farmers and (c) in total. [104252]

Ms Quin: The cost of veterinary medicines and other health care for animals is not controlled by European or UK law and we have made no estimate of annual expenditure in these areas. However, the National Office of Animal Health Ltd. which represents manufacturers of veterinary medicines has estimated that the UK market for animal health products is approximately £370 million in terms of sales by manufacturers and that approximately half the sales by value are of products for the treatment of farm animals. Decisions on pricing of medicinal products are matters for the companies marketing them, taking account of commercial factors such as development and production costs and anticipated volume sales. Similarly, the cost of veterinary treatment is not governed by any statutory rules but is a matter for negotiation between veterinary surgeon and client.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 12 January 2000

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Athletics

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment has been made of the suitability of the proposed ramped area for the use of athletes coming from the external road to the Olympic Track of the English National Stadium Project; and if he will make a statement. [104311]

Kate Hoey: Following his statement to the House on 1 December 1999, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made a further announcement about the future of Wembley on 22 December 1999 which confirmed that, subject to further discussions between Wembley National Stadium Ltd., the Football Association and Sport England, athletics will be removed from the new national stadium at Wembley and an alternative venue sought elsewhere in London. Copies of that announcement have been placed in the Library of the House.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Water Industry

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the amount of capital expenditure by the water industry for improving the environment over the past five years; and what his estimate is of the anticipated expenditure on such schemes, by the industry, over the next five years. [103101]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 20 December 1999]: The Director General of Water Services has published the capital expenditure of the water industry on quality enhancement for the five years from 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1999 in "1998–1999 Report on financial performance and expenditure of the water companies in England and Wales". Gross capital investment by the water industry on quality enhancement in this period was £6,691 million (in May 1999 prices).

On 25 November 1999 the Director published "Final determinations: Future water and sewerage charges 2000–2005". This document sets out the provisions within price limits for expenditure to improve the environment in the five years beginning 1 April 2000. This includes provision for capital enhancement expenditure and capital maintenance expenditure of £8.5 billion to improve drinking water quality and reach higher environmental standards. £7.45 billion of this is capital enhancement expenditure. £1.03 billion is capital maintenance expenditure which will allow the companies to meet water quality and environmental obligations. The Director is writing to the hon. Member with fuller information on the figures he requests.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the leakage rates for each water company in England; and what steps are being taken to reduce these levels. [104291]

Mr. Meacher: The Director General of Water Services published the leakage rates for the water undertakers in England in 1998–99 in the "1998–99 Report on leakage and water efficiency" in December. These rates, in megalitres per day and as a percentage of distribution input, were as follows:

	Megalitres per day	Percentage
Anglian	201	18.1
Bournemouth and West Hampshire	25.7	16.7
Bristol	56.4	18.7
Cambridge	13.1	18.5
Essex and Suffolk	76.4	15.9
Folkestone and Dover	8.7	17.8
Hartlepool	4.7	13.9
Mid Kent	30.1	19.0
North Surrey	22.3	17.3
North West	510	25.8
Northumbrian	171	22.0
Portsmouth	30.5	17.6
Severn Trent	344	18.4
South East	[1]98.9	[1]23.7
South Staffordshire	77.1	22.3
South West	92	21.1
Southern	95	16.1
Sutton and East Surrey	24.9	16.4
Tendring Hundred	5.5	18.5
Thames	770	31.1
Three Valleys	135.0	19.8
Wessex	100	25.9
York	9.0	19.5
Yorkshire	333	26.9

[1] Following inquiries by Ofwat, South East Water was asked to resubmit its water balance for 1997–98 and 1998–99. However, the company failed to supply a robust data set in time for inclusion in the report. The figure given here is for 1996–97 and is taken from the 1996–97 report on leakage and water efficiency.

The Director General of Water Services sets annual mandatory leakage targets for each water undertaker. The latest targets for 2000–01 were also published in the report. These targets represent a 31 per cent. reduction in leakage in England since April 1997. Over the next year, my Department, Ofwat and the Environment Agency will conduct a joint study into the scope for future leakage reduction.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much contaminated land has been reclaimed in each of the last five years in each local authority area in the north-west of England. [104289]

Mr. Meacher: Information on the amount of contaminated land reclaimed is not held centrally. However, figures are available for the reclamation of derelict land. The table shows the spend by each local authority area, in the north-west region, for each of the last five years, under the Land Reclamation Programme.

DLG/LRP spend

£ million

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	Total
Cumbria CC	3.19	1.49	2.60	2.17	1.34	—
Allerdale	0.79	0.00	0.11	0.18	0.00	—
Barrow	1.18	0.04	0.00	0.06	0.15	—
Carlisle	0.07	0.06	0.15	0.00	0.01	—
Copeland	0.19	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	—
Eden	0.06	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	—
South Lakeland	0.00	0.05	0.29	0.06	0.01	—
Cumbria Total	5.48	1.64	3.15	2.47	1.51	14.25
Lancashire CC	0.09	0.05	0.13	0.21	0.24	—
Blackburn	0.07	1.51	0.17	0.03	0.13	—
Blackpool	0.00	0.02	0.00	0.01	0.02	—
Burnley	0.01	0.05	0.07	0.02	0.11	—
Chorley	1.03	0.11	0.02	0.08	0.01	—
Fylde	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	—
Hyndburn	0.93	0.05	0.00	0.27	0.20	—
Lancaster	0.33	0.00	0.10	0.02	0.11	—
Pendle	0.12	0.00	0.00	0.25	0.03	—
Preston	0.23	0.05	1.04	0.28	0.00	—
Ribble V	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.04	—
Rossendale	0.03	0.02	0.22	0.19	0.71	—
South Ribble	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	—
West Lancashire	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	—
Wyre	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	—
Lancashire Total	2.84	1.86	1.75	1.36	1.60	9.41
Knowsley	0.56	0.40	0.02	0.10	0.83	—
Liverpool	0.00	0.35	0.24	0.35	0.18	—
Sefton	0.63	1.06	0.77	0.20	1.33	—
St. Helens	1.62	0.45	0.31	0.56	1.02	—
Wirral	0.43	0.33	0.14	0.37	1.53	—
Merseyside Total	3.24	2.59	1.48	1.58	4.89	13.78
Bolton	0.14	0.04	0.05	0.07	0.02	—
Bury	1.75	0.12	0.48	0.80	1.07	—
Manchester	0.97	0.91	1.12	0.78	0.70	—
Oldham	1.30	0.37	0.21	1.80	0.22	—
Rochdale	0.45	0.26	0.05	0.06	0.10	—
Salford	0.40	0.83	0.39	0.66	0.81	—
Stockport	3.17	0.00	0.00	0.20	0.47	—
Tameside	2.99	0.83	0.18	0.28	0.97	—
Trafford	0.00	0.00	0.13	0.53	0.01	—
Wigan	1.20	0.85	0.87	1.12	0.47	—
Greater Manchester Total	12.37	4.21	3.48	6.30	4.84	31.20
Cheshire CC	1.68	0.09	0.86	–0.19	0.69	—
Chester	0.00	0.00	0.06	0.00	0.01	—
Congleton	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	0.00	—
Crewe and N	0.08	0.00	0.00	0.01	0.00	—
E Port and N	1.78	0.18	0.02	0.08	–0.06	—
Halton	0.90	0.29	0.21	0.05	0.11	—
Macclesfield	0.09	0.18	0.01	0.01	0.00	—
Vale Royal	0.30	0.08	0.15	0.12	0.01	—
Warrington	0.31	0.03	0.02	0.00	0.02	—
Cheshire Total	5.14	0.85	1.33	0.08	0.78	8.18
Region Total	29.07	11.15	11.19	11.79	13.62	76.82

Figures are also available for the amount of derelict land estimated to have been reclaimed from approvals under this programme, in the last five years, in the north-west region. These are as follows:

Year	Hectares
1994–95	231
1995–96	221
1996–97	70
1997–98	167
1998–99	210

These figures apply to derelict land in general, therefore it should be recognised that not all derelict land is contaminated, and much of the contaminated land which has been remediated is not derelict.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people have been put on local authority housing waiting lists in London boroughs in each of the last six months. [104363]

Mr. Mullin: Information is not held centrally on the numbers of people joining and leaving local authorities' housing registers/waiting lists.

Beacon Councils

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many beacon councils have reached the Government's target of 25 per cent. recycling; and if he will list (a) the level achieved by each Beacon Council for waste management and (b) the councils not awarded beacon status which have achieved a higher level. [104290]

Mr. Meacher: There is no recycling target which each individual local authority is expected to meet. There is a national goal to recycle or compost 25 per cent. of household waste by 2005 or earlier.

From the data supplied for the 1997–98 Municipal Waste Survey, three authorities chosen as Beacon Councils in the "Sustainable Development: Dealing with Waste" category have recycling rates of 25 per cent. or over:

Gosport Borough Council
Havant Borough Council
New Forest District Council.

Other non beacon authorities which are achieving 25 per cent. or more, are:

Adur District Council
Chichester District Council
Chiltern District Council
Christchurch Borough Council
East Dorset District Council
Eastleigh Borough Council
North Dorset District Council
Purbeck District Council
Reigate and Banstead Borough Council
South Bucks District Council
Tandridge District Council
Weymouth and Portland Borough Council.

The remaining Beacon Councils are achieving the following recycling rates:

Percentage	Councils
Between 20 and 25	Rushmoor District Council St. Edmondsbury Borough Council Test Valley District Council
Between 15 and 20	East Hampshire District Council Fareham District Council Winchester City Council
Between 10 and 15	Basingstoke District Council Bath and North East Somerset Council Hart District Council London Borough of Bexley Portsmouth City Council
Less than 10	London Borough of Hounslow Southampton City Council Stockport Metropolitan Borough Council Wealden District Council

Notes:
1. Recycling rates are calculated as the quantity of household waste collected for recycling, expressed as a percentage of total household waste. These calculations exclude recycling of building rubble, and make no allowance for home composting.
2. In non-unitary areas, the figures cover amounts collected within the area by both the Waste Collection Authority and the Waste Disposal Authority. In most cases, figures for total household waste (apart from amounts collected for recycling) are taken from returns from Waste Disposal Authorities.

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many (a) men and (b) women in each of the standard age groups were employed in (i) his predecessor departments and English local authorities in 1979 and (ii) his Department and English local authorities in 1999. [104026]

Ms Beverley Hughes: (i) Available records indicate that on 1 January 1979, 26,438 staff were employed in the Department of the Environment and the Department of Transport. Age and gender analysis is not available for that time.

In June 1979, the English Local Authorities employed some 1,813,000 staff. Again, analysis by age and gender is not available.

(ii) On 1 April 1999, 15,520 staff were employed in the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, of which 7,794 were men and 7,726 were women. The following is a breakdown into standard age groups for each gender:

Age	Men	Women
16–17	1	7
18–19	67	101
20–24	366	474
25–29	609	693
30–34	793	1,047
35–39	935	1,332
40–44	1,091	1,240
45–49	1,187	1,064
50 and over	2,745	1,768
Totals	7,794	7,726

This information is not available for employees of Local Authorities. On 12 June 1998, the latest date for which figures are available, some 1,360,000 staff were employed within the English Local Authorities. Age and gender analysis of this total is not available.

Homelessness

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people were registered homeless in London boroughs in each of the last six months. [104362]

Mr. Mullin: Information is published on households accommodated under statutory homelessness provisions in a quarterly Information Bulletin, "Statistics of local authority activities under the homelessness legislation: England". Information on a monthly basis is not collected centrally. Table 2 of the Bulletin presents a quarterly summary by region, including Greater London, of those households accepted as homeless and in priority need under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 and 1996 Housing Acts.

Copies of the Bulletin are in the Library, and the latest edition, published on 10 December 1999, presents statistics up to the third quarter of 1999.

DEFENCE

Iraq

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flights by United Kingdom and allied aircraft have taken place over Iraq during the last month; and what quantities of missiles were discharged into Iraq during that period. [103640]

Mr. Hoon: RAF aircraft undertook some 200 operational sorties during the period 18 November to 15 December in pursuit of their mission to prevent Saddam's air forces from persecuting the Kurds and Shia Muslims of northern and southern Iraq. Over this period, the RAF dropped six laser-guided bombs over Iraq in response to Iraqi threats.

Insensitive Munitions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received on the exploratory talks on insensitive munitions. [104108]

Mr. Kilfoyle: This is a matter for the Chief executive of the Defence Procurement Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Howe to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 12 January 2000:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about representations received on the exploratory talks on insensitive munitions. This matter falls to me to answer within my area of responsibility as Chief of Defence Procurement and Chief Executive of the Defence Procurement Agency.

It is not clear from the question which exploratory talks you have in mind, but if there are any further details you can let me have I will of course be happy to give a full reply. However, I can assure you that it is Ministry of Defence policy to ensure that munitions comply with NATO safety standards. One of these standards is that munitions shall be as insensitive as is practicable but still operate as intended.

NATO Defence Capability Initiative

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the British members of the High Level Steering Group of the NATO Defence Capability Initiative and (b) the number of meetings so far which they have attended; and when the Defence Capability Initiative is expected to produce conclusions. [104270]

Mr. Hoon: The UK's representative at the High Level Steering Group is the Director General for International Security Policy (DGISP), who is supported by the Defence Counsellor at the UK Delegation to NATO. DGISP has attended, or been represented at, all four of the Group's meetings to date. It will be some years before the DCI is complete but work is well under way.

Asbestos

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 December 1999, Official Report, column 260W, if he will list the types of vessels which have undergone the programme to eliminate asbestos from on board; when he expects the programme to be completed; what is the estimated cost; and if he will make a statement. [104349]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The comprehensive programme to eliminate asbestos is in its early stages and is expected to continue over the next 10 years, being undertaken during planned maintenance periods and refits. There are likely to be cases where it may be safer to leave the asbestos in place, undisturbed and sealed for the service life of the vessel. The use of asbestos in Royal Naval vessels is governed by the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987, as amended. Safe alternatives have been fitted wherever practicable since the inception of the Regulations.

It is estimated that the total cost of the programme to eliminate asbestos, wherever practicable, will be about £7.5 million. This includes the cost of replacement stocks.

Imphal Barracks (Civilian Staff)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he plans to answer the question tabled on 19 November for answer on 23 November by the hon. Member of Vale for York concerning the number of civilian staff employed at Imphal Barracks. [103760]

Mr. Spellar: I replied to the hon. Member on 21 December 1999.

PRIME MINISTER

Barnsley

Q15. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Prime Minister when he next expects to visit Barnsley. [103458]

The Prime Minister: I have no immediate plans to do so.

Joint Cabinet Consultative Committee

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 353W, concerning the public disclosure of discussions at the JCCC, if he will investigate the source of the press reports of the JCCC meeting on 13 December. [104138]

The Prime Minister: No.

Committee on Standards in Public Life

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to receive the Sixth report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life. [104643]

The Prime Minister: I am pleased to announce that Lord Neill has today published the Committee's Sixth Report. The report reviews the implementation of the recommendations from its First Report.

The Government welcome the report. We will need to consider carefully the recommendations and will give a detailed response to the report in due course.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Animal Research

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the funding of researchers through MRC or ARC grants to travel abroad to conduct research on animals. [104282]

Ms Hewitt: The MRC and BBSRC (formerly known as ARC) do not provide funds for any animal research unless the work proposed is of high quality, the need to use animals has been properly justified, and any suffering is minimised.

Collaborations between UK scientists and their counterparts in the USA, Europe, or other countries play an important role in ensuring the quality and efficiency of UK scientific research, and avoiding duplication. Researchers supported through MRC and BBSRC grants will often pursue joint projects with researchers in other countries, and a small proportion of these may involve animals.

The MRC and BBSRC expects UK researchers collaborating overseas to ensure standards at least meet those set out in the individual Research Council's own ethical guidelines. The Research Councils will not provide grant funds for animal research if it appears that it is being done overseas in order to reduce costs or to bypass the high standards set in the UK.

Very occasionally, MRC has provided funds for work on health problems in developing countries where the medical problem being studied—for example, transmission of parasites from animals to people—has meant the research had to be done in the developing country.

BBSRC funds the travel and subsistence costs of researchers to enable them to visit overseas research laboratories for short periods. Research on animals may be involved, but the annual number of such travel and subsistence is small, and those involving animal research is a small fraction of this.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

New Deal

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people joined the Full Time Education and Training Option of the New Deal for 18 to 24 year olds between January 1998 and the end of July 1999, by unit of delivery; how many and what percentage of these (a) completed their courses before leaving the New Deal, (b) left their courses before completing them and (c) left at any stage for unknown destinations. [100807]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 2 December 1999]: The information available currently is shown in the following table. The Full-Time Education and Training (FTET) Option is designed to give people the skills that they need to get jobs; of the 7,891 young people shown as having left the Option early, 3,200 or 40 per cent. had found jobs. A recent survey has shown that 57 per cent. of young people leaving New Deal for unknown destinations had found a job.

Unit of delivery	Starts to FTET option between January 1998 and July 1999	Of which, number who had left New Deal by the end of September 1999	Number recorded as completing FTET option before leaving New Deal	As a percentage of those for whom completed/ left early is known	Number recorded as leaving FTET option early before leaving New Deal	As a percentage of those for whom completed/ left early is known	Number who had left for an unknown destination by the end of September 1999	As a percentage of those who had left New Deal by the end of September 1999
Tayside	474	323	61	36	109	64	47	15
Ayrshire	371	242	37	25	113	75	29	12
Borders	64	34	1	7	14	93	8	24
Dumfries and Galloway	181	101	23	40	35	60	19	19
Dunbarton	211	103	15	28	38	72	21	20
Edinburgh, East and Mid Lothian	317	200	24	29	58	71	40	20
Fife	479	295	48	30	113	70	60	20
Forth Valley'	294	145	18	24	58	76	31	21
Glasgow	1,112	570	74	24	240	76	133	23
Grampian	134	80	11	28	29	73	15	19
Moray, Strathspay and Badenoch	35	23	7	70	3	30	7	30
Lanarkshire	651	348	23	12	176	88	65	19
Renfrewshire	272	153	22	23	73	77	36	24
West Lothian	98	60	7	21	26	79	12	20
Argyll and The Islands	20	9	0	0	3	100	1	11
Caithness and Sutherland	30	15	1	14	6	86	2	13
Inverness and Nairn	44	22	8	53	7	47	5	23
Lochaber	6	2	0	0	1	100	0	0
Western Isles	30	17	7	88	1	13	4	24
Orkney	6	2	1	100	0	0	0	0

Unit of delivery	Starts to FTET option between January 1998 and July 1999	Of which, number who had left New Deal by the end of September 1999	Number recorded as completing FTET option before leaving New Deal	As a percentage of those for whom completed/ left early is known	Number recorded as leaving FTET option early before leaving New Deal	As a percentage of those for whom completed/ left early is known	Number who had left for an unknown destination by the end of September 1999	As a percentage of those who had left New Deal by the end of September 1999
Ross and Cromarty	43	28	9	64	5	36	4	14
Shetland	6	4	0	0	1	100	4	100
Skye and Lochalsh	5	1	0	—	0	—	0	0
Newcastle, Gateshead and South Tyneside	1,665	891	161	36	281	64	198	22
Northumberland	406	185	43	38	69	62	28	15
Tyneside North[1]	415	167	36	40	54	60	31	19
Durham North and Durham South	1,038	526	91	29	225	71	129	25
City of Sunderland formerly Wearside	767	363	79	42	110	58	74	20
Tees North and Tees South	1,480	597	84	28	216	72	157	26
Cumbria	478	235	36	30	83	70	41	17
Wirral	524	318	53	32	113	68	58	18
Blackpool, Fylde and Wyre	127	78	7	20	28	80	20	26
Bolton	116	58	8	47	9	53	11	19
Bury	115	56	12	55	10	45	19	34
Central Lancashire	128	72	5	13	33	87	16	22
Cheshire	222	94	5	11	42	89	22	23
City Pride Manchester	874	394	58	36	102	64	100	25
East Lancashire	283	148	22	24	69	76	37	25
Halton and Warrington	335	151	9	18	42	82	27	18
Knowsley	552	273	18	13	125	87	77	28
Liverpool	1,438	633	79	26	220	74	146	23
North Lancashire	137	79	16	32	34	68	22	28
Oldham	141	63	2	10	18	90	18	29
Rochdale	259	160	13	20	51	80	48	30
Sefton	395	209	31	36	55	64	43	21
St. Helens	244	97	11	21	41	79	20	21
Stockport	120	60	8	26	23	74	23	38
West Lancashire[1]	104	35	7	70	3	30	4	11
Wigan	177	83	5	12	37	88	26	31
Sheffield	1,044	558	93	35	174	65	149	27
Rotherham	664	357	57	28	145	72	95	27
South Humber[1]	242	92	4	8	44	92	26	28
Calderdale and Kirklees	652	295	40	25	118	75	98	33
Barnsley and The Dearne	646	303	19	14	115	86	83	27
Bradford	780	442	71	30	166	70	132	30
Hull and East Coast formerly Hull	883	433	42	27	114	73	104	24
Leeds	511	269	23	21	86	79	89	33
North Yorkshire	322	184	33	35	62	65	52	28
Wakefield and Doncaster	791	453	43	16	219	84	124	27
West Wales	365	180	26	29	65	71	51	28
Swansea	488	307	42	26	118	74	81	26
North West Wales	214	96	15	37	26	63	15	16
Powys	60	30	6	38	10	63	6	20
Ceredigion	59	28	6	46	7	54	7	25
North East Wales formerly Flintshire and Wrexham	133	55	4	29	10	71	9	16
North Wales Coast	146	66	12	40	18	60	17	26
Cardiff and Vale	358	206	31	37	53	63	49	24
Bridgend and Glamorgan Valleys[1]	289	114	13	27	35	73	26	23
Heads of the Valley and Caerphilly	389	179	17	18	76	82	26	15
Newport, Torfaen and Monmouth	217	125	17	23	56	77	32	26
Black Country	1,515	727	74	24	239	76	190	26
Birmingham	1,538	556	62	36	112	64	157	28
Solihull[1]	198	82	3	8	35	92	22	27
Staffordshire	526	223	15	14	91	86	59	26
Hereford and Worcester	177	101	17	35	32	65	26	26
Coventry	318	161	16	30	37	70	48	30
Warwickshire	155	78	12	34	23	66	28	36
Shropshire	158	74	5	17	24	83	22	30
Southern Derbyshire	419	240	24	25	72	75	57	24
Cambridge TTWA	141	71	12	43	16	57	17	24
North Derbyshire	313	164	26	33	54	68	33	20
Leicestershire[1]	442	173	13	21	50	79	64	37
Lincolnshire	350	184	30	30	70	70	58	32
Norfolk	506	252	40	31	91	69	37	15
West Norfolk	79	42	3	10	26	90	11	26
Northamptonshire	147	93	9	20	35	80	27	29
Greater Nottingham	590	260	34	27	94	73	78	30
North Nottinghamshire	391	157	24	27	64	73	41	26
Peterborough	147	85	10	21	38	79	26	31
Suffolk	369	173	30	32	64	68	30	17
Waveney	171	55	14	44	18	56	7	13
Cornwall	433	286	64	47	73	53	60	21
Bath and North East Somerset and North Somerset	86	49	5	26	14	74	10	20

Unit of delivery	Starts to FTET option between January 1998 and July 1999	Of which, number who had left New Deal by the end of September 1999	Number recorded as completing FTET option before leaving New Deal	As a percentage of those for whom completed/ left early is known	Number recorded as leaving FTET option early before leaving New Deal	As a percentage of those for whom completed/ left early is known	Number who had left for an unknown destination by the end of September 1999	As a percentage of those who had left New Deal by the end of September 1999
Bristol and South Gloucestershire formerly Central Bristol	317	151	15	18	67	82	52	34
Dorset	260	159	26	31	57	69	43	27
Exeter and East Devon[1]	144	57	6	21	23	79	10	18
Torbay and South Devon formerly South Devon	199	112	13	19	57	81	21	19
North Devon	64	38	10	59	7	41	10	26
Gloucestershire	149	91	9	22	32	78	19	21
Plymouth	501	279	39	26	111	74	63	23
Somerset	242	136	19	28	48	72	36	26
Wiltshire and Swindon formerly Wiltshire	154	90	10	19	42	81	22	24
Eastbourne and Hastings formerly Eastbourne	261	162	20	27	55	73	57	35
Lambeth	367	183	33	52	30	48	63	34
Harlow	51	32	3	20	12	80	15	47
Hackney and City[1]	580	150	20	36	35	64	42	28
Hertfordshire	320	181	13	19	55	81	59	33
Brighton	154	65	8	31	18	69	17	26
Canterbury	242	120	15	31	34	69	36	30
Channel	156	78	10	31	22	69	19	24
Chatham	300	148	20	25	59	75	43	29
Crawley	35	19	3	33	6	67	8	42
Croydon and Bromley	240	111	10	23	33	77	32	29
Guildford	79	55	10	36	18	64	15	27
Lewisham	305	86	11	41	16	59	27	31
Maidstone, Dartford and West Kent	97	54	6	25	18	75	10	19
Southwark	467	179	14	30	32	70	55	31
Greenwich	402	139	17	37	29	63	33	24
Bexley	114	44	7	30	16	70	9	20
Sutton, Merton Esher, Kingston, Epsom	164	76	8	38	13	62	19	25
Wandsworth	223	95	16	43	21	57	39	41
West Sussex Coastal Plain	56	28	2	18	9	82	14	50
South Essex	353	192	31	49	32	51	42	22
North Essex[1] formerly North and Mid Essex	275	151	24	32	52	68	35	23
Edgware and Leaside	801	320	39	40	58	60	107	33
North East London	398	176	35	40	52	60	68	39
Havering, Barking and Dagenham	257	133	18	37	31	63	34	26
Newham	609	157	23	43	31	57	49	31
Tower Hamlets	299	109	20	83	4	17	39	36
Camden and North Islington	338	96	20	65	11	35	30	31
Ealing and Hillingdon formerly Ealing	260	105	11	37	19	63	38	36
Bedfordshire and Luton	339	213	19	22	68	78	40	19
Milton Keynes and North Buckinghamshire	92	51	6	21	22	79	16	31
Mid Hants	38	18	3	38	5	63	6	33
Oxfordshire	177	82	6	21	23	79	19	23
Portsmouth and South East Hampshire	393	229	26	29	65	71	75	33
Isle of Wight	126	52	6	32	13	68	17	33
Reading	36	24	1	13	7	88	5	21
Slough	137	70	13	35	24	65	19	27
Southampton and South West Hampshire	167	99	16	39	25	61	36	36
Wembley	482	208	29	45	35	55	58	28
Westminster	115	30	1	13	7	88	7	23
Hounslow and Richmond	181	94	17	40	25	60	30	32
Hammersmith, Fulham, Kensington, Chelsea	270	87	4	20	16	80	23	26
Great Britain[2]	48,631	23,674	3,213	29	7,891	71	5,998	25

[1] A private Sector led Unit of Delivery

[2] Great Britain excludes those for whom no Unit of Delivery is recorded on the New Deal Evaluation Database

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people (a) have found sustained unsubsidised employment of 13 weeks or more, (b) are on follow-through and (c) have left for destinations other than sustained unsubsidised employment of 13 weeks or more from the New Deal scheme. [102108]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 9 December 1999]: The New Deals have made an excellent start in helping unemployed people into work. Latest figures to the end of October 1999 show that, through the New Deal for Young People, 107,280 people have found sustained unsubsidised employment, 22,980 young people were on Follow-Through and 144,290 young people were recorded as having left New Deal for destinations other than sustained unsubsidised employment.

Of the 144,290 recorded as destinations other than sustained employment, 30,060 transferred to another benefit, 44,750 went to another known destination and 69,480 went to an unknown destination. A recently published study reporting on clients who left the Gateway stage of New Deal for an unknown destination and whose JSA claim which qualified them for New Deal had been closed found that 57 per cent. of them left New Deal to go into paid employment. Over 100,000 young people have gained training and work experience in the non-employment options.

Through the New Deal for long-term unemployed people aged 25 and over, equivalent figures were 19,730 into sustained unsubsidised employment, 990 older clients on the Follow-Through stage and 94,100 to destinations other than sustained unsubsidised employment.

A further 24,430 unemployed people under these two New Deals have found sustained subsidised employment.

A sustained job is one where the client does not return to JSA or New Deal within 13 weeks.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many young people in West Sussex have been through the New Deal scheme; and how many have subsequently found unsubsidised employment. [104273]

Ms Jowell: The latest statistics to the end of October 1999 show that of the 676 young people who started New Deal in the West Sussex Coastal Plain Unit of Delivery, 447 had left. It is encouraging that in West Sussex, 347 young people have found unsubsidised employment when they were benefiting from the New Deal. Others will have found work without informing the Employment Service.

Unemployment (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of unemployment among members of ethnic minority groups; and if he will make a statement. [103248]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 21 December 1999]: Figures from the Labour Force Survey are as follows:

Employment

	Level (thousand)	Rate (percentage)	Change in rate over last year percentage points
All	—	—	—
White	26,200	75.6	+0.8
All ethnic minority groups	1,350	58.3	+2.0
Black	400	62.8	+1.7
Indian	420	68.0	+2.9
Pakistani/Bangladeshi	220	40.8	+0.9
Chinese	60	55.6	+5.6
Other origins	255	60.2	+1.6

ILO unemployment

	Level (thousand)	Rate (percentage)	Change in rate over last year percentage points
All	—	—	—
White	1,600	5.7	−0.4
All ethnic minority groups	200	13.3	−0.8
Black	75	15.5	−0.2
Indian	40	8.7	+0.2
Pakistani/Bangladeshi	55	19.5	−4.6
Chinese	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—
Other origins	35	12.6	−1.6

[1] Sample size too small for reliable estimate

Note:

Figures are for summer 1999, not seasonally adjusted

The unemployment rate among ethnic minority groups is unacceptably high but is improving. The Government are committed to ensuring that this improvement continues and are working with key partners on a range of measures to bring about equality of opportunity in the labour market for all groups in society.

The Department's Race Relations Employment Advisory Service (RREAS) provides a free advice and consultancy service to employers to help develop and implement equal opportunity policies and practices for racial equality among the work force. The Department also publishes a range of guidance to promote racial equality in employment including "Equal Opportunities—Ten Point Plan for Employers".

The Department is working with others, including the Commission for Racial Equality, to promote the message to employers that racial diversity in the workplace is essential for good business practice. The Department has also recently established a new strategic race advisory body called the Race Education and Employment Forum. Its remit is to consider and advise Ministers on matters relating to the progress of ethnic minorities in education, employment and training.

The Department has recently led the work of the Policy Action Team on Jobs, whose members included officials from a number of Government Departments, as well as external organisations. It was asked to develop an action plan to reduce the difference between levels of worklessness in poor neighbourhoods and the national average, and within that to reduce the disproportionate unemployment rates for people from ethnic minorities. The PAT's report was published last month and its recommendations will be considered as part of the Social Exclusion Unit's work developing a national strategy for neighbourhood renewal.

The Department has also commissioned research into a wide range of aspects of the labour market experience of ethnic minority groups, including the transition from education to work, adult learning among ethnic minorities and the education and labour market position of young black men.

Remploy

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he has received a copy of the Bourton report on Remploy; and what plans he has to make the Bourton report available to (a) hon. Members, (b) employee representatives and (c) the general public. [104095]

Ms Hodge: As the Minister responsible for Remploy, I can confirm that I have received a copy of the interim report from the Bourton Group on Remploy. This report is a commercially sensitive document about the strategic development and management of a competitive company. For that reason I do not intend to make copies of the report more widely available.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on progress in the consultation exercise on the future of Remploy factories. [104096]

Ms Hodge: Consultation about the current Remploy Corporate Plan (1999–2002) has been extensive. Remploy employees, trade union officials, relevant Local Authorities and local MPs/Members of the Welsh Assembly have all been given full opportunity to give input and discuss the Plan with Directors of Remploy.

In addition, since 15 September 1999 there have been five meetings between representatives of the Remploy Trades Union Consortium and the Board of Directors of Remploy to discuss the Corporate Plan for 2000–03. These meetings have been constructive. This consultation is due to finish later this month. No final decisions will be made on any modernisation proposals until this consultation is concluded.

All those with an interest in Remploy are also being invited to contribute to the Quinquennial Review of Remploy. The prior option stage of the review, which was announced in the House on 18 November, is due to be completed by the end of March 2000.

Finally, my officials have been undertaking a consultation exercise about how the Supported Employment Programme as a whole could be developed to open up more opportunities for disabled people to work and progress into open employment. A wide range of organisations and individuals have responded, including trade unions, voluntary and statutory organisations and any others with an interest in the employment of people with disabilities. The responses are currently being collated and analysed.

Standards Fund

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action he is taking to reduce the bureaucracy brought about by varied bidding criteria for the Standards Fund. [104395]

Ms Estelle Morris: For the Standards Fund for 2000–01 we have reduced the number of grants allocated via competitive bidding. Seven of the 38 grants for 2000–01 required competitive bidding, compared to 10 in 1999–2000 and 14 in 1998–99.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Night Shelters

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the law in respect of (a) the provision of day and night shelter places to people who may be drug users and (b) the vulnerability of managers, staff and trustees of day and night shelters to charges of not preventing the use or the supply of banned drugs. [R] [103912]

Mr. Charles Clarke: No. Day and night shelters are subject to the provisions of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 and must operate in accordance with the law. Decisions on whether to offer day and night shelter places to people who may be drug users are for the managers of individual establishments. Managers, staff and trustees of day and night shelters should ensure that all reasonable steps are taken to prevent the supply or use of controlled drugs on the premises in accordance with the law. However, we do recognise the concerns of some agencies following the recent conviction of Ruth Wyner and John Brock and we will therefore consider, with the relevant agencies, whether further guidance is needed in this area.

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women in each of the standard age groups were employed in his Department and in police forces and fire departments in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1999. [104027]

Mr. Straw: The numbers of men and women employed in the standard age groups for 1999 are set out in the tables. The available published staffing figures for 1979 may be found in Civil Service Statistics 1979, a copy of which is in the Library. Where possible, information has been given at or near the 1 April 1999. It has not, however, been possible to provide Prison Service figures on this basis: this information is as at 21 December 1999. Age breakdowns for the Fire and Police Services are not available in the form requested except at disproportionate cost.

Age bands	16–19	20–24	25–29	30–34	35–39	40–44	45–49	50+	Total
Non Prison Service Home Office as at 1 April 1999
(a) Men[1]	9	159	541	810	748	665	760	1,471	5,163
(b) Women	32	286	882	1,145	920	629	643	1,028	5,565
Grand total	41	445	1,423	1,955	1,668	1,294	1,403	2,499	10,728
Prison Service as at 21 December 1999
(a) Men	39	515	1,886	4,692	5,552	4,770	4,396	10,128	31,978
(b) Women	69	822	1,615	2,057	2,054	1,599	1,323	2,010	11,549
Grand total	109	1,337	3,501	6,749	7,606	6,369	5,719	12,138	43,528

[1] Figures are for permanent non-industrial staff

For the Police Service, the following figures were published in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin 14/99 on 26 August 1999 and are available in the Library.

Police Service staffing figures at March 1999

	Number
Male	105,379
Female	20,038

For the Fire Service, the following figures were published in the Report of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Fire Services for England and Wales 1998–99 in December 1999 and are available in the Library.

Fire Service staffing figures at 31 March 1999

	Male	Female
Wholetime uniformed staff [1]	33,398	258
Control room staff	312	1,164
Retained staff [2]	14,421	244
Total	48,131	1,666

[1] Wholetime is full-time operational workforce
[2] Retained staff refers to part-time firefighters employed on a retaining fee

Umbrellas

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many umbrellas his Department purchased for use by persons queuing outside passport offices during the summer of 1999; how much was spent on them; what plans he has to dispose of them; and what estimate he has made of their resale value. [103959]

Mrs. Roche: The number of umbrellas purchased for each passport office during the summer was 200, totalling 1,200 in all. These cost £10.50 plus VAT for each item for supply and delivery, £14,805 in total. There are currently no plans to dispose of the umbrellas and, therefore, no estimate has been made of their resale value.

Gamma Hydroxy Butyrate

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many successful prosecutions have been made against illicit (a) advertisers, (b) suppliers and (c) manufacturers of gamma hydroxy butyrate in each of the last five years. [103374]

Ms Stuart: I have been asked to reply.

All cases prosecuted by the Medicines Control Agency to date have been successful. The statistics in respect of prosecutions to date are as follows:

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	Total
Advertising	5	2	0	0	0	7
Supply	2	0	0	1	6	9
Manufacture	2	0	0	1	2	5
Total	9	2	0	2	8	21

Further investigations of gamma hydroxy butyrate are currently ongoing and referrals in respect of GHB are always investigated.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Exports

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department plans to introduce measures to bring licensed production agreements within the strategic export control legislation. [104155]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

I refer my hon. Friend to my answer to the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Dr. Tonge) on 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 458W.

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) men and (b) women in each of the standard age groups were employed in his Department in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1999. [104028]

Mr. Hain: It is not possible to provide a breakdown for the standard age groups employed in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for 1979 as detailed information prior to 1990 is not available. The breakdown for the standard age groups for 1 April 1999 is as follows:

	Men	Women
16–19	9	10
20–24	63	68
25–29	381	356
30–34	598	509
35–39	460	333
40–44	443	197
45–49	468	161
50+	1,063	365

NORTHERN IRELAND

Punishment Beatings

6. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the number of punishment beatings in the last six months. [103418]

Mr. Ingram: During the period 1 July to 22 December 1999, there were a total of 76 paramilitary style attacks. There were 24 shootings and 33 assaults attributed to Loyalist groups and five shootings and 14 assaults attributed to Republican groups.

North/South Ministerial Council

8. Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation he has held with the North/South Ministerial Council concerning economic development in the last 12 months. [103420]

19. Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation he has had with the north/south Ministerial Council. [103431]

Mr. George Howarth: None. Since devolution on 2 December, economic development in Northern Ireland is a matter for the Northern Ireland Assembly. The North/South Ministerial Council and the Trade and Business Development Board have a role to play where this involves co-operation between the Assembly and the Dail. Both the Council and the Body are accountable to the Assembly and the Dail.

Good Friday Agreement

10. Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made on the implementation of the Good Friday agreement. [103422]

24. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the implementation of the Belfast agreement. [103436]

27. Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the implementation of the Belfast agreement. [103439]

Mr. George Howarth: We have set up the new devolved institutions for Northern Ireland and transferred powers to them. We have implemented new treaties with the Irish Government to set up new institutions for North/South co-operation and the new British-Irish Council. We have set up a new Human Rights Commission. An independent report on policing has been published and an independent report on criminal justice will be published shortly. Authorised representatives of the main paramilitary organisations are meeting with the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning, and the Commission will report later this month.

15. Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on international support for the peace process in Northern Ireland. [103427]

Mr. Mandelson: There has been enormous international interest and support for the peace process over many years, both from foreign governments and non-governmental organisations, as well as from individuals. This support has come from many parts of the world, including North America, Europe, Australia, the Far East and South Africa, and has played an important part in enhancing the prospects for peace in Northern Ireland. Support has taken many forms including the direct personal interest shown by various Heads of Government, including President Clinton; the appointment of international figures to assist in the political negotiations and with the Independent Commission on Decommissioning; and the important financial support that has been given by the European Union, through the Peace and Reconciliation Package; the Ireland Funds and by the International Fund for Ireland.

18. Mr. Ivan Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in establishing east/west bodies under the Good Friday agreement. [103430]

Mr. George Howarth: The British-Irish Council and the British-Irish Inter-Governmental Conference were formally established on 2 December 1999 at the same time as the British-Irish Agreement came into force and met for the first time on 17 December 1999. These institutions represent significant developments in the relationship between the UK and Ireland and offer an opportunity for real and meaningful co-operation between the two Governments and, in the case of the British-Irish Council, the devolved administrations also.

Security

11. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made towards establishing a more normal security situation in Northern Ireland. [103423]

Mr. Ingram: Since the Good Friday Agreement, routine military patrolling has been reduced by two thirds. Three battalions have returned to Great Britain. There are now under 15,000 service personnel on operational duties in Northern Ireland, fewer than at any time since 1970. Eleven military bases have been demolished and a further seven installations have been closed.

Further steps the Government intend to take towards normalising security are set out in the recently published security strategy paper. Copies have been placed in the Library of this House.

Decommissioning

12. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made with decommissioning. [103424]

21. Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will set out a timetable for the decommissioning of illegally held arms and explosives. [103433]

22. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made towards decommissioning under the Good Friday agreement; and if he will make a statement. [103434]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friends the Members for Eastwood (Mr. Murphy), and for Greenock and Inverclyde (Dr. Godman), and the hon. Members for Southwark, North and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes), for Eddisbury (Mr. O'Brien) and for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson).

Equality Commission

13. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Government's liaison with the Equality Commission in Northern Ireland. [103425]

14. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on Government consultation with the Equality Commission in Northern Ireland. [103426]

Mr. George Howarth: The Equality Commission for Northern Ireland was formally established on 1 October 1999. It has taken over the functions of the Equal Opportunities Commission for Northern Ireland, the Commission for Racial Equality for Northern Ireland, the Fair Employment Commission and the Disability Council for Northern Ireland.

The existence and membership of the Equality Commission are reserved matters, as is the obligation on equality of opportunity and good relations under section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998. The funding and administrative oversight of the Equality Commission is a devolved matter and responsibility for this falls to the Northern Ireland Assembly.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has a number of powers and duties in relation to the section 75 obligation including:

making an order for the designation of additional public authorities to be covered by the equality obligation;

approving the statutory guidelines prepared by the Equality Commission on equality schemes.

The Northern Ireland Act clearly defines the vast majority of public bodies to which the section 75 obligation will apply. However, the Secretary of State may designate additional bodies, including UK departments carrying out functions relating to Northern Ireland, to which the obligation should apply. I met the Equality Commission on 20 December to discuss the contents of the proposed designation order. We hope that the order will be approved by Parliament early this year.

The Government have also submitted comments to the Equality Commission on the contents of the proposed statutory guidelines, which we hope will be finalised early this year.

Patten Report

16. Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the Patten report on policing; and when he plans to introduce legislation to give effect to its proposals. [103428]

Mr. Ingram: On 9 September 1999, when the Patten Commission issued its report, the Government immediately announced that it accepted the findings in principle. At the same time, we launched a consultation process on the report, as we were required to do under the terms of the Good Friday Agreement. Consultation formally ended on 30 November.

Restorative Justice

20. Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the development of restorative justice schemes. [103432]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Colne Valley (Kali Mountford).

Royal Ulster Constabulary

23. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the international role of the RUC. [103435]

Mr. Ingram: In accordance with the provisions of Section 8 of the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998, the Royal Ulster Constabulary have seven officers serving with the United Nations International Police Task Force in Bosnia where they are monitoring the performance of the Bosnian police service. Sixty RUC officers are also with the United Nations Mission in Kosovo, where they are undertaking an executive policing role pending a new Kosovan police service being trained and ready to take over law enforcement there.

26. Mr. Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of the RUC are involved in peacekeeping duties in Bosnia and Kosovo; and if he will make a statement. [103438]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, North (Dr. Gibson) on 24 November 1999, Official Report, column 159.

Victim Support

25. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what new initiatives are being implemented to support the victims of the troubles in Northern Ireland. [103437]

Mr. Ingram: I have announced significant new funding initiatives to support victims of the Troubles, including £3 million core funding for groups which help and support victims and an extra £1 million for the Northern Ireland Memorial Fund. A Newsletter outlining progress has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Terrorist Weapons

28. Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many weapons held by terrorist organisations in Northern Ireland have been surrendered since 1 December. [103440]

Mr. Mandelson: No weapons held by terrorist organisations in Northern Ireland have been surrendered during the period in question. The International Independent Commission on Decommissioning continues to hold discussions with authorised representatives of paramilitary organisations on the modalities of decommissioning and has indicated its intention to publish by the end of this month.

Violent Crime

29. Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress he is making on tackling violent crime in Northern Ireland. [103442]

Mr. Ingram: Provisional figures on violent crime for the period April to October 1999 and the final comparable figures for the same period in 1998 show some positive trends. Although the number of offences recorded has increased by 8.7 per cent., the clearance rate is disproportionately higher with a 28.4 per cent. improvement. As a result, clearance rates for violent crime compare favourably (58.6 per cent.) with the previous year (49.7 per cent.). It should be noted that these figures are not comparable with the figures in the last report of the Chief Constable which were produced under the old Home Office counting rules.

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) men and (b) women in each of the standard age groups were employed in his Department in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1999. [104023]

Mr. Mandelson: The figures for 1999 are as follows:

Age	Female	Male	Total
16–20	14	3	17
21–25	77	58	135
26–30	185	156	341
31–35	266	337	603
36–40	207	509	716
41–45	172	580	752
46–50	94	629	723
51–55	114	479	593
56–60	53	168	221
60–65	25	13	38
Total	1,207	2,932	4,139

Note:
Figures include Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Prison Service staff.

Unfortunately, it is not possible to provide comparable figures for 1979. For the smaller Home Civil Service Group of the NIO, the annual Civil Service Statistics publication provides a departmental breakdown of staff by gender for both years and Service-wide information by age.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Human Rights

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with Commonwealth countries as to their human rights record in the last three years; and if she will list the countries and the dates such discussions took place. [104050]

Clare Short: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to him on 8 February 1999, Official Report, column 34W.

Landmines

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the countries where her Department is helping in the clearance of landmines. [104047]

Clare Short: My Department is currently funding mine clearance projects in Afghanistan, Cambodia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Jordan, Iraq, Laos, Mozambique, Nicaragua and Kosovo.

Conservation Projects

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the impact of conservation projects, which have been (a) funded and (b) part funded by her Department, upon the indigenous peoples of Africa. [104184]

Clare Short: My Department provides a Project Completion Report for all our major projects. The reports provide an indication of project success, early impacts, the expected longer term impact, including impact on local people.

We have also recently completed a substantial global evaluation of British bilateral and joint-funded project support for environmental improvement and protection. Overall, nearly two thirds of these projects achieved their objectives successfully. A key finding was that the protection and better management of the environment is critical to the achievement of the International Development Targets. We are currently preparing a policy paper which addresses the contribution of environmental protection to the overall aim of poverty elimination.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what guidelines her Department has issued to (a) assess the needs and (b) protect the rights of indigenous peoples who (i) are likely to be and (ii) have been affected by conservation projects (1) funded and (2) part funded by her Department. [104185]

Clare Short: Along with other member states, we are party to a resolution of the Development Council of the European Union on "Indigenous peoples within the framework of the development co-operation of the Community and Member States". This was passed by the Development Council in November 1998, having been helped through the negotiation process under our own Presidency of the EU in the first half of that year. The resolution recognises the important role played by indigenous people in the management of natural resources and the maintenance of biodiversity. It recognises their rights to choose their own development paths and to have a direct voice in development programmes which affect their way of life. We actively uphold these principles in our all-bilateral work, and in the work we do in collaboration with others.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Spending Revisions

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Havant (Mr. Willetts) of 13 December 1999, Official Report, column 40W, on spending revisions, if he will estimate the number of recipients of each of the allowances and benefits listed in the table (a) in Wales and (b) in Merthyr Tydfil (i) currently and (ii) in 2000–01 and 2001–02. [103372]

Mr. Darling: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

The numbers of recipients of the relevant benefits in Merthyr Tydfil and Wales for the current year derived from administrative data held

Thousand

	Wales	Merthyr Tydfil
Incapacity Benefit	145.3	6.0
Severe Disablement Allowance	25.2	0.5
Attendance Allowance	94.8	2.2
Disability Living Allowance	172.4	5.9

Note:
Forecasts of numbers of claimants for each social security benefit by country and/or local authority area is not available.
Sources:
1. The figures for Incapacity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance are taken from a 5 per cent. scan of the benefit computer system in Great Britain at 31 May 1999 and are subject to a rating factor to account for missing postcodes.
2. The figures for Attendance Allowance and Disability Living Allowance are taken from 100 per cent. data at 31 May 1999.

Income Support (Scotland)

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people aged under 18 years in Scotland have received Income Support with a care premium in each year since 1991. [103758]

Mr. Bayley: Insufficient data are available in each of the years since 1991 reliably to estimate the number of people aged under 18 years who received the carer premium with their Income Support.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases are being dealt with by the Child Support Agency in England and Wales. [103727]

Angela Eagle: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 11 January 2000:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary for Social Security about the Child Support Agency.

The most current statistical information available shows:

The number of live and assessed cases being dealt with by the Agency where the Parent with Care lives in Wales was 65,700.

The number of live and assessed cases being dealt with by the Agency where the Parent with Care lives in England was 818,420.

I hope that this is helpful.

Mortgage Payments

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to raise the standard interest rate applicable to benefits in relation to mortgage payments. [104070]

Mr. Bayley: The Standard Interest Rate is based on the weighted average of basic rates charged by the main building societies. It currently stands at 6.66 per cent. and will change only if there is an increase or decrease in this figure of 0.25 per cent. or more. The average figure is calculated by The Building Societies Commission and notified to the Department of Social Security by the Office for National Statistics.

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) men and (b) women in each of the standard age groups were employed in his Department in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1999. [104022]

Mr. Rooker: The information is in the table.

Number of men and women employed by the Department in 1979 and 1999

	DHSS staff by age and gender 1979			DSS staff by age and gender 1999
Age	Male	Female	Total	Male	Female	Total
16–19	2,437	8,325	10,762	824	1,650	2,474
20–24	5,909	15,599	21,508	2,639	5,003	7,642
25–29	5,012	8,369	13,381	4,354	8,675	13,029
30–34	4,154	5,238	9,392	5,173	12,475	17,612
35–39	2,505	3,848	6,353	4,695	12,312	17,007
40–44	2,046	3,597	5,643	4,300	9,929	14,229
45–49	2,138	4,577	6,715	3,570	7,312	10,882
50–75	11,700	12,969	21,669	4,146	8,297	12,443
Other	2	3	5	—	—	—
Total	35,903	62,525	98,482	29,701	65,653	95,354

Notes:

1. The 1979 figures relate to the Department of Health and Social Security at April 1979.
2. The 1999 figures relate to the Department of Social Security at April 1999 and exclude the Contributions Agency which transferred to the Inland Revenue in April 1999.

Sources:

Cabinet Office Mandate data

DSS FAMIS Payroll

HEALTH

Medicines (Licences)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many licence applications there were for medicines in each year since 1990; [100816]

(2) what was the total number of licence applications for medicines intended solely for the treatment of children in each year since 1995; [100818]

(3) what action the Medicines Control Agency is taking to (a) monitor and (b) implement the EU guidance on the licensing of medicines used in the treatment of children; [100817]

(4) how many pharmaceutical companies in the United Kingdom comply with EU guidance on the licensing of medicines used in the treatment of children; [100815]

(5) what was the total number of licence applications for medicines used in the treatment of children and adults in each year since 1995. [100819]

Yvette Cooper: Information on how many pharmaceutical companies are complying with European Union guidance on the licensing of medicines used in the treatment of children is not held centrally.

The Medicines Control Agency assesses all applications for Marketing Authorisation (licences) in accordance with current EU legislation and guidance. This includes the guidance on the licensing of medicines used in the treatment of children. This guidance is not legally binding on companies. Applicants are asked to provide details of paediatric development plans if these are relevant and have been omitted from the application. Where appropriate, the MCA will indicate to the applicant that they should consider developing formulations which are suitable for children.

The total number of marketing authorisation applications for medicines in each year since 1990, excluding applications from homoeopathic products and applications to import licensed medicinal products from other member states of the EU were:

Year	Number
1990	939
1991	762
1992	1,055
1993	1,316
1994	1,277
1995	1,345
1996	1,349
1997	1,847
1999	1,290

The total number of licence applications for medicines intended solely for the treatment of children in each year since 1995 were:

Year	Number
1995	40
1996	28
1997	54
1998	28

The total number of marketing authorisation applications for medicines used in the treatment of children and adults in each year since 1995 were:

Year	Number
1995	555
1996	513
1997	681
1998	504

Fluoridation

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the constitutional and civil liberties implications of compulsory fluoridation of the water supply. [101131]

Yvette Cooper: We regularly receive representations about the ethical aspects of fluoridation. We recognise the sincerity of people's concern and this is one of the reasons why we are proposing that decisions on fluoridation be taken locally. No new fluoridation scheme would be implemented unless there had been wide-ranging consultations, in which both opponents and supporters of fluoridation had had the opportunity to publicise their views and it had been demonstrated, through an objective assessment of public opinion, that a significant majority of people were in favour.

Mobile Telephone Masts

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the conclusions of research into the possible harmful effects of transmissions from mobile telephone masts. [100897]

Yvette Cooper: The Independent Expert Group on Mobile Phones, chaired by Sir William Stewart FRS FRSE, is currently considering the possible health effects from the use of mobile phones, base stations and transmitters and is conducting a comprehensive assessment of existing research. The group is expected to report in spring 2000.

Fireworks

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the estimated cost of accidents caused by fireworks to the National Health Service in each of the last five years. [100922]

Yvette Cooper: Figures for the cost to the National Health Service resulting from accidents caused by fireworks are not available. The number of attendances at accident and emergency departments due to firework injuries is collected annually, over a four week period covering Bonfire Night, by the Department of Trade and Industry through accident and emergency departments across England, Scotland and Wales. Figures for England in respect of the latest five years available are as follows:

Number of people requiring treatment for firework injuries at hospital accident and emergency departments in England [1]

	Number
1998	725
1997	803
1996	1,091
1995	1,359
1994	1,408

[1] Firework Injuries Data, Consumer Affairs Directorate, Department of Trade and Industry

School Diets

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce a national school fruit and vegetable scheme; and if he will make a statement. [100920]

Yvette Cooper: The White Paper "Saving Lives—Our Healthier Nation" recognised the importance of increasing fruit and vegetable consumption and we are currently considering a range of options on how to achieve this. It is one of the aims of the draft Regulations on National Nutritional Standards for School Lunches. A consultation document on these Regulations and accompanying guidance was published by the Department for Education and Employment last month, copies of which are available in the Library.

Stroke Units

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the contribution which (a) specialist stroke units and (b) conventional wards are making to the treatment of stroke sufferers. [100869]

Yvette Cooper: In October, the Royal College of Physicians published a report arising from the National Sentinel Audit of Stroke 1998, "Regional variations in stroke care". The Department, as part of the clinical effectiveness programme, funded this programme.

The New National Health Service and a First Class Service introduced a range of measures to raise quality and decrease unacceptable variations in service including the National Service Frameworks (NSFs). The NSF for older people was announced last year. A number of task groups are supporting the External Reference Group for this NSF and one of these is looking at strokes. The NSF will be evidence based, and where this is not possible it will be based on the consensus of best clinical practice. Findings from the National Sentinel Audit have been made available to the External Reference Group on strokes.

MRSA

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to monitor (a) outbreaks of MRSA in NHS acute trusts and (b) how NHS trusts prevent and control the MRSA infection. [102843]

Yvette Cooper: Chief executives of National Health Service trusts are responsible for ensuring that there is an effective infection control programme within their trusts. Individual trusts manage arrangements for controlling hospital infection, including MRSA, in the light of local circumstances. This includes having an infection control team which has primary responsibility for all aspects of surveillance, prevention and control of hospital infection. The new risk management and organisational control standards for the NHS, which were launched on 22 November by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Health, include standards for hospital infection control. These standards reinforce chief executives and trust board members' responsibilities. The Public Health Laboratory Service maintains a record of outbreaks of MRSA that are reported to it and publishes aggregated data at regular intervals.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much is being spent on research into the causes and elimination of MRSA in the current financial year. [102857]

Yvette Cooper: The Department is currently spending £91,000 on a systematic review of isolation policies and screening practices in MRSA management, which started in April 1999. In addition, the Medical Research Council (MRC), which receives most of its income via grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, funds medical research as part of the Government's funding of the science and engineering base. The MRC spent a total of £433,383 on research related to MRSA in 1998–99 and has also agreed funding for two new projects in this area for 2000–01, totalling approximately £91,260. The Staphylococcal Reference Unit at the PHLS Central Public Health Laboratory is also engaged in research, estimated to cost £40,000, on why some strains of MRSA are epidemic.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated annual cost to the NHS of MRSA (a) in each of the last three financial years and (b) estimated for the current financial year; and how many NHS trusts in Kent are in financial difficulties as a result of MRSA. [102856]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally. In any individual patient, it is usually very difficult to assess the contribution of any infection acquired in hospital on the outcome, since many patients are already seriously ill from other conditions.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many NHS (a) beds and (b) wards are currently out of service due to MRSA; [102854]

(2) how many patients are currently in intensive care due to MRSA. [102855]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients died in 1997 and 1998 as a result of MRSA. [102858]

Yvette Cooper: Methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) infection can take the form of many different diseases from trivial skin infections to pneumonia or septicaemia. Often the causative micro-organism is not specified on the death certificate. MRSA does not have a distinct code within the International Classification of Diseases used for encoding death registration data at the Office for National Statistics. Consequently there are no centrally held statistics on deaths from this cause.

HIV Positive Babies

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many babies were born HIV positive in each year from 1989 to 1999 in (a) Shropshire and (b) England; and if he will make a statement. [102390]

Yvette Cooper: Between 1989 and 1999 there have been no reports of children with maternally acquired HIV infection born in Shropshire recorded in national surveillance data. The number of children with maternally acquired HIV infection reported in England as a whole is shown in the table. Also shown is the number of children for whom the reported infection status is indeterminate who were born to HIV infected mothers. This is high for recent years as it often cannot be established whether such a child is infected until it is eighteen months old.

There will be further HIV infected children born in England between 1989 and 1999 whose infection will be discovered only when they become ill.

Children born in England to HIV infected mothers by child's year of birth

Year of birth [1]	Infection status	Infected	Indeterminate or lost to annual follow up
1989	—	12	3
1990	—	38	7
1991	—	31	13
1992	—	46	11
1993	—	39	17
1994	—	37	15
1995	—	39	13
1996	—	34	20
1997	—	39	24
1998	—	22	43
1999[2]	—	6	98

[1] Numbers, particularly for recent years will rise as delayed reports are received.
[2] Reported by 31 October 1999.

Alcohol Abuse

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the (a) NHS and (b) Social Service budget for alcohol rehabilitation programmes in the current year. [102552]

Yvette Cooper: There are no specific allocations to either the National Health Service or social services for alcohol rehabilitation. Health authorities purchase substance misuse services from general Hospital and Community Health Service allocations. Local authorities purchase the majority of alcohol services from the generality of community care funding. Information on what the authorities spend on alcohol services from these allocations is not collected centrally. In addition, the Drug and Alcohol Specific Grant provides £1.78 million in 1999–2000 to develop local voluntary sector services for drugs and alcohol.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated cost to the NHS of alcohol-related illness and accidents for each of the last five years. [102559]

Yvette Cooper: Estimates of the cost to the National Health Service of alcohol-related illnesses and injuries vary widely; the most recent academic estimate of which we are aware is for the costs of alcohol misuse in the NHS in England and Wales in 1992 and is reproduced in the table.

	£ million
Inpatient costs—direct alcohol diagnosis	40.8
Inpatient costs—other alcohol related diagnosis	120.2
General practice costs	3.1
Total	164.0

Source:
Health Education Authority: Health Update: Alcohol (1997)—after Godfrey, C and Hardman, G. (1994))

Drug Addiction Centres

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the centres which are currently open for in-patient treatment for drug addiction within the NHS and (b) those that have closed in the last five years, with dates of closure. [102698]

Mr. Hutton: The 185 NHS Trusts in England that provided in-patient treatment for patients with a primary diagnosis of mental and behavioural disorders due to use of opioids—dependence syndrome (ICD10 F11.2), in 1997–98, are shown in the following list. Information is not available centrally on those that have closed in the last five years.

Addenbrooke's NHS Trust
Aintree Hospitals NHS Trust
Airedale NHS Trust
Avalon Somerset NHS Trust
Barnsley Community and Priority Services
Barnsley District General Hospital
Bassetlaw Hospital and Community Services
Bath Mental Health Care NHS Trust
Bedford and Shires Health and Care
Birmingham Heartlands and Solihull
Birmingham Women's Healthcare
Blackburn Hyndburn and Ribble Valley Health Care
Blackpool Victoria Hospital
Blackpool Wyre and Fylde Community Health Services
Bolton Hospitals NHS Trust
Bournewood Community and Mental Health Services
Bradford Community Health
Bradford Hospitals NHS Trust
Brighton Health Care NHS Trust
Burnley Healthcare NHS Trust
Bury Health Care NHS Trust
Calderdale Healthcare NHS Trust
Camden and Islington Community Health Service
Central Manchester Healthcare
Central Nottinghamshire Healthcare
Chesterfield and North Derbyshire Royal Hospital
Chorley and South Ribble NHS Trust
City and Hackney Community Services
City Hospital NHS Trust
City Hospitals Sunderland NHS
Community Healthcare: North Durham
Cornwall Healthcare NHS Trust
Countess Of Chester Hospital
Derbyshire Royal Infirmary
Dewsbury Health Care NHS Trust
Doncaster Healthcare NHS Trust
Doncaster Royal Infirmary and Montaqu Hospital
Dorset Community NHS Trust
Dorset Healthcare NHS Trust
Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS
Dudley Priority Health NHS Trust
East Cheshire NHS Trust
East Gloucestershire NHS Trust
East Hertfordshire NHS Trust
East Surrey Hospital and Community Healthcare
East Wiltshire Health Care
Eastbourne and County Healthcare
Essex Rivers Healthcare NHS Trust
Exeter and District Community Health Services
Forest Healthcare NHS Trust
Frenchay Healthcare NHS Trust
Frimley Park Hospital NHS Trust
Greenwich Healthcare NHS Trust
Guys and St. Thomas's NHS Trust
Haringey Health Care NHS Trust
Harrogate Health Care NHS Trust
Hartlepool and East Durham NHS Trust
Hastings and Rother NHS Trust
Heathlands Mental Health
Herefordshire Community Health
Hinchingbrooke Healthcare
Hounslow and Spelthorne Community & Mental Health
Isle Of Wight Healthcare NHS Trust
James Paget Hospital NHS Trust
Kent and Canterbury Hospitals
Kings Lynn and Wisbech Hospitals
Kingston Hospital NHS Trust
Lambeth Health Care NHS Trust
Lancaster Priority Services
Leeds Community and Mental Health
Leicestershire Mental Health Service
Lincoln and Louth NHS Trust
Lincoln District Healthcare
Luton and Dunstable Hospital NHS

Mental Health Services of Salford
Mid Anglia Community Health
Mid Essex Community and Mental Health
Mid Essex Hospitals NHS Trust
Mid Sussex NHS Trust
Milton Keynes Community Health
Milton Keynes General Hospital
Norfolk and Norwich Health Care
North Durham Acute Hospitals
North East Essex Mental Health
North East Lincolnshire NHS Trust
North Hampshire Loddon Community
North Hertfordshire NHS Trust
North Kent Healthcare NHS Trust
North Lakeland Healthcare NHS Trust
North Manchester Healthcare
North Mersey Community NHS Trust
North Middlesex Hospital NHS Trust
North Staffordshire Combined Healthcare
North Staffordshire Hospital
North Tees Health NHS Trust
North West Anglia Healthcare
North West London Mental Health
Northallerton Health Services
Northampton Community Healthcare
Northern Birmingham Mental Health
Northern Devon Healthcare NHS
Northern General Hospital NHS
Northumberland Mental Health
Nottingham Healthcare NHS Trust
Nottingham University Hospital
Oldham NHS Trust
Oxleas NHS Trust
Pathfinder NHS Trust
Peterborough Hospitals NHS Trust
Pinderfields and Pontefract Hospitals
Plymouth Community Services
Portsmouth Healthcare NHS Trust
Portsmouth Hospitals NHS Trust
Preston Acute Hospitals NHS Trust
Priority Healthcare Wearside
Redbridge Health Care NHS Trust
Riverside Mental Health NHS Trust
Rochdale Healthcare NHS Trust
Rockingham Forest NHS Trust
Rotherham Priority Health
Royal Bournemouth and Christchurch Hospitals
Royal Hull Hospitals NHS Trust
Royal Liverpool and Broadgreen Hospitals
Royal United Hospitals, Bath NHS
Salford Royal Hospitals NHS Trust
Salisbury Health Care NHS Trust
Scarborough and NE Yorkshire
Scunthorpe and Goole Hospitals
Scunthorpe Community Health Care
Severn NHS Trust
Sheffield Community Health Service
Shropshire's Mental Health NHS
Solihull Healthcare NHS Trust
South Bedfordshire Community Healthcare
South Birmingham Mental Health
South Buckinghamshire NHS Trust
South Cumbria Community and Mental Health
South Devon Healthcare NHS Trust
South Downs Health NHS Trust
South Durham NHS Trust
South Kent Community Healthcare
South Kent Hospitals NHS Trust
South Lincolnshire Community and Mental Health
South Manchester University Hospitals
South Tees Acute Hospitals NHS
South Warwickshire Mental Health Services
Southend Community Care Service
Southend Health Care NHS Trust
Southern Derbyshire Mental Health
Southmead Health Services NHS
Southport and Formby Hospitals
St. Helens and Knowsley Hospital
St. James's and Seacroft University Hospital
St. Mary's Hospital NHS Trust
Stockport Healthcare NHS Trust
Surrey Heartlands NHS Trust
Swindon and Marlborough NHS Trust
Tameside and Glossop Acute Services
Tameside and Glossop Community & Priority Services
The Bethlem and Maudsley NHS Trust
The Foundation NHS Trust
The Mid Cheshire Hospital NHS
The Princess Royal Hospital
The Royal Free Hampstead
The Royal Victoria Infirmary and Assoc Hospitals
The Royal Wolverhampton Hospital
The United Bristol Healthcare
Tower Hamlets Healthcare NHS Trust
Trafford Healthcare NHS Trust
United Leeds Teaching Hospitals
Wakefield and Pontefract Community
Walsall Community Health NHS Trust
Walsall Hospitals NHS Trust
Walsgrave Hospitals NHS Trust
West Berkshire Priority Care Services
West Cumbria Health Care NHS Trust
West Herts Community NHS Trust
West Lancashire NHS Trust
West London Healthcare NHS Trust
Weston Area Health NHS Trust
Wigan and Leigh Health Services
Wirral and West Cheshire Community
Wirral Hospital NHS Trust
Worcestershire Community Healthcare
York Health Services NHS Trust.

National Radiological Protection Board

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the membership of the governing committee of the National Radiological Protection Board and their registered interests; and if he will make a statement. [102601]

Yvette Cooper: The membership of the National Radiological Protection Board currently comprises:

Chairman

Sir Walter Bodmer FRS

Members

Professor A. D. Baddeley FRS

Professor Kay E. Davies CBE MA

Professor W. Gelletely

Professor J. M. Harrington CBE

Professor R. W. Lees

Professor Rona M. MacKie

Professor J. McEwen

Mr J. C. White.

All public bodies are required to maintain, and publish, registers of members' interests. The register of interests for members of the National Radiological Protection Board is available from the Board Secretary at the National Radiological Protection Board, Chilton, Didcot, Oxfordshire, OX11 0RQ. The register of interests will be available on NRPB's website [nrpb@nrpb.org.uk] in early 2000.

Cervix Removals

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations in which women have had a non-cancerous cervix removed there were in each of the past 10 years. [102593]

Yvette Cooper: The table shows the number of episodes where women have had an operation to remove a non-cancerous cervix, in National Health Service hospitals in England for the financial years 1989–90 to 1997–98.

Removal of non-cancerous cervix—NHS hospitals, England

	Number
1989–90	100
1990–91	97
1991–92	46
1992–93	59
1993–94	51
1994–95	37
1995–96	45
1996–97	47
1997–98[1]	45

[1] Figures for 1997–98 are provisional, no adjustments have yet been made for shortfalls in data, (i.e. the data is ungrossed).

Notes:

Ordinary admissions and day cases combined: completed episodes by primary operation (OPCS-4 code: Q01.1) and sex (females only)

1. 1989–90 to 1994–95 exclude FCEs with any of the following ICD-9 codes:

180-Malignant neoplasm of cervix uteri

219.0-Other benign neoplasm of uterus, cervix uteri

233.1-Carcinoma in situ of breast and genitourinary system, cervix uteri

236.0-Neoplasm of uncertain behaviour of genitourinary organs, uterus

239.5-Neoplasm of unspecified nature, other genitourinary organs

2. 1995–96 to 1997–98 exclude FCEs with any of the following ICD-10 codes:

C53-Malignant neoplasm of cervix uteri

C79.8-Secondary malignant neoplasm of other specified sites

D06-Carcinoma in situ of cervix uteri

D26.0-Other benign neoplasms of uterus, cervix uteri

D39.0-Neoplasm of uncertain or unknown behaviour of female genital organs, uterus

Source:

Department of Health, Hospital Episode Statistics (HES)

Peat

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department's policy is on the purchase and use of peat for its own operations and activities; and what performance targets his Department has set to reduce current peat use. [103012]

Yvette Cooper: There is no history of this Department having purchased or used peat for its own operations and activities, nor is there any expectation of the Department doing so in the future.

However, should the need ever arise, the Department proposes to substitute the use of all slow renewables, such as peat, with organic wastes (such as coir, manure, leaf mould and bark chippings) for improving the soil.

External Electrical Fields

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the studies carried out at Warwick University concerning the vulnerability of human beings to external electrical fields. [102862]

Yvette Cooper: Published research studies on the health effects of electromagnetic fields in general are regularly reviewed by the National Radiological Protection Board and its Advisory Group on Non-ionising Radiation.

The independent expert group on mobile phones, set up at the request of my right hon. Friend the Member for Dulwich and West Norwood (Ms Jowell), the former Minister for Public Health, is currently undertaking a rigorous assessment of biological and health research related to mobile phone systems. The group is expected to report in spring 2000.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of the microwave pulses used in mobile phone masts on the parts of the brains of children which are not stable until they reach the age of 12 years. [102860]

Yvette Cooper: The independent expert group on mobile phones, set up at the request of my right hon. Friend the Member for Dulwich and West Norwood (Ms Jowell), the former Minister for Public Health, is currently undertaking a rigorous assessment of biological and health research associated with mobile phone systems. The group is expected to report in spring 2000.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that all contracts for the purchase of meat by NHS providers contain clauses specifying that the animals must have been reared under animal welfare conditions to a standard as high as those enforced in the UK. [103350]

Yvette Cooper: National Health Service Supplies contracts stipulate that the origin of meat purchased for consumption within the NHS must be disclosed. They do not contain clauses of the type to which the hon. Member refers. Nevertheless, meat supplied through NHS Supplies contracts is, wherever possible, sourced from the United Kingdom and does, therefore, comply with the new welfare regulations.

However, NHS trusts and health authorities have the freedom to buy goods and services from wherever provides the best value. Although most products are available from the UK, price considerations may lead health authorities and NHS trusts to buy from elsewhere in the European Union.

Transplant Services

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he intends to respond to the Royal College of Surgeons report on transplant services; and if he will make a statement; [103386]

(2) if he will estimate the cost of introducing a national transplant service; and if he will make a statement. [103387]

Mr. Denham: The Government intend to respond to the Royal College of Surgeons report on transplant services early in the New Year. We shall take account of the costs of options such as a National Transplant Service, along with other factors in formulating a response.

Aricept

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health authorities (a) have authorised the prescription of the drug Aricept to ameliorate the symptoms of Alzheimer's disease in each of the Government standard regions, (b) have refused to authorise its use and (c) have not yet reached a decision. [103634]

Ms Stuart: Information about local policies on the treatment of Alzheimer's disease is not available centrally, but I understand that there is some prescribing of Aricept in all health authorities.

Aricept and other pharmaceutical treatment for Alzheimer's disease will be reviewed by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence as part of its first work programme. This work is expected to be completed by December 2000.

Antipsychotics

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to investigate the extent to which people with mental health problems are able to obtain atypical antipsychotics; and what steps the Government will take to ensure that people with mental illness have access to the drugs most likely to improve their quality of life. [103920]

Mr. Hutton: The prescribing of treatment for mental illness is a matter for clinicians. However, to assist clinicians in their decision making, an effective health care bulletin on drug treatments for schizophrenia has just been issued, copies of which are available in the Library. The Department has also commissioned the Royal College of Psychiatrists and the British Psychological Society to develop a guideline on this. The project is now being managed by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE). NICE will take responsibility for considering any representations about the proposed recommendations and for ensuring that the final guidance to the NHS fairly reflects the needs of patients as well as the weight of evidence.

Mental Health

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Government plans to include in the proposed mental health Bill the principle of non-discrimination recommended by the Richardson Committee and the Disability Rights Taskforce. [103921]

Mr. Hutton: The recently published consultation paper on the reform of the Mental Health Act 1983, copies of which are available in the Library, makes clear that the Government recognise the importance of the principle of non-discrimination and agrees that specific guidance should be included in the Code of Practice accompanying new legislation. This approach is consistent with that taken by the Richardson Committee. Detailed issues to be covered in any future legislation will be considered following the end of the consultation period.

Paediatric Intensive Care

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many paediatric intensive care beds are available in each NHS region; and if he will list the hospitals at which they are provided, indicating the numbers in each case. [104031]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 January 2000]: The table shows hospitals within each National Health Service region providing paediatric intensive care in January 2000.

Hospitals providing paediatric intensive care beds

NHS Region	Number of beds provided
Trent region
Leicester Royal Infirmary	8
Glenfield Hospital	5
Queens Medical Centre Nottingham	6
Sheffield Children's Hospital	7
London Region
Great Ormond Street Hospital for Sick Children	30
St. Mary's Hospital	8
Royal Brompton/Harefield NHS Trust	7
Guy's Hospital	16
Kings College Hospital	6
St. George's Hospital	5
Lewisham Hospital	3
South West Region
United Bristol Healthcare Trust	16
Eastern Region
Addenbrookes NHS Trust (Cambridge)	8
North West Region
Royal Liverpool Children's Hospital (Alder Hey)	21
Manchester Children's Hospital	24
Walton Centre for Neurology and Neurosurgery	3
South East Region
Southampton University Hospitals Trust	7
John Radcliffe Hospital (Oxford)	5
Royal Alexandra Hospital (Brighton)	1
West Midlands Region
Birmingham Children's Hospital	18
North Staffordshire NHS Trust	8

Hospitals providing paediatric intensive care beds

NHS Region	Number of beds provided
Northern and Yorkshire Region
Leeds General Infirmary	13
St. James' Hospital (Leeds)	2
Newcastle Hospitals NHS Trust	19
Hull Royal Infirmary	2
South Tees Hospital NHS Trust	5

Vulnerable Adults (Protection)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will assess the benefits of providing vulnerable adults with the same protection as is given to vulnerable children. [104366]

Mr. Hutton: While the majority of adults are well looked after by their families and paid carers, research has shown that abuse of vulnerable adults is nevertheless widespread. The protection of vulnerable adults who are at risk of abuse is therefore vital, and is a major concern of the Government.

In recent years the Department has funded a national helpline, run by Action on Elder Abuse, which enables people to seek advice on how to deal with incidents of abuse. The Department also has funded the production of training materials aimed at helping managers and care staff in residential care settings for older people better to understand the types and causes of abuse of their residents, how to expose abuse, and how to prevent it happening in the first place.

Currently, the Department is leading the work on producing guidance for developing multi-agency codes of practice for dealing with abuse of vulnerable adults. The consultation period of the draft guidance has now ended, and the final document titled "No Secrets" will be published shortly.

To offer further protection to vulnerable adults at risk of abuse, the Care Standards Bill, now in another place, contains provisions for a statutory work force ban mechanism to parallel that in the Protection of Children Act 1999.

Food Standards Agency

Mr. Tony Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of the Food Standards Agency appointed to date; and what criteria were used for their appointment. [100788]

Mr. Milburn: The selection process for the Board members of the Food Standards Agency has not yet been completed. However, I am pleased to be able to announce today that I have appointed Professor Sir John Krebs as the Chairman of the Agency. Sir John is a Royal Society Research Professor in the Department of Zoology, Oxford University and was formerly Chief Executive of the Natural Environment Research Council.

Sir John's Deputy will be Ms Suzi Leather, currently chair of Exeter and District Community NHS Trust. Ms Leather has twenty years of experience in consumer representation. The Chief Executive of the Agency will be Mr. Geoffrey Podger, who is currently Head of the Joint Food Safety and Standards Group (of the Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food), forerunner to the Agency.

The names of the Agency's Scottish Board member and Welsh Board member are the subject of further announcements today by my colleagues in Scotland and Wales. We hope to be able to announce the names of other Board members of the Agency in the near future.

The approach adopted—as we said in the White Paper "A Force for Change"—has been that people should be appointed who have a proven record in relevant fields and who together provide a balance of relevant skills and experience. A majority of those appointed will come from a wider public interest background without any specific affiliation.

CABINET OFFICE

British-Irish Council

Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will make a statement on the recent meeting of the British-Irish Council. [103441]

Marjorie Mowlam: The inaugural summit meeting of the British-Irish Council, established under the Good Friday Agreement, was held at Lancaster House, London on Friday 17 December 1999.

The role of the Council is to promote the harmonious and mutually beneficial development of the totality of relationships among the peoples of these islands. It will exchange information, discuss and use best endeavours to reach agreement on co-operation on matters of mutual interest within the competence of the relevant Administrations.

At its inaugural meeting the Council agreed a Memorandum on its working procedures. It adopted an initial list of issues for early discussion in the BIC and also decided which administrations would take the lead in each sectoral area:

Topic	Lead Administration
Drugs	Irish Government
Social Inclusion	Scottish Executive and Cabinet of National Assembly for Wales
Environment	British Government
Transport	Northern Ireland Executive Committee
Knowledge Economy	Jersey

In addition, the Council agreed an indicative list of other issues suitable for the Council's work, including areas which members are already taking forward bilaterally:

agricultural issues such as plant quarantine; rural development and rural depopulation; the development of renewable raw materials and energy crops; salmon fisheries; sea fisheries and aquaculture;

health issues;

regional issues: including links between cities, towns and local districts;

consideration of interparliamentary links (noting paragraph 11 of the Memorandum on Procedural Guidance); energy issues;

cultural issues;

tourism;

sporting activity;

education issues;

approaches to EU issues;

minority and lesser-used languages;

prison and probation issues.

The next summit meeting of the Council will take place in Dublin in June 2000 and will focus on the issue of drugs.

TREASURY

Labour Statistics

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) at what rate 18 to 24-year-olds unemployed for over six months left the unemployment count in March 1998; [102110]

(2) if he will provide a breakdown of the average monthly rate at which 18 to 24-year-olds unemployed for over six months left the unemployment count for each year from 1990 to 1999; [102112]

(3) what has been the average monthly rate at which 18 to 24-year-olds unemployed for over six months have left the unemployment count since April 1998. [102111]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answers 9 December 1999]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. John Bercow, dated 12 January 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary questions on the average monthly rate at which 18–24 year olds left the unemployment count.

The ONS publishes a monthly count of claimants of unemployment-related benefits. The claimant count consists of all people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance or National Insurance credits at Employment Service local offices. They must declare that they are out of work, capable of, available for and actively seeking work during the week in which the claim is made.

An average of 22.4 per cent. of people aged 18–24 years who were claiming unemployment-related benefits for six months or more (computerised claims only) left the claimant count each month in the United Kingdom between April 1998 and October 1999.

The corresponding percentage between 12 March 1998 and 9 April 1998, was 14.0 per cent.

The available information for 1990 to 1999 is given in the following table.

18–24 year old claimants unemployed 6 months or more who left the count as a percentage of all 18–24 year olds claiming for six months or more, United Kingdom; yearly averages from 1990 to 1999

Year	Age 18–24
1990	13.1
1991	9.8
1992	9.3
1993	9.9
1994	10.9
1995	11.3
1996	12.2
1997	15.0
1998	17.8
1999[1]	27.1

[1] Average of the 10 months January to October 1999

Debt Relief

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the criteria which will be used to determine which countries, and which categories of debt, will be eligible for 100 per cent. relief. [103176]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government's commitment to lifting 100 per cent. of the burden of debt owed to the Export Credit Guarantee Department covers all categories of debt owed by the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries, a group of 41 developing countries. All are Enhanced Structural Adjustment Facility or International Development Association-only and face unsustainable debt burden even after traditional debt-relief mechanisms have been applied fully.

Outsourced Operations

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what mechanisms are used to assess how much extra contract work outsourced operations will need to take on; and how the viability of plans to generate this extra work is assessed; [103625]

(2) what measures of added value are currently used when assessing outsourcing plans in terms of (a) technology and (b) procedure; [103629]

(3) what measures of added value when assessing the benefits of outsourcing were used between 1994–97; and what additional measures have been included in the assessment of outsourcing plans since 1997. [103630]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Under the Better Quality Services programme, Departments and other central Government bodies have plans to review their activities against five systems: abolition; privatisation; marketing testing; strategic contracting out; and internal restructuring.

Reviews follow procedures Set out in the Better Quality Services handbook, published in 1998, which emphasis the need for consultation with stakeholders. Individual reviews should result in added value through improvements in service cost and quality.

Where a decision to outsource is taken, Government procurement policy requires that to be based on value for money, which is the optimum combination of whole life cost and quality to meet the user's requirement. Under the procurement process, bidders are selected on their financial or economic standing and technical capacity and capability, and contracts are awarded on the basis of value for money. This includes consideration of the added value offered by a particular bid or through award of a particular contract.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Standards Agency

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on the appointment of members of the Food Standards Agency; [100200]

(2) if he will list the members of the Food Standards Agency and the areas of expertise from which they have been drawn; [100201]

(3) which members of the Food Standards Agency who have been appointed on the basis of their membership of organisations representing (a) victims and (b) families of victims of E. coli 0157 poisoning. [100202]

Mr. Milburn: I have been asked to reply.

The selection process for the Board members of the Food Standards Agency has not yet been completed. However, I am pleased to be able to announce today that I have appointed Professor Sir John Krebs as the Chairman of the Agency. Sir John is a Royal Society Research Professor in the Department of Zoology, Oxford University and was formerly Chief Executive of the Natural Environment Research Council.

Sir John's Deputy will be Ms Suzi Leather, currently chair of Exeter and District Community NHS Trust. Ms Leather has twenty years of experience in consumer representation. The Chief Executive of the Agency will be Mr. Geoffrey Podger, who is currently Head of the Joint Food Safety and Standards Group (of the Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food), forerunner to the Agency.

The names of the Agency's Scottish Board member and Welsh Board member are the subject of further announcements today by my colleagues in Scotland and Wales. We hope to be able to announce the names of other Board members of the Agency in the near future.

The approach adopted—as we said in the White Paper "A Force for Change"—has been that people should be appointed who have a proven record in relevant fields and who together provide a balance of relevant skills and experience. A majority of those appointed will come from a wider public interest background without any specific affiliation.

Beef Slaughter Premium Scheme

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the new beef slaughter premium scheme will be implemented; and from what date payments will be available. [103903]

Ms Quin: The new slaughter premium will be payable on cattle slaughtered on or after 1 January 2000. A 60 per cent. advance of the payments due, in respect of animals slaughtered in the year 2000, will be made as soon as possible after 16 October 2000, with the balance paid as soon as possible after 1 April 2001. This is identical to the payment timetable for the existing Beef Special Premium and Suckler Cow Premium Schemes.

Organophosphates

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to discuss the report of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment on organophosphates with the (a) Ministry of Defence, (b) Department of Health and (c) Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. [103232]

Ms Quin [holding answer 20 December 1999]: The Committee's report on organophosphates (OPs) has been discussed by the Official Group on OPs, which brings together representatives from all the key departments and agencies with an interest in this area (including the Ministry of Defence, the Department of Health and the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions).

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research on organophosphates his Department plans to carry out with relevance to Gulf War syndrome. [103089]

Ms Quin [holding answer 20 December 1999]: The Ministry of Defence has responsibility for research in respect of Gulf veterans' illnesses. They continue to monitor research on OPs, including that funded by MAFF, in view of the suggested link between Gulf veterans' illnesses and OP pesticides.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent assessment he has made of the effects of sheep-dips on farmers' health. [103090]

Ms Quin [holding answer 20 December 1999]: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply of 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 446W, to his question on the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment report on organophosphates.

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) men and (b) women in each of the standard age groups were employed in his Department in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1999. [104029]

Mr. Morley: The figures requested for 1999 are set out in the table. These are expressed as Full Time Equivalents. A comparable split by age group is not available for 1979.

Age	Female	Male	Total
	Full Time Equivalents		Full Time Equivalents
Core MAFF
16–19	108.64	54.55	163.19
20–24	349.47	284.91	634.38
25–29	476.50	432.64	909.14
30–34	462.72	459.19	921.91
35–39	452.50	446.19	898.69
40–44	369.26	444.55	813.81
45–49	344.77	456.29	801.07
50–54	362.12	495.93	858.05
55–59	237.07	323.57	560.64
60–75	83.95	95.19	179.14
Total Full Time Equivalents	3,246.98	3,493.02	6,740.00

Age	Female	Male	Total Full Time Equivalents
	Full Time Equivalents
MAFF Agencies
16–19	28.00	12.65	40.65
20–24	162.62	144.42	307.04
25–29	303.96	350.15	654.11
30–34	317.82	456.36	774.18
35–39	236.17	433.77	669.94
40–44	190.27	404.82	595.09
45–49	180.21	334.30	514.50
50–54	173.97	377.58	551.55
55–59	118.94	231.83	350.77
60–75	37.27	35.43	72.70
Total Full Time Equivalents	1,749.22	2,781.31	4,530.53

In 1979 there were 7,498 men and 5,639.5 women working in MAFF.

European Regional Funds

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what level of match public funds from his Department is available to EU Objective 1 regions for each of the next seven calendar years; [104304]

(2) what assessment he has made of the requirements for match public funds from his Department for the EU Objective 1 regions of (a) Cornwall and Scilly, (b) Merseyside and (c) South Yorkshire for each of the seven years of the programme. [104300]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 January 2000]: It is the responsibility of grant applicants in the Objective 1 regions to calculate how much match public funding they will need and from where they should obtain this. The Government have provided and will continue to provide significant financial support through a variety of programmes sponsored by different departments. MAFF is currently considering its contribution to this support. Local partnerships can prioritise the use of these resources to fund projects jointly with the Structural Funds.

Regional partners can also seek to match their European funds with contributions from the voluntary and private sectors, as well as through loans from organisations such as the European Investment Bank.

GM Crops

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which GM crops are currently being tested. [104288]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

The crops being tested in the field scale trials are fodder maize and oilseed rape which have been genetically modified to be herbicide tolerant. One variety of fodder maize and one variety each of spring-sown and autumn-sown oilseed rape are being tested to provide a thorough evaluation of their environmental impact. All results of the tests will be made publicly available.

In addition, there are a number of crops being grown for smaller-scale research purposes. The crops currently being tested are spring and winter oilseed rape, sugar and fodder beet, wheat, potato, maize, poplar and chicory.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 13 January 2000

DEFENCE

Falklands Conflict

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel who served in the Falklands conflict originated from Northern Ireland; and in which (a) regiments and (b) other parts of the services they served. [104394]

Mr. Spellar: The Ministry of Defence does not hold a centrally collated record of the origins of servicemen and their individual deployments that contains the information requested for all three Services. Full details could be provided only at disproportionate cost, following detailed examination of individual records.

However I can advise that available data show that some 95 Army and 29 RAF individuals who served in the Falklands operations are recorded as having originated from Northern Ireland and I will write with further details concerning regiments and units in which they served.

Defence Vetting Agency

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 468W, concerning the move of the Defence Vetting Agency to York, if he will estimate the number of people living within 50 miles of York who will be working at the Defence Vetting Agency. [104667]

Mr. Spellar: The Agency is in the early stages of forming up at York. It will be taking on staff (mainly from HQ 2nd Division but also through local recruitment) at various points between now and early 2001, when the Agency will reach its full strength at York of 181. Many posts are still unfilled.

It is expected that all permanent staff working for the Agency at Imphal Barracks in the eventual workforce will live locally and commute daily. It is not our normal practice to check on the distance that individuals commute, but a random survey suggests that the overwhelming majority of our York-based workforce will live within 50 miles of York.

In my earlier answer I explained that, in addition to the 181 DVA staff who will be based at Imphal Barracks, the Agency would employ 130 Investigating Officers who would work from their homes. The location of these Officers is tied to the major areas of MOD employment across the UK. The Officers are tasked from, and report to the Agency at York, but will very rarely travel there.

Territorial Army

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the outcome of the feasibility study into compulsory mobilisation of the Territorial Army to sustain peace support operations in the Balkans. [105415]

Mr. Spellar: The Feasibility Study has concluded that compulsory mobilisation is feasible in both legal and practical terms. This will enable the TA to make a major contribution to front-line operations and reflects and supports the intent of the Strategic Defence Review that the Territorial Army should be usable. At the same time, as a result of the reduction in UK force levels in the Balkans, we judge that compulsory mobilisation is not operationally necessary at this time. We will keep the possibility of compulsory mobilisation under constant review in the light of the prevailing operational conditions.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Regional Aid

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reasons underlie the policy of referring applications to his Department for regional aid or assistance to the Minister of Agriculture. [104173]

Ms Hewitt: The Department asks the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for advice on all Regional Selective Assistance (RSA) applications with an agriculture element to ensure that there are no EC restrictions on projects being eligible for assistance in this respect. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is responsible for decisions taken on awards of RSA.

Correspondence

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed of 9 August to the Minister of State about the inclusion of postcodes in telephone directories. [104094]

Mr. Alan Johnson [holding answer 10 January 2000]: I replied to the right hon. Member yesterday.

IPPC Charges

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the level of IPPC charges in other EU member states; and if he will make a statement. [104101]

Ms Hewitt: The system of IPPC charges, which is still under consideration, is the responsibility of the Environment Agency. The Agency consulted on an interim charging regime last autumn, and is considering the outcome of that consultation. The Agency will be monitoring the implementation of IPPC in other member states including their charging policies.

Minimum Wage

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the review of the current minimum wage to be completed. [104688]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Government received the Low Pay Commission's Report on the impact of implementation of the national minimum wage at the end of December. Once Ministers have had an opportunity to consider the Report's findings, both the Report and the Government's response to it will be published.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Philippines

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to put contracts for the Government of the Philippines Bridge Replacement Project under the existing offer of aid and trade provision out to tender in the United Kingdom. [104034]

Clare Short: The first component of the Philippines Bridge Replacement Programme, for emergency steel panel bridging, was negotiated with the Mabey Group and is due to be completed shortly. The second component is for various types of steel bridging and a range of design and advisory services. This is being negotiated with a consortium of Balfour Kilpatrick and Cleveland Bridge.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Old Vehicles

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many (a) cars and (b) motor-cycles which are more than 25 years old are in use in the United Kingdom. [103155]

Mr. Hill: The number of vehicles more than 25 years old at the end of 1998 in Great Britain was as follows:

Cars: 256,392 (1.1 per cent. of licensed stock)

Motor Cycles: 91,173 (11.2 per cent. of licensed stock)

At present, we do not have this information for Northern Ireland.

Concessionary Travel

Mr. Martin Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what account he will take of the European Court of Justice judgment on 15 December, in amending his policy on permitting local authorities to grant local travel concessions to men aged over 60 years. [104150]

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to equalise at the age of 60 the eligibility for the minimum half price local bus concession for older people following the judgment in the case of John Taylor and Liberty v. HM Government. [104057]

Mr. Hill: Legal advice is that this judgment does not have implications for concessionary fares on local transport.

Road Accidents

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the accident rates including fatalities for (a) single and (b) dual carriageway roads. [104116]

Mr. Hill: Accident rates on single and dual carriageway roads are given in the table.

Accident rates for single and dual carriageway roads in Great Britain: 1998

Accident rate per hundred million vehicle kms

	Single carriageway	Dual carriageway[1]	All roads[2]
Fatal	0.8	0.4	0.7
Fatal and Serious Accidents	9.9	4.0	8.2
All Personal Injury Accidents	59	27	52

[1] Includes motorways

[2] Includes accidents at roundabouts and those where carriageway type is unknown

Driving Licences

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what published standards are set for the Driver and Vehicle Licence Agency on the time taken to process driving licence applications that include reference to a medical condition; and what standards in respect of such applications the Agency has achieved in the last three quarters of 1999. [104056]

Mr. Hill: The service standards for applications involving a medical investigation are published in the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's Service Guide. This states that the Agency's Medical Unit aims to complete its investigations:

(a) within five weeks of receiving an application for a car or motorcycle licence;

(b) within seven weeks of receiving an application for a large goods/passenger carrying vehicle licence.

When medical investigations take longer than this, applicants are advised on an individual basis.

Excluding December, where final figures have yet to be available, in the last three-quarters of 1999 the Agency achieved an average performance of 44 per cent. of car and motorcycle applications and 66 per cent. of large goods and passenger carrying vehicles being processed within the published standard.

Action is being taken to bring this service up to standard and the position is steadily improving.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the average time between applying for and receiving (a) a driving licence and (b) a driving licence that includes reference to a medical condition. [104055]

Mr. Hill: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency undertakes to issue driving licences and return original documents to customers within three weeks (15 working days) of the date of receipt of their applications. This three-week standard has been met or bettered consistently throughout the year.

In cases where a driver declares a medical condition—amounting to some 1,100 applications a day—because of the increased complexities of the service the standard is five weeks for a car licence and seven weeks for a bus or lorry licence. Some current cases in these categories are taking longer. Action is being taken to bring this service up to standard and the position is steadily improving.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what published standards are set for the Driver and Vehicle Licence Agency on the time taken to process driving licence applications; and what standards in processing applications the Agency has achieved in the last three quarters of 1999. [104054]

Mr. Hill: Where there are no medical considerations, DVLA undertakes to issue driving licences (and return original identity documents) to customers within three weeks (15 working days) of the date of receipt of their applications. This standard is set out in the Agency's Customer Service Guide. This three-week standard has been met or bettered consistently throughout the last three-quarters of 1999.

Trunk Roads (West Sussex)

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will next announce approval for trunk road improvement schemes or new by-passes in West Sussex. [104275]

Mr. Hill: "A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England" set out our investment priorities and a programme of studies to consider problems on the trunk road network. Among the studies is one on the problems of congestion between Worthing and Lancing on the A27. It is considering specific local problems within the area to be covered by the wider study, to commence later this year, looking at congestion, safety and environmental problems between Southampton and Folkestone. In the light of the findings of these studies, it will be for the Regional Planning Body to consider whether to recommend to the Secretary of State any trunk road improvement schemes as part of their regional transport strategy.

Airport Traffic

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list in order of air traffic movements over the last five years the airport traffic at (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick, (c) Luton, (d) Exeter and (e) Guernsey. [104595]

Mr. Mullin: The last five full years for which air traffic movements data are available are 1994 to 1998 inclusive. The air traffic movements over these years at Heathrow, Gatwick, Luton, Exeter and Guernsey are listed in the table.

	1998	1997	1996	1995	1994
Heathrow	442,412	430,706	428,342	421,289	411,608
Gatwick	242,547	229,665	211,686	192,806	181,879
Luton	47,748	40,287	31,029	21,716	17,161
Guernsey	40,085	39,625	40,632	40,902	39,850
Exeter	8,608	7,877	7,870	8,844	10,198

Millennium Dome

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the future use of the Dome site. [104438]

Ms Armstrong: The Government launched a competition last year for the long-term use of the Dome after the Millennium Experience. The short list of bidders will be announced shortly.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the financial value of the Dome site. [104437]

Ms Armstrong: The Dome site is on offer as part of the assets available in the Government competition to find a long-term, financially viable and sustainable use for the Millennium Dome. The Government estimate of the financial value of the Dome site is restricted as commercial-in-confidence.

Lindane

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps his Department takes to monitor the effects of lindane. [104610]

Mr. Mullin: The Department funds the monitoring of chemicals, including lindane, in air and the marine environment and the Environment Agency also monitors for lindane in marine and fresh waters. The effects of pesticides on wildlife and companion animals are monitored by MAFF's Wildlife Incidents Investigation Scheme.

Newly Qualified Drivers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans the Government have to introduce regulations to compel newly qualified drivers to display warnings on the vehicle they are driving that they are newly qualified. [104448]

Mr. Hill: A number of safety improvements for learners and new drivers, including this one, are being considered as part of the Road Safety Strategy which is to be announced shortly.

GM Crops

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to authorise further field-scale trials of genetically modified crops. [103775]

Mr. Meacher: I announced a renewed voluntary agreement with industry on the conduct of the farm scale evaluation programme on 5 November 1999. Under the agreement, plantings for the farm scale GM crop evaluations are limited to 20–25 fields per crop per year, subject to the advice and requirements of the independent Scientific Steering Committee overseeing the programme. This covers the plantings through to 2002 for the crops in the programme—GM fodder maize, and spring and winter oilseed rape, all modified to be tolerant to a herbicide. Subject to the advice of the Scientific Steering Committee, a fourth crop, beet modified to be tolerant to a herbicide, may be included in the programme for the same three years. Proposals for any other field scale plantings of these crops during the farm scale evaluation period will be decided by the Scientific Steering Committee, taking into account the relevance of the proposals to biodiversity.

Countryside (Access)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the progress of the Government's Access to the Countryside proposals. [103779]

Mr. Mullin: The Government's proposals to improve public access to the countryside will be included in the Countryside Bill, announced in last year's Queen's Speech. The Bill will also include measures for improving rights of way. The access provisions of the Bill (which we expect to be introduced into Parliament shortly) will build on the proposals set out in "The Government's Framework for Action, Access to the Countryside in England and Wales", issued in March last year.

Planning Regulations

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the impact on farming of local planning regulations in (a) Gloucestershire and (b) the South West. [103790]

Ms Beverley Hughes: Development control policies, and their impact upon any particular sectoral interest, are matters for the local planning authorities concerned, as set down in their development plans and having regard to national and regional planning policy guidance.

Driving Agencies

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the report prepared by the Audit Commission on the DVLA and DSA; and what action he intends to take as a result of this report. [104645]

Mr. Hill: I understand that the Public Services Productivity Panel intend to publish this report shortly.

Home Improvement Agencies

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to appoint a national co-ordinating body for home improvement agencies in England to serve from 1 April 2000. [105137]

Mr. Raynsford: I have invited Collective Enterprises Limited to enter into post-tender negotiations with the Department. Subject to the satisfactory completion of these negotiations, I expect to award them a contract to act as the national co-ordinating body for Home Improvement Agencies in England for four years from 1 April 2000.

The Department invited Care and Repair England Limited (the current national co-ordinating body) and Collective Enterprises Limited to submit tenders. Both offered a comprehensive range of services. However, Care and Repair England's tender was substantially more expensive and I believe that Collective Enterprises Limited offer significantly better value for money. I look forward to working with them to build on the foundations which have been laid.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Public Safety Radio Communications Service

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made towards the agreement of a contract for the Public Safety Radio Communications Service; and if he will make a statement. [105317]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Chief Executive of the Police Information Technology Organisation (PITO) issued a letter of instruction to proceed to British Telecom plc before Christmas, authorising them to invest in the project infrastructure. Negotiations on the Framework Arrangement and the model service contract are continuing and I hope they will be concluded by the end of January. PITO will be asking individual police authorities to sign service contracts by the end of February.

CCTV Tenders

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for announcing the results of the current round of CCTV bids. [105319]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I am planning to make an announcement on Monday 17 January.

Departmental Productivity

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to increase the productivity and reduce the running costs of his Department. [103850]

Mr. Straw: The Home Office has a Public Service Agreement commitment to deliver 3 per cent. per annum running cost productivity gains, and is currently on target to deliver this for 1999–2000.

A joint Home Office and Her Majesty's Treasury ministerial review of productivity is to be led by both the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my noble Friend, Lord Bassam of Brighton and the Financial Secretary to Her Majesty's Treasury and is intended to focus on four key areas:

Personnel Management;
Information Technology;
The Home Office Estate; and Procurement Planning.

Asylum Seekers (Algeria)

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many asylum applications, made by Algerians, have been decided by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in each of the last three months; [104371]

(2) how many asylum applications, made by Algerians, have been decided by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in each of the last three months, where the applicant has been in detention; [104372]

(3) how many asylum applications have been made by Algerians in the last three months. [104374]

Mrs. Roche: The available information is that in September 1999, 135 nationals of Algeria, excluding dependants, applied for asylum in the United Kingdom. This figure fell slightly to 115 in October and 90 in November.

Information on how many asylum applications, made by Algerians, have been decided by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in each of the last three months is not currently available.

Information on Algerian asylum seekers who have had a decision and who had been detained at some point could be obtained only at disproportionate cost through the examination of individual case records.

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Algerians have been (a) removed and (b) deported in each of the last three months; and what proportion of these had previously claimed asylum. [104373]

Mrs. Roche: The latest available information relates to arriving passengers during the period April-June 1999. Thirty-eight Algerian passengers were refused leave to enter and removed from the United Kingdom in April 1999, 28 in May 1999 and 21 in June 1999. Those data are provisional and do not show whether or not the person concerned had claimed asylum. This additional information could be obtained only by examining the individual case files.

Data for Algerian nationals removed or departing voluntarily under illegal entry or deportation procedures during this period are not yet available.

Konrad Kalejs

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assistance will be given to the Australian law enforcement authorities in their inquiries into the case of Konrad Kalejs. [104514]

Mr. Straw: We have made it clear to the Australian authorities that any relevant details they sought would be made available to them, including those details held by the Metropolitan Police.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the case of Konrad Kalejs. [104513]

Mr. Straw: I issued a full statement on 6 January. I have placed copies of the statement in the Library and am sending my hon. Friend a copy.

Electoral Register

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the Direct Marketing Association on commercial and charity use of the electoral register; and what response he has given. [104646]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Since the publication of the summary of recommendations of the Working Party on Electoral Procedures on 13 July 1999, Home Office Ministers have received two written representations from the Direct Marketing Association, dated 23 September and 22 November. In response to the first of these, I held a meeting with representatives of the Association on 9 November for a full discussion of the issues that concerned them. Following consideration of the second letter, I wrote to the Association on 12 January 2000.

Probation Service

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce the Private Finance Initiative into the future development of the Probation Estate in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [104742]

Mr. Boateng: No decisions have been taken about the future financing of the Probation Estate in England and Wales as a whole and a range of options, including the Private Finance Initiative (PFI), will be considered in due course. Local PFI initiatives are currently being considered for probation services in Mid Glamorgan, Avon and Essex.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to centralise the Probation Estate; and if he will make a statement. [104741]

Mr. Boateng: The plan to centralise the Probation Estate will be developed as part of the arrangements to modernise the Probation Service in England and Wales. Details are not yet available.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to out-source clerical and administrative support for the Probation Service in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [104740]

Mr. Boateng: I have no current plans for out-sourcing this work.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the report commissioned by his Department into the case for the centralisation of the Probation Service estate in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [104744]

Mr. Boateng: The decision to centralise ownership and management of the Probation Service estate was not dependent on the survey of the Probation Service estate, a copy of the report on which will be placed in the Library in due course.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce a revised case recording and management system for the Probation Service in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [104743]

Mr. Boateng: A project is currently under way to redevelop the current case recording and management system for the Probation Services for England and Wales, involving representatives of these Services. A project board has been established; a user requirement has been produced and a specialist Information Technology project manager has been recruited.

Involuntary Manslaughter

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department has received on his plans to propose legislation on the Law Commission's recommendation of an offence of involuntary manslaughter. [103801]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We have received written representations from hon. Members, interested groups and members of the public about the Government's response to the Law Commission's report "Legislating the Criminal Code: Involuntary Manslaughter". The issue has also been raised in a number of parliamentary Questions.

We are currently considering the recommendations of the interdepartmental working group which has been considering the Law Commission's report and will consult our colleagues shortly.

Access Arrangements

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many court welfare officers in England and Wales received training in (a) 1997 and (b) 1998 to deal with access arrangements for children following separation and divorce; [104396]

(2) what training courses exist for court welfare officers to deal with the problem of parental alienation. [104397]

Mr. Boateng: The comprehensive induction programme for family court welfare officers includes modules on working with children and separating families. Available records indicate that 75 people completed the whole programme in the period April 1997 to March 1998, and 50 in the period April 1998 to March 1999. The need for any additional training is assessed by individual probation services and provided by either the service itself or an external agent. No information is collected centrally on this additional training.

Sudbury Prison

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate (a) the percentage of prisoners who were serving a life sentence and (b) the number of prisoners in Sudbury Prison at six-monthly intervals over the last 10 years. [104644]

Mr. Boateng: The latest available provisional information for life sentence prisoners is for 30 November 1999. On that date, 7 per cent. of the prison population in England and Wales were life sentence prisoners. Information on the population of Sudbury prison over the last 10 years is given in the table.

Population in Her Majesty's Prison Sudbury 1989–99

Date	Number
1989
30 June	537
31 December	518
1990
30 June	524
31 December	464
1991
30 June	534
31 December	436
1992
30 June	450
31 December	402
1993
30 June	455
31 December	406
1994
30 June	441
31 December	401
1995
30 June	387
31 December	377
1996
30 June	474
31 December	456
1997
30 June	504
31 December	462
1998
30 June	493
31 December	488
1999
30 June	499
30 November[1]	505

[1] Latest available

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

CPS

31. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Solicitor-General what recent assessment he has made of the record of the Crown Prosecution Service in bringing persistent young offenders to trial in Merseyside. [103806]

The Solicitor-General: During my visit to CPS Merseyside in September last year, I was able to see at first hand the efforts made by the CPS and other local agencies to reduce the time it took to prosecute persistent young offenders. The average time taken from arrest to sentence is steadily decreasing, and the Area anticipates further significant reductions as a result of fast tracking arrangements that are being adopted throughout Merseyside.

33. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on the Commission for Racial Equality's investigation into the Crown Prosecution Service. [103808]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service is in discussion with the CRE regarding the proposed investigation and hopes to find an agreed way forward. The CRE will reach a conclusion and notify the CPS before the end of January 2000.

34. Dr. George Turner: To ask the Solicitor-General what progress he has made in ensuring greater effectiveness in the application of information technology within the Crown Prosecution Service. [103809]

The Solicitor-General: I am pleased to report that significant progress has been made in developing effective IT in CPS.

The Review of the CPS led by Sir Iain Glidewell reported in June 1998. It recommended the creation of a new post, Director of Business and Information Systems. That post has been filled and an Information Systems Strategic Plan developed. This plan provides a two-step approach to delivering effective IT support to lawyers and caseworkers, as well as that needed for effective administration and control.

In July 1999, the CPS was awarded £12 million from the Government's Capital Modernisation Fund. This money together with existing CPS resources will fund Step 1, the Connect 42 project. This will provide access for lawyers and caseworkers to networked PCs across the 42 CPS Areas. It will also enable secure electronic mail connections with its partners in the Criminal Justice System.

Step 2 of the Modernisation Programme, the Compass project, is procuring a Managed Service through a PFI contract. This will use the IT infrastructure of Step 1, and complement it with a case management system designed to meet the needs of front line CPS staff. It will provide the ability to work with electronic case files and allow information to be exchanged much more easily with other organisations in the criminal justice system through speedier electronic communications between computer systems.

Piloting of the Connect 42 project is planned for March 2000, with national rollout following over the subsequent 18 months.

The CPS plans to advertise its requirement for the Compass project in the Official Journal for the European Communities in second quarter of 2000.

35. Dr. Palmer: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on the rights of audience exercised by Crown Prosecution Service lawyers in the higher courts. [103810]

The Solicitor-General: In February 1997 limited rights of audience were granted to employed solicitors, allowing them to appear alone in appeals and uncontested cases in the Crown Court or to act as juniors in cases in which leading counsel are instructed. CPS higher court advocates began to exercise those rights in August 1998, since then the volume of work undertaken by them has gradually increased.

The impression that the Attorney-General and I have gained from our visits to various parts of the country is that the higher court advocates have been well received by judges and the Bar.

By mid-2000 nearly 200 CPS solicitor higher court advocates will have been trained. The CPS is now considering its future strategy for deploying its lawyers in the Crown Court in the light of the Access to Justice Act 1999, which grants full rights of audience to all lawyers.

Serious Fraud Office

32. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on the recent performance of the Serious Fraud Office. [103807]

The Solicitor-General: In 1998–99, the Serious Fraud Office obtained 34 convictions from the 42 defendants tried. The SFO continues to be an effective deterrent against serious and complex fraud.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Football Task Force

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which members of the Football Task Force supported the majority report on commercial issues. [104444]

Kate Hoey: The Football Task Force did not vote on any issue during its deliberations and all members of the Task Force signed up to the report in its published form. The particular views of individual members of the Task Force on particular parts of the report on commercial issues are therefore not known.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Libya

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the British Ambassador's discussions with the Libyan authorities concerning the alleged discovery of parts for Scud missiles at a British airport. [104450]

Mr. Hain: The British Ambassador in Tripoli called on the Libyan Foreign Ministry on 10 January to protest about the Libyans' attempt to import missile parts via the UK. The Libyans took note of our serious concerns.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what grounds the UN Sanctions Committee banned the import of bulls to Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [104421]

Mr. Hain: An application to import 15 bulls to Iraq was made to the UN Sanctions Committee in late November. The Committee had no objection to the import of the bulls. However, the application also included the supply of a number of vaccines which were of potential dual use concern. Additional information on these vaccines has therefore been requested.

Iran

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Iranian Foreign Minister concerning the position of the 13 Jews in Iran detained without trial, during the Iranian Foreign Minister's visit to London; and if he will make a statement. [104515]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary raised the cases of those detained on espionage charges, including 13 members of the Iranian Jewish community, with Foreign Minister Kharrazi during his visit from 10–12 January. Dr. Kharrazi assured them both that those detained would receive a fair trial including access to families and legal representation.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has further to pursue with Iran the case of the 13 Iranian Jews detained without trial. [104516]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary raised the cases of those detained on espionage charges, including 13 members of the Iranian Jewish community, with the Iranian Foreign Minister Dr. Kharrazi during his visit to London from 10–12 January. We and our EU partners will continue to raise this issue with the Iranian authorities at every possible opportunity.

British Overseas Territories

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 318W, on overseas territories, what plans his Department has to introduce an Order in Council to ensure that the British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands and the Turks and Caicos Islands change their existing legislation on homosexual acts. [104706]

Mr. Battle: The White Paper on the Overseas Territories (OTs) states that it is HMG's intention that OT legislation should comply with the international obligations to which the UK is subject. We pressed the OTs to announce before 31 December 1999 their intention to introduce legislation to decriminalise homosexual acts between consenting adults in private. That date having passed, we will shortly be reviewing the situation.

PRIME MINISTER

Joined-up Government

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Prime Minister when the Performance and Innovation Unit will publish reports on its studies into Accountability and Incentives for Joined-up Government and Analysis and Modelling in Central Government. [104852]

The Prime Minister: The Performance and Innovation Unit reports of these studies entitled "Wiring it Up: Whitehall's Management of Cross-cutting Policies and Services" and "Adding it Up: Improving Analysis and Modelling in Central Government" have been published today.

The two reports are key elements of the Modernising Government agenda for better policies and better services. They set out a blueprint for joined-up policy making and service delivery supported by evidence-based analysis.

Copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House and are also available from the Vote Office.

Intelligence and Security Committee

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to make an appointment to the Intelligence and Security Committee. [105234]

The Prime Minister: I have appointed my hon. Friend the Member for Doncaster, Central (Ms Winterton), to be member of the Intelligence and Security Committee in place of my hon. Friend the Member for Pontefract and Castleford (Yvette Cooper), who left the Committee following her appointment as a Minister.

United Kingdom European Delegations

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Prime Minister if he will announce the full composition of the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe and Assembly of the Western European Union. [105233]

The Prime Minister: The United Kingdom Delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe and Western European Union is as follows:

Leader

The right hon. Terry Davis MP

Full representatives	Substitute Members
David Atkinson MP	Malcolm Bruce MP
Sir Sydney Chapman MP	The right hon. The Lord Clinton-Davis
Michael Colvin MP	Mrs. Ann Cryer MP
Tom Cox MP	Mike Hancock CBE, MP
Lawrence Cunliffe MP	Robert Jackson MP
Bill Etherington MP	Ms Jenny Jones MP
Paul Flynn MP	The Lord Judd
Mrs. Maria Fyfe MP	The Baroness Knight of Collingtree DBE
The Lord Kirkhill	The Lord Lucas of Crudwell
Keven McNamara MP	Ms Chris McCafferty MP
Jim Marshall MP	Gwyn Prosser MP
Edward O'Hara MP	Syd Rapson MP
The Lord Ponsonby of Shulbrede	Miss Geraldine Smith MP
The Lord Russell-Johnston	David Taylor MP
John D. Taylor MP	Dr. Rudi Vis MP
John Townend MP	John Wilkinson MP
James Wray MP	David Wilshire MP
	Anthony D. Wright MP

SCOTLAND

Hughes Report (Dunblane)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for what reasons the report on Thomas Hamilton by Sergeant Hughes is subject to a 100-year closure. [104520]

Dr. Reid: As the report contains sensitive information about children and alleged offences against them, it was considered appropriate that it should remain closed for 100 years. This closure is in accordance with current Government guidelines published in the White Paper "Open Government" (Cm 2290 (1993)). The Crown Office will deal with any requests for access meantime.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Land Register

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if a decision has been made on the proposal to restore price paid to the Land Register; and if he will make a statement. [105318]

Jane Kennedy: After extensive consultation, the Lord Chancellor has decided to restore "price paid" to the Land Register. This is consistent with the Government's policy to improve the house buying process by making important information more readily available, particularly at an early stage of the process. Information included in the Land Register should be as comprehensive as is practical and proper—property value is of great interest to people and there is no good reason why it should not be available.

The information will not be inserted retrospectively. All applications received by the Land Registry on or after 1 April 2000 will have the price paid entered on the Land Register where it is practicable to do so. As with other data, the Land Register will provide the current information. Hence, on a subsequent change of ownership, the original price paid will be removed from the register.

This change in practice will bring the Land Register for England and Wales into line with many other jurisdictions where the price paid for property is a matter of public record. This includes most of Europe and, notably, Scotland where this information has been publicly available since 1617 without appearing to cause any problems.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Drugs Education

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what level of support is being made available by his Department to primary and secondary schools for the delivery of drugs education in the financial year 1999–2000; and how much will be available in the following two years. [102794]

Jacqui Smith: Specific support to schools for drug education is available through the Standards Fund, via Local Education Authorities.

During 1999–2000, £7.5 million has been made available through the Standards Fund Drug Prevention Grant. For the financial year 2000–01 the Drug Prevention Grant will be incorporated into the larger Social Inclusion: Pupil Support, Drug Prevention and Youth Service (SIPS) Grant. A total of £140 million will be available through the SIPS grant and minimum of £7.5 million is available for Drug Education; however, LEAs may opt to spend more.

In line with the Anti-Drugs Strategy, the Department is seeking to deliver drug education within the wider context of Personal, Social and Health Education (PSHE) and the Healthy Schools Programme. We are supporting the development of PSHE through Standards Fund moneys, £12 million will be made available during 2000–01 for the development of PSHE and Citizenship in schools.

Levels of funding for 2001–02 and beyond fall into the coming CSR period and are yet to be agreed.

Teaching English as a Foreign Language

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received from industry concerning the role of higher and further education colleges in the teaching of English as a foreign language. [104440]

Mr. Wicks: We have received representations from private training providers.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had regarding the role of further and higher education colleges in the teaching of English as a foreign language. [104441]

Mr. Wicks: My Department holds discussions as appropriate on this issue. For example, we have been closely involved with the Further Education Funding Council's review of English as a Foreign Language courses.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to involve institutions engaged in the teaching of English as a foreign language in reforms of higher and further education. [104443]

Mr. Wicks: In any reforms of further and higher education, we always welcome the views of institutions engaged in teaching English as a foreign language.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office regarding the role of the British Council in the teaching of English as a foreign language. [104442]

Mr. Wicks: The Department holds discussions periodically with the British Council about its role in promoting the learning of English as a foreign language.

SOCIAL SECURITY

CSA Computer System

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the time scale for (a) the tendering process and (b) the production of the new computer system for the Child Support Agency; and if he will estimate the likely total cost of this project. [104705]

Angela Eagle: Discussions are currently in progress with the Department's private sector partner, the Affinity consortium, on the overall scope of the IT solution, a contract to develop and operate a new computer system, and the time scales for delivery. Costs are subject to negotiation.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the existing computer system operated by the Child Support Agency could support the calculations of maintenance liabilities under the new formula proposed in the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill. [104704]

Angela Eagle: It might be possible to amend the Child Support Computer System to support a certain amount of work under the new system, but not without some difficulty.

Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if it is his policy under the provisions of the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill that benefits will be suspended for offenders immediately following the Probation Service issuing breach proceedings on individual cases; and if he will make a statement. [104745]

Angela Eagle: The Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill, which is currently being considered by Parliament, will reinforce the link between rights to benefits and responsibilities to society. Offenders aged 18 to 59, who are referred to Court for breaching a specified community sentence, will be subject to a benefit sanction from the first practicable benefit payday after the relevant benefits office receives a notification from the Probation Service that court proceedings have been initiated.

In the case of Jobseeker's Allowance and certain Training Allowances, benefit will be withdrawn. Hardship payments will be available for vulnerable groups and others at risk of hardship. Income Support recipients will have their benefit reduced by 40 per cent. or 20 per cent. of the single person's adult rate, subject to their circumstances.

This measure will initially be piloted. During the pilots the sanction period will be four weeks.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people he estimates will have their benefits suspended per annum following a breach of a community sentence under the terms of the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill; and if he will make a statement. [104747]

Angela Eagle: It is not possible to provide an estimate of the number of people who will have their benefit withdrawn or reduced following a breach of a community sentence. Data collected by the Home Office indicate that, in England and Wales, around 25,000 people a year are currently referred to Court for breach proceedings. No information is held about how many of these are in receipt of Social Security benefits. After this measure is introduced, there is expected to be some behavioural effect which will reduce the number who breach their sentences.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security under the provisions of the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill, how much money will be set aside for the Hardship Fund to be used in the case of withdrawal of benefits for the first financial year for which the provisions are implemented; and if he will make a statement. [104746]

Angela Eagle: There will be no "Hardship Fund". Hardship payments will be made, where appropriate, from general benefit expenditure. Similar arrangements already exist for making hardship payments where Jobseeker's Allowance is withdrawn as a result of labour market employment sanctions.

Pension Arrears

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate he has made of the numbers of (a) widows and (b) pensioners awaiting payment of arrears of pensions in the Norwich, North constituency; [104519]

(2) what steps he is taking to rectify the problems associated with payment through the National Insurance Computer System; [104518]

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of staff hours of work necessary to distribute back-payments of pensions to (a) pensioners and (b) widows in the Norwich, North constituency. [104517]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answers given on 2 December 1999, Official Report, columns 294–95W, to the hon. Members for Northavon (Mr. Webb) and for Havant (Mr. Willetts).

Ministers have taken a personal interest in addressing the system problems and have been actively involved in NIRS2 development, stabilisation and recovery.

The system problems affecting payments are our top priority. These payments relate to individuals who claim contributory benefits (Retirement Pension, Widows Benefits, Incapacity Benefit and Jobseeker's Allowance); and individuals who have contracted-out of the State Earnings-Related Pension Scheme and rebate payments are made to the Personal and Occupational Pension Provider who maintain their pension scheme.

The Inland Revenue, Benefits Agency and Andersen Consulting, through joint working, have made significant progress in clearing these problems. The vast majority of problems have been resolved and most of the functionality is in place and working. A plan has been agreed with Andersen Consulting for the delivery of the remaining functionality by 31 March 2000.

For the Norwich offices, of the outputs received relating to Widows, 79 remain to be cleared. For Retirement Pension, of the outputs received, 746 remain to be processed. However, until all claims have been reviewed it is not known in how many cases arrears will have been due.

The Benefits Agency has put in place contingency procedures to deal with back-payments to Pensioners and Widows utilising existing staff, which includes overtime working where appropriate. Up to 31 December 1999, the Norwich offices have worked 313 hours in dealing with claims to Widows Benefits and 2,823 hours on Retirement Pensions. Not all the cases dealt with have had arrears of benefits due.

All Work Test

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the exemption or otherwise from the all work test of those who were incapable of work between 1 December 1993 and 12 April 1995 under the transitional award of Incapacity Benefit. [104423]

Mr. Bayley: The all work test was introduced as the means of determining incapacity for work for benefit purposes from 13 April 1995. Under transitional arrangements, people who were entitled to the former invalidity benefit between 1 December 1993 and 12 April 1995 (ignoring breaks of eight weeks or less) and who were aged 58 or over on 13 April 1995 are treated as satisfying the test as long as they continue to provide a doctor's statement as evidence of incapacity. In effect, the all work test is not applied to them.

Similar arrangements were made for people who at the time of the change were entitled to an income-related benefit (Income Support, Housing Benefit or Council Tax Benefit) on the grounds of incapacity for work.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will take measures to ensure that Jobseeker's Allowance is paid to workers who are temporarily unemployed and not receiving wages during school holidays at (a) Christmas and (b) other holiday periods. [104369]

Angela Eagle: The Court of Appeal has confirmed that ancillary workers who are not entitled to receive Jobseeker's Allowance during term-time because of the hours they work are also not entitled to Jobseeker's Allowance during the school holidays.

We understand that the appellant in that case has applied for leave to appeal to the House of Lords. We are awaiting the outcome of that application.

Ancillary Workers

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many ancillary workers affected by the Social Security Commissioner's decision CIS/14661/1996 of December 1997 have (a) inquired about ex-gratia payments and (b) been given ex-gratia payments; and for what average amounts. [104104]

Angela Eagle: A total of 1,950 requests for ex-gratia payments have been received from ancillary workers affected by CIS/14661/1996. Of these, one ex-gratia payment of £337.03 has been made and 206 cases remain outstanding.

Ex-gratia payments can be considered only where there has been a loss of statutory entitlement to benefit. Since subsequent legal decisions reversed the effect of CIS/14661/1996, the current position is that there was never any statutory entitlement to JSA during school holiday periods for this group. Further ex-gratia payments cannot therefore be made under the law as it currently stands.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what factors underlay his decision not to pay the Winter Fuel Payment for 1999 to 2000 to people who reach the age of 60 after September 1999 but before 31 March 2000; and if he will reconsider his policy. [104082]

Angela Eagle: In order to issue Winter Fuel Payments automatically, without incurring disproportionate administration costs, most eligible people aged 60 and over are identified through official departmental computer records. These records hold the key information needed to establish entitlement. The records are used to decide whether people are entitled for at least a day during a specified qualifying week.

The current process for identifying those who are entitled and determining the amount payable takes around 10 weeks. Therefore, to ensure people receive the payments in good time to help with their winter fuel bills, the qualifying week must precede the onset of winter. This winter the qualifying week began on 20 September. Making the payments as early as possible in the winter ensures that the very elderly, who will include the vast majority of those who are most frail, have their payment when they need it.

There are currently no plans to change the method of determining eligibility.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the extension of Winter Fuel Payments to men aged 60 to 65 years will include (a) the £10 Christmas bonus and (b) previous winter fuel subsidy schemes. [104378]

Angela Eagle: The extension of Winter Fuel Payments to everyone aged 60 and over who is resident in Great Britain applies to the Winter Fuel Payments scheme only. Payments will be backdated to the start of the scheme.

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how men aged 60 to 64 will claim the winter fuel payment for 1999 to 2000 and previous years; and what is his estimate of the cost for 1999 to 2000 and previous years. [104061]

Angela Eagle: It will be necessary to determine the names and addresses of people who are newly eligible for Winter Fuel Payments. As the information we hold may not be up to date, we will need to introduce a claims process for Winter Fuel Payments. This process will need to be developed carefully and appropriate IT systems built to deal with claims. The Benefits Agency are currently working on the operational issues for delivery.

There is no need for people newly eligible for Winter Fuel Payments to contact the Benefits Agency now. An announcement will be made, and an advertising campaign will begin in a matter of months.

Equalising the age of entitlement for Winter Fuel Payments at 60 for men and women will mean annual expenditure may increase by an estimated £85 million. Backdating the payments to the start of the scheme for up to 1.9 million people will have an estimated one-off programme cost of £115 million.

Secondary Education

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make benefits available to support 19-year-old students who wish to remain in full-time secondary education. [104276]

Angela Eagle: Responsibility for financial support of 19-year-old students who are in full-time education rests primarily with the student support system. Benefits are available only to full-time students who fall within certain vulnerable groups, such as lone parents and the disabled. We have no plans to change this.

Attendance and Disability Living Allowances

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what number and proportion of people aged over 60 years or over are entitled to, but are not receiving, (a) Attendance Allowance and (b) Disability Living Allowance. [104058]

Mr. Bayley: There are no reliable estimates of the number of people aged 60 years or over who might be entitled to these benefits if they were to make a claim.

However, provisional take-up estimates covering all ages and based on the disability follow-up to the Family Resources Survey are 40 per cent. to 60 per cent. for Attendance Allowance, 30 per cent. to 50 per cent. for the care component of Disability Living Allowance and 50 per cent. to 70 per cent. for the mobility component.

Nursing Home Residents (Income Support)

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many residents of residential or nursing homes (a) in total, (b) aged 65 years or over and (c) aged under 65 years who are entitled to preserved rights to Income Support are being charged more than the level of their preserved rights to Income Support. [104060]

Mr. Bayley: At August 1999, we estimate that 36,000 people resident in residential care or nursing homes who have preserved rights to Income Support and are being charged more than the level of their preserved rights to Income Support, 16,000 of these are aged under 65 years, and 20,000 are aged over 65 years.

Notes:

1. Numbers are based on a 5 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling error.

2. Numbers have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

3. Cases where charges exceed the IS limits are based on the Income Support limit amount for the type of care provided for the claimant, and the actual charge made for the claimant. No account is taken of the amount paid to the claimant in respect of personal expenses.

Source:

Income Support Statistics Quarterly Enquiry, August 1999.

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many residents of residential or nursing homes (a) in total, (b) aged 65 years or over and (c) aged under 65 years have preserved rights to Income Support. [104062]

Mr. Bayley: At August 1999, 84,000 people had preserved rights to Income Support. 36,000 are aged under 65 years. 48,000 are aged over 65 years.

Notes:

1. Numbers are based on a 5 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling error.

2. Numbers have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Source:

Income Support Statistics Quarterly Enquiry, August 1999.

Residential Care

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions he has had with local authorities in England and Wales in the last year as to the provision of long-term residential care within that authority's area. [104049]

Mr. Bayley: None.

Pneumoconiosis

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claimants are in receipt of awards for pneumoconiosis, broken down by (a) disease category, (b) age and (c) coalfield; [104253]

(2) how many claimants in receipt of an award for category two pneumoconiosis or more were first diagnosed with category one, broken down by (a) age and (b) coalfield. [104254]

Mr. Bayley: The information requested is not available. Such information as is available is set out in the tables.

The number of awards of industrial injuries disablement benefit in payment for pneumoconiosis (prescribed disease D1) by industry, and, within the coal industry, by age, and by government office region

Industries[1,2]	Number of Pneumoconiosis currently in payment
All industries	12,100
Mining (and agglomeration) of hard coal	7,800
Other mining and quarrying	300
Manufacture of other non-metallic mineral products	500
Manufacture of basic metals	300
Manufacture of motor vehicles, trailers and semi trailers and other transport equipment	900
Construction	1,200
Other industries	1,200

[1] Industries are based on the Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) of economic activities 1992.

[2] Figures are rounded and may not sum. For a 10 per cent. sample, figures are statistically reliable where there are 200 or more in the sample.

Source:

DSS (Analytical Services Division) 10 per cent. sample data, including an adjustment for late statistical returns. Figures are for April 1998—the most recent data available.

Ages[1]	Number of pneumoconiosis currently in payment in the coal industry
All ages	7,800
Under 60	400
60–64	400
65–69	900
70–74	2,200
75–79	1,800
80–84	1,300
85 and over	700

[1] Figures are rounded and may not sum. For a 10 per cent. sample, figures are statistically reliable where there are 200 or more in the sample.

Source:

DSS (Analytical Services Division) 10 per cent. sample data, including an adjustment for late statistical returns. Figures are for April 1998—the most recent data available.

Government office region[1]	Number of Pneumoconiosis currently in payment in the coal industry
Great Britain	7,800
North East	800
Yorks and Humber	1,700
East Midlands	1,000
East	—
London	—
South East	—
South West	—
West Midlands	700
North West	500
Wales	2,500
Scotland	200

[1] Figures are rounded and may not sum. For a 10 per cent. sample, figures are statistically reliable where there are 200 or more in the sample.

Source:
DSS (Analytical Services Division) 10 per cent. sample data, including an adjustment for late statistical returns. Figures are for April 1998—the most recent data available.

Pensioners (Benefit Entitlement)

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of pensioners entitled to but not receiving benefits, excluding the double counting of those entitled to but receiving more than one credit. [104079]

Mr. Rooker: Information on numbers of pensioners entitled to but not receiving benefit was previously provided as follows. It is not possible to break down the total number any further so as to avoid all double counting, as we do not have the information available in this format.

Take-up of income related benefits by pensioner benefit units 1997–98

	Income Support	Housing Benefit	Council Tax Benefit	Total
Average number of recipients[1]	1,470	1,830	2,600	5,870
Numbers entitled but not receiving benefit[1]	530–870	0–250	640–1,190	1,170–2,310
Percentage take-up rate	63–73	88–100	69–80	72–83

[1] Thousands

Notes:
1. Estimates are based on the 1997–98 Family Resources Survey.
2. Estimated numbers entitled to but not receiving benefit have been rounded to the nearest 10,000 cases. The sum of the components (the individual benefits) may not add up to the total due to rounding.
3. A pensioner benefit unit is defined as a single person aged 60 or over or a couple (not necessarily married) at least one of whom is aged 60 or over.
4. The estimates under "Total" in the table refer to the total of Income Support, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit. They should be regarded as rough estimates only because they count recipients of more than one benefit more than once and count those entitled to but not receiving more than one benefit more than once.

Stakeholder Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research he has undertaken, and what assessment he has made, of the level and pattern of debt among the target group for stakeholder pensions. [104143]

Mr. Rooker: Some information is available from departmental and other surveys on levels of debt generally, although no specific assessment has been attempted which would link such data to information about pension provision and the stakeholder pensions target group. Stakeholder pension schemes will give up to 5 million people on moderate earnings the option of a secure, flexible and value-for-money funded pension. We believe that those who can afford to save for their retirement should do so, but the affordability of pension contributions in relation to other commitments is a matter for individual decision.

TREASURY

Air Passenger Duty

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of Air Passenger Duty revenues derive from flights within the United Kingdom; and what was the value of such revenues in the last financial year. [104439]

Mr. Timms: It is estimated that Air Passenger Duty (APD) payable on domestic UK flights accounts for some 8–9 per cent. of total APD revenue, amounting to approximately £70 million for the financial year 1998–99.

Mutual Societies

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will issue information to the public on the rights and entitlements of policy holders and borrowers from mutual societies in relation to the disposal and ownership of these organisations. [104521]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Mutuals can take a variety of legal forms. Entitlements to distributions on a winding-up, merger, or conversion are matters for each mutual to determine.

Developing Country Debt

Ms Drown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what basis his Department has calculated that the recently agreed $100 billion debt relief package represents cancellation of two thirds of developing country debt. [104370]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The total debt stock of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries likely to qualify for relief under the enhanced HIPC initiative as having an unsustainable debt burden after traditional debt relief mechanisms is $143 billion. The enhanced HIPC initiative will reduce the debts owed by these countries by $100 billion, or two thirds.

We want the enhanced HIPC initiative to start a new virtuous cycle of debt relief, poverty alleviation and economic development. The transformation of the IMF's structural adjustment facility into the Poverty Reduction and Growth Facility means that, for the first time, the IMF and World Bank have agreed to stand back and let countries develop their own poverty reduction strategies in partnership with the population and civil society.

Having helped to secure multilateral funding for the initiative, the Government have decided that the time is right to take the extra step of eliminating all the bilateral debts owned to us by the poorest countries. Our pledge of 100 per cent. debt relief for countries qualifying under the HIPC initiative will cover all debts (both pre cut-off date debt and post cut-off date debt) owed to ECGD by these countries.

Drug Trafficking

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent measures have been taken to tighten control of UK borders in order to prevent drug trafficking; and if he will make a statement. [104360]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs continually review the deployment of their anti-smuggling and investigation staff both nationally and locally to ensure they remain in line with priorities and changing patterns of smuggling risk.

Customs maintains agreements with private companies and border agencies to ensure close co-operation.

Customs have recently installed an Automatic Number Plate Reader at Dover in a joint project with Kent Constabulary and are in the process of installing similar systems at other ports.

Asset Sales

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the items in the National Assets Register sold by his Department, its agencies and associated public bodies since 22 March 1999, stating in each case the amount of money realised; if he will estimate the total amount raised from such sales to date; and if he will make a statement. [104476]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the right hon. Member for Horsham (Mr. Maude) on 8 November 1999, Official Report, column 438W.

HEALTH

Health Expenditure (Essex)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimates he has made of the expected deficit in the Mid Essex Hospital Trust area for health care in the financial year 1999–2000; [98555]

(2) what estimates he has made of the expected deficit in the North Essex Health Authority area for health care in the financial year 1999–2000. [98556]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 24 November 1999]: The income and expenditure positions of the Mid Essex Hospital Trust area and North Essex Health Authority area are forecast at Quarter 2 (September 1999) as given. These forecasts were prepared before the announcement by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 21 December 1999 of an extra £134 million for the health service; £90 million relating to the costs of generic drugs has been allocated to health authorities. North Essex Health Authority has been allocated £1.5 million of this. The remaining £44 million will be allocated, as required, to meet the cost of clinical negligence claims.

The income and expenditure position of North Essex Health Authority in financial year 1999–2000 is forecast at Quarter 2 (September 1999) to be a surplus of £970,000.

The income and expenditure position of Mid Essex Community and Mental Health in financial year 1999–2000 is forecast at Quarter 2 (September 1999) to be a deficit of £149,000.

The income and expenditure position of Mid Essex Hospital Services in financial year 1999–2000 is forecast at Quarter 2 (September 1999) to be a deficit of £4.2 million.

Mid Essex Hospital Trust

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the Mid Essex Hospital Trust area have been waiting 12 months or more for treatment. [104445]

Mr. Denham: The most recent published inpatient waiting list figures are those for October 1999. These figures show that, at Mid Essex Hospital National Health Service Trust, a total of 1,024 patients were waiting 12 months and over for treatment at the end of October 1999.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people had been waiting more than 18 months for treatment in the Mid Essex Hospital Trust area between 1 November 1999 and the latest date for which figures are available; and how long each patient waited or was waiting for treatment over 18 months. [104446]

Mr. Denham: The last published figures for waiting times are those for October 1999. These show that at the end of October 1999, no patients waited over 18 months for treatment at Mid Essex Hospital Services National Health Services Trust.

The next published figures will be those for November 1999, due to be published in the week commencing 10 January 2000. Until these figures are published, no centrally collected and validated figures are available.

Mammograms

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what target his Department sets NHS trusts and health authorities for the maximum period for a patient to be notified of the results of a mammogram X-ray; and what is the actual maximum period for patients served by Essex Rivers Healthcare Trust in the most recent period for which figures are available. [101364]

Yvette Cooper: The National Health Service breast screening programme sets standards to ensure that the performance of all breast screening programmes is monitored on a consistent national basis. One of these is that at least 90 per cent. of women should receive the results of their mammogram within two weeks. This is to minimise the anxiety for women who are awaiting their results. This standard is monitored by local screening programmes and regional quality assurance teams.

Essex Rivers Healthcare NHS Trust (Colchester and Chelmsford breast screening unit) screened 11,147 women between 1 April 1999 and 31 August 1999. 78.3 per cent. of women were sent their results within two weeks. 93.6 per cent. of women were sent their results within three weeks. 0.3 per cent. (41 women) waited over five weeks for their results. The trust is looking to appoint a further radiologist to help reach the minimum standard of 90 per cent. of women receiving their results within two weeks.

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assumptions the actuary made at the time of the last report on the NHS pension scheme about the proportion of (a) contributing members (b) deferred members and (c) pensioners on their death who would have qualifying partner survivors; and what assumptions he makes currently. [104268]

Mr. Denham: The National Health Service Pension Scheme only pays survivor benefits to legal spouses or dependent children. The Government Actuary assumed that the proportion of members married at death varies by age. The proportion increased with age up to retirement, and then reduced with increasing age thereafter, allowing for the likelihood that the spouse may have predeceased the member.

The actuarial assumptions are based on an analysis of the experience within the scheme. For the last report, it was assumed that on average 66 per cent. of contributing and deferred members would have an entitlement to a survivor's benefit, if death occurred in the following year. The assumption for pensioners was 50 per cent. These assumptions will be reviewed as part of the next report, which is expected to be available around mid-2001.

Transplant Surgeons

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the number of serving transplant surgeons in the NHS. [104312]

Mr. Denham: At national level we do not plan centrally the numbers of consultants who specialise in transplant surgery. We plan the numbers of consultants in general surgery and related specialities, taking into account information gathered from a range of sources, including the medical Royal Colleges, Regional Postgraduate Medical Deans and National Health Service management, which includes information about consultants specialising in transplant surgery.

At local level, it is NHS trusts and health authorities who are accountable for the quality of the services they provide, to determine how their services are configured and delivered, in the light of local circumstances, in order to provide quality services to patients. This includes deciding on the number and grades of posts in their locality.

At national level, The Speciality Workforce Advisory Group (SWAG) advises on the numbers of higher specialist trainees needed to meet future requirements for consultants. SWAG has advised previously that general surgery has been a speciality with shortages of consultants. Over the past four years, it has recommended increases in the numbers of higher specialist training opportunities. We are now satisfied that there are enough training opportunities in general surgery for there to be sufficient candidates qualifying for consultant posts over the next few years.

Representations have been made to the Department about shortages of transplant surgeons in the NHS. We will continue to engage in discussions with the Royal College of Surgeons and the Regional Postgraduate Medical Deans and others responsible for training and career prospects, with the aim of ensuring that all the organ transplant services are fully supported.

Christie Hospital NHS Trust

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what occasions since 1 May 1997 a Minister in his Department has visited the Christie Hospital NHS Trust. [104606]

Mr. Denham: It has so far not been possible for any of the Ministers at this Department to visit the Christie Hospital.

Cancer Patients

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the Government's target is for the maximum length of time cancer patients will have to wait (a) to see a consultant after a GP has referred them and (b) to be treated once a consultant has seen the patient. [104447]

Mr. Denham: From April 1999, patients with suspected breast cancer have been able to see a specialist within two weeks of their general practitioner referring them urgently for investigation. We will roll out this approach to other cancer sites so that by the end of 2000 we will make this high quality standard of care available for all suspected cancer requiring an urgent specialist appointment. We will also tackle patient uncertainty about the timing of their treatment through the cancer services collaborative, part of the booked admissions programme, which will improve patient access to diagnosis, treatment and care. The cancer services collaborative currently covers a population of 14 million. Lessons learned from the collaborative will be shared with the wider National Health Service from 2001.

Parliamentary Questions

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will provide a substantive reply to the Question tabled by the hon. Member for Chipping Barnet on 24 November 1999 for answer on 29 November relating to health spending in Barnet (ref. 100215). [104603]

Mr. Denham: I replied to the hon. Member on 11 January.

Hip Operations

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of his reply to the letter of 1 December from Professor William Bonfield concerning statistics on hip operations. [104510]

Mr. Hutton: A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Organic Produce

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to inform the public of the benefits to health of organically grown produce. [103788]

Yvette Cooper: The Government have not published specific advice on the health benefits of organically grown produce. This is because at present there is little information available on which to make meaningful comparisons between nutrient contents or organic and conventional produce.

A study commissioned by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on the nutritional composition of organically grown fruit and vegetables found only small differences in levels of some nutrients between organically grown and conventionally grown fruit and vegetables. However, it did note that confounding variables, such as differences in the variety grown and the age of samples, made it difficult to draw comparisons. A handful of similar studies have been published in the mainstream scientific literature since. In general, these have found no consistent or significant differences in nutrient content between organic and conventional produce.

The Government stress the importance of a balanced diet for good health based on evidence-based studies. We have funded, through the Health Education Authority, a variety of projects aimed at improving access to, and availability of, healthy eating choices and at encouraging people to eat less fat and more cereals, fruit and vegetables.

Leicester NHS Trust

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he will appoint a Chairman for the University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust; [104607]

(2) when he expects the Chief Executive of the University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust to be appointed. [104608]

Mr. Denham: On 11 January Philip Hammersley CBE was appointed to serve as Chairman of the University Hospitals of Leicester National Health Service Trust for the period 17 January 2000 to 31 October 2002.

Following Mr. Hammersley's appointment, I expect the task of appointing a new chief executive for the trust to be addressed as a matter of urgency.

Continence Services

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the NHS guidance on continence services. [104357]

Mr. Hutton: We have recently received the report from the Working Group which was set up to advise the Department on guidance for continence services. We are now considering the report and hope to publish guidance shortly.

Audiology Services

Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will receive the report of the working group into hearing aids and audiology services. [104730]

Mr. Hutton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave her on 6 December 1999, Official Report, column 444W.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farmers (Early Retirement)

10. Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he made of the projected costs of an early retirement scheme for farmers. [103782]

Ms Quin: Any assessment of the cost of an early retirement scheme would depend on a number of variables including grant rates, eligibility criteria, number of applications and administrative costs. However, given the potential sums involved and the mixed reactions to the proposals, we firmly believe that a much better use of the funds to help the agricultural sector is provided for in the rural development measures we have announced.

Pig Industry

11. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he proposes to take to support the British pig industry. [103783]

Mr. Nick Brown: Within the constraints imposed by the light nature of the EU pigmeat regime and the need to respect the law, I will continue to do all I can to help.

21. Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on compensation for the pig industry in relation to the costs of complying with regulations to deal with BSE. [103795]

Mr. Nick Brown: I have had no formal discussions with my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on this matter.

Energy Crops

12. Mr. Olner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to increase support for energy crops; and if he will make a statement. [103784]

Ms Quin: On 7 December 1999, Official Report, columns 701–02W, my right hon. Friend the Minister announced plans for implementation of the EU Rural Development Regulation, which included support of around £30 million for energy crops. This will help the Government achieve their targets for greenhouse gas emissions and renewable energy generation.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

13. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to expand the countryside stewardship scheme. [103785]

Mr. Morley: I have already announced plans for a major expansion of the Countryside Stewardship Scheme. Over the next seven years, spending on agri-environment schemes will double. Of the £1 billion to be allocated during this period to these schemes, £500 million will be for the Countryside Stewardship Scheme. We will be discussing with farming and conservation organisations how the extra funding should be used to achieve the best environmental value for money.

24. Mr. Grogan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the value of the countryside stewardship scheme to rural conservation. [103798]

Mr. Morley: We believe, as do most environmental organisations, that the Countryside Stewardship is of considerable value to rural conservation, and I recently announced a very significant expansion of the Scheme. We are currently funding an independent study to assess the environmental benefits of the Scheme in more detail.

Bovine TB

14. Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the incidence of bovine TB in the west of England. [103786]

Ms Quin: Provisional figures for the first nine months of 1999 show that there were 648 confirmed new cases of TB in cattle in Great Britain, mostly in the west and south-west of England, compared with 565 in the same period in 1998. That is why the Government are pressing ahead with their TB control strategy, based on independent scientific advice.

Dairy Farming

15. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the prospects for dairy farmers over the next two years. [103787]

Ms Quin: All dairy farmers face challenging times as a result of reduced milk prices, increased liberalisation of world markets and progress on CAP reform. But the dairy farming sector's ability to respond positively to these challenges will be helped by the high level of producer expertise and commitment, favourable farm structure and ideal climate for milk production.

Farmers (Marketing)

16. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department is taking to help farmers in marketing and product development. [103789]

Ms Quin: Many. For instance, £2 million was made available at the end of last year to support projects designed to help farmers improve their marketing. Over the next seven years I am providing £44 million for marketing and processing grants and additional expenditure for the marketing of quality agricultural products under the new Rural Enterprise Scheme.

Food Labelling

17. Mr. Coaker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to improve the labelling of food to enable consumers to make better-informed choices. [103791]

Ms Quin: We are committed to promoting informed consumer choice. Because of the key importance of good labelling, the Government will shortly be announcing an initiative aimed at stimulating public debate and identifying the needs and priorities of ordinary consumers.

Fisheries Council

18. Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the December Fisheries Council. [103792]

Mr. Morley: The outcome respected the scientific advice while maximising catching opportunities for the UK industry. Cuts in UK quotas worth £30 million were avoided. The Council and Commission also committed themselves to introduce a recovery programme for Irish Sea cod.

Organic Farming

19. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent assessment he has made of the environmental advantages of organic farming. [103793]

Mr. Morley: Evaluation of the environmental impact of organic farming is one of the three objectives of the Ministry's organic R&D programme, for which £2.1 million has been allocated for 1999–2000. Field studies on biodiversity and soil fertility on organic farms, following up earlier desk studies, and a study of nutrient recycling are in progress. Work on nitrates and ammonia emissions has recently been completed.

22. Jean Corston: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers entered into organic conversion in 1999. [103796]

Mr. Morley: Around 1,100 farmers applied for aid under the Organic Farming Scheme in 1999.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further plans he has to support organic farming. [103774]

Mr. Morley: On 7 December 1999, Official Report, columns 701–02W, my right hon. Friend the Minister announced the Government's plans for spending on the Rural Development Programme for England. Under these plans, £140 million will be available over the life of the Programme for aid for conversion to organic farming.

CAP

20. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the annual cost for the typical family of the common agricultural policy. [103794]

Ms Quin: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary gave to my hon. Friend the Member for South Ribble (Mr. Borrow) on 25 November 1999, Official Report, column 748W.

Beef Ban

23. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with the Scottish Executive relating to the current French ban on British beef. [103797]

Mr. Nick Brown: My ministerial colleagues, my officials and I have been in regular contact with our counterparts in the Scottish Executive on the French import ban on UK beef.

Organophosphates

25. Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he plans to carry out on the effects of organophosphates. [103799]

Ms Quin: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply on 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 446W.

Compensation

26. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the availability of monetary compensation to British farmers for the value of sterling. [103800]

Ms Quin: Up to £88 million in compulsory agrimonetary compensation will be paid to livestock and arable farmers this year, and a further £44 million next year. Optional compensation is available this year; figures are not yet confirmed. No decision has been taken on whether to pay any of this.

Forestry Commission Land

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will name the areas of Forestry Commission land which he has approved for sale since May 1997 and give the acreage of each area. [102633]

Mr. Morley: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise. I have asked its Chief Executive, Dr. Bob McIntosh, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Bob McIntosh to Mr. Huw Edwards, dated 13 January 2000:

I have been asked to reply to your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food asking for the names of areas of Forestry Commission land approved for sale since May 1997.

Firstly, I should explain that the Forestry Commission is responsible for deciding which areas to sell, in accordance with the policy and guidance laid down by Ministers. The Minister, therefore, does not approve individual areas for sale.

I enclose a list of the woods in England which have been offered for sale since May 1997, including the area and Grid Reference.

Forestry commission woods in England offered for sale since 1 May 1997

Wood	Area (Hectares)	NGR
Land at Dryderdale	6.0	SE 655 719
Gravel Pit and Broomhill Woods	6.0	SE 703 458
Dalby Bush	36.0	SE 640 715
Mill Wood, Terrington (pt)	24.0	SE 644 735
Foulshaw Moss	220.0	SD 458 825
Ulpha Park	29.0	SD 191 912
Simpsons Wood	6.0	NY 179 337
Foulshaw and Wilderness	57.0	SD 458 825
Barthorps Folly	6.0	TM 348 459
Top Clump and West Belt	4.5	TG 145 211
Oakhill Wood	33.3	SP 813 357
College Wood	51.0	SP 791 331
Gatten Plantation	34.0	SO 372 986
Land at Oversley Wood	0.6	SJ 110 567
Bishops Wood	2.5	SX 001 697
Penny Wood	1.0	ST 985 442
Staple Hill	11.0	SX 836 740
Greens Wood	1.5	TL 277 170
Friston Forest	10.2	TQ 535 018
Channers Wood	15.0	SU 818 814
Beech and Howlets Wood	7.0	SP 958 005
Hoo Wood	18.0	TL 033 125
Shabbington Wood	2.6	SP 632 106
Deershill Wood	11.0	SS 520 172
Priest Wood	28.0	TL 301 160
Pt Fleming Estate	20.8	SU 420 175
Stanley Cottages Wood	31.0	SZ 168 390
Worsall Gill and Fox Covert	30.0	NZ 381 070
Hugset Wood	34.0	SE 305 068
Seaton Old Wood	30.5	SE 785 389
Goss Hall	4.2	SK 344 620
Black and New Plantation	14.0	SE 793 367
Brandon Wood	72.0	SP 395 765
Bedpark	8.0	SX 584 538
Challock Benacre Wood	25.0	TQ 945 440
Redcap/Catham etc.	14.0	SU 785 421
Kennel Wood	6.0	SK 322 533
Millerhill and Wigfield	5.0	SE 341 021
Blackbrooks, Park Wood (Exchange)	76.7	SO 660 220
Chilworth Common North	12.0	SU 410 182
The Wilton Estate (Exchange)	51.0	SU 045 346
Knowle Wood	8.0	SX 533 641
Widow Bushes	11.0	TL 305 176
Samgarth Woods	71.0	SD 132 945
Intake Wood	20.0	SK 594 638
Sawpit Copse	9.6	SU 527 103

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 17 January 2000

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Ladbroke Grove Rail Accident

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on the prospects for criminal prosecutions being started relating to the Paddington rail disaster. [104709]

The Solicitor-General: The British Transport Police are conducting a thorough investigation into the circumstances of the train collision in the vicinity of Ladbroke Grove on Tuesday 5 October 1999. As the police complete aspects of their inquiries, they intend to submit for advice reports, together with supporting evidence, to the Crown Prosecution Service. The prospects for criminal proceedings by the CPS are dependent on evidence derived from the police investigation, and not, for example, from evidence given to the public inquiry to be conducted by Lord Cullen, as that inquiry has an entirely different function. It is plainly not possible to anticipate, nor is it appropriate to speculate on, what evidence will be obtained by the police. When police inquiries conclude, the decision on whether or not to institute criminal proceedings will be made by the Director of Public Prosecutions and the Crown Prosecution Service, in consultation with the Law Officers. I understand that the HSE will also be considering the possibility of bringing a prosecution.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on the decision to offer immunity to railway companies offering evidence to the inquiry into the Ladbroke Grove accident. [104629]

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Solicitor-General what recent representations he has received relating to immunity from prosecution for those giving evidence before a tribunal with special reference to the Paddington rail disaster; and if he will make a statement. [104710]

The Solicitor-General: On 29 November 1999 the Attorney-General authorised Lord Cullen to provide potential witnesses to his inquiry with the following undertaking:

> "To undertake in respect of any person who provides evidence to the inquiry that no evidence he or she may give before the inquiry (whether orally or by written statement) nor any written statement made preparatory to giving evidence nor any documents produced by that person to the inquiry will be used in evidence against him or her in any criminal proceedings, except in proceedings where he or she is charged with having given false evidence in the course of this inquiry or having conspired with or procured others to do so".

The purpose of authorising Lord Cullen to provide an undertaking in these terms was to enable him to begin his inquiry immediately, and to ensure that it would be fully effective. It was certain that without such an undertaking being given potential witnesses would be inhibited from providing Lord Cullen with full assistance. The public interest clearly favoured Lord Cullen undertaking his inquiry as soon as possible, and thereafter proceeding quickly, so that lessons can be learned from the circumstances that led to this tragedy. The undertaking is not the same as an immunity from prosecution: it has a much more limited effect.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Water Industry (Mersey Basin)

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the environmental improvements agreed by Ofwat for the Mersey Basin for the next price review to be completed in 2005. [104292]

Mr. Meacher: I have placed in the House Libraries a list of the schemes allowed for in the final determination of water industry price limits announced by Director General Ofwat on 25 July 1999, which will improve the waters in the Mersey Basin. The list is made up of 60 continuous discharges and 516 intermittent discharges. These were proposed by the Environment Agency and approved by me as part of my guidance to Ofwat on the provision to be made for investments by water companies to achieve environmental improvements. The Environment Agency is exploring in more detail the benefits of a further five schemes to allow us to assess these against improved information on costs from Ofwat and North West Water.

International Panel on Pollution Control

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has made to (a) the European Commission and (b) other EU member states in respect of a common basis of charging for IPPC throughout the EU; and what response he has received. [104114]

Mr. Hill: The IPPC Directive makes no provision for a common charging scheme; in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity, charging is a matter for individual member states.

London Underground (Investment)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is forecast to be the total level of investment in the London Underground in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02. [104230]

Mr. Prescott: (a) Planned investment in the Underground in 2000–01 totals £753 million (in outturn prices). This comprises investment of £535 million in the core Underground and a projected £218 million in payments to JLE contractors for investment that took place in previous years.

(b) For 2001–02 and beyond, the Public Private Partnership currently under negotiation is designed to deliver around £8 billion worth of investment. PPP contractors will be required to implement a combination of specific projects and performance enhancements specified in terms of outputs to be delivered. Because the PPP contracts will require the delivery of service outputs, they will not generally specify particular works to be carried out or the amounts of money to be spent on them.

Domestic Plumbing

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the regulations covering domestic plumbing will come into force; and if he will take steps to ensure toilet flushes using valves do not waste more water than those using syphon systems. [104424]

Mr. Meacher: The Water Supply (Water Fittings) Regulations came into force on 1 July 1999. They prevent the contamination and waste of water supplies. A WC Suite Performance Specification, made under the Regulations, will come into effect on 1 January 2001. This will require all new WC suites, whether they use valve or syphon flushing mechanisms, to perform to the same high standards of durability and water conservation.

Transport White Paper (Countryside Proposals)

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he has (a) taken and ((b) proposes to implement the commitment in the Transport White Paper to a more peaceful countryside. [104576]

Mr. Hill: My Department is an active participant in the Countryside Agency's Countryside Traffic Measures Group, and its Quiet Roads and Greenways Network Co-ordination Meetings. We provide support in the form of advice when required on traffic signing, and on highways and traffic matters. Research is in place, and more is planned, to monitor the success of schemes in these initiatives.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is his policy to support the adoption of a biosafety protocol allowing Governments to prohibit imports of genetically modified organisms. [104586]

Mr. Meacher: Yes. The Biosafety Protocol to the Convention on Biological Diversity would establish Advanced Informed Agreement (AIA) procedures, whereby a Party of import could accept or refuse imports of certain living (genetically) modified organisms (LMOs) on the basis of the impacts on biodiversity.

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is his policy to support the adoption of a biosafety protocol making companies that produce genetically modified organisms legally liable for any future damage to the environment or public health resulting from the import of those GMOs by another country. [104584]

Mr. Meacher: In the negotiations on the Biosafety Protocol to the Convention on Biological Diversity resuming in Montreal later this month, we will continue to support an enabling provision that would adopt a process elaborating international rules and procedures in the field of liability and redress for damage resulting from transboundary movements of living (genetically) modified organisms, and endeavour to complete the process within four years.

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is his policy to support the adoption of a biosafety protocol requiring the separation of genetically modified grain from other grain. [104585]

Mr. Meacher: The draft text of the Biosafety Protocol to the Convention on Biological Diversity does not require separation. However, EU Ministers have agreed that information exchange and documentation requirements are needed under the Protocol and should ensure satisfactory transparency and monitoring of movements of LMOs as well as their identification, which would also enable traceability.

Train Protection Systems

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what progress has been made with the train operating companies in respect of installing train protection systems; [104597]

(2) what timetable has been agreed for the installation of train protection systems in all rolling stock, including the final date for completion. [104665]

Mr. Hill: The Railway Safety Regulations, laid before Parliament on 10 August 1999, requires train protection systems to be introduced and operational across the railway network by the end of 2003 at the latest.

At the Rail Safety Summit on 30 November the train operators announced that they have agreed a timetable to fit 33 per cent. of trains by the end of 2001, 75 per cent. of trains by the end of 2002 and all trains by the end of 2003. Also at the Summit, Railtrack agreed to aim to install train protection at 12,000 sites by the end of 2002.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what decision he has reached about the preferred system of train protection. [104628]

Mr. Hill: Following the Ladbroke Grove train accident the Government asked Sir David Davies, the President of the Royal Academy of Engineering, to report on the effectiveness, practicability and cost of train protection systems, and on how best to reduce the present incidence of signals passed at danger (SPADs). Ministers expect to receive his report shortly.

This information will be available to Lord Cullen (who is conducting the Public Inquiry into the Ladbroke Grove accident) and Professor Uff (conducting the Southall Inquiry), and they will jointly consider train protection systems. The Health and Safety Commission will advise the Government on any recommendations they make.

Confidential Telephone Reporting Systems

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what time scale has been agreed with the train operating companies and Railtrack to install the confidential telephone reporting system; and what is the final deadline for its implementation. [104596]

Mr. Hill: At the second Rail Safety Summit on 30 November 1999 Railtrack and the train operating companies agreed that the independent and confidential incident reporting system, which will allow all staff to phone in any safety concerns, will be extended throughout Great Britain by the end of 2000. Regional contracts are to be let by April 2000. The system will be fully operative by the end of 2000.

Underground Storage Tanks

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to provide funding for (a) enforcing and overseeing corrective action at leaking underground storage tank sites and (b) clean-ups (i) where the owner or operator is unknown, or is unwilling or unable to respond and (ii) which require emergency action. [104638]

Mr. Meacher: The main responsibilities for regulating underground storage tanks, including enforcing and overseeing corrective action when they are leaking, are held by the Environment Agency, the Health and Safety Executive and the petroleum licensing authorities. The legal powers available to these bodies, and the detailed allocation of responsibilities between them, varies according to what is stored in the tank and the type of pollution incident involved. The Environment Agency is funded through grant-in-aid paid by my department as well as by charges paid by those seeking permits and licences. The Health and Safety Executive is also funded through grant-in-aid as well as from charges for certain activities which are recovered from industry. The petroleum licensing authorities are part of local government, and as such are funded through a combination of council tax, non-domestic rates and revenue support grant paid by my Department.

In cases where leaks have occurred and clean-up action is necessary, responsibility for paying for the work generally falls on the owner or operator of the tank. Depending on what was stored in the tank, and the nature of the problems which the leak has caused, this responsibility may be enforced under a number of legal powers. These include the works notice system in sections 161–161D of the Water Resources Act 1991, under which the Environment Agency may itself carry out works in an emergency or where it appears after reasonable inquiry that no person can be found on whom to serve a works notice; the statutory nuisance regime in Part III of the Environmental Protection Act 1990; and the Groundwater Regulations 1998. These powers will be supplemented in April by a new regime for remediating contaminated land, under Part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 (which was inserted by section 57 of the Environment Act 1995). An additional £12 million per year has been added to Standard Spending Assessments for local authorities in England to support their role under the new contaminated land regime.

The Contaminated Land Supplementary Credit Approval programme also provides capital expenditure support for local authorities in England to deal with cases where land contamination is causing unacceptable risks to human health and the environment, and where no-one else can be made to pay for the necessary remediation. This could include circumstances where leaks have occurred from underground storage tanks. The total provision in the current financial year for this programme is £12.082 million. A further £1.958 million has been provided to the Environment Agency as additional grant-in-aid to support equivalent work it is carrying out.

Transport Symposium, Kegworth

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for Ministers to attend the symposium, organised by the Institution of Highways and Transportation, on 20 January at Kegworth, Derby. [104579]

Mr. Hill: No invitation was extended to Ministers to speak at the symposium.

Local Government Pension Schemes

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the increased contributions which local government employers will have to make to their pension schemes in order to offset the effect of the ACT charges in the 1997 Budget; and what these extra contributions are as a percentage of the total payroll costs. [104674]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The effect of the abolition of advance corporation tax on employer contributions to local authority pension funds was one of many factors taken into account in the 1998 actuarial valuation exercise. Information on increases to individual local authority employers' contributions specifically attributable to this aspect of the exercise is not collected centrally.

The Local Government Association estimated that the average net impact of the 1998 valuation, including the effect of the ACT changes on employers' contributions in 1999–2000 was 1 per cent., or about £130 million nationally. We have honoured undertakings given at the time of the 1997 Budget to take into account this and all the other factors identified in the valuation exercise in determining the level of local authority provision in 1999–2000, and for subsequent years.

Millennium Celebration

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if the river of fire on new year's eve worked according to plan; [104434]

(2) if he will make a statement on the public transport arrangements in London on new year's eve. [104435]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 13 January 2000]: I refer the hon. Member to the oral reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) on 11 January 2000, Official Report, column 138. I would also add that the transport operators provided the absolute maximum service possible. Tube and DLR provided a peak level service from midnight to after 4 am (20 trains an hour for the tube). Train operators ran the maximum service possible from 1 am to after 4.30 am. LT ran nearly double the usual night bus service. We always warned that people should expect long delays. Most people were able to catch a train or tube before 2.30 am. Despite a very high level of attendance the transport operators were able to get people both safely to the event, and back home again after.

It is true that the "River of Fire" did not live up to some people's expectations, but this should not detract from the spectacular success of the event. Indeed, CNN described London's Big Time fireworks as the "most spectacular firework show in the world".

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) who was responsible for planning and co-ordinating rail services and crowd control at central London stations, with particular reference to Waterloo, on new year's eve; [104611]

(2) if he will hold an inquiry into the planning and management of crowd evacuation from central London railway stations, with particular reference to Waterloo, on New Year's Eve. [104605]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 13 January 2000]: A review of arrangements is an essential and routine part of any major event. All the organisations involved in key services on new year's eve already have them well in hand.

ATOC worked with each of the train operating companies, along with the Shadow Strategic Rail Authority, to plan and deliver the train services on millennium night into and out of central London stations, including Waterloo.

There were 250 police officers in the immediate vicinity of Waterloo specially tasked with crowd control and public safety (and supplemented by colleagues from elsewhere).

Environment Agency Chairman

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much was spent by (a) his Department and (b) the Environment Agency on headhunters in the process of finding a new Chairman for the Environment Agency. [105287]

Mr. Meacher: The appointment of a new Chairman for the Environment Agency is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, who has met all costs involved.

Recruitment consultants were employed to assist in finding a new Chairman. Headhunting was only a part of their duties and is not separately identifiable. The total cost of their work, including expenses, was £26,402.26 plus VAT. Advertisements were placed in the national press at an additional cost of £5,569 plus VAT.

Driving Licences

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 10 January 2000, Official Report, column 4W, on driving licences, if he will make a statement on the reasons for the use of private opticians. [105416]

Mr. Hill: The requirement for the provision of visual field charts is an expensive undertaking adding to the cost of the driving licence as well as creating customer service problems due to the waiting times in NHS out-patients clinics.

Private opticians have therefore been invited to provide the service. This will mean savings of £504,000 in a year on fees and will help to improve turnaround performance of applications where drivers are required to have their visual field tested.

Opticians will be providing reports within three weeks of request as opposed to three months for many hospital clinics.

Utilities

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will announce the result of his review of the contribution utilities should make to the cost of diverting their equipment for public transport schemes. [105675]

Mr. Hill: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has reviewed the decision announced by the then Minister for Transport on 29 October 1998, following representations made to him and comments received during consultation earlier this year on draft regulations under the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991.

Ministers have concluded that the earlier decision strikes a reasonable balance between the legitimate interests of the parties involved. I can therefore confirm that the utilities' contribution to diversionary works for "major transport works" (which as defined under the 1991 Act include rail based public transport schemes) will be reduced from 18 per cent. to 7.5 per cent., except that works that are of the nature of "major highways works" or "major bridge works" will continue to attract 18 per cent., whoever the works are done by.

I will shortly be laying regulations to implement this decision. The regulations will now come into effect after they have been laid and not from the date of the 1998 announcement, as stated at the time.

Alternative Fuels (HGVs)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of heavy goods vehicles run on alternative fuels. [105022]

Mr. Hill: DETR receives comprehensive data on the vehicle stock in Great Britain from the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency. These include the method of propulsion used to power vehicles. For those vehicles in the goods tax class at the end of June 1999, over 99 per cent. run on diesel. A further 0.7 per cent. run on petrol and less than 0.02 per cent. are recorded as running on other fuels.

Rail Franchises

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if the record of train operating companies in meeting punctuality and overcrowding targets will be taken into consideration when franchises for services are renewed; [105053]

(2) if he will make it a condition of awarding or extending rail franchises that passenger facilities including toilets, public telephones, CCTV, and park and ride, are provided at town centre railway stations. [105052]

Mr. Hill: The Franchising Director has been instructed by the Secretary of State to have regard to the prospects for greater investment when considering the replacement of franchises. In pursuit of these instructions the Franchising Director is paying close attention to prospective franchisees' proposals for improving all aspects of the customer experience, including station facilities, security and integrated transport measures.

In examining proposals for renegotiated, extended or new franchises, the Franchising Director has also been instructed to give due weight to the commitment of existing franchise operators to performance, efficiency and customer services.

Road Tolling

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce a toll on foreign heavy goods vehicles entering the UK. [105024]

Mr. Hill: Any tolling scheme, or any form of levy, would have to apply to domestic vehicles as well as foreign. To discriminate against foreign vehicles would be illegal under Community law. The Transport Bill currently before Parliament contains enabling powers for local authorities to introduce charging schemes on their roads, but there are no plans at present to introduce widespread charging on the trunk road network.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of a reduction in vehicle excise duty for vehicles powered by alternative fuels. [105023]

Mr. Hill: The Government have taken a number of measures to promote the use of vehicles powered by alternative fuels. Gas powered lorries and buses already qualify for a vehicle excise duty concession of up to £1,000 and electrical vehicles are taxed at a concessionary rate of £40. The new graduated vehicle excise duty system for cars is being built in a flexible way which will allow scope to create additional incentives for vehicles using cleaner fuels and technology.

Motorway Services (Parking Fines)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what regulations govern the levying of fines in relation to parking at motorway service centres. [105055]

Mr. Hill: We require the operators of motorway service areas (MSAs) to provide up to two hours free parking for all types of vehicle. Operators are allowed to charge for longer stays but whether to levy a charge and, if so, how to enforce it against drivers who do not pay, are matters for the operator.

Train Punctuality

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take steps to prevent train operating companies from extending journey times advertised in timetables to allow for delays. [105054]

Mr. Hill: Train Operating Companies (TOCs) must set their timetables within the framework of the Passenger Service Requirements (PSR). The PSR sets minimum service frequency, stations to be served, times of first and last trains and maximum journey times, based on the service provided by British Rail at the time of franchising. TOCs can alter the journey times of services but only within the maxima allowed in the PSR. Temporary dispensations may be granted to TOCs by the Franchising Director to extend journey times during periods of bad weather and at times such as the annual leaf fall in order to provide a reliable service to passengers.

British Rail Assets

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the criteria for the sale of residual assets of British Rail which retain a potential public transport use. [105328]

Mr. Hill: Following a review by the British Railways Board/shadow Strategic Rail Authority of its property portfolio, the Government have agreed with the Chairman of the sSRA new marketing procedures which give priority to transport use. Under these arrangements the rail industry, local authorities and other transport interests are being informed of all the properties that BRB/sSRA have available including those judged to be of future transport potential. They are also being given prior notification of the intention to market all sites as they come up for sale and have the opportunity to seek a delay in order to work up a bid. All sites are to be sold at open market value in order to protect the taxpayers' interest. Full details are in the BRB's "Marketing Process" document which is available in the House Library.

London Elections

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to lay orders under schedule 3 of the Greater London Authority Act 1999 before the House. [105283]

Mr. Hill: I signed the order identifying the constituency returning officers for the Greater London Authority elections on 17 December, and it came into force on 22 December (SI No3380). I will be making the election rules and laying the order setting limits on campaign expenses for the GLA elections in due course.

Mr. Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions whom he has decided to appoint as the Greater London Returning Officer for the Greater London Authority election on 4 May. [105841]

Mr. Hill: I am proposing to make an Order appointing Robert Hughes CBE as the Greater London Returning Officer. Mr. Hughes was the Chief Counting Officer for the Greater London Referendum in May 1998. He has wide experience of running elections and knows London well.

Road Fund Licence (Enforcement)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people have been prosecuted since 1997 as a result of enforcement action taken by the Driving and Vehicle

Licensing Agency for possessing a vehicle without a road fund licence; and how much has been collected as a result of this action. [105285]

Mr. Hill: The numbers of vehicle excise duty offenders prosecuted by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency for the period in question, together with the revenue from penalties collected, is set out in the table. The table also shows the numbers of offenders who settled cases out of court and the penalty revenue collected.

	Number	Revenue £ million
Prosecutions
1997–98	233,000	38.8
1998–99	256,300	45.4
1999–2000[1]	180,000	34.5
Out of Court Settlements
1997–98	268,200	14.4
1998–99	218,800	12.5
1999–2000[1]	142,000	9.5

[1] April-December

Chrysotile Asbestos

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what initiatives have been taken by the Health and Safety Executive in relation to the marketing and use of Canadian chrysotile asbestos in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [104663]

Mr. Meacher: Canadian and other chrysotile asbestos has been banned. From 24 November 1999, Regulations prohibit the importation of chrysotile (white) asbestos and products containing it into the United Kingdom. They also prohibit the supply and use of chrysotile and its products within Great Britain. Comparable Regulations are expected shortly which will prohibit supply and use in Northern Ireland. A number of specialised safety-critical uses are temporarily permitted until safe substitutes have been developed.

Free Travel (Disabled People)

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide free or low-cost travel for those with a disability. [105163]

Mr. Hill: Local authorities outside London are enabled by the Transport Act 1985 to provide concessionary travel schemes for their resident disabled people, and many do so. Similar arrangements apply in London under different legislation. Financial assistance is provided through the overall support given to local authority expenditure in general. I have no plans to change these arrangements so far as my own responsibilities are concerned. In Scotland this is a matter for Scottish Ministers.

All train operators are required to participate in the Disabled Persons Railcard which entitles holders to up to one third off a range of rail tickets.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the progress that his Department has made on its review of the local government standard spending assessment system. [104817]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The review of revenue grant distribution is well under way. Central and local government officials are jointly discussing a wide range of options for improving the method of distribution, and many councils have contributed their proposals. We have conducted an extensive survey of the opinions of members and officers and undertaken research into overseas distribution systems.

Decisions about the merits of the various options for reform will not be taken until we have consulted widely this summer.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the shortlist of proposed uses for the Millennium Dome after the millennium celebrations will be announced. [105842]

Ms Armstrong: The Government have announced the six proposals for the shortlist today. They are:

City of the Future, a theme park centred on the use of technology, proposed by Monex Leisure Ltd. and MEPC plc.

Dome Europe, a high technology leisure, business and retail destination, proposed by the Principal Finance Group of Nomura International plc.

Greenwich Media World, a high profile mixed use leisure and business destination focused on media and communications, proposed by a consortium comprising Pell Frischmann, London Merchant Securities, Sir Robert McAlpine, WestLB Panmure Ltd. and The Tussauds Group.

International Merchandise and Cultural Centre, a global one-stop shop for exchanging goods, services and tourism promotions, proposed by a consortium comprising Country Heights Holdings Berhad, Sunrise Berhad and Maccon Investment Holdings (Proprietary) Ltd.

Legacy plc, a high technology industrial campus of workspace, leisure and retail uses, proposed by Robert Bourne.

Sports Dome 2001, an advanced multiple sports facility, proposed by a consortium comprising John Taylor International Ltd., Chelsfield Plc, Collard Grosvenor and Price Nicholson.

The Dome has been instrumental in focusing regeneration activity on the Greenwich Peninsula and the Thames Gateway, and this is set to continue as a result of the response to this competition.

English Partnerships, the Government's regeneration agency, has transformed one of the largest tracts of derelict land in Europe, on the Greenwich Peninsula. The proposals emerging from this competition, together with other developments on the Peninsula and key public transport improvements, will take forward the major regeneration of this area.

I have placed details of the shortlisted proposals in the Libraries of the house.

Business Rates

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what date it was decided that the consultation mechanism relating to business rating revaluation proposals in Wales should be transferred to the National Assembly for Wales from his Department; and on what date he announced this decision. [103738]

Mr. Hanson: I have been asked to reply.

The functions of the Secretary of State for Wales in respect of business rates in the Local Government Finance Act 1988 were transferred to the National Assembly for Wales on 1 July 1999, by virtue of the National Assembly for Wales (Transfer of Functions) Order 1999 No. 672 which was approved by the House of Commons on 24 February 1999.

The process of consultation on various aspects of the business rating revaluation began before 1 July 1999 and was led by officials of the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions with Welsh Office involvement. On and after 1 July, the National Assembly for Wales continued to take part in the consultation process in place of the Welsh Office, relying on its powers in section 23(2) of the Government of Wales Act 1998 to continue anything being done by a Minister of the Crown in respect of a transferred function.

The UK Government did not need to make any formal decision or announcement about this, which was among the consequences of the approval by the House of the Transfer of Functions Order. It is one of many examples of work that continued in the transition from the Secretary of State to the National Assembly.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Developing Countries

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what plans he has to review the Government's options under trade agreements to safeguard access by developing countries to essential drugs; [104589]

(2) what plans he has to review Government policy on the trade-related aspects of intellectual property rights agreement and public health in developing countries. [104590]

Mr. Caborn: The Government are aware of concerns among some developing countries. However, the Government believe that there is nothing in the Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) Agreement which undermines the ability of developing countries to provide appropriate healthcare. Although the Agreement came into effect in 1995, developing country members have only to implement its provisions from this year and the least developed countries do not have to implement until 2006. The effects, benefits and problems arising from the agreement have therefore yet to emerge.

A review of the implementation of the TRIPS agreement by WTO members will begin in June of this year and the Government will listen carefully to the views of other WTO members during the Review. It is, however, only in the context of a comprehensive new Round of negotiations that significant changes to the TRIPS agreement will be possible and it would be in that context that the Government would carry out a full review of their own policy.

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy on the extension of the deadline for complying with the provisions of the TRIPS Agreement applicable to developing countries and to countries whose economy is in transition. [104587]

Mr. Caborn: The Government believe that all signatories to the Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights Agreement and other WTO agreements should fulfil their commitments in full and on time. They recognise, however, that some developing countries have genuine problems of capacity. In such cases, they would be ready to support alongside its EU partners sympathetic consideration in the relevant WTO Committee of a request for the extension of deadline, if this were accompanied by a work programme aimed at full implementation of the WTO agreement in question.

Ilisu Dam

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 10 January 2000, Official Report, column 31W, on the Ilisu Dam, if the representations from (a) the Syrian Ambassador and (b) the League of Arab States were (i) in favour and (ii) against the proposed dam. [105081]

Mr. Caborn: The Syrian Ambassador expressed concern that proper account had not been taken of the impact of the project on the Syrian economy, people and relations with Turkey or of legal obligations, and stressed the general sensitivity of water issues in the region.

The League of Arab States expressed concern at the lack of information and consultation on the project.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to make a decision on ECGD support for UK participation in the Ilisu Dam project. [104897]

Mr. Caborn: The application for ECGD support for the UK participation in the Ilisu Dam project has given rise to a number of social, political, environmental and cultural issues requiring further consideration between ECGD, the other export credit agencies involved, the Turkish authorities and the contractors. We will only agree support if these issues are addressed to our satisfaction. In any event no decision on support will be made until a revised Environmental Impact Assessment has been produced. This is expected in late March or April.

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) men and (b) women in each of the standard age groups were employed in his Department in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1999. [104019]

Mr. Byers: In April 1999 the numbers of men and women employed in DTI Headquarters by age group were as follows:

Age	Men	Women	Total
16–19	1	5	6
20–24	36	41	77
25–29	204	247	451
30–34	414	450	864
35–39	486	356	842

Age	Men	Women	Total
40–44	389	243	632
45–49	405	203	608
50+	658	296	954
Total	2,593	1,841	4,434

The Department's personnel database was set up in 1985 and does not include data on staff who left the Department before that date; full data on the age profile of staff in 1979 is not therefore available. However, the annual publication, "Civil Service Statistics", provides a departmental breakdown of staff by gender and Service-wide data by age for that year. In addition the Equal Opportunities Data Summary 1998 provides average age by responsibility level and gender across the Service.

The figures exclude DTI staff in Government Offices and the DTI's Executive Agencies who have delegated responsibility for personnel issues.

GATT

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the Government's assessment of the outcome of the Uruguay Round of GATT negotiations, including the conclusions it has drawn concerning future trade negotiations. [104358]

Mr. Caborn: An assessment of the outcome of the Uruguay Round of GATT negotiations was published in May 1994 by the Government in a White Paper, "The Uruguay Round of Multilateral Trade Negotiations 1986–94" (Cm 2579). In relation to future trade negotiations, the Government published a consultation paper in May 1999 entitled "The UK and the World Trade Organisation: An Introduction to the Next Round" (DTI/Pub4140/5k/5/99/NP. URN 99/875). Both documents are available in the Libraries of both Houses. The Government's position in supporting the launch of a comprehensive Round of trade negotiations has been discussed in Parliament, most recently in the debate in European Standing Committee C on 22 November 1999. The Government's position is well reflected in the position of the EU and its support for the launch of a comprehensive Round remains strong since the failure of the Seattle Conference, as the Secretary of State said in the debate in the House on 9 December 1999, Official Report, columns 1022–94.

Early Retirement

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many employees of his Department took early retirement packages, and at what total cost, in the financial year 1996–97. [104099]

Mr. Byers: Two hundred and twenty seven employees took early retirement packages at a cost of some £1.4 million in the financial year 1996–97. This represents 20 per cent. of the costs, the other 80 per cent. being met by the Treasury under the 80:20 Scheme in force at the time.

Match Funding

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was allocated from the social and regional funds of the European Union to the United Kingdom during the 1999 financial year; what was the value of match funding from United Kingdom sources; and from what sources these match funds were derived. [105124]

Mr. Caborn: Allocations from the European Union's Structural Funds relate to multiannual programmes. Expenditure must be committed within the programme period, but may be spent up to two years after the end of the period. There are therefore no allocations for specific years, and expenditure during 1999 would be in the context of programmes approved during the 1994–99 financing period with expenditure allowed until the end of 2001.

The level of match funding varies from programme to programme. The sources of match funding will depend on the nature of the many individual projects. It is the responsibility of applicants for funding to identify the sources of match funding for their projects. Programme secretariats can advise on this. There are many potential sources, e.g. central government, local authorities, the voluntary and private sectors. No central records exist of the sources of match funding used for individual projects.

World Trade Organisation

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if it is the Government's policy to support the expansion of the World Trade Organisation's remit to cover negotiations on (a) investment, (b) Government procurement and (c) guidelines for the behaviour of multinational enterprises. [105062]

Mr. Caborn: It remains Government policy to support a comprehensive round of negotiations in the WTO, including investment and government procurement. The OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises are currently under review in the OECD with particular focus on their more effective implementation and wider dissemination. We believe that the review of the Guidelines will make them of greater relevance and use for business, other organisations and governments alike.

Dr. Palmer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals his Department has in respect of the World Trade Organisation to enable multilateral trade agreements to work in concert with multilateral environmental agreements. [105060]

Mr. Caborn: At the recent WTO Ministerial conference in Seattle, the UK and the EU pressed for a new Round of trade negotiations to include a clarification of the relationship between WTO rules and trade measures taken within multilateral environmental agreements. The Seattle conference was suspended without agreement on the terms for a new Round, but we continue to press for this subject to be included in future WTO negotiations.

Glassmaking

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what applications for (a) grant or (b) other financial support he has received for a glass factory to be operated in the north west of England by Quinn Glass. [104767]

Mr. Alan Johnson: Any applications are commercially confidential, it is therefore not possible for me to provide this information.

Plutonium Fuel

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the relevant Swiss electricity company and the Swiss nuclear regulatory authorities in respect of problems discovered with MOX plutonium fuel exported to Switzerland from Sellafield. [104698]

Mrs. Liddell: None. This is a matter for the companies and the national regulatory authorities concerned.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 16 December 1999, Official Report, column 235W, on plutonium fuel, if he is in a position to make public the details of the remedial measures being put in place to rectify safety management problems in MOX nuclear fuel manufacture at Sellafield; and what further meetings he has had with the HSE (N11) on this matter since 1 December 1999. [104726]

Mrs. Liddell: The work to address the issues associated with the falsification of quality assurance data at BNFL's MOX Demonstration Facility at Sellafield is still continuing. As I made clear in my reply of 16 December 1999, Official Report, column 235W, I have asked the company to make public details of the remedial measures being taken as soon as possible, consistent with the need to address these matters thoroughly and to satisfy the HSE fully as to the adequacy of the company's proposals. On 15 December 1999, I received a briefing from HSE's Chief Inspector of Nuclear Installations on progress with HSE's independent investigation into this matter. I understand HSE intend to publish a report on their findings next month.

Assisted Area Status

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 7 December 1999, Official Report, column 457W, concerning eligibility of wards for assisted area status in Dumfries and Galloway, what is the nature of the personal information referred to in his answer. [104419]

Mr. Caborn: Some of the information used in identifying areas of significant labour market weakness is confidential as it was collected under the provisions of the Statistics of Trade Act 1947, in particular the manufacturing activity within wards.

Independent Assessment Panel

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the membership of the Independent Assessment Panel for the Partnership Fund. [105515]

Mr. Alan Johnson: An independent Assessment Panel of nine members is to recommend to Ministers which projects should receive funding in the first round of the £5 million Partnership Fund.

The nine members of the Assessment Panel—three trade unionists, three industrialists and three independent experts—will report to Ministers who will then make the final decisions on which projects have been successful. The successful applicants for funding under the Partnership Fund will be announced in Spring 2000.

Appointments are for a period of one year renewable for up to four years from 20 December 1999. Members are unpaid although travel and subsistence expenses are available.

The members of the Assessment Panel are:

Ms Yvonne Bennion, Policy Specialist at the Industrial Society

Mr. David Coats, Head of Economic and Social Affairs Department at the TUC

Mr. Bill Connor, General Secretary of USDAW

Mr. Willy Coupar (Chairman of the Panel), Director of the IPA

Mrs. Lesley James, formerly HR Director of Tesco plc.

Mr. Mike Kinski, Group Chief Executive of Stagecoach Holdings plc.

Dr. Clive Morton OBE, Business Development Director at Anglian Water

Mrs. Margaret Prosser OBE, Deputy General Secretary of TGWU

Mr. John Stevens, Director of Development & Public Policy at the IPD

Brief biographies of the members of the Panel have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Electricity Industry

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the Government's target date for replacing the UK electricity pool system. [105421]

Mrs. Liddell: The target for the implementation of the new electricity trading arrangements is autumn 2000.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the impact on the electricity pool price of the fire at Drax Power Station in December; and if he will make a statement on the related discussions he has had with the industry on this subject. [105420]

Mrs. Liddell: As a result of a fire at Drax power station on 27 December I understand that part of the output of the station will be unavailable for a period. It is not uncommon for some generating plants to be unavailable for technical reasons and there is adequate generating capacity available on the system to cover such incidents. The incident at Drax affected only around 1 per cent. of the available generation on the England and Wales system and the impact on Pool prices is small.

Nuclear Fuel

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the decision by the Japanese electricity company Kansai Electric Power to return nuclear fuel to Britain. [105266]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government have noted Kansai Electric's statement of 10 January that they will ask BNFL to return the eight fuel assemblies at the Takahama 4 reactor to the UK. This raises a number of issues which will need to be explored by the Japanese and UK Governments before Kansai and BNFL reach any conclusions.

Part-time Work Directive

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the implementation of the Part-time Work Directive. [105542]

Mr. Alan Johnson: I am today publishing a consultation document setting out the Government's proposals for implementing the Part-time Work Directive by means of regulations giving part-timers the right to be treated no less-favourably than comparable full-timers. The consultation lasts until 27 February, and I expect to lay Regulations soon afterwards.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Sudan

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans the Government have to help alleviate suffering in Sudan. [104359]

Mr. Foulkes: This financial year we have pledged £8 million to respond to humanitarian needs in Sudan. Though suffering in the country is not as severe as during the crisis of 1998 we are following the situation closely. Ending the war is the key to alleviating the suffering in Sudan and we are working hard with our international partners to support the current peace efforts sponsored by the Inter-Governmental Authority on Development.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what reports she has received concerning religious discrimination in Government-run peace camps in Southern Sudan. [104367]

Mr. Foulkes: The Peace Camps or Peace Villages set up by the Government of Sudan in the Nuba Mountain region have been accused of being part of the Government's alleged aim of islamisation of the people. However, given the scarcity of information from that region we are unable to determine the true situation. Last year's United Nations assessment mission to the region did not identify religious discrimination as a problem, but the subject was not part of the mission's terms of reference.

Ethiopia

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many applications for aid have been made by non-Governmental organisations concerning aid projects in Ethiopia; and how many have been (a) accepted and (b) rejected. [104679]

Mr. Foulkes: During the current financial year, DFID has received 10 applications from NGOs for humanitarian aid projects. Five of these have been accepted, four rejected, and one is currently under consideration.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement concerning the current humanitarian situation in Ethiopia and Eritrea. [104677]

Mr. Foulkes: In Ethiopia, recent estimates by the Government of Ethiopia, endorsed by the World Food Programme, give a total of 6.9 million people in need of food aid assistance due to adverse weather. An additional 385,000 internally displaced persons (IDPs), from the war zone in the border area disputed with Eritrea, are also in need of assistance.

In Eritrea, the results of the conflict with Ethiopia are the principal cause of the present humanitarian situation. Those affected include 250,000 IDPs, a similar number of war-affected (mainly those households who have taken in IDPs) and 64,000 people who have been deported from Ethiopia. There are also some rural areas which are drought affected, and FAO is currently conducting a survey with the Eritrean Ministry of Agriculture to assess the extent of this problem.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment her Department has made concerning the drought conditions in Ethiopia. [104678]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development (DFID) relies on the assessments of the United Nations, the Government of Ethiopia, NGOs and USAID in monitoring the drought conditions in Ethiopia. We do not seek to duplicate the work of these organisations. We employ a Field Manager in Addis Ababa who regularly participates in joint assessment missions with the Ethiopian Government and other donors, participates in food aid co-ordination meetings and visits areas identified for potential DFID assistance. The official is backed up by regular visits from a senior natural resources adviser based in London.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is her Department's policy on the provision of development aid to (a) Ethiopia and (b) Sudan. [104676]

Mr. Foulkes: The UK is completing current commitments in Ethiopia and continuing to provide humanitarian assistance but will not agree any new funding proposals until the war with Eritrea has ended.

UK Development Aid to Sudan ceased in January 1991. Substantial humanitarian assistance to Sudan has continued since then.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what response her Department has made to the Ethiopian Disaster Prevention and Preparedness Commission's appeal, entitled Emergency Relief Needs in Ethiopia-January-March 2000. [104681]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development's (DFID) policy is to channel emergency food relief through NGOs or UN agencies.

Current and planned projects which are relevant to this Appeal are as follows:

DFID has recently approved a £1.1 million project for provision of 3,000 metric tonnes (mt) of emergency food aid to Konso, in the southern region of Ethiopia. This will be distributed between January and April 2000, through a project implemented by the British NGO, FARM Africa, in collaboration with Ethiopian local government agencies.

We are already funding a 3,000 mt food aid intervention in Koisha, southern region, which runs to the end of January.

DFID is presently reviewing a proposal for a further 6,240 mt of food aid to be distributed through an NGO project in Wollo, Amhara Region.

We are also contributing indirectly through EU food aid commitments.

Chrysotile Asbestos

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action is taken by the Government to ensure that developing countries are aware of the hazards of chrysotile asbestos and to discourage the dumping of this product in developing and third-world countries; and if she will make a statement. [104662]

Clare Short: Regulations prohibiting the import of chrysotile asbestos into the UK came into force in November 1999, meeting an EU Directive that requires all member states to introduce legislation banning asbestos by 1 January 2005.

We will support the European Commission's intention to propose to the Rotterdam Convention's Interim Chemical Review Committee (ICRC) that the remaining asbestos fibres, including chrysotile, be added to Annexe 111 (Chemicals subject to the PIC Procedure) of the Convention. If the ICRC are content, then the proposal will be discussed later this year by the Intergovernmental Negotiation Committee that negotiated the Convention.

Tropical Diseases

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with pharmaceutical companies on the financing of research to combat leishmaniasis and other sand-fly related diseases affecting poor people who sleep close to their cattle. [104422]

Clare Short: I have had no discussions with pharmaceutical companies on the financing of research to combat leishmaniasis or other sand-fly related diseases. We support research through the World Health Organisation's Tropical Disease Research Programme, which places great emphasis on forming partnerships with pharmaceutical companies to facilitate future drug development. Current treatment for leishmaniasis involves repeated injections, and is not effective in all cases. No oral treatment is currently available, although trials are underway.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what research reports she has received directed to the spread of malaria among people living in highland areas and its relationship with climate change; and if she will make a statement. [104664]

Clare Short: We are concerned at the potential spread of malaria into tropical highlands. Current scientific evidence is far from unanimous on the relationship with climate change. We are working with research institutes and ministries of health in affected countries to develop reliable systems for epidemic prediction, detection and response.

SCOTLAND

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) men and (b) women in each of the standard age groups were employed in his Department in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1999. [104025]

Dr. Reid: The following figures illustrate the number of staff in the core Scottish Office departments at 1 April 1999.

Number of staff at 1 April 1999

Full-time equivalent

Age band	Men	Women	All staff
16–19	28.0	30.0	58.0
20–24	122.0	111.6	233.6
25–29	202.0	232.5	434.5
30–34	258.8	244.2	503.0
35–39	266.6	261.1	527.7
40–44	310.7	261.8	572.5
45–49	319.0	235.3	554.3
50 or over	512.7	310.2	822.9
Total	2,019.8	1,686.7	3,706.5

There are no comparable figures available for April 1979. However, some information may be found in Civil Service Statistics which is published annually and is available in the Library.

Asset Sales

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the items in the National Assets Register sold by his Department since 8 March 1999, stating in each case the amount of money realised; if he will estimate the total amount raised from such sales to date; and if he will make a statement. [104498]

Dr. Reid: Those assets owned by The Scottish Office and its Executive Agencies listed in the National Asset Register which have been sold between 8 March 1999 to 30 June 1999 are as follows, together with the money realised:

	Proceeds realised £
The Scottish Office core fixed assets
Highland and Lowland Estates:
Lowland Estate	111,650
Highland Estate	14,505
Furniture and Fittings	935
IT Systems	30
Vehicles	42,929
Executive Agencies of The Scottish Office
Scottish Prison Service
Vehicles	17,974
Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency
Vehicles	6,109
Scottish Agricultural Science Agency
Plant and Machinery	1,765
Fisheries Research Services
Vehicles	3,478
Student Awards Agency for Scotland
IT Systems	25
Total	199,400

From 1 July 1999, The Scotland Office has not sold any assets.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Equal Opportunities

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to create an Equality Unit within the Northern Ireland Office to co-ordinate the work relating to equality schemes of United Kingdom departments and other bodies designated by the Secretary of State under section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998. [103814]

Mr. George Howarth: The Human Rights Unit in the Northern Ireland Office advises the Secretary of State on all issues relating to equality schemes for which the Secretary of State is responsible.

The Equality Commission is required by the Northern Ireland Act 1998 to produce statutory guidelines on equality schemes (subject to approval by the Secretary of State) and these guidelines will be given to all public authorities designated under section 75. United Kingdom Government Departments and other bodies designated by the Secretary of State under section 75 will submit their equality schemes to the Commission for approval. The Secretary of State is responsible for approving public authority equality schemes which have been referred to him by the Equality Commission. The Commission cannot refer the equality schemes of United Kingdom Government Departments to the Secretary of State.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provision has been made within the Northern Ireland Office to ensure that it, and the voluntary and community sectors with which it works, have been provided with sufficient resources to ensure that they are able to comply with the statutory duty to promote equality of opportunity. [103815]

Mr. George Howarth: No additional financial resources have been provided to ensure that the Northern Ireland Office and the voluntary and community sectors with whom it works are able to comply with the statutory duty to promote equality of opportunity. However the Government believes that these public authorities have sufficient resources to ensure that they are able to comply with the statutory duty to promote equality of opportunity.

Criminal Justice Review

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the reasons why the report of the Criminal Justice Review established under the terms of the Good Friday agreement has not yet been published; and when he expects it to be published. [103816]

Mr. Ingram: The extended consultation process which the Review Group engaged in, together with the range and complexity of the issues which the Group was invited to address, meant that the analytical phase of their work began later and has taken longer than the Group expected. I understand, however, that the report is now at an advanced stage of preparation and that it is hoped to publish it as soon as possible.

PRIME MINISTER

Performance and Innovation Unit

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Prime Minister what subjects have been referred to the Performance and Innovation Unit. [104591]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Barnsley, Central (Mr. Illsley) on 10 December 1998, Official Report, columns 277–78W; to my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford (Mr. Kidney) on 21 October 1999, Official Report, column 630W; and to my hon. Friend the Member for Milton Keynes, South-West (Dr. Starkey) on 24 November 1999, Official Report, column 162W.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Prime Minister what is the remit of the Performance and Innovation Unit. [104592]

The Prime Minister: The remit of the Performance and Innovation Unit is to improve the capacity of Government to identify and address strategic, cross-cutting issues and promote innovation in the development of policy and in the delivery of the Government's objectives.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Prime Minister (1) when he expects the Performance and Innovation Unit to report on post offices; [104593]

(2) what is the membership and remit of the Performance and Innovation Unit study of post offices. [104594]

The Prime Minister: As I indicated in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford (Mr. Kidney) on 21 October 1999, Official Report, column 630W, I expect the Performance and Innovation Unit's work on the Post Office network to be completed this spring.

The Performance and Innovation Unit project team is drawn from both inside and outside Government, to ensure new thinking and a wide range of experience is brought to bear on the issues. The remit of the project is to identify the contribution made by post offices to the vitality of local communities, consider how the Post Office network can best contribute to the Government's objectives in the future and the process to formulate objectives for the Post Office.

Fundamental Rights Draft Charter

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish documents sent to the European Union Fundamental Rights Charter Drafting Body; when he expects the Charter Drafting Body to consider a draft; and how the Government will consult (a) Parliament and (b) the public on this draft. [105126]

The Prime Minister: The Charter drafting process is designed to be transparent. The Charter website, which will contain the various working documents, can be reached through http://ue.eu.int. Parliament will also have access to all the papers through its two delegates. In addition, the meetings of the Charter drafting body are televised.

Drafting will probably begin after the next plenary on 1–2 February, which will be the first opportunity for a general discussion of the substance.

The Government have already written to the Chairs of the two Scrutiny Committees about the process and will continue to liaise closely with Parliament. The Government will also continue to consult NGOs and other independent organisations and individuals through a combination of meetings and correspondence.

Golden Jubilee

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Prime Minister what plans Her Majesty's Government have to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth's accession to the throne. [104809]

The Prime Minister: Planning for The Queen's Golden Jubilee is at a very early stage. A programme of celebrations will be announced in due course.

Hospitality

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Prime Minister how much was spent on official entertaining at 10 Downing Street in the periods (a) 1 May 1997 to 31 March 1998 and (b) 1 April 1998 to 31 March 1999. [104885]

The Prime Minister: The total cost to my office of official hospitality, including official entertainment, at 10 Downing Street and Chequers in 1997–98 and 1998–99 was as follows:

1997–98: £43,777
1998–99: £53,639

This compares with total expenditure on entertainment at 10 Downing Street during 1996–97 of £50,126.

Ilisu Dam

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with the President of Syria on the construction of the Ilisu Dam. [105453]

The Prime Minister: I have had no discussion with the President of Syria on the construction of the Ilisu Dam.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of the construction of the Ilisu Dam on the Kurdish People. [105451]

The Prime Minister: A report, "Stakeholders' Attitudes to Involuntary Resettlement in the Context of the Ilisu Dam Project in Turkey" has been prepared by an independent social development expert following a visit to the region to ascertain the views of the local population likely to be affected by the dam. Copies of this report are in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Prime Minister which EU states have joined with the UK Government in providing financial support for the construction of the Ilisu Dam. [105450]

The Prime Minister: No financial support has yet been provided by any EU state for the construction of the Ilisu Dam.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he had with the Heads of Government of the EU at Helsinki on the future of the Ilisu Dam. [105452]

The Prime Minister: I have had no discussion with the Heads of Government of the EU on the future of the Ilisu Dam.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he had with the Turkish Prime Minister at the Helsinki Summit concerning the construction of the Ilisu Dam; and if he will make a statement. [105477]

The Prime Minister: I have had no discussion with the Turkish Prime Minister on the construction of the Ilisu Dam.

Members' Interests

Mr. Maude: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the compliance of the Financial Secretary to the Treasury with the Ministerial Code in relation to his shares declared in the Register of Members' Interests. [105288]

The Prime Minister: Guidance to Ministers on the handling of financial interests is set out in section 9 of the Ministerial Code.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Youth Support Service

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will publish the prospectus for the new youth support service. [105352]

Mr. Wicks: We shall be publishing shortly a document to announce the key functions that we expect the new youth support service to perform. We expect to publish a specification for tender for the new service in March.

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had with other Government Departments regarding continuity of funding for services to be provided under the proposed arrangements for the combined Youth Support Service. [104696]

Mr. Wicks: We are working closely with other Government departments, to identify the contributions which their existing services will make to the Youth Support Service. This includes the funding which will be available. An inter-departmental steering group has been set up to assist in this process, which has met a number of times. Funding for the Youth Support Service will be settled as part of the Government's Year 2000 spending review.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each regional development agency (a) the amounts granted and (b) the companies facing closure or large-scale redundancies to which the sums have been allocated under the rapid response scheme. [104811]

Mr. Wicks: The information requested is contained in the following table. Where no money has been awarded in a particular region this is because no firm proposals have been received.

Rapid Response Fund: companies supported since 1998–99

RDA	Company/ies	Amount granted £
One North East	Electrolux	51,000
	Fujitsu	415,000
	Groves Cranes	250,000
	Onwa	153,000
	R.J.B. Ellington	58,650
	Siemens	300,000
	Vaux	140,000
	Wilkinson Sword	120,000
Total		1,487,650
Advantage West Midlands	Lear, Alvis, Abbey Textiles, Alstrom, Massey Ferguson and AP Leamington (all Coventry and Warwickshire)	75,000
	IMI Refineries Walsall	10,000
	Michelin	Bid to be received
	Rover	740,000
	Staff Ceramics—4 firms	268,000
	Telford—4 firms	[1]50,000
East of England Development Agency	Hazelwood Foods	50,000
	United Distillers Vintners	61,000
Total		111,000
East Midlands Development Agency	Alstom Turbines	57,000
	Bryan Donkin Foundry	23,444
	RJB Calberton/Harworth	89,500
	Ladybird and Jarvis Porter	44,985
	Laporte Industries	56,000
	Midland Mining Annesley Bentinck	177,750
Total		448,579
South West of England Development Agency	Hoechst Trespephan	125,250
	Link Group	48,000
	Rover Group (Swindon)	16,764
	Strachen Henshaw	148,100
Total		338,114
London Development Partnership	—	0
North West Development Agency	—	0
South East of England Development Agency	—	0
Yorkshire Forward2	—	0
Grand total TBC		3,528,343

[1] Up to £170,000 if needed

School Attendance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what support has been given to schools to reduce the level of unauthorised absences. [104119]

Jacqui Smith: Our objective is to reduce the learning time lost due to truancy and exclusion by one third by year 2002. Over three years we are investing £500 million across England on projects tackling truancy and school exclusion, and other initiatives to get children back into school and learning. Projects supported include the purchasing of electronic equipment to monitor attendance, additional staff to chase-up truants, and reward schemes for acknowledging regular attendance. We are also encouraging schools to set up pupil mentoring schemes and to develop home-school liaison through the implementation of home-school agreements. All of these activities are designed to help schools reduce unauthorised absence.

On 1 November 1999 we issued our strategy document "Tackling Truancy Together" which sets out our further proposals for helping to reduce unauthorised absence from school. We are currently considering the many responses we received to the proposals in that document, and will make an announcement soon on what further action we want to take to help reduce unauthorised absence from school.

Minster College, Isle of Sheppey

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the withdrawal by Kent County Council of match funding from the Single Regeneration Budget funded Inclusion Unit at Minster College on the Isle of Sheppey. [105200]

Ms Estelle Morris: I understand that discussions are continuing between Kent Local Education Authority and Minster College about the future of the Inclusion Unit at the School. I have asked my officials to keep in touch with the discussions and will write to you as soon as possible with further details.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the changes to the Standard Fund Grant 19 and their impact on match funding for the Single Regeneration Budget funded Inclusion Unit at Minster College on the Isle of Sheppey. [105201]

Ms Estelle Morris: Kent Local Education Authority's Standards Fund Grant 19 allocation for secondary schools and LEA initiatives has been increased from £950,000 in 1999–2000 to £2.8 million for 2000–01. Nearly £2.2 million of the grant must be devolved directly to Kent secondary schools and colleges to help combat truancy and exclusions. Kent are consulting on how the funds will be distributed. I understand that discussions are continuing between Kent Local Education Authority and Minster College about the future of their Inclusion Unit. I have asked my officials to keep in touch with the discussions and will write to you as soon as possible with further details.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will take steps to secure the future of the Inclusion Unit at Minster College on the Isle of Sheppey. [105202]

Ms Estelle Morris: I understand that discussions are continuing between Kent Local Education Authority and Minster College about the future of the Inclusion Unit at the school. I have asked my officials to keep in touch with the discussions and I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible with further details.

Sixth Forms

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the cost to English local education authorities of maintaining sixth forms in schools in the last year for which figures are available. [105351]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Standard Spending Assessment mechanism includes an unhypothecated element for post-16 education. Information on the cost to local education authorities of maintaining sixth forms in schools is not collected.

New Deal (Monitoring)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what methods are used to monitor the quality of training services provided under the New Deal by private sector companies. [104103]

Ms Jowell: In line with our continuing commitment for ensuring quality, the Employment Service has worked in partnership with the Training Standards Council (TSC) to develop a framework for the assessment of the quality of New Deal training provision. By March 2002, every New Deal Unit of Delivery will have been inspected by the Council. This framework is the basis for each New Deal partnership to carry out an annual self assessment. These inspections and self-assessments cover the quality of all training provision including that delivered by the private sector.

Disabled People

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what funding he will make available to enable schools and colleges to improve facilities for people with disabilities. [104272]

Ms Hodge: We have significantly increased the funding available under the Schools Access Initiative to enable local education authorities to improve access to mainstream schools and the curriculum for pupils with disabilities. We recently announced that £30 million will be available in the 2000–01 financial year. This is a 50 per cent. increase on the previous year's level of funding and 200 per cent. increase on funds available in 1996–97. We expect to allocate £100 million for access schemes in the three years to 2002.

In the Further Education sector the Further Education Funding Council's (FEFC) funding methodology allows for additional units of funding, to be allocated to support provision for students with disabilities, or learning difficulties. This is used to fund a range of support for individual students, including care assistants and signers. In addition, £12 million capital funding has been allocated over three years (1999–2000, 2000–01, 2001–02) specifically to improve access and facilities for students with learning difficulties and or disabilities. Capital projects supported under the general widening participation and skills agenda will also have the potential to improve access for disabled students. Responsibility for funding of further education will pass to the Learning and Skills Council from April 2001 and a consultation document on the new Council's funding arrangements will be issued early in 2000.

Improving access and facilities for disabled people in education was a key feature of the recommendations of the Disability Rights Task Force, who published their report "From Exclusion to Inclusion" in December 1999. We will be introducing legislation later this session to address its recommendations for education and consider longer term costs as part of the Year 2000 Spending Review.

Careers Service

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the TUPE regulations will apply to staff in the Careers Service as a result of the creation of the new combined arrangements for the Youth Support Service. [104697]

Mr. Wicks: Decisions have yet to be taken about the structure of the Youth Support Service and how Careers Service companies will be affected. It is therefore too early to consider the extent to which TUPE regulations will apply to Careers Service staff. We indicated in the White Paper "Learning to Succeed" that the best of the Careers Service companies will play a major role in the new Service together with a range of other local partners. We have established a Transitional Issues Group with Careers Service National Association (CSNA) that will be considering the implications for Careers Service companies and providing them with guidance.

School Headships

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many school headships in each London Borough are held by (a) men and (b) women from an ethnic minority background. [104796]

Ms Estelle Morris: This information is not held centrally.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make it his policy that metropolitan boroughs eligible for EU Objective One status on account of their poverty and social deprivation do not receive per pupil education standard spending assessment allocations below the national average. [104838]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government announced in November 1998 a three year review in partnership with local government to look for a way of distributing revenue support grant which is simpler, more stable, more robust and fairer than the present arrangements for SSAs. While the review is taking place there will be no further changes to the method of distributing funding.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had with the Office for National Statistics with regard to the production of an assessment of each of the New Deal programmes; and if he will make a statement. [102101]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 9 December 1999]: Officials from both the Department for Education and Employment and the Office for National Statistics liaise regularly to discuss and analyse the impact that New Deal programmes have had on unemployment figures and other economic indicators published by the Office for National Statistics. Evaluation is carried out independently by outside contractors and the Department's internal analysis and monitoring uses Government Statistical Service figures and internal data.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many letters have been sent to lone parents inviting them to participate in the New Deal for Lone Parents. [102103]

Ms Hodge [holding answer 9 December 1999]: From the national introduction of the New Deal for Lone Parents on 26 October 1998, to the end of October 1999, initial invitation letters were sent to 434,570 lone parents.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his latest assessment of substitution, dead-weight and displacement in each of the New Deal schemes. [102107]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 9 December 1999]: There is a comprehensive evaluation programme in place for all elements of New Deal. The article "New Deal for the young unemployed: monitoring and evaluation", published in Labour Market Trends in November 1998, sets out a framework which is broadly common across New Deal. We are committed to publishing the final reports of all these evaluations.

New Deal is a long term initiative, still in its early days. Consequently, most evaluation is also still in progress and is yet to report. However, Employment Service Research report ESR33, published in December 1999 and available in the Library, provides an independent assessment, by the National Institute of Economic and Social Research (NIESR), of the effects of the New Deal for Young People in its first year. This provides encouraging evidence of the early impact of the New Deal. On deadweight it found that > "Approximately 50 per cent. of individuals leaving unemployment via the NDYP would have done so in absence of the programme".

and that this

> "is broadly in line with estimates from other active labour market programmes".

On substitution and displacement it found that

> "NDYP does not appear to have had any significant effect on unemployment of others than the client group so far".

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many persons have left their New Deal scheme to be placed on (a) Incapacity Benefit, (b) Income Support, (c) Jobseeker's Allowance and (d) any other benefit. [102109]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 9 December 1999]: Our management information on those who leave New Deal to claim benefit is only broken down to those who return to Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) and those who claimed another benefit. In the period ending October 1999, of the 251,600 people who left the New Deal for Young People; 23,680 claimed JSA and 30,060 claimed another benefit.

Education Initiatives

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were (i) the total number of contracts covered by his answer of 23 July 1999, Official Report, columns 691–92W, (ii) the number and total value of those contracts that have been put out to competitive tender, (iii) the number and total value of those contracts that have not been put out to competitive tender and (iv) the names of all companies with which contracts not put out to competitive tender have been concluded. [99116]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 22 November 1999]: There were 65 commercial contracts relating to the previous answer. 26 contracts, at a total value of £4.4 million were put out to competitive tender, and 39 contracts at a value of £709,000 were not put out to competitive tender. The remaining expenditure on consultants and advisers were for individuals and organisations working with the Department on a non-commercial basis. Where commercial contracts were not put out to competitive tender the contracts relate to the organisations or individuals listed, engaged due to their known specialist expertise. Some may have more than one contract.

Cheshire Education Services
C. & P. Partnership
Wilfred Agnew
Barry Allsop
Norman Barlow
Richard Brake
Terry Browne
Margaret Caister
Ian Clelland
Professor Bernard Crick
Joan Farrelly
Mike Fielding
Pamela Francis
Roger Frost
Arthur Giles
George Gill OBE
Ann Gittins
Joan Greenfield
Bill Greenwood
Malcolm Hewitt
Peter Highfield
Penny Holden
Pat Ivin
Jane Jinks
Diane Kelly
Dee Kushlick-Williams
Professor Hugh Lawlor
Hilary MacDonald
Helen McMaster
Ivan McNally
Denis Mongon
Judith Morris
Ian Pollard
Merlin Price
Alan Puckey
Peter Rabbett
Ian Shelton
Monica Timmis
Sir Anthony Tippet

Gail Treml
Tony Webster
Jeff White
Sylvia Wright

CABINET OFFICE

On-line Services

Helen Jones: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when she intends to publish information on the target set by the Prime Minister to deliver 25 per cent. of Government services electronically. [105516]

Marjorie Mowlam: A report on progress by Departments and their key agencies was published recently. Copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of the House and it was published on the website www.citu.gov.uk/25percent.menu.htm. The report contains information supplied by Departments on a sample of key dealings between the citizen and business and Government.

DEFENCE

Live Munitions Testing

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment was made by his Department of the impact on fishing activity prior to the testing of live cluster bombs in Luce Bay; [104356]

(2) what plans he has to use live munitions in future trials in (a) Luce Bay and (b) elsewhere around the Scottish coast; [104353]

(3) for what reason live cluster bombs were used in recent trials at Luce Bay, Wigtownshire; [104354]

(4) what assessment was made by his Department of the prospects for recovery of bombs, prior to the testing of live cluster bombs in Luce Bay; and if he will make a statement. [104355]

Mr. Spellar: The trials at Luce Bay that took place over Easter last year were an urgent operational requirement in direct support of the UK participation in the NATO action in Kosovo. Live variants of the cluster bomb were used because there were insufficient inert bombs available to complete the trials within the required timescale. Although these weapons contained live bomblets, they were configured in such a manner as not to deploy the bomblets in flight.

Before any trial is approved a detailed series of risk assessments and defined controlled operating procedures are required. In addition, prior to the Luce Bay trial options for the recovery, disposal and containment of the bombs were all considered. The final decision to contain the bombs on the seabed was made once the trial has been completed and the situation assessed. The impact area within the licensed danger area of the Luce Bay range was selected on the basis that no significant fishing activity was regularly carried out in that area. The exact location was selected using the experience and judgment of the West Freugh Range and Ground Control Officers, who have between them more than 38 years of experience of monitoring all activities which emanate from the range.

In common with other test and evaluation ranges in the UK the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency's Luce Bay range is formally licensed for trials involving the use of live ordnance, and operates in accordance with the local byelaws governing its use. Whilst the majority of the trials conducted in the Luce Bay area and elsewhere around the Scottish coast are achieved wherever possible using inert material, there will inevitably be requirements in the future for trials using live ordnance to support the effectiveness of the United Kingdom armed services, sometimes at short notice. All trials, whether using live or inert weapons are subject to the same stringent controls and procedures to ensure the safe operation of all such activities.

Service Personnel (Health)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many personnel in each of the three armed services are currently classified as category P7R, unfit for operational duty. [104924]

Mr. Spellar: The medical category P7, with or without the "R" suffix, denotes fitness for specific types of light duties in the Royal Navy or Army. The RAF equivalent is known as Medical Employment Standard (MES) Z 5 (Temp). The "R" suffix with P7 may be used at the discretion of medical officers as an indication that the patient is expected to return to full fitness within a maximum period of up to 18 months.

The three Services maintain statistics on medical downgrading in slightly different ways to reflect their requirements. P7R figures, where available, for each of the Services as at 12 January 2000 are as follows:

Royal Navy

Medical Category P7R—1,535 (Ratings only) Figures for Officers not held centrally.

Army

Medical Category P7—2,019 (Officers and other ranks).

Note:

It is not possible to ascertain the number within this category that may also have been designated "R" as this information is not recorded centrally.

RAF

Medical Category MES Z 5(Temp)—1,786 Officers and other ranks)

Wilkinson Sword of Peace

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the units of the armed services that have been awarded the Wilkinson Sword of Peace in each year since its inception, indicating the aspect of community relations recognised in the award. [105457]

Mr. Spellar: Messrs Wilkinson Sword Ltd. presents an annual Sword of Peace to a unit or establishment of each Service which is judged to have made the most valuable contribution towards establishing good and friendly relations with the inhabitants of any community at home or overseas, over and above the unit's normal role and duty.

A list of the single-Service Units to which the Wilkinson Sword of Peace has been awarded since 1992, along with the citation for the last two years, is detailed in Table 1. A comprehensive list of all winners of the

Wilkinson Sword of Peace since its inception in 1966, and the associated citation, is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

In addition to the Single-Service awards, Messrs Wilkinson Sword Ltd. has, since 1994, presented an annual award (when a citation is deemed worthy of recognition) to the most deserving Joint Service unit or ad hoc grouping formed for any specific operation. A list of the four winners to date is given in Table 2, with a brief citation for the last two years.

Table 1: Wilkinson Sword of Peace (Navy)

Year	Unit/Establishment	Location
1992	MCM 1 Squadron	Baltic States
1993	HMS London	Durres and Albania
1994	HMS Fearless	Guyana
1995	HMS Invincible, HMS Illustrious	Various
1996	Inshore Training Squadron	Russia and Spain
1997	819 Naval Air Squadron	RNAS Prestwick
1998	Task Group 326.02 (Op Tellar)	Nicaragua and Honduras

Citations

1997: 819 Naval Air Squadron

For their close association and efforts in the local community around RNAS Prestwick.

1998: Task Group 326.02 (Op Tellar)

To all units within Task Group 326.02 (Op Tellar) for their contribution to the humanitarian assistance to Nicaragua and Honduras in the wake of Hurricane Mitch.

Wilkinson Sword of Peace (Army)

Year	Unit/Establishment	Location
1992	7 Sig Reg	Albania
	1 Cheshire Bn Gp	Bosnia
1993	21 Engr Regt	Bosnia
1994	1 KOBR	NI-Londonderry
1995	Gurkha Welfare Scheme	Nepal
1996	36 Engr Regt	Bosnia/UK
	1 RMP	Bosnia/Germany
1997	HCR	Bosnia/UK
1998	8 R Irish	NI-Tyrone

Citations

1997: Household Cavalry Regiment

Awarded for the work of two squadrons of the Household Cavalry Regiment in returning the lives of members of the severely damaged community of Banja Luka to conditions approaching normality, in which the seeds of long-standing peace might grow.

1998:8th (Co Armagh and Co Tyrone) Battalion Royal Irish Regiment

The Battalion has succeeded in making a dynamic and imaginative contribution to the community of Armagh, against the backcloth of unprecedented political momentum and a difficult operational environment.

Wilkinson Sword of Peace (Royal Air Force)

Year	Unit/Establishment	Location
1992	RAF Lyneham	UN Operations overseas
1993	RAF Kinloss	Local community
1994	RAF Manston	Local community
1995	RAF Laarbruch	Bosnia, Romania and Holland
1996	RAF Stornoway	Local community
1997	Numbers 1 and 34 Squadrons, RAF Regiment	Bosnia
1998	RAF Aldergrove	Northern Ireland

Citations

1997: Numbers 1 and 34 Squadrons of the RAF Regiment

For their part in Peace Support Operations as part of the multi-national peace Stabilisation Force at Banja Luka, Bosnia Herzegovina

1998: RAF Aldergrove

In recognition of the Station's response to the Omagh tragedy, and the wider humanitarian and fund-raising activities carried out throughout the year.

Table 2: Wilkinson Sword of Peace (Special)

Year	Unit/Establishment	Location
1994	Op Gabriel (5AB Bde)	Rwanda
1995	Op Chantress (Britlogbat, tri-Svc)	Angola
1996	Not awarded	—
1997	MCTC	UK
1998	BMATT South Africa	South Africa

Citations

1997: Military Corrective Training Centre, Colchester

Members of staff, SUS and young offenders have provided a valuable contribution to the local community, and to charitable organisations, out of all proportion to the manpower and time available to them.

1998: The British Military Advisory and Training Team (South Africa)

BMATT has played a crucial and influential role in harmonising the extremely difficult integration of former adversaries into a cohesive defence force.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the means by which consultation takes place prior to announcement of the annual Wilkinson Sword of Peace awards and (b) his Department's inputs in nomination and selection. [105458]

Mr. Spellar: Entries for the Wilkinson Sword of Peace competitions are invited annually through Defence Council Instructions, which also detail the eligibility criteria. The selection of the most deserving single-Service unit is done by an adjudicating committee, under the chairmanship of the relevant Service Principal Personnel Officer. The selection of the most deserving tri-Service unit, for the award of the Wilkinson Sword of Peace (Special), is done by an adjudicating committee formed of the three Principal Personnel Officers, under the chairmanship of the Deputy Chief of the Defence Staff (Personnel).

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much depleted uranium has been authorised for use by his Department in each of the last three years. [104265]

Mr. Spellar: The UK has not fired DU ammunition during the course of any of the operations it has undertaken over the last three years.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps will be taken to ensure that United States Forces using the Ministry of Defence range at Cape Wrath later this year do not use depleted uranium shells. [104877]

Mr. Spellar: Any nation using the ranges at Cape Wrath must abide by our Standard Operating Regulations. These regulations preclude the use of depleted uranium shells.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if depleted uranium shells have been used by British forces during live-firing exercises at the range at Cape Wrath. [104878]

Mr. Spellar: Depleted uranium shells have not been used at Cape Wrath by British forces.

Salisbury Plain

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on whose authority permission is given to non-military personnel to have access to his Department's land on Salisbury Plain; and what criteria are used. [104392]

Mr. Kilfoyle: My Department has a presumption in favour of access wherever this is consistent with military activities, environmental and conservation considerations, the health and safety of the public and the interests of our tenants. Formal applications to use Ministry of Defence land are considered on a case-by-case basis to ensure that none of the above constraints are compromised. All applications for the use of Salisbury Plain are vetted by the Commandant Army Training Estate Salisbury Plain's staff to ensure that live firing, manoeuvre or general military training is not taking place. The primary criterion when assessing access for non-military personnel onto the military estate is their personal safety.

MOD Hospital Units

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total annual cost of operating Ministry of Defence hospital units in each of the last 10 years. [104414]

Mr. Spellar: The first Ministry of Defence Hospital Unit (MDHU) was opened on 1 April 1995. For the three financial years 1996–97, 1997–98, 1998–99 the total annual operating costs for MDHUs are as set out. These costs represent, in the main, pay and allowances for military personnel and support staff.

Year	£ million
1996–97	16.936
1997–98	18.185
1998–99	18.500

Costs are not available for the year 1995–96.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the (a) budgeted and (b) actual cost in each of the last two years, of running his Department's hospital unit in Germany; [104412]

(2) how many service personnel in Germany have been treated in facilities other than MOD medical services in each of the last two years; and what was the cost of this treatment. [104415]

Mr. Spellar: Following the market testing of the health function in Germany, the provision of all secondary health care for both the Army and the RAF is provided under contract with five designated German provider hospitals. There are no MDHUs in Germany. The budget set aside to meet these costs was £30.028M (DM65.953m @ £=DM 2.1958) in 1997–98 and £23.853M (DM65.245m @ £=DM2.7353) in 1998–99. The number of cases treated in each of these years was 27,831 and 40,539 at a cost of £30.668M (DM67.341m) and £29.171M (DM79.791m) respectively.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the expenditure was on Ministry of Defence hospital units in each of the last two years. [104417]

Mr. Spellar: The amounts paid to MDHU host NHS Trusts for the treatment of military personnel in each of the last two years are as follows. The sums shown are the net payment, taking into account the abatement of charges for the contribution of military clinical staff serving in the MDHU to the treatment of Service patients.

1997–98: £6.505 million

1998–99: £7.379 million

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many patients have been transferred from Ministry of Defence hospital units to the Royal Hospital Haslar in each of the last two years; for what reasons; and at what cost to his Department. [104409]

Mr. Spellar: Information is not routinely collected on tertiary transfers to the Royal Hospital Haslar. Any patients whose care might need to be transferred to another consultant outside a Ministry of Defence Hospital Unit would normally be referred to other local or regional NHS hospitals with the specialist units required.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are awaiting (a) initial hospital appointments and (b) consultant appointments at Ministry of Defence hospital units; how many of them have been waiting for more than six months; and what assessment he has made of the cost implications of delays. [104410]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been paid annually to the NHS to cover NHS treatment in lieu of Ministry of Defence Hospital Unit treatment. [104831]

Mr. Spellar: Nil. Members of the Armed Forces are entitled to NHS hospital treatment on the same basis as civilians if appropriate military provision is not available. This understanding pre-dates the creation of MDHUs.

Indonesian Service Personnel (Training)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations have been made to the Government in respect of training for Indonesian service personnel within the United Kingdom over the past 12 months; and how many are currently in training in the UK. [104418]

Mr. Spellar: A number of representations have been made to the Government in respect of training for Indonesian service personnel within the United Kingdom over the past 12 months. There are currently no Indonesian military personnel training in the UK at military training establishments or in non-military educational establishments at HMG's expense.

British Troops (Kosovo)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he was first informed of problems in communications between British ground forces in Kosovo; what steps he took; and if he will make a statement. [104407]

Mr. Spellar: The limitations of the CLANSMAN tactical radio system are well understood and it is due to replaced by the BOWMAN system. MOD reacted swiftly to concern regarding the capability of CLANSMAN on operations in Kosovo. Two programmes were run under Urgent Operational Requirement procedures. Project POLYGON provided a commercial handheld radio system for the battalion operating in the Pristina area and entered service in September 1999. Project POLYGON PLUS will shortly extend this commercial system, giving all UK troops in theatre access to the protected tactical system.

Married Quarters, Colchester

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many married quarters are provided at the Colchester Garrison; how many are currently occupied by non-service personnel; and how many are empty. [104583]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The total number of married quarters in Colchester Garrison is 1,361. There are 55 currently occupied by non-service personnel. These are: four housing MOD police/MOD civilian families; 36 leased to Colne Housing and 14 occupied by irregular occupants ie estranged service spouses or ex-service personnel. There are currently 164 empty properties awaiting either modernisation or the arrival of incoming service families.

Kirkcudbright Test Range

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the minutes of the meeting between representatives from the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency on the environmental monitoring programme of the test-firing of depleted uranium shells at the Kirkcudbright test range, held on 29 November 1999. [104702]

Mr. Spellar: The meeting on 29 November 1999 was hosted by the Scottish Environment Protection Agency at East Kilbride. No formal minutes of the meeting were produced. Only working notes recording actions were made for future reference.

Future Transport Aircraft

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) future and (b) existing requirements for air-to-air refuelling of helicopters there are; and to what extent that requirement has been included in the European Staff Requirement against which the Future Transport Aircraft requirement is being assessed. [104648]

Mr. Kilfoyle [holding answer 13 January 2000]: The MOD is considering a possible need to enable part of the future support helicopter fleet to conduct air-to-air refuelling operations. Final decisions to procure such a capability have yet to be taken.

The European Staff Requirement for the Future Large Aircraft includes an essential requirement for the aircraft to be capable of being re-roled as an air-to-air refuelling tanker, with a desirable requirement for it to be capable of refuelling helicopters.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason there has been a delay in a decision on the selection of the Future Transport Aircraft. [104647]

Mr. Kilfoyle [holding answer 13 January 2000]: We are continuing to assess the proposals for the Future Transport Aircraft. A full technical and commercial assessment is being carried out, focusing on value for money and taking account of all relevant factors such as aircraft performance, cost, risk and industrial factors. We hope to be in a position to make a decision early this year.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the Defence Procurement Agency will adopt the practices of smart procurement in relation to the Future Transport Aircraft requirement; [105171]

(2) what procurement practices the Defence Procurement Agency has adopted with regard to the Future Transport Aircraft selection; [105174]

(3) what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the requirements for airlift and air portability being used by his Department in its assessment of the Future Transport Aircraft contenders with those in the European Staff Requirement. [105173]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Army Commitments

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current level of Army commitments. [104791]

Mr. Spellar: Some 30 per cent. of the trained Army is currently committed to operations, which is down from a peak of 47 per cent. at the height of the Kosovo campaign. Once the agreed force reductions in Bosnia have been implemented in full, this figure should fall to 28 per cent.

Russia (Military Relations)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on military relations with Russia. [105026]

Mr. Hoon: Engaging Russia in a constructive bilateral defence relationship is a high priority for the Government. Russia remains the highest priority in our "Outreach" programme of defence assistance to central and eastern Europe countries. We wish to continue to develop an effective defence relationship with Russia and made good progress towards that objective in 1997 and 1998. Last year, however, the Russians curtailed co-operative activities as a sign of their opposition to UK/US action in Iraq and NATO action in Kosovo.

Aircraft Procurement

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent meetings the Minister for Defence Procurement has had with Airbus to discuss the A400M; and what was discussed. [105033]

Mr. Kilfoyle: My noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement had planned to visit Airbus in Toulouse on 12 January but Parliamentary commitments meant she was unable to go. She hopes to rearrange the visit shortly.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will assess the benefits of defence procurement practices used by Airbus Military Company. [105172]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent meetings, and on what dates, the Minister for Defence Procurement has had with Boeing to discuss the C-17 transport aircraft. [105035]

Mr. Kilfoyle: My noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement met officials from Boeing on 11 January to discuss a range of issues, including the C-17 transport aircraft.

Service Personnel (Orthopaedic Waiting Lists)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when and for what reason the £1.5 million allocated across all three services to reduce secondary care agency orthopaedic waiting lists for those on operational duties was withdrawn as part of his Department's annual efficiency savings. [104923]

Mr. Spellar: Funding to reduce orthopaedic waiting lists in the Defence Secondary Care Agency was not removed as part of my Department's efficiency programme as no funds had been allocated for this purpose in 1999–2000. At the beginning of the financial year consideration was given to the possibility of identifying funding to reduce waiting lists, primarily but not exclusively, for orthopaedic treatment. However, this did not prove to be practical, although some additional physiotherapy, provided through a separate initiative, is likely to have affected the numbers on waiting lists overall. The possibility of pursuing action to reduce orthopaedic waiting lists in the next financial year is currently under consideration.

Service Uniforms

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria he will use in reaching a decision to revise guidelines on the wearing of service uniforms in public. [104800]

Mr. Spellar: We have no immediate plans to revise the guidelines on the wearing of service uniforms in public although they are kept under review. The current guidelines have been framed to give local commanders the flexibility to interpret the rules to cater for any specific considerations in their immediate area.

Married Quarters

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what unforeseen costs have arisen in connection with the refurbishment of forces' married quarters; what impact this will have on the timing of the refurbishment programme; and what additional budgetary provision is being made available to the Defence Housing Executive to meet the shortfall. [104799]

Mr. Spellar: At the time of the sale to Annington Homes in 1996 it was assessed that the cost of upgrading the bulk of the married quarters estate in mainland UK would be about £470 million and that work would be completed over a seven year period, that is by November 2003. A subsequent 100 per cent. stock condition survey established that additional work required, including structural and utilities improvements to houses, would cost an additional £112 million. This has necessitated extending the completion of the upgrade programme to 2005 on current expenditure plans with continued funding.

Memorandum of Understanding (USA)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on policy with regard to the Memorandum of Understanding on mutual communications support between the United Kingdom and the United States of America, signed at Washington on 22 and 28 November 1988. [100345]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 29 November 1999]: In recognition of the importance of communications interoperability in naval operations and the benefits of providing mutual communications support, the Royal Navy and the United States Navy have agreed a Memorandum of Understanding. This sets out the procedures and provisions for mutual communications support including message receipt, handling relay, reformatting, delivery, transmission or retransmission and any related supplies and services, the provision of which was not for the direct and primary benefit of the Navy providing the support.

Army Foundation College

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what public subsidy has been offered to develop the site of the new Army Foundation College. [102577]

Mr. Spellar: I am not yet in a position to examine the details of individual bids for the development of the new Army Foundation College.

UK Commitments

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of (a) United Kingdom defence commitments and (b) the cost of United Kingdom commitments. [103193]

CHADWYCK-HEALEY Vol. 342 cols. W285 - 474 10 - 20 January 2000

Mr. Hoon: A full assessment of UK defence commitments was undertaken during the Strategic Defence Review Cm. 3999. Operational deployments for the year 1998–99 are set out in the MOD's Performance Report 1998–99 Cm. 4520 published in December 1999. In practice, the bulk of defence spending contributes to providing the defence capability needed to meet the missions and commitments set out.

Chinook

Mr. Martin Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the incidents of Uncommanded Flying Control Movements in Chinook helicopters since 1994 in which subsequent inspections reported no fault found. [103639]

Mr. Spellar: There were two incidents of Uncommanded Flying Control Movements in Chinook helicopters since 1994 in which subsequent inspections reported no fault found:

18 August 1995—aircraft experienced a 12° nose down pitch.

23 December 1997—aircraft suffered vertical bounce on the ground after landing.

Where an investigation has not pinpointed a fault, the components most likely to have caused the fault may be changed and the aircraft subsequently flight tested to confirm its correct function. In both of the occurrences listed the pilots were able to counteract the UFCM and control of the aircraft was not lost.

BBC World Service

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 501W, if he will make a statement on the purpose of his Department's financial contribution to BBC World Service Monitoring, indicating those votes and subheads which cover these funds. [105076]

Mr. Hain: BBC Monitoring provides a valued information service to Government. Rapid reporting of open source information from around the world is an important aspect of the work of the FCO and other parts of Government. The FCO's financial contribution (40 per cent.) to BBC Monitoring's core operation reflects this. The contribution is made from Class VII, Vote 1, Section A2.

HEALTH

Pay Review Bodies

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the reports and recommendations of the Health Pay Review bodies. [105835]

Mr. Milburn: I am responding on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the reports of the Review Body on Doctors' and Dentists' Remuneration (DDRB) and the Review Body on Nursing staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine (NPRB), which are published today. I understand that a similar announcement is being made by the First Minister and the Minister for Health and Community Care in Scotland. Copies of the reports are available in the Vote Office and the Library. I am grateful to the chairmen and members of both Review Bodies for their hard work.

Nurses are to receive another big real terms increase in pay and, for the second year in succession, the award is being paid in full, with no staging. The NPRB have recommended an across the board increase of 3.4 per cent. for nurses, midwives and health visitors with bigger targeted increases for specific groups. About 60,000 Grade E nurses on the scale maximum will get a total increase of 7.8 per cent., worth an extra £1,390 a year, to improve career progression and reward skill acquisition and experience. Another 5,500 enrolled and auxiliary nurses in Grade C will receive total increases of 7 per cent., worth an extra £975 a year. London allowances, stand-by and on-call allowances will also rise by 3.4 per cent. This means that an experienced staff nurse in London will earn basic pay of £22,250; and elsewhere £19,220, with allowances and enhancements typically worth £2,000 on top of this.

The NPRB have also recommended across the board increases of 3.4 per cent. for physiotherapists, radiographers and other professions allied to medicine (PAMs). In addition about 4,500 experienced staff in the Senior 2 grade will receive total increases worth between 8.1 per cent. and 8.4 per cent., to improve career progression for experienced staff at the top of their scale. The maximum of the scale for Senior 2 grade PAMs will be £21,290. London allowances, stand-by and on-call allowances will also rise by 3.4 per cent.

The Government have decided to accept all the NPRB pay recommendations for 2000–01, with no staging. The across the board settlement of 3.4 per cent. for nurses and other NPRB remit groups is high when set against the current headline inflation rate and more than we are expecting for pay settlements in the public sector generally. However, National Health Service staff deserve a fair pay award, especially after coping so magnificently with huge pressures over the past few weeks. Moreover, we are still having to tackle the nursing recruitment and retention problems inherited as a direct consequence of the last Government's failure. This year's settlement will build on last year's large awards. Taken together, the great majority of Grade D and E nurses—the backbone of the service, who deliver hands-on patient care—will have received very significant pay increases which both recognise and value their contribution to the NHS.

Last year's pay awards gave a big boost to the success of the nurses' recruitment campaign which we launched in February 1999. Already over 5,000 nurses have returned or are set to do so after completing refresher training, and numbers taking up nursing degree and diploma courses have increased by 24 per cent. and 18 per cent. respectively. There has also been a sharp increase in male applications and in applications from the ethnic minority communities. But we are not stopping there and are determined to build on this success in our 2000 campaign to be launched next month. These awards will provide a welcome boost.

The Doctors' and Dentists' Review Body (DDRB) has recommended an overall increase of 3.3 per cent. for salaried doctors and dentists and in the pay element of fees for general medical and general dental practitioners. In addition to the 3.3 per cent. increase, consultants will also start to receive from 1 April 2000 the increases flowing through from the £50 million recommended by DDRB last year in recognition of their workload, work intensity and commitment to the NHS. These increases are worth a further 3 per cent. on their pay bill and will take two forms. First, changes to the discretionary point arrangements means that there will be over 2,400 extra awards available (worth over £2,500 each), making almost 5,600 in total, while the number of consultants eligible to receive awards will increase from 12,600 to almost 16,000. Second, there will be a new scheme to recognise consultants working in the most intense posts. For junior doctors the 3.3 per cent. increase is over and above the money already on the table in our current negotiations on their new contract; from October 2000, this would add 6 per cent. to their paybill in the first 12 months.

General dental practitioners will also benefit from a £20 million package to recognise experience and quality and to reward past and present commitment to NHS dentistry. This will give a big boost to the Government's dental strategy and to improve access to NHS dentistry.

The contribution of all staff will be crucial if we are to maintain and improve the quality of patient care and to modernise the NHS. These pay awards, which build on the platform set by last year's increases, reflect a proper balance between the pay needed to recruit, retain and motivate staff and the needs of modern service delivery and patient care.

Care Home Standards

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the proportion of existing residential capacity that will be lost if his Draft Required Standards for Residential and Nursing Care are implemented. [102994]

Mr. Hutton: Occupancy rates for care homes and nursing currently runs nationally at about 85 per cent., and locally, in some regions such as Lancashire, at about 50 per cent.

The number of beds which would need to be de-commissioned nationally in order to comply with the Centre for Policy on Ageing's proposed standards was estimated for the Department of Health by Laing and Buisson as approximately 4.2 per cent. for residential care homes and 8.1 per cent. for nursing homes. This information was published in September last year.

Further information on the possible impact of some of the proposed standards is set out in the annexes to the consultation document, "Fit for the Future?"

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding the methodology used by his Department in making their regulatory impact assessment in respect of the Draft Required Standards for Residential and Nursing Homes; and if he will make a statement. [102993]

Mr. Hutton: We have not received any comments specifically directed at methodology used in the regulatory impact assessment in the consultation document, "Fit for the Future?". However, we have yet to evaluate all the comments which are being received on "Fit for the Future?". We will carefully consider all the comments we receive.

Intensive Care Beds

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the lowest number of intensive care beds available in each region of England and Wales on each day between 20 December and 10 January. [104649]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 13 January 2000]: Information collected by the Department is unvalidated management information gathered over a period of hours primarily to give an indication of bed availability. However, the position may change constantly and it is not possible to establish whether the figures obtained reflect the lowest, maximum or average occupancy for that day. Even when no beds are reported as available, National Health Service trusts may invoke contingency arrangements to give patients the care they need. For this reason it is not possible to provide the information requested. The unvalidated management information has been placed in the Library.

NHS Direct

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his target waiting time for calls to NHS Direct to be answered; what measures are in place to monitor waiting times; and what waiting times were being achieved at the latest date for which figures are available. [104777]

Ms Stuart: NHS Direct does not have an explicit target waiting time for all callers by which time their call will be answered.

In November, the latest information available, 81 per cent. of calls were answered within 15 seconds, and calls were answered on average within 25 seconds.

Epidemics

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state the current definition used by his Department of an epidemic. [104775]

Yvette Cooper: The epidemiologists definition of an epidemic is an increase in the frequency of occurrence of a disease in a population above its baseline level for a specified period of time. The term epidemic can be used when describing the pattern of either infectious or chronic diseases in the population.

Administrative definitions can be set for different diseases in which an arbitrary threshold is selected above which the term "epidemic" is applied. In the case of influenza, the Department introduced in 1996 an administrative definition of an "epidemic" for a rate of consultation (with a sample of general practices) of 400 per 100,000 population in a week.

Such influenza activity in England is thus monitored through the Royal College of General Practitioners (RCGP) sentinel surveillance scheme. This records the number of first visits to a general practitioner with influenza-illness. Other respiratory illnesses prevalent at this time of year are recorded separately.

This system does not and cannot measure the real incidence of influenza since it is restricted to those people who visit their general practitioner. This year a major campaign was run to encourage people to choose their own remedy, to consult a pharmacist and to use NHS Direct, as alternative sources of advice.

The severity of the disease itself can also vary from year to year. This year the elderly have been particularly affected by the complications of influenza. The level of cases of acute bronchitis, a serious complication of influenza, is the highest the RCGP surveillance system has seen for 15 years. In describing epidemics some other countries formally include measures of severity in the definition of an epidemic. For example, the United States declares an epidemic when the proportion of deaths due to pneumonia and influenza passes a certain threshold.

The Department has not introduced administrative definitions of an epidemic for diseases other than influenza.

Health Services (Lancashire)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much money is spent per head of population on health services in (a) South Lancashire and (b) North Lancashire Health Authority area; [105115]

(2) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of medical services at Chorley and South Ribble Hospital; [105117]

(3) what assessment he has made of the provision of satellite renal services at Chorley and South Ribble Hospital; [105116]

(4) if he will make a statement on the financial situation of the South Lancashire Health Authority; [105114]

(5) what plans he has to introduce new and enhanced existing medical services at Chorley and South Ribble Hospital; [105170]

(6) if he will end the practice of postcode medicine in Lancashire by merging the relevant health authorities. [105113]

Ms Stuart: South Lancashire and North West Lancashire health authorities commissioned Professor Sir Leslie Turnberg to review the provision of medical services in Chorley, South Ribble and Preston and to recommend the best configuration of services to meet the needs of local residents. The Boards of Chorley and South Ribble National Health Service Trust and Preston Acute Hospitals NHS Trust endorsed the recommendations of that review team.

The NHS Executive is currently undertaking organisational development work designed to improve health and health services in the north west. Any proposals for organisational reconfigurations of health authorities arising from these discussions will be subject to formal public consultation.

Figures for expenditure per head of population in South Lancashire and North West Lancashire, are given in the table.

South Lancashire Health Authority planned for an income and expenditure deficit of £1.1 million for 1999–2000—the forecast outturn at Q3 indicates that this plan will be achieved. The authority is planning to return to a recurrently balanced financial position in the short term.

The health authority has commissioned an independent review of the health economy within South Lancashire and all relevant parties, the health authority, primary care groups and NHS Trusts are supporting this review. It is intended that the review will assist the health economy in South Lancashire to identify solutions to the current financial position.

The four health authorities serving Lancashire and South Cumbria have agreed a strategy to improve the provision of renal services in the area. An additional 15 dialysis stations, due to open at the Royal Preston Hospital in the spring, will benefit Chorley and South Ribble residents. The next stage of the process will involve investment in satellite units and the possibility of a unit at Chorley has been recognised in the strategy.

The range of quality of medical services provided by Chorley and South Ribble District General Hospital is kept under continuous review by commissioning health authorities.

Expenditure on health services by head of population in the North West Region (by health authority)

1998–99	£
North West Lancashire Health Authority	649.68
South Lancashire Health Authority	606.42
North West Region	649.50

Notes:
1. The majority of drugs expenditure has been accounted for by the Prescription Pricing Authority rather than individual health authorities. Also the majority of General Dental Services expenditure is not available by health authority.
2. Figures are taken from health authority annual accounts which are prepared on a resource basis and therefore differ from cash allocations in each year.

Source:
Health authority accounts for 1998–99.
Mid-year resident population estimates for 1998.

Care in the Community

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to require organisations which provide care in the community to ensure that residents in receipt of the mobility component of disability living allowance retain that money or have it expended solely on their behalf. [104818]

Mr. Hutton: The Mobility Component of Disability Living Allowance may not be taken into account for charging purposes. Section 73(14) of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992 requires these payments, or the right to receive them, be disregarded in any charging schemes which have regard to a person's means.

Charities

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with ministers on proposals to amend charity law to enable charities in receipt of Section 64 grants to improve accountability of their use of public funds; and if he will make a statement. [104820]

Mr. Hutton: None. Government funding for voluntary organisations, including aspects of accountability, is however to be covered in a Code of Practice to underpin the "Compact on Relations between Government and the Voluntary and Community Sector in England". The Department is involved with the voluntary sector in the development of the Code and will encourage the application of its principles at local level.

Cancer (Death Rates)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland on 1 December for answer on 6 December relating to death rates from cancer (ref. 101422). [104772]

Yvette Cooper: I replied to my hon. Friend on 11 January, Official Report, column 140W.

University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will appoint board members for the university hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust. [104823]

Mr. Denham: Following the recent appointment of Philip Hammersley CBE as chair of the University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust, the non-executive directors will be appointed shortly.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GP referrals were there of people with mental health problems in each of the last 10 years. [105120]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not keep central records of the diagnosis given by General Medical Practitioners to their patients. However, records have been kept since 1995–96 of the number of written referrals to specialised NHS mental health services. These show:

GP written referrals to mental health specialities 1995–96 to 1999–2000

Year	Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4	Total
1995–96	54,014	53,527	51,908	59,627	219,076
1996–97	57,551	54,843	59,227	60,392	232,013
1997–98	61,771	58,307	59,549	62,183	241,810
1998–99	56,819	55,901	57,570	61,463	231,753
1999–2000	56,966	55,667	—	—	—

Source:
QM08 quarterly return from NHS trusts

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the sickness rates of staff employed in NHS mental health services for each of the last 10 years. [105122]

Mr. Denham: According to a survey conducted by the Department in 1998–99 the average sickness absence rate for staff directly employed by National Health Service trusts was 4.6 per cent. This is equivalent to approximately eight million out of the 176 million days worked each year by National Health Service staff. Details of the survey can be found in Health Service Circular 1999/229, "Managing Violence, Accidents and Sickness Absence in the NHS", copies of which are available in the Library. Similar information for earlier years, and information about staff working in mental health services, is not collected centrally, but may be held locally by individual National Health Service employers. We have agreed improvement targets for health authorities and NHS trusts to > "achieve year on year improvement in sickness absence rates"

of 20 per cent. by 2001 and 30 per cent. by 2003.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the staff-to-patient ratio in NHS mental health services for each of the past 10 years; [105119]

(2) what was the ratio of National Health Service employees working with people with mental health problems per 100,000 of the population, in each of the past 10 years. [105084]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average annual caseload for (a) mental health social workers, (b) mental health occupational therapists, (c) psychiatric nurses and (d) psychologists for each of the last 10 years. [105123]

Mr. Hutton: The information in the form requested is not collected centrally.

Information about the number of patient contacts with the Occupational Therapy Services, Community Psychiatric Nursing Services and Clinical Psychology Services is collected annually and published by the Department. The latest information is contained in the following summaries which are available in the Library; "Occupational Therapy Services, Summary Information for 1998–99, England", "Patient Care in the Community, Community Psychiatric Nursing, Summary Information for 1998–99, England" and "Clinical Psychology Services, Summary Information for 1998–99, England". Information about patient contacts made by mental health social workers is not collected centrally.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the additional money allocated for the NHS in the Comprehensive Spending Review has been earmarked for NHS mental health services. [105118]

Mr. Hutton: "Modernising Mental Health Services" set out our vision for safe, sound and supportive mental health services for working age adults. In launching the strategy we announced additional funding over the 3-year Comprehensive Spending Review period of £700 million for health and social services.

Over the 3-year Comprehensive Spending Review period (1999–2000 to 2001–02) at least £500 million will be ear-marked for mental health services from within the modernisation funds for health and social services. Of this over £300 million will come from the National Health Service modernisation fund.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of staff working in NHS mental health services in each of the last 10 years. [105121]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not held centrally. The Workforce Action Team charged with taking forward the Mental Health National Service Framework workforce, planning, education and training underpinning programme, is seeking to map the mental health workforce.

Eye Tests (Disabled People)

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide free eye tests and prescriptions for the disabled. [105162]

Mr. Hutton: The extensive exemption and remission arrangements mean that many disabled people in England are entitled to free prescriptions and sight tests. Similar arrangements exist elsewhere in the United Kingdom but are now a matter for the devolved Administrations.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Supervision of Solicitors

Dr. Cable: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, what plans the Lord Chancellor has to strengthen the supervision of solicitors with particular regard to (a) investigation of solicitor negligence and (b) more stringent penalties to be imposed by the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors in cases of poor service. [104630]

Jane Kennedy: Allegations of negligence are reviewed by the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors, which, as it cannot give legal advice, has set up a panel of independent solicitors to whom such allegations may be referred. The panel solicitors will advise the complainant on whether a solicitor has been negligent and if so what action can by pursued. It is thereafter a decision for the complainant how to pursue the matter. However, the position on how complaints about negligence are handled is kept under review.

The Office for the Supervision of Solicitors can currently award compensation of £1,000 for inadequate professional service. However, the Lord Chancellor has exercised his powers to increase the limit to £5,000. This is to take effect from 31 March 2000.

Asset Sales

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, if he will list the items in the National Assets Register sold by his Department, its agencies and associated public bodies since 11 February 1999, stating in each case the amount of money realised; if he will estimate the total amount raised from such sales to date; and if he will make a statement. [104473]

Jane Kennedy: Details of the items in the asset registers of the Lord Chancellor's Department, its agencies and associated public bodies, which have been sold since 11 February 1999, along with the amount of money realised from such sales to date are listed in the table. For further details and an estimate of asset sales for 1999–2000, I refer the hon. Member to a written answer that I gave to the hon. and learned Member for Harborough (Mr. Garnier) on 2 November 1999, Official Report, columns 156–57W.

Proceeds from asset sales (11 February 1999 to date)

Description	£
Land and Buildings	301,019
Motor Vehicles	24,550
Computer Equipment	2,950
Other Equipment	1,467
Total	329,986

Staff Bonuses

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, how much his Department, its agencies and associated public bodies spent in total on extra bonuses above usual payments for staff working over the New Year period; what were the (a) maximum and (b) minimum bonuses paid; how many people received the (i) maximum and (ii) minimum payments; and if he will make a statement. [104474]

Jane Kennedy: Details are given in the table. Bonuses were payable to staff required over the New Year period for testing and reporting on IT, security or facilities systems.

	How much was spent[1] (£)	The maximum bonus paid (£)	Number of staff claiming the maximum	The minimum bonus paid (£)	Number of staff claiming the minimum
Lord Chancellor's Department[2]	36,250[3]	600	10	50	98
Northern Ireland Court Service	26,150[4]	550	3	75	15
Land Registry	32,110[5]	365	1	25	47
Public Record Office	4,700	250	8	150	11

[1] The amounts given do not include ERNIC (employment related National Insurance Contributions)
[2] Including LCD Headquarters and Associated Offices, the Court Service and the Public Trust Office.
[3] Based on bonus claims received up to and including 12 January 2000.
[4] Based on bonus claims received up to and including 13 January 2000.
[5] Based on bonus claims received up to and including 13 January 2000.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Passport Office

17. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the extra cost incurred by the Passport Office as a result of the backlog of applications for passports. [103977]

Mrs. Roche: We estimate the costs at £12.6 million.

Police Numbers

18. Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to increase the total number of police officers in England and Wales over the next three years. [103979]

Mr. Straw: Under the Police and Magistrates' Courts Act 1994, chief officers of police determine staffing requirements within the overall resources available to them.

Over this and the next two years, we have increased the resources available from central Government by £1.24 billion. In addition, the Crime Fighting Fund will be used to recruit 5,000 new police officers over and above the number which forces would otherwise have recruited over the next three years commencing in April 2000. £35 million will be allocated in the first year of the fund to kick start the scheme. Additional money will be provided in years two and three.

Victims of Crime

19. Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with organisations representing the victims of crime about improving information to victims about appeals. [103980]

Mr. Boateng: Home Office Ministers and officials have frequent contact, both formal and informal, with Victim Support and other organisations representing victims of crime, including the criminal justice agencies and services. There have been no formal discussions in recent months about information to victims about appeals.

Electoral Reform

20. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of consultations on the Jenkins Commission's proposals for reform of the voting system. [103981]

Mr. Straw: We have said that we wish to see a debate in the country about the merits of the Jenkins proposals. That is continuing. The final decision as to whether to adopt the Jenkins proposals will be taken by the people of this country in a referendum.

Winston Silcott

21. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the payment of compensation to Winston Silcott. [103982]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, was informed by the Metropolitan Police Solicitor of the reasons for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis seeking to settle the civil action for malicious prosecution brought against the Commissioner by Mr. Silcott. The settlement was made without an admission of guilt and my right hon. Friend does not intend to call for a report from the Commissioner.

Police Funding (Lancashire)

22. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to which funds the Chief Constable of Lancashire can apply to bid for additional funding for more police officers for 2000–01. [103983]

Mr. Straw: As I informed the House on 2 December 1999, Official Report, columns 194–97W, Chief Constables and police authorities in England and Wales were invited on 2 December to submit bids by 10 January for a share of the Crime Fighting Fund. I placed a copy of the bidding guidelines in the Library of the House.

The fund will be used to recruit 5,000 police officers over and above the number forces would otherwise have recruited over the next three years commencing in April 2000. £35 million will be allocated in the first year of the fund to kick start the scheme. Additional money will be provided in years two and three.

Elections (New Technology)

23. Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to enable new technology to be used in national and local elections. [103984]

29. Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to promote the use of modern technology in electoral procedures. [103990]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Representation of the People Bill, which has just completed its Committee stage, includes provisions to allow local authorities to pilot innovative electoral procedures, such as electronic voting and electronic counting.

Immigration

24. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the penalties available to ensure road hauliers do not bring illegal immigrants into the United Kingdom. [103985]

Mrs. Roche: Under Section 25 of the Immigration Act 1971, it is a criminal offence to facilitate the entry to the United Kingdom of an illegal entrant, or asylum claimant. The penalty, on summary conviction, is a fine of not more than £5,000 or imprisonment for not more than six months, or both; conviction on indictment is punishable by a fine or imprisonment for not more than seven years, or both. That period is increased under Section 29 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 to ten years.

Section 32–37 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 make provision for a civil penalty to be imposed for the carriage of a clandestine entrant to the United Kingdom. Subject to the laying of enabling regulations before Parliament in the near future, it is envisaged that the penalty will be the sum of £2,000 for each clandestine entrant.

CCTV

25. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications he has received for portable CCTV units in the past year; what proposals he has to provide resources for portable systems of CCTV; and if he will make a statement. [103986]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Forty five applications under the first round of the Crime Reduction Programme Closed Circuit Television Initiative were solely for portable or mobile CCTV schemes, while many of the remaining 705 applications contained a mobile element.

Today's announcement of CCTV awards includes four bids for mobile systems, totalling £256,020. This is on top of £32,056 awarded last month to a mobile scheme. 18 proposals for mobile schemes to a potential value of £2.7 million have been deferred for further consideration.

Further bids for mobile CCTV systems can be submitted under the next phase of funding, details of which will be announced shortly.

Crime Reduction Initiative

26. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many homes will be covered by his Department's Crime Reduction Programme Initiative to reduce burglaries. [103987]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Reducing Burglary Initiative is expected to cover a total of approximately two million households.

In addition, the initiative to provide security improvements for the homes of pensioners on low incomes in areas with high burglary rates, which we announced in September, is expected to provide enhanced security in up to 150,000 homes.

34. Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many low-income pensioner households will receive help from the Crime Reduction Programme in respect of burglary in the current financial year. [103995]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The £11 million initiative to provide security improvements for the homes of pensioners on low incomes in areas with high burglary rates, which we announced in September, will not start until June 2000 but is expected to provide enhanced security for up to 150,000 homes over two years.

About 223,000 households are currently covered by 63 anti-burglary projects under the £50 million Reducing Burglary Initiative (which will eventually cover some two million households). However, details of the income or age group of the households involved are not available centrally.

Asylum Seekers

27. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers entered the United Kingdom through Heathrow Airport in 1999, 1998, 1997 and 1996. [103988]

Mrs. Roche: A total of 10,785 asylum applications were made at the four Heathrow Terminals in the period January to November 1999. This compares with 10,665 in 1998, 8,625 in 1997 and 8,520 in 1996.

28. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to assist those granted asylum in the United Kingdom to integrate into British society. [103989]

Mrs. Roche: A consultation paper was issued on 2 November 1999 which set out our proposals for the integration of refugees and those granted exceptional leave to remain based on partnership with everyone involved—the voluntary sector, local authorities and social services. Over 30 responses have been received and we will be considering the way forward in the light of those responses.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of asylum seekers who will be sent to locations in Scotland in 2000 and 2001. [103971]

Mrs. Roche: It is too soon to say how many asylum seekers might be dispersed to Scotland. The number will depend on the extent to which accommodation can be provided in Scotland, and the number of asylum seekers seeking a full support package. We are in discussion with the Scottish Executive and a Scottish Consortium representing local authority interests in Scotland about these matters.

Crime Figures

30. Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the most recent crime figures for Kent. [103991]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The latest figures, covering the 12 months to September 1999, will be published tomorrow.

31. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the performance of Cheshire Police in reducing crime. [103992]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Cheshire Police achieved a reduction in recorded crime of 26 per cent. over the period 1993–94 to 1998–99. The ratio of crimes to population in Cheshire also compares well with other forces. In partnership with local authorities and other agencies, the police are continuing that good work.

32. Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the latest crime figures for Cheshire. [103993]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The latest figures, covering the 12 months to September 1999, will be published tomorrow.

Witness Protection

33. Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures is he taking to ensure that witnesses in magistrates courts are adequately protected. [103994]

Mr. Charles Clarke: In February 1999, we asked Victim Support to replicate in magistrates courts the excellent support service for victims and witnesses they were already providing, with Home Office funding, at all Crown Court centres. The annual Home Office grant to Victim Support is being increased incrementally by 50 per cent. to £19 million to enable them to establish witness support services in all magistrates courts by April 2002.

Trial by Jury

35. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received on his proposals to restrict the right to elect trial by jury; and if he will make a statement. [103996]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There were 133 responses to the consultation paper, "Determining mode of trial in either-way cases". The Home Office has also received about 210 letters on this issue.

WPC Yvonne Fletcher

36. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been reported to him by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis in the case of WPC Yvonne Fletcher since the arrival of the UK's ambassador in Tripoli. [103997]

Mr. Straw: None as yet, although the Metropolitan police intend to pursue their investigation into WPC Fletcher's murder vigorously. Our Ambassador in Tripoli has now taken up his post and this should help in that process. The Metropolitan police continue to expect full co-operation from the Libyan authorities.

Police Funding

37. Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of police forces which have had a real-terms fall in funding in the current financial year after the cost of police pensions is taken into account. [103998]

Mr. Straw: Allocations of Government funding to police authorities are made on the basis of a needs-based formula, which takes into account projected pensions expenditure. As with most formulae, variations can occur from year to year, with some authorities doing relatively better than others.

Police authority "budget requirements" will increase by 3.1 per cent. in this financial year. On the basis of estimates provided by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy, the police service nationally could have an increase in net expenditure in this financial year of 5.9 per cent. taking account among other things of the use of reserves. It is for individual authorities to determine how best to manage their budgets. Prudent management of medical retirements can help police authorities to reduce pensions' costs and deploy more resources to front-line policing.

Polling Stations (Access)

38. Mr. Darvill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to improve access for the disabled to polling stations. [103999]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Guidance on national minimum access standards for disabled voters was issued in June 1999; new guidance on disabled access is being developed; grants are available for temporary ramps and polling screens; and, the Representation of the People Bill provides for the piloting of alternative voting arrangements at local elections to improve access to voting.

Victim Support

39. Mr. Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what level of financial support from central Government have been made to Victim Support in each of the last five financial years. [104000]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The annual Home Office grant to Victim Support in the last five years is as follows:

£ million

Financial year	Grant
1995–96	10.817
1996–97	11.682
1997–98	12.682
1998–99	12.682
1999–2000	17.300

The grant is set to rise to £18.3 million in 2000–01 and to £19 million in 2001–02.

Weekend Voting

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to establish pilot projects for voting at the weekend. [103973]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Representation of the People Bill, which has just completed its Committee stage, includes provisions to allow local authorities to pilot innovative electoral procedures, such as voting at the weekend.

Public Safety Radio Communications Service

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list on a force by force basis the estimated costs of implementing PSRCP [104376]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Most of the costs of implementing the Public Safety Radio Communications Service (PSRCS) are contained within annual charges for the core service. These will be met by central funding by means of deduction from total police grant provision and will be reduced by the £50 million subsidy I announced last September.

Individual forces will elect to take a range of services additional to the core service to meet their own requirements. From figures provided by forces we estimate that the cost of these non-core services will be around £30 million per annum for the police service nationally. The table provides the currently available estimates for the cost of non-core services to individual forces.

Forces will also need to purchase radio terminals, control room equipment and integration services. No force-specific estimates are available, but the Police Information Technology Organisation estimates that the total cost of these additional items for forces in England and Wales will be around £300 million in net present cost terms. This includes the cost of initial purchase and subsequent replacement over the life of the project but excludes the cost of the dedicated teams which each force will need to set up to manage implementation of the PSRCS. These costs need to be set against the expenditure which forces already incur in maintaining their existing radiocommunication systems.

Estimate of force annual PSRCS menu service charge at 1999–2000 prices

Force	Estimated annual cost of menu services £000
Avon and Somerset Constabulary	84
Bedfordshire Police	105
Cambridgeshire Constabulary	210
Cheshire Constabulary	384
City of London Police	132
Cleveland Constabulary	257
Cumbria Constabulary	242
Derbyshire Constabulary	297
Devon and Cornwall Constabulary	916
Dorset Police	160
Durham Constabulary	671
Dyfed-Powys Police	23
Essex Police	1,357
Gloucestershire Constabulary	233
Greater Manchester Police (GMP)	599
Gwent Constabulary	134
Hampshire Constabulary	1,442
Hertfordshire Constabulary	412
Humberside Police	216
Kent County Constabulary	1,460
Lancashire Constabulary	755
Leicestershire Constabulary	346
Lincolnshire Police	206
Merseyside Police	329
Metropolitan Police Service	3,188
Norfolk Constabulary	248
North Wales Police	238
North Yorkshire Police	886
Northamptonshire Police	1,281
Northumbria Police	635
Nottinghamshire Constabulary	178
South Wales Constabulary	684
South Yorkshire Police	256
Staffordshire Police	801
Suffolk Constabulary	1,450
Surrey Police	334
Sussex Police	1,180
Thames Valley Police	1,303
Warwickshire Constabulary	650
West Mercia Constabulary	268
West Midlands Police	2,670
West Yorkshire Police	2,297
Wiltshire Constabulary	135
Total for England and Wales	29,655

Estimate of force annual PSRCS menu service charge at 1999–2000 prices

Police

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the real terms change in police budgets in each English county and Metropolitan area for each year from 1990–91 to 2001–02; if he will provide estimates on the same basis excluding moneys needed to fund annual increases in police pensions; and if he will make a statement. [105097]

Mr. Boateng: The information available, which has been compiled from the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy's Police Statistics, is set out in the tables. Police authority budgets for 2001–02 have not been set. Information on net police pensions expenditure for 1990–91 to 1992–93 is not readily available.

Table 1: Police force net expenditure, and percentage change in real terms, 1990–91 to 1999–2000

	1990–91		1991–92		1992–93		1993–94		1994–95
	£000	(+/-%)	£000	(+/-%)	£000	(+/-%)	£000	(+/-%)	£000	(+/-%)
Avon and Somerset	107,282	2.9	116,004	1.8	127,928	6.7	134,323	2.3	141,283	3.7
Bedfordshire	36,053	3.1	40,027	4.5	45,036	8.9	48,666	5.3	51,514	4.4
Cambridgeshire	43,173	3.1	48,001	4.7	51,126	3.1	56,974	8.6	58,650	1.5
Cheshire	63,620	–0.2	68,496	1.4	74,058	4.7	80,026	5.3	82,804	2.0
City of London	38,288	–0.3	41,919	3.1	45,151	4.3	51,111	10.3	52,365	1.0
Cleveland	52,889	3.2	58,690	4.5	62,269	2.7	66,289	3.7	69,007	2.6
Cumbria	41,312	5.1	46,548	6.1	50,736	5.5	51,699	–0.7	54,281	3.5
Derbyshire	62,086	–3.3	66,686	1.1	76,554	11.1	78,976	0.5	84,362	5.3
Devon and Cornwall	107,378	4.8	119,619	4.9	129,634	4.9	137,578	3.4	140,830	0.9
Dorset	50,150	6.6	54,239	1.8	57,639	2.9	59,345	0.3	66,285	10.1
Durham	45,673	2.2	49,517	2.1	53,853	5.3	57,825	4.6	59,237	1.0
Dyfed-Powys	32,504	0.6	36,366	5.3	40,189	7.0	42,315	2.6	45,595	6.2
Essex	106,902	7.3	119,118	4.9	129,559	5.3	137,043	3.0	n/a	n/a
Gloucestershire	41,526	5.1	46,370	5.1	49,361	3.0	51,549	1.7	55,180	5.5
Greater Manchester	236,520	1.6	256,562	2.1	281,761	6.3	304,622	5.3	320,931	3.9
Gwent	34,595	5.4	38,270	4.2	40,642	2.8	42,609	2.1	44,148	2.2
Hampshire	114,172	4.3	127,841	5.4	142,133	7.6	146,790	0.6	155,257	4.3
Hertfordshire	59,681	5.4	63,633	0.4	70,029	6.5	74,029	3.0	84,435	12.5
Humberside	71,151	2.5	78,591	4.0	86,795	6.9	90,194	1.2	92,365	1.0
Kent	107,675	2.1	128,118	12.0	136,307	3.0	142,749	2.0	153,757	6.2
Lancashire	114,195	5.4	127,076	4 8	132,092	0.6	142,518	5.1	145,181	0.4
Leicestershire	63,597	1.9	70,562	4.5	75,262	3.2	78,201	1.2	81,166	2.3
Lincolnshire	43,025	5.2	48,704	6.6	53,039	5.4	55,698	2.3	n/a	n/a
Merseyside	165,167	2.1	182,680	4.1	193,410	2.5	207,713	4.6	215,461	2.3
Metropolitan Police	1,273,265	9.6	1,420,575	5.1	1,513,654	3.1	1,552,791	–0.1	1,588,001	0.8
Norfolk	49,106	5.2	56,134	7.6	60,658	4.6	64,086	2.9	68,546	5.5
Northamptonshire	41,997	2.5	47,081	5.6	52,575	8.1	55,136	2.2	60,306	7.8

Table 1: Police force net expenditure, and percentage change in real terms, 1990–91 to 1999–2000

	1990–91		1991–92		1992–93		1993–94		1994–95
	£000	(+/-%)	£000	(+/-%)	£000	(+/-%)	£000	(+/-%)	£000	(+/-%)
Northumbria	124,873	3.0	139,999	5.6	145,882	0.9	160,045	6.9	175,837	8.3
North Wales	45,838	2.4	51,608	6.0	57,140	7.2	59,818	2.0	62,647	3.3
North Yorkshire	48,995	2.5	53,161	2.2	60,123	9.5	63,477	2.8	63,772	-1.0
Nottinghamshire	79,305	5.8	85,209	1.2	92,856	5.5	98,755	3.6	106,195	6.0
South Wales	108,737	2.5	122,294	5.9	129,897	2.8	134,019	0.5	133,688	-1.7
South Yorkshire	101,200	3.9	108,676	1.1	122,395	9.0	129,441	3.0	137,623	4.8
Staffordshire	76,903	6.5	84,322	3.2	90,497	3.9	96,896	4.3	100,265	2.0
Suffolk	44,755	4.0	49,246	3.6	52,052	2.3	55,460	3.8	56,828	1.0
Surrey	59,126	3.1	64,426	2.6	71,426	7.3	75,322	2.7	84,371	10.4
Sussex	94,916	2.5	108,489	7.6	117,529	4.9	122,444	1.5	130,382	5.0
Thames Valley	146,950	12.5	156,072	0.0	165,443	2.6	179,632	5.8	192,080	5.4
Warwickshire	37,963	9.9	41,479	2.9	44,128	3.0	47,637	5.2	50,000	3.5
West Mercia	70,480	3.7	79,836	6.7	84,508	2.5	91,372	5.3	98,108	5.9
West Midlands	231,478	2.7	254,477	3.5	288,798	9.9	297,807	0.5	313,518	3.8
West Yorkshire	190,733	4.8	206,169	1.8	215,727	1.3	226,900	2.5	236,100	2.6
Wiltshire	41,547	6.9	46,907	6.3	51,912	7.1	54,252	-1.8	59,155	7.5

	1995–96		1996–97		1997–98		1998–99		1999–2000
	£000	(+/-%)	£000	(+/-%)	£000	(+/-%)	£000	(+/-%)	£000	(+/-%)
Avon and Somerset	141,091	-2.9	152,087	4.4	152,673	-2.4	162,726	3.2	174,424	4.8
Bedfordshire	54,533	2.9	56,627	0.6	58,570	0.6	61,778	2.1	64,027	1.4
Cambridgeshire	61,003	1.1	65,024	3.3	68,681	2.7	73,432	3.5	75,363	0.4
Cheshire	87,315	2.5	94,177	4.5	104,005	7.4	107,093	-0.3	111,094	1.5
City of London	56,042	4.0	57,317	-0.9	57,893	-1.8	60,350	0.9	58,719	-4.8
Cleveland	68,558	-3.4	73,108	3.3	75,426	0.3	81,295	4.4	85,397	2.7
Cumbria	53,444	-4.3	56,856	3.1	61,709	5.6	62,532	-1.9	64,693	1.2
Derbyshire	86,015	-0.9	90,420	1.8	95,641	2.9	100,064	1.3	107,035	4.6
Devon and Cornwall	144,513	-0.3	150,392	0.8	155,435	0.5	166,330	3.6	173,649	2.1
Dorset	63,276	-7.2	67,831	3.9	69,727	0.0	73,117	1.5	77,749	4.0
Durham	62,432	2.4	68,035	5.6	75,166	7.5	74,673	-3.8	80,712	5.7
Dyfed-Powys	46,197	-1.5	47,869	0.4	50,952	3.5	50,040	-4.9	56,143	9.7
Essex	n/a	n/a	151,412	n/a	157,487	1.2	156,822	-3.6	171,590	7.0
Gloucestershire	53,977	-4.9	58,420	4.9	58,633	-2.4	62,862	3.8	65,933	2.6
Greater Manchester	331,304	0.3	341,170	-0.2	353,319	0.7	354,171	-2.9	387,256	6.9
Gwent	44,436	-2.2	57,742	25.9	64,598	8.8	67,655	1.4	71,414	3.2
Hampshire	163,193	2.2	172,845	2.6	180,791	1.7	186,661	0.0	196,955	3.2
Hertfordshire	87,825	1.1	88,863	-2.0	93,011	1.8	95,068	-1.0	102,361	5.3
Humberside	96,418	1.5	99,719	0.2	106,220	3.6	112,571	2.6	114,306	-0.7
Kent	155,223	-1.9	161,625	0.9	174,211	4.8	175,577	-2.4	186,225	3.7
Lancashire	152,225	1.9	161,865	3.0	169,275	1.7	177,310	1.4	182,679	0.8
Leicestershire	86,855	4.0	92,853	3.6	98,789	3.5	102,790	0.8	106,279	1.1
Lincolnshire	n/a	n/a	61,508	n/a	66,184	4.7	66,664	-2.5	69,970	2.6
Merseyside	220,007	-0.8	221,172	-2.6	224,327	-1.3	240,267	3.7	249,522	1.6
Metropolitan Police	1,639,392	0.3	1,683,181	-0.5	1,676,617	-3.1	1,716,425	-0.9	1,840,245	4.9
Norfolk	70,378	-0.2	75,547	4.0	80,222	3.3	80,543	-2.8	86,870	5.5
Northamptonshire	57,075	-8.0	59,252	0.6	64,605	6.1	67,057	0.5	70,432	2.7
Northumbria	178,820	-1.2	186,410	1.0	195,092	1.8	205,270	1.9	213,010	1.5
North Wales	65,933	2.3	68,266	0.3	70,920	1.0	72,481	-1.0	80,505	8.6
North Yorkshire	63,096	-3.8	67,042	2.9	71,840	4.2	75,344	1.6	78,085	1.4
Nottinghamshire	106,334	-2.7	113,591	3.5	120,556	3.2	127,018	2.0	130,173	0.2
South Wales	144,452	5.0	147,458	-1.1	159,411	5.1	160,938	-2.2	169,968	3.3
South Yorkshire	144,354	1.9	150,949	1.3	166,027	7.0	167,159	-2.5	173,933	1.8
Staffordshire	98,661	-4.4	107,832	5.9	110,264	-0.5	116,231	2.1	127,472	7.3
Suffolk	55,814	-4.5	60,963	5.8	63,676	1.6	66,096	0.5	70,538	4.4
Surrey	83,000	-4.4	85,345	-0.4	90,976	3.7	91,425	-2.7	100,375	7.4
Sussex	137,785	2.7	150,626	5.9	157,631	1.8	161,847	-0.6	165,804	0.2
Thames Valley	194,465	-1.6	201,397	0.3	210,333	1.6	209,675	-3.5	232,729	8.6
Warwickshire	47,760	-7.2	47,686	-3.3	51,003	4.0	52,015	-1.2	56,157	5.6
West Mercia	95,886	-5.0	102,078	3.1	107,788	2.7	113,755	2.2	116,490	0.2
West Midlands	331,075	2.6	337,992	-1.1	360,129	3.6	368,608	-0.9	380,971	1.1
West Yorkshire	238,801	-1.7	265,233	7.6	281,745	3.3	277,994	-4.4	288,865	1.6
Wiltshire	54,448	-10.5	59,993	6.7	58,535	-5.1	68,811	13.8	69,715	-0.9

Notes:

1990–91 to 1998–99—CIPFA Police Statistics Actuals

1999–2000—CIPFA Police Statistics Estimates

Real terms increases based on Treasury GDP Deflators published on 23 December 1999

Table 2: Police force net expenditure 1993–94 to 1999–2000; percentage increase in real terms excluding pensions expenditure

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000
Avon and Somerset	-1.4	3.7	-3.6	2.1	-4.0	5.5	2.1
Bedfordshire	5.6	1.6	2.1	-0.1	-1.6	0.9	0.2
Cambridgeshire	8.1	0.1	0.6	1.7	1.7	3.4	-1.8
Cheshire	4.4	2.3	-0.3	8.2	4.0	1.3	-2.0
City of London	9.6	-0.1	0.9	-0.2	-3.0	-5.3	-1.0
Cleveland	0.7	4.4	-3.5	3.0	1.4	1.1	-2.0
Cumbria	-1.2	3.0	-5.4	1.5	5.7	-4.2	0.7
Derbyshire	0.2	5.0	-4.1	1.7	2.0	2.8	1.1
Devon and Cornwall	1.4	1.3	-2.8	0.3	-0.5	3.1	0.9
Dorset	-0.2	9.2	-9.2	3.6	-2.0	1.5	1.5
Durham	1.8	2.8	2.5	4.9	1.6	2.9	5.1
Dyfed-Powys	0.0	6.7	-5.9	3.6	3.9	-5.8	8.4
Essex	3.0	n/a	n/a	0.0	-0.1	-5.2	7.1
Gloucestershire	1.3	5.8	-6.7	1.1	-1.8	3.4	1.6
Greater Manchester	4.1	3.2	-2.2	-1.0	-2.4	-1.9	5.0
Gwent	-1.3	1.5	0.5	23.7	6.5	3.6	1.2
Hampshire	-0.2	3.4	0.1	3.9	1.7	-0.6	1.2
Hertfordshire	2.7	12.3	1.1	-4.1	1.0	-0.6	1.0
Humberside	-1.4	2.1	-0.5	1.1	0.9	3.1	-2.4
Kent	1.9	6.9	-3.5	1.6	2.1	-2.2	1.1
Lancashire	2.3	1.7	0.3	1.9	1.4	3.0	-1.3
Leicestershire	0.6	0.5	3.9	5.3	n/a	n/a	n/a
Lincolnshire	1.4	n/a	n/a	1.6	3.1	-3.1	0.1
Merseyside	3.1	1.6	-2.5	-5.2	-0.3	4.3	-0.2
Metropolitan Police	-0.8	-1.3	1.0	-1.6	-4.5	-2.3	4.1
Norfolk	1.6	3.6	-2.4	2.9	2.9	-1.5	3.6
North Wales	1.0	4.1	-0.1	-1.5	0.0	-1.8	7.6
North Yorkshire	-2.3	1.7	-3.1	2.0	3.8	2.5	-1.1
Northamptonshire	1.6	5.3	-7.5	0.6	2.7	2.2	0.9
Northumbria	6.0	8.4	-5.1	1.1	0.7	2.8	0.1
Nottinghamshire	1.9	5.6	-3.0	3.1	0.0	2.8	-0.7
South Wales	0.9	-4.8	2.5	-2.0	0.5	0.6	3.6
South Yorkshire	2.5	6.0	1.1	1.5	2.8	0.6	-0.6
Staffordshire	3.0	3.8	-4.3	2.5	-4.0	6.6	2.7
Suffolk	0.5	0.4	-7.2	5.5	1.5	0.6	3.1
Surrey	2.9	9.6	-5.1	-1.0	-0.9	0.2	7.1
Sussex	1.0	5.3	-0.6	5.4	1.1	-1.2	-2.6
Thames Valley Police	4.4	5.3	-3.3	0.0	0.0	-2.9	7.1
Warwickshire	2.7	2.3	-9.3	-1.6	-1.7	-0.2	3.1
West Mercia	4.0	3.6	-4.6	1.9	1.8	0.8	-0.2
West Midlands	0.0	2.2	1.7	-0.9	1.3	0.0	-0.2
West Yorkshire	0.3	2.4	-0.8	6.5	1.6	-4.4	-0.5
Wiltshire	1.5	6.9	-10.9	0.2	-2.3	13.3	-2.2
Total	1.2	-1.1	2.1	0.6	-0.5	-0.2	1.8

Notes:
1993–94 to 1998–99—CIPFA Police Statistics Actuals
1999–2000—CIPFA Police Statistics Estimates
Real terms increase based on Treasury GDP Deflators published on 23 December 1999

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in the Avon and Somerset force in each year from 1985 to 1999, giving figures on a quarterly basis from 1995 onwards; and if he will make a statement. [105094]

Mr. Boateng: The information available is set out in the table. Since 1995 police numbers have been collected only twice a year—in March and September—so as to reduce administrative burdens on the police.

Avon and Somerset constabulary police numbers—1985 to 1999

	Number of officers
Year	As at 31 March	As at 30 September
1985	2,982	—
1986	2,958	—
1987	3,009	—
1988	3,013	—
1989	3,014	—
1990	3,094	—
1991	3,092	—
1992	3,081	—
1993	3,068	—
1994	3,033	—
1995	3,000	2,986
1996	2,981	3,004
1997	2,989	2,973
1998	2,976	2,966
1999	2,999	Not yet available

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of police officers (a) per head of population and (b) per notifiable offence, in each year from 1992 to 1999, in each English county and Metropolitan area, listing these in each case in descending order. [105096]

Mr. Boateng: The estimates are given in the following tables. Owing to the structure of police forces, the areas quoted are police force areas rather than counties.

1992

Police force	Officers per 1,000 offences
London (City of)	119
Surrey	32
Merseyside	31
Metropolitan police	30
Wiltshire	29
Hertfordshire	29
Suffolk	27
Cumbria	26
West Mercia	26
North Yorkshire	26
Devon and Cornwall	25
Essex	25
Sussex	25
Dorset	25
Lincolnshire	24
Lancashire	24
Cheshire	24
Staffordshire	22
Warwickshire	22
South Yorkshire	22
Norfolk	21
West Midlands	21
Hampshire	21
Durham	21
Northamptonshire	19
Gloucestershire	19
Derbyshire	19
Kent	19
Thames Valley	19
Leicestershire	19
Cambridgeshire	19
Bedfordshire	18
Greater Manchester	18
Avon and Somerset	18
Cleveland	18
West Yorkshire	17
Humberside	16
Northumbria	15
Nottinghamshire	14

1993

Police force	Officers per 1,000 offences
London (City of)	147
Merseyside	33
Surrey	32
Metropolitan police	31
Wiltshire	30
Hertfordshire	30
Suffolk	29
Cumbria	27
Sussex	27
Essex	26
Dorset	25
West Mercia	25
Devon and Cornwall	24
North Yorkshire	24
Lancashire	24
Cheshire	24
Lincolnshire	23
Warwickshire	22
Norfolk	22
Hampshire	22

1993

Police force	Officers per 1,000 offences
Staffordshire	22
West Midlands	21
Durham	21
Northamptonshire	20
Derbyshire	20
Bedfordshire	20
Kent	19
Greater Manchester	19
South Yorkshire	19
Cambridgeshire	19
Thames Valley	19
Cleveland	19
Gloucestershire	19
Leicestershire	18
Avon and Somerset	17
West Yorkshire	17
Northumbria	17
Nottinghamshire	15
Humberside	14

1994

Police force	Officers per 1,000 offences
London (City of)	169
Surrey	36
Merseyside	34
Wiltshire	33
Metropolitan police	32
Suffolk	31
Hertfordshire	31
Sussex	28
Essex	28
Cumbria	28
Devon and Cornwall	27
Norfolk	26
Cheshire	25
Lincolnshire	25
Lancashire	25
Warwickshire	25
West Mercia	25
Staffordshire	24
Dorset	23
Hampshire	23
West Midlands	22
Bedfordshire	22
Durham	21
North Yorkshire	21
Derbyshire	21
Thames Valley	21
Greater Manchester	21
Cambridgeshire	20
Northamptonshire	20
Kent	20
South Yorkshire	19
Gloucestershire	19
Leicestershire	18
Avon and Somerset	18
Northumbria	18
Cleveland	17
West Yorkshire	17
Nottinghamshire	15
Humberside	15

1995

Police force	Officers per 1,000 offences
London (City of)	155
Surrey	38
Wiltshire	35
Metropolitan police	34

1995

Police force	Officers per 1,000 offences
Suffolk	31
Hertfordshire	30
Merseyside	30
Essex	30
Cumbria	28
Devon and Cornwall	28
Norfolk	27
Sussex	27
Cheshire	26
Warwickshire	26
Lancashire	26
West Mercia	26
Lincolnshire	25
Staffordshire	24
Hampshire	24
Dorset	24
Durham	23
West Midlands	22
Bedfordshire	22
Derbyshire	22
Thames Valley	22
Greater Manchester	21
Gloucestershire	21
North Yorkshire	20
Northamptonshire	20
Kent	20
South Yorkshire	20
Leicestershire	20
Avon and Somerset	20
Cambridgeshire	19
Northumbria	19
Cleveland	18
West Yorkshire	18
Humberside	16
Nottinghamshire	15

1996

Police force	Officers per 1,000 offences
London (City of)	180
Surrey	39
Wiltshire	34
Metropolitan police	32
Hertfordshire	31
Suffolk	31
Merseyside	30
Cheshire	30
Essex	29
Devon and Cornwall	28
Cumbria	28
Durham	27
Sussex	26
Lancashire	26
Dorset	25
Norfolk	25
Warwickshire	25
Hampshire	25
West Mercia	25
Lincolnshire	24
Staffordshire	24
North Yorkshire	23
West Midlands	22
Derbyshire	22
Bedfordshire	22
Northumbria	22
Thames Valley	21
Greater Manchester	21
Gloucestershire	21
Kent	21
Leicestershire	20
South Yorkshire	20

1996

Police force	Officers per 1,000 offences
Northamptonshire	20
West Yorkshire	19
Avon and Somerset	19
Cleveland	18
Cambridgeshire	18
Nottinghamshire	16
Humberside	16

1997

Police force	Officers per 1,000 offences
London (City of)	167
Surrey	42
Hertfordshire	35
Wiltshire	35
Cheshire	34
Metropolitan police	34
Merseyside	34
Suffolk	33
Essex	33
Cumbria	32
Durham	30
Devon and Cornwall	30
Dorset	29
Hampshire	28
Sussex	28
Lincolnshire	28
Lancashire	27
Norfolk	27
North Yorkshire	27
West Mercia	27
Kent	27
Northumbria	26
Warwickshire	26
West Midlands	25
Staffordshire	25
Derbyshire	24
South Yorkshire	24
Leicestershire	24
Gloucestershire	24
Thames Valley	23
Bedfordshire	23
Cleveland	23
Greater Manchester	23
Northamptonshire	22
Cambridgeshire	22
West Yorkshire	21
Avon and Somerset	21
Nottinghamshire	18
Humberside	17

Note:
Based on police officers at 31 March

Year ending March 1999

Police force	Officers per 1,000 offences
London (City of)	129
Surrey	46
Hertfordshire	37
Durham	35
Wiltshire	35
Cheshire	35
Suffolk	35
Metropolitan police	34
Essex	33
Devon and Cornwall	33
Merseyside	32
Cumbria	32
Lancashire	31
Hampshire	30

Year ending March 1999

Police force	Officers per 1,000 offences
West Mercia	29
Dorset	29
Kent	29
Northumbria	29
Lincolnshire	29
North Yorkshire	28
Norfolk	27
Staffordshire	26
West Midlands	26
Sussex	26
South Yorkshire	25
Warwickshire	25
Gloucestershire	25
Leicestershire	24
Derbyshire	24
Bedfordshire	24
Thames Valley	23
Avon and Somerset	23
Cleveland	22
Cambridgeshire	21
Northamptonshire	20
Greater Manchester	20
West Yorkshire	20
Nottinghamshire	18
Humberside	17

Notes:

1. Based on police officers at 31 March 1999
2. New counting rules and offence coverage for recorded crime were introduced on 1 April 1998
3. Figures are based on an estimate of offences which would have been recorded had the old counting rules been in place

1992

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
London (City of)	20,460.9
Metropolitan police	387.8
Merseyside	320.1
Greater Manchester	272.6
Cleveland	267.5
West Midlands	265.5
West Yorkshire	245.7
Northumbria	241.9
Cumbria	239.6
Humberside	235.8
South Yorkshire	232.1
Durham	231.7
Nottinghamshire	229.3
Lancashire	229.2
Surrey	228.3
Gloucestershire	220.9
Avon and Somerset	217.4
Wiltshire	217.3
Sussex	210.6
Staffordshire	209.1
Leicestershire	205.5
Warwickshire	205.1
Bedfordshire	204.1
Lincolnshire	202.3
Kent	201.5
Hertfordshire	201.1
Northamptonshire	[illegible]
Essex	[illegible]
Dorset	195.8
Cheshire	195.4
Devon and Cornwall	193.5
North Yorkshire	192.5
Hampshire	191.5
Thames Valley	190.2
Suffolk	189.2

1992

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
Norfolk	188.4
Cambridgeshire	188.1
West Mercia	188.1
Derbyshire	182.8

1993

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
London (City of)	20,004.8
Metropolitan police	378.2
Merseyside	322.1
Greater Manchester	274.7
West Midlands	264.4
Cleveland	264.1
Northumbria	247.9
Cumbria	244.5
West Yorkshire	241.6
South Yorkshire	232.9
Humberside	231.6
Nottinghamshire	228.1
Durham	228.0
Lancashire	227.5
Wiltshire	221.2
Surrey	220.4
Bedfordshire	219.4
Avon and Somerset	214.1
Gloucestershire	213.0
Sussex	210.7
Warwickshire	208.5
Staffordshire	207.6
Kent	204.8
Northamptonshire	204.4
Lincolnshire	203.0
Hertfordshire	201.9
Leicestershire	201.8
Essex	198.9
Cheshire	197.5
Dorset	197.1
Thames Valley	194.6
Derbyshire	194.0
North Yorkshire	193.7
Devon and Cornwall	192.4
Hampshire	191.7
Suffolk	189.8
Norfolk	189.6
Cambridgeshire	189.2
West Mercia	187.2

1994

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
London (City of)	23,092.8
Metropolitan police	375.0
Merseyside	324.6
Greater Manchester	270.7
West Midlands	266.6
Cleveland	255.2
Northumbria	249.6
West Yorkshire	241.0
Cumbria	239.5
South Yorkshire	231.8
Humberside	231.3
Durham	227.8
Nottinghamshire	227.1
Lancashire	224.3
Wiltshire	218.2
Surrey	216.8
Bedfordshire	214.5
Gloucestershire	214.1
Warwickshire	212.6

1994

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
Avon and Somerset	210.5
Sussex	210.0
Staffordshire	209.9
Kent	204.5
Leicestershire	202.3
Lincolnshire	201.9
Hertfordshire	198.8
Northamptonshire	198.3
Essex	197.9
Cheshire	196.7
Thames Valley	196.3
Dorset	195.3
Derbyshire	192.1
Devon and Cornwall	191.7
Hampshire	190.9
Norfolk	189.7
West Mercia	186.6
Suffolk	186.4
Cambridgeshire	186.4
North Yorkshire	182.3

1995

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
London (City of)	22,559.3
Metropolitan police	370.4
Merseyside	323.3
Greater Manchester	272.9
West Midlands	266.5
Cleveland	257.0
Northumbria	249.5
West Yorkshire	240.3
Cumbria	238.1
South Yorkshire	232.7
Humberside	229.4
Lancashire	226.1
Nottinghamshire	225.5
Durham	222.7
Surrey	217.8
Wiltshire	216.3
Gloucestershire	213.8
Staffordshire	211.7
Bedfordshire	208.8
Avon and Somerset	207.3
Warwickshire	205.2
Sussex	203.6
Kent	202.4
Leicestershire	202.0
Hertfordshire	200.6
Lincolnshire	199.4
Cheshire	198.8
Essex	196.2
Northamptonshire	195.3
Dorset	193.0
Thames Valley	192.6
Hampshire	189.5
Derbyshire	189.0
Devon and Cornwall	188.5
Cambridgeshire	184.7
West Mercia	184.5
Suffolk	184.3
Norfolk	182.3
North Yorkshire	180.1

1996

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
London (City of)	16,637.6
Metropolitan police	366.8
Merseyside	307.5

1996

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
West Midlands	271.9
Greater Manchester	269.1
Northumbria	254.4
Cleveland	253.6
West Yorkshire	244.4
South Yorkshire	235.4
Durham	230.5
Humberside	229.5
Cumbria	227.5
Nottinghamshire	224.8
Lancashire	222.7
Surrey	212.3
Sussex	212.2
Staffordshire	209.5
Leicestershire	208.1
Bedfordshire	207.6
Wiltshire	207.4
Gloucestershire	206.1
Cheshire	204.8
Avon and Somerset	204.7
Kent	201.8
Hertfordshire	200.7
Warwickshire	197.3
Northamptonshire	193.8
Hampshire	193.4
Essex	192.6
Devon and Cornwall	189.5
Lincolnshire	188.9
Dorset	187.9
Derbyshire	184.8
Norfolk	182.3
North Yorkshire	182.2
Thames Valley	182.1
West Mercia	180.6
Cambridgeshire	180.0
Suffolk	175.2

1997

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
London (City of)	16,514.9
Metropolitan police	355.9
Merseyside	296.4
West Midlands	269.7
Greater Manchester	268.5
Cleveland	261.0
Northumbria	255.6
West Yorkshire	247.4
South Yorkshire	242.3
Durham	240.3
Cumbria	233.2
Humberside	230.0
Lancashire	227.7
Nottinghamshire	225.1
Leicestershire	211.1
Sussex	211.0
Kent	210.2
Staffordshire	209.3
Cheshire	209.1
Surrey	208.9
Gloucestershire	204.9
Hertfordshire	204.9
Avon and Somerset	204.2
Bedfordshire	200.4
Hampshire	198.2
Essex	196.6
Northamptonshire	196.3
Lincolnshire	195.5
Wiltshire	195.4
Dorset	189.2
Cambridgeshire	187.6

1997

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
Derbyshire	186.9
Devon and Cornwall	185.8
Warwickshire	185.7
Norfolk	185.4
West Mercia	183.1
North Yorkshire	183.1
Thames Valley	180.5
Suffolk	179.6

1998

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
London (City of)	15,924.5
Metropolitan police	345.0
Merseyside	296.8
West Midlands	270.8
Greater Manchester	269.8
Cleveland	266.0
Northumbria	262.7
Durham	249.1
West Yorkshire	244.4
South Yorkshire	243.9
Cumbria	237.2
Lancashire	228.6
Humberside	227.9
Nottinghamshire	225.1
Staffordshire	217.1
Leicestershire	213.8
Kent	208.7
Cheshire	208.4
Surrey	207.1
Sussex	206.3
Avon and Somerset	202.8
Hertfordshire	201.5
Hampshire	199.1
Gloucestershire	198.4
Bedfordshire	196.5
Wiltshire	194.9
Essex	193.4
Lincolnshire	193.4
Northamptonshire	193.4
Dorset	192.1
Devon and Cornwall	192.0
North Yorkshire	186.1
Warwickshire	184.6
Derbyshire	184.2
Norfolk	184.0
Cambridgeshire	183.6
Thames Valley	182.8
West Mercia	179.8
Suffolk	179.2

1999

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
London (City of)	14,862.7
Metropolitan police	342.4
Merseyside	297.9
West Midlands	278.3
Northumbria	268.5
Greater Manchester	264.8
Durham	257.7
Cleveland	254.7
South Yorkshire	242.8
West Yorkshire	236.1
Cumbria	228.8
Lancashire	227.7
Humberside	223.2
Nottinghamshire	215.5

1999

Police force	Officers per 100,000 population
Leicestershire	214.5
Surrey	211.9
Staffordshire	211.0
Cheshire	210.8
Kent	204.4
Avon and Somerset	202.9
Hertfordshire	197.8
Gloucestershire	197.4
Hampshire	197.1
Wiltshire	192.0
Sussex	191.4
Essex	189.8
Bedfordshire	188.5
Northamptonshire	186.4
Devon and Cornwall	186.1
Dorset	186.0
Lincolnshire	184.0
Derbyshire	182.2
North Yorkshire	181.2
Warwickshire	180.3
West Mercia	179.8
Thames Valley	179.7
Cambridgeshire	178.9
Suffolk	178.5
Norfolk	176.4

Notes:

1. Based on police officers at 31 March
2. City of London figures are based on resident population

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in South Somerset in each year from 1995 to 1999; and if he will make a statement. [105095]

Mr. Boateng: I am informed by the Chief Constable that South Somerset falls within the East Somerset Territorial Division. The force is able to provide details of police strength for this Division only from 1997 following restructuring. These are set out as follows.

East Somerset Division

	Police officer numbers
April 1997	230
April 1998	243
April 1999	241
January 2000	236

Chechens (Asylum)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum have been received from people from Chechnya, and how many Chechens have arrived in the UK, since the start of hostilities in Chechnya. [104906]

Mrs. Roche: Information on people from Chechnya is not separately identified from Russian nationals and therefore the information requested is not available.

Mike Tyson

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons it has been decided to allow Mike Tyson to enter the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [105673]

Mr. Straw: Mike Tyson arrived in the United Kingdom on Sunday 16 January and was given leave to enter until 30 January, for the purposes of the scheduled contest on 29 January. He was admitted under an instruction to immigration officers which I announced on 13 January and which was made under schedule 2 of the Immigration Act 1971. Given the high profile nature of this case and the complex issues that it raised, I took the view that it would have been invidious for an individual immigration officer to have to weigh the competing considerations involved.

I was advised that the relevant Immigration Rule, which has been in place in this form since 1994, provides that normally persons with convictions for offences which in this country attract a maximum sentence of 12 months or more imprisonment are to be refused leave to enter, but leaves a discretion to allow entry if there are strong compassionate circumstances or the case is otherwise exceptional. I considered representations sent by Mr. Frank Warren against the background of this advice and concluded that there were no strong compassionate circumstances but there were other exceptional circumstances in this case which justified granting leave to enter to Mr. Tyson.

I took account, in particular, of evidence presented to me in these representations of the effects on small providers of ancillary services, some of whom could have been facing bankruptcy because they have invested heavily in the contest and who are innocent third parties. I also took account of the effect on business in the Manchester area and the inconvenience and disappointment of the many thousand members of the public who have purchased tickets for the fight in good faith, if entry had been refused and the contest cancelled at this notice.

Further, I was not satisfied that in practice this Immigration Rule has had consistent outcomes in the past; and took that into account in determining whether this case was exceptional. Persons seeking leave to enter the United Kingdom are not routinely asked whether they have relevant previous convictions on the landing card or otherwise (though they would be so asked if from countries requiring a pre-entry visa).

I have, therefore, asked for a full review to be carried out of the Rules and practice relating to admission of persons with previous convictions. I will report the outcome of this review to Parliament when it is completed.

Police-escorted Wide Loads

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost to (a) businesses and (b) the economy of the movement of police-escorted wide loads between 7am and 7pm. [105021]

Mr. Boateng: No such estimates have been made.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many journeys have been made in each of the last five years by police-escorted wide loads. [105020]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will require police-escorted wide loads to travel during the night. [105019]

Mr. Boateng: The timing of abnormal load movements is an operational matter for the chief officers of police of the forces concerned. The Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) has issued guidance to forces which allow night time movement of abnormal loads on motorways and linking dual carriageways. This is subject to individual chief officers of police being satisfied with the road safety of such movements. ACPO policy is to allow and facilitate the movement of abnormal loads on motorways at all times.

Crime Statistics (Lancashire)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the latest crime figures for Lancashire. [104154]

Mr. Boateng: The latest figures, covering the 12 months to September 1999, will be published tomorrow.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of illegal immigrants who arrived in the UK concealed in lorries in 1999. [104186]

Mrs. Roche: During the period January to November 1999, the Immigration Service dealt with 14,612 cases of illegal entrants. This figure comprises all those who have concealed themselves in vehicles (including lorries) or who have otherwise avoided the control. Separate figures for those concealed in lorries are not available.

Emergency Vehicles (Black Boxes)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reports he has received about police forces in EU member states which have installed black boxes in (a) police and (b) other emergency vehicles. [104844]

Mr. Boateng: We understand that the police service in Berlin uses black boxes, but are not aware of any European Union member state other than the United Kingdom in which other emergency vehicles have black boxes.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces have installed black boxes in police vehicles. [104845]

Mr. Boateng: No forces have installed black boxes in police vehicles that are currently in operational use. The Metropolitan police force intends installing black box recording devices in immediate response and armed response vehicles this year.

Police Pursuit Driving

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the recommendations of the Association of Chief Police Officers' report of September 1998 on police pursuit driving have been implemented; and if he will make a statement. [104846]

Mr. Boateng: I understand that most forces have adopted the majority of the 33 recommendations in the Association of Chief Police Officers report "Police Pursuit Driver Training". The recommendations which had to be taken forward on a national basis are well advanced. National standardised police pursuit driver training courses will be available by early summer 2000.

Police Station Staff (Hillingdon)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the (a) maximum and (b) minimum number of (i) police officers and (ii) civilian employees on duty in each of the police stations in the Hillingdon Division of the Metropolitan Police Service on (1) 31 December 1999 and (2) 1 January 2000. [105183]

Mr. Boateng: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has provided the following information about staff deployed in Hillingdon Division:

(1) 31 December 1999

144 police officers were on duty for the 24-hour period starting 0600. Of these, the following numbers of constables were dedicated to patrolling their specific station areas, with the remainder performing pan-divisional duties:

Ruislip: 17
Uxbridge: 13
West Drayton: 14
Hayes: 22

(2) 1 January 2000

109 police officers were on duty for the 24-hour period starting 0600. Of these, the following numbers of constables were dedicated to patrolling their specific station areas, with the remainder performing pan-divisional duties:

Ruislip: 20
Uxbridge: 16
West Drayton: 17
Hayes: 23

On both dates, 13 civilians were deployed, all at Uxbridge police station.

The numbers of staff on duty on each date were above the normal minimum strengths for response policing.

Correspondence

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter of 18 August 1999, acknowledged on 26 August 1999 (reference 16888 /99), regarding allegations relating to experimental psychological research. [105154]

Mr. Boateng: I am extremely sorry for the delay in dealing with the hon. Gentleman's letter which, having been received, was mislaid within my Department. He kindly sent a duplicate earlier this month. The matters raised by his constituent are now being dealt with by the Secretary of State for Health, who will reply to him directly in the very near future.

Police Complaints Authority

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department will make inquiries regarding the delay in the hon. Member for Walsall, North being informed by the Police Complaints Authority about a case concerning a constituent (ref. (D) 1999 100345). [104813]

Mr. Boateng: I understand that the Police Complaints Authority received the report of the police investigation of this case on 26 November last year, later than the authority originally envisaged. The Authority expects to review the case within the next two weeks and will then write to the complainant with its conclusions, copying the letter to my hon. Friend.

Acquittals

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in what proportion of contested cases triable either way, which were tried in the crown court for each of the last five years where data are available, the defendant was acquitted (a) by the jury after deliberation and (b) on the direction of the judge; [104232]

(2) in what proportion of contested cases triable either way, which were tried in the magistrates' court for each of the last five years where data are available, the defendant was acquitted. [104231]

Mr. Charles Clarke: No regular statistics are collected on this. However, there is some information available from the baseline data collected by the Home Office in 1998 for the evaluation of the pilot schemes to reduce delay in the criminal justice system. In a sample of contested trials for either-way offences in the six pilot areas, 40 per cent. of defendants were acquitted by the jury and 5 per cent. were acquitted on the direction of the judge in the Crown Court. The acquittal rate in the magistrates court was 32 per cent.

Crime Fighting Fund

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces have applied for funding for recruitment from the Crime Fighting Fund; and what level of funding has been bid for in each case. [104375]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Forty three forces have bid for a total of 8,220 officers over the three year period of the Crime Fighting Fund Recruitment Scheme. The total number of officers bid for exceeds the 5,000 officers for which funding will be available under the scheme. We are currently assessing the bids to determine whether they meet the criteria laid down in the bidding guidelines which were issued to forces and a copy placed in the Library of the House on 2 December 1999.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Peru

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Peruvian Government in support of the recommendations of the Ad Hoc Commission and encourage the pardoning of innocent prisoners. [104399]

Mr. Battle: We have made a number of representations to the Peruvian authorities in support of the Ad Hoc Commission on Human Rights. This issue was raised in November 1998 with the Peruvian Ambassador to London, when the Ad Hoc Commission's mandate was last up for renewal. More recently, FCO officials discussed this with the Deputy Ombudsman of Peru, Dr. Gino Costa, when he visited the UK in November 1999 on an FCO Sponsored Visit. Since March 1998, we have contributed £141,960 from the FCO's Human Rights Project Fund to assist the Ombudsman's office and the Ad Hoc Commission with their important work. This funding helped to ensure that the Ad Hoc Commission could discharge its responsibilities in an effective manner for the duration of its mandate, which expired on 31 December 1999.

Responsibility for the recommendation of Presidential pardons has been passed on to the National Human Rights Council at the Ministry of Justice. On 25 December 1999, President Fujimori granted pardons to 12 more people imprisoned for alleged terrorism offences. According to the Ombudsman, 48 of the Ad Hoc Commission's recommendations for pardon have yet to be approved. The British Embassy in Lima will continue to work closely with the Ombudsman and provide practical support for its work and research.

United Arab Emirates

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received concerning the measures taken by the United Arab Emirates authorities to prevent the trafficking in and employment of children under 14 years of age. [104413]

Mr. Hain: We spoke recently to the UAE authorities about this issue. They assured us that the existing legislation banning jockeys under the age of 15 was being enforced and that offenders would be prosecuted. This should discourage the previous practice of employing underage jockeys brought into the UAE from abroad.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the UAE Government in respect of its compliance with the ban on child jockeys. [104832]

Mr. Hain: We have recently spoken to the UAE authorities about this issue. They have assured us that they are enforcing the existing legislation banning jockeys under the age of 15 and will prosecute offenders.

Drugs Trade (Latin America)

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what international action his Department has taken to combat the drugs trade, with particular reference to drugs from Latin America. [104453]

Mr. Battle: The FCO co-ordinates the UK's international counter-drugs activities, to reduce the production of Class A drugs and their trafficking to the UK and Europe. During the financial year 1998–99 the FCO spent £5,900,000 on projects in support of these aims. On 5 January I announced a contribution of £2.286 million towards a range of projects under the UN International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP). This consists of:

£470,000 to strengthen the counter-drugs capabilities of law enforcement agencies in Bulgaria, Romania and Macedonia.

£216,000 to support a Law Enforcement Adviser to UNDCP.

£350,000 to a precursor control project and other law enforcement measures in Bolivia.

£350,000 to support an integrated monitoring system of illicit cultivation in Columbia.

£500,000 to protect to monitor coca leaf production in Peru.

£100,000 to phase II of a project to promote the regional co-ordination of drug control activities in the Caribbean.

Up to £300,000 for UNDCP's strategic studies of the Afghanistan opium trade and the annual Afghanistan opium poppy survey.

Sudan

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department has taken to encourage the Sudan to implement the Chemical Weapons Convention. [104464]

Mr. Hain: Sudan acceded to the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC) on 24 May 1999. It has not yet submitted its declarations as required under the Convention to the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW). Until it does so the OPCW or States Parties is unable to advise or encourage the Sudan on implementation. The UK along with EU partners are seeking clarification of the Sudanese accession statement as submitted to the UN.

Morocco

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit the Kingdom of Morocco. [104430]

Mr. Hain: I made a productive and rewarding visit to Morocco in December of last year. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has been invited to visit and will take this up when a suitable opportunity arises.

Iran

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of Iran's capability to produce (a) nuclear and (b) chemical and biological weapons. [104880]

Mr. Hain: In conjunction with other Government Departments, we regularly assess the status of efforts by a number of countries to develop or acquire weapons of mass destruction and the means to deliver them. Such assessments draw heavily on intelligence sources and we are therefore unable to comment further.

Iran is a Non-Nuclear-Weapon State Party to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and a State Party to the Chemical Weapons Convention and the Biological and Toxic Weapons Convention. We continue to encourage Iran to respect these treaties and to comply fully with its obligations under them.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will ask Iran officially to recognise Israel. [104879]

Mr. Hain: The Foreign Secretary had lengthy discussions with the Iranian Foreign Minister about the situation in the Middle East and the peace process in the course of Dr. Kharrazi's recent visit. We pressed him for Iran to take a more positive position on the peace process. Iranian recognition of Israel does not look likely for the moment.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received that persons executed for criminal offences in Iran are political dissidents. [104780]

Mr. Hain: We and our EU partners have on a number of occasions reminded the Iranian Government of our opposition to the death penalty, and our concern that it be used with utmost restraint. Our information is that the majority of executions in Iran are for drug-related offences. We and our EU partners have raised with Iran our concern over particular death sentences, notably against members of the Baha'i community and against students involved in the July 1999 demonstrations.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to Iran concerning its attempts to obtain fissile material and technology for weapons development. [104784]

Mr. Hain: We regularly raise with the Iranians our concerns over reports that Iran has a nuclear weapons programme, most recently during last week's visit to the UK by Dr. Kamal Kharrazi, Iranian Minister of Foreign Affairs. The visit resulted in a Joint Declaration, signed by Dr. Kharrazi and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, in which the UK and Iran agreed to continue mutual co-operation to reinforce international efforts aimed at eliminating weapons of mass destruction and reiterated the importance of implementing the international conventions to which both have adhered, including the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will press the Iranian Government to grant equal opportunities in education and employment to Baha'i, Christian and Jewish Iranians. [104781]

Mr. Hain: We and our EU partners regularly raise our concerns over certain Iranian human rights policies with the Iranian authorities. The EU sponsored United Nations General Assembly resolution on human rights in Iran adopted on 18 November featured prominently international concerns about treatment of religious minorities. The Iranian authorities are fully aware that we and our EU partners consider persecution on religious grounds to be unacceptable.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the United States Government regarding the foreign policy of Iran. [104769]

Mr. Hain: We and our EU partners regularly discuss policy towards Iran, with the US as well as matters relating to Iranian foreign policy, as I did in Washington last month.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many reports he has received in the last two years regarding the activities of the Revolutionary Guards in Iran. [104998]

Mr. Hain: Our Embassy in Tehran provides comprehensive reporting on the full range of public policy and other issues in Iran, including those relating to the Islamic Revolutionary Guards Corps.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the names of people currently awaiting extradition from Iran to the United Kingdom. [105005]

Mr. Hain: There is no extradition treaty between the United Kingdom and Iran. We are not aware of anybody facing extradition from Iran to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Iranian Government concerning the (a) financing, (b) equipping, (c) provision of training locations and (d) provision of refuge from extradition to Hamas, Hezbollah and Palestinian Islamic Jihad by the Iranian Government. [105004]

Mr. Hain: Iranian opposition to the Middle East peace process and support for groups that oppose the peace process featured prominently in the discussions between the Foreign Secretary and his Iranian counterpart during his visit from 10–12 January. The Iranian authorities are fully aware of the importance that we and our EU partners attach to the Middle East peace process.

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to Iran calling for the trial of the 13 Iranian Jews accused of spying to be held in public. [104790]

Mr. Hain: We and our EU partners have repeatedly stressed to the Iranian authorities the importance we attach to this issue. We have also stressed our belief that those detained should either be released or granted a speedy, fair and open trial. The Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary both raised this issue with Dr. Kharrazi during his visit from 10–12 January. Dr. Kharrazi said that those detained would receive a fair trial with access to lawyers and their families. We will continue to monitor the situation.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he made to the Iranian Foreign Minister during his recent visit to the UK regarding (a) human rights in Iran, including the human rights of the Jewish community and (b) support for the Middle Eastern peace process; and if he will make a statement. [104905]

Mr. Hain: Human rights and Iranian attitudes to the Middle East peace process featured prominently in the discussions between the Foreign Secretary and his Iranian counterpart Dr. Kamal Kharrazi during the visit to London on 10–12 January.

Indonesia

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the status of the EU arms embargo on Indonesia. [105843]

Mr. Hain: The EU Common Position of 16 September 1999 imposing restrictive measures, including an arms embargo, against Indonesia for a fixed period of four months, expired on 17 January 2000. Following the expiry of the embargo all applications for the export of equipment on the Military List to Indonesia will be considered on a case-by-case basis in accordance with the national criteria on arms exports and the EU Code of Conduct.

The UK, together with our EU partners, continues to monitor closely the performance of the new Indonesian administration and in particular the actions of the Indonesian military.

Libyan Scud Missiles

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when (a) he and (b) his office were first informed of the interception of Libyan scud missile parts at Gatwick Airport. [105013]

Mr. Robin Cook: I am updated regularly on Libya's ambitions and efforts to acquire weapons technology. I am not briefed on the details of individual HMCE operations nor would I expect to be. I was given a full account of this specific operation following the disclosure on 9 January of some details of it to the media.

I took our concerns about Libyan weapons programmes into account when reviewing policy on Libya before my statement in the House on 7 July 1999.

In May 1999 HMCE initiated their inquiry with regard to this consignment. FCO officials were aware of the grounds for suspicion. HMCE sought the assistance of FCO officials on 16 June in pursuing their investigation with the Maltese authorities. MOD officials inspected the consignment on 13 July. FCO officials received confirmation on 29 July that the contents were consistent with Scud parts. Libya has possessed since the 1970s a number of Soviet-supplied Scud B missiles with a range limited to a maximum of 300km. The parts seized at Gatwick could be applicable to the Scud B or other Scud derivatives, but would not have enabled Libya to extend the range of its existing Scud missile arsenal.

I congratulate HMCE on their vigilance in successfully detaining this shipment.

North Korea

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the status and future of diplomatic relations with North Korea. [105016]

Mr. Battle: At present, the United Kingdom is not planning to establish diplomatic relations with North Korea. We actively seek continued dialogue with North Korea and continue to press North Korea for progress on issues of international concern, such as missile proliferation and human rights abuses. Our future stance will largely depend on North Korea's willingness to address these long-standing concerns.

Chechnya

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken by British diplomatic representatives at the United Nations towards developing a strategy for peace in Chechnya. [104909]

Mr. Vaz: British diplomatic representatives at the UN have contributed to informal consultations of Security Council members on Chechnya, particularly the humanitarian aspects. Russia, a permanent member of the Security Council, has blocked any formal discussion or action on Chechnya.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Russian Government concerning their bombing campaign in Chechnya. [104903]

Mr. Vaz: We have repeatedly raised with the Russians our concerns about their bombing campaign in Chechnya. Most recently the Prime Minister raised this with Mr. Putin when they spoke on 20 December and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed it during telephone calls with Foreign Minister Ivanov on 31 December and 11 January.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what sources of information he has on the effect of the Russian bombardment of Chechnya. [105025]

Mr. Vaz: Independent reliable sources of information on the effect of Russian actions in Chechnya are scarce. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office uses a wide range of material to assess the situation. This comes from diplomatic, media, NGO and other sources.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish recent representations he has received concerning Government policy toward Russian action in Chechnya; and if he will make a statement. [104907]

Mr. Vaz: We have received representations on Russian actions in Chechnya from a wide number of sources including many letters from the public, from NGOs and from Members of both Houses.

It would be impractical to publish all of these, but the issues raised were well covered in the debates that have taken place in both Houses.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has made statements in the past on the Government's position on Chechnya, most recently on 7 December, and will continue to do so.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what NATO observation has taken place of the hostilities in Chechnya. [104910]

Mr. Vaz: There is no direct NATO involvement in Chechnya. But NATO regularly assesses the situation there and frequent discussions take place among member states in the North Atlantic Council.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings have been held by (a) Diplomatic Service officials and (b) Ministers with elected representatives of the Chechen people since the commencement of hostilities in Chechnya; and which Chechen representatives were involved. [104904]

Mr. Vaz: I have not met Chechen representatives. FCO officials had a meeting with two Chechen parliamentarians, Mr. Idigov and Mr. Magomedov, on 15 December to hear their views on the situation in Chechnya.

Classified Documents

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria he uses to judge whether an author should be permitted access to classified material. [104707]

Mr. Robin Cook: The FCO follows Cabinet Office guidance on access to records. It does not give access to authors unless their intended publication is commissioned/sponsored or approved by Departments, and is seen to be research from which the FCO will benefit, and can be justified as being in the public interest and resources are available. Authors are normally cleared to the appropriate security level before any access is given.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who authorised the disclosure of information, contained in the book by Alan Judd, entitled, The Quest for C: Mansfield Cumming and the Founding of the Secret Service; and if he will make a statement. [104708]

Mr. Robin Cook: The disclosure of information in Mr. Judd's biography of Mansfield Cumming was made in accordance with an official authorisation given by SIS under section 7 (3) (b) of the Official Secrets Act 1989, and as defined in section 7 (5) of that Act.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 7 December regarding a constituent (ref. GV100/SG801). [104814]

Mr. Vaz: The Visa Correspondence Unit replied to my hon. Friend, the member for Walsall, North, on my behalf on 12 January 2000.

UK Embassies (Commerce)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the value of business (a) directly and (b) indirectly won by the commercial departments of (i) UK embassies and consulates in EU member states and (ii) the UK embassy and consulates in the USA in each of the last five years. [105286]

Mr. Battle: The most recent independent report on commercial services provided by British diplomatic posts overseas was produced by the National Audit Office (NAO) in 1996. This report, which covered four countries in south east Asia, noted that the seven services which the NAO examined helped generate an estimated £345 million of additional business for British companies in 1994, at a cost of £4.5 million.

British Trade International was set up in 1999 to combine in one organisation the trade promotion work of the FCO and the DTI. British Trade International has identified 15 target markets, including Western Europe and the USA. Although we do not carry out quantitative assessments of the value of business won, we commission research from an independent research company, which shows an average 90 per cent. overall satisfaction rate in 1998 among customers of the commercial services provided by overseas posts worldwide.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 11 January 2000, Official Report, column 132W, on embassy costs, for what reasons the embassies in Rome and Bonn spend 9 per cent. and 2 per cent. respectively, on commercial work. [105255]

Mr. Hain: Commercial work in both Italy and Germany is concentrated in their commercial centres, such as Milan and Dusseldorf, rather than their capital cities.

Rome accounts for 23 per cent. of commercial work carried out in Italy and Bonn 3 per cent. in Germany.

Embassy Running Costs

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 11 January 2000, Official Report, column 132W, on embassy running costs, if he will break down the percentages listed under other activities. [105254]

Mr. Hain: The 'Other Activities' listed in the previous answer are made up of the following: (1) Economic, (2) Aid Administration, (3) Consular, (4) Work for other Government Departments, (5) Administration and Security and (6) Miscellaneous.

The percentages are broken down as follows:

Percentage

	(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)	(5)	(6)
European Union
Vienna	2	0	3	5	43	0
Brussels	8	0	12	0	10	1
Copenhagen	4	0	4	0	27	1
Dublin	3	0	5	0	37	3
Helsinki	2	0	5	4	28	2
Paris	6	0	8	1	31	13
Bonn	19	0	0	1	43	10
Athens	10	0	8	2	38	4
Rome	7	4	7	2	40	8
Luxembourg
Cy	5	0	5	0	37	2
The Hague	1	0	1	1	26	19
Lisbon	2	0	12	2	25	6
Madrid	5	0	10	0	33	12
Stockholm	3	0	3	4	23	1
USA
Washington DC	4	2	7	3	37	11

Miscellaneous includes such things as Science and Technology, Agriculture, Culture and Labour.

It is not possible to break Miscellaneous down to its constituent parts.

WALES

Child Abuse

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the Waterhouse report into abuse in North Wales children's homes will be published. [105099]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I shall publish the report of the North Wales Child Abuse Inquiry as soon as possible.

Public Appointments

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the public bodies to which he makes appointments. [103052]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I make one appointment to the Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales.

In addition, the Secretary of State for Wales has power under their Royal Charters to make appointments to a number of public bodies which operate in relation to matters for which responsibility has transferred to the Assembly. Those bodies are considering whether their Royal Charters should be amended to transfer these powers to the Assembly, but that process is not yet complete.

Departmental Productivity

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is taking to increase the productivity and reduce the running costs of his Department. [103841]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department came into existence on 1 July 1999 following devolution in Wales. The planned complement of staff has not yet been recruited but we are working to ensure that our systems maximise productivity and effectiveness.

Theatres (Funding)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends to meet the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport to discuss National Lottery funding of theatre companies in Wales. [100199]

Mr. Hanson: The Secretary of State meets the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on a regular basis. National Lottery funding of theatre companies in Wales is not the responsibility of either my office or the Department for Culture Media and Sport, but is a matter for the relevant distributor in Wales.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Minimum Income Guarantee

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to ensure that all those pensioners entitled to the Minimum Income Guarantee take it up. [104600]

Mr. Rooker: An announcement of our plans to encourage pensioners to take-up their entitlement to the Minimum Income Guarantee will be made shortly.

State Second Pension

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if it is his policy that, following the introduction of the State Second Pension, all employees below state pension age who have not contracted out of the state scheme will earn entitlements under the rules for the State Second Pension rather than SERPS; and if this is the assumption which underlies his estimates of the distributional impact of the reform. [104687]

Mr. Rooker: Following the introduction of State Second Pension, all employees below State Pension age, who have paid Class 1 National Insurance Contributions on earnings at or above the Lower Earnings Limit and who have not contracted out of the State scheme, will accrue entitlement to a second pension under the rules for the State Second Pension. Any SERPS entitlement they have already accrued will be preserved. So when a person reaches State Pension age they will receive, in addition to their basic Retirement Pension, a second pension made up of any preserved SERPS plus entitlement under State Second Pension.

State Second Pension will reform SERPS so that those with low earnings will get much more additional pension. All those earning between £3,432 (the annual Lower Earnings Limit) and £9,500 will accrue at least twice as much entitlement under State Second Pension than they would have done under SERPS. The highest proportionate gains will go to those on the lowest earnings.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the cost of backdating the State Second Pension to (a) 1978, (b) 1981, (c) 1986, (d) 1992 and (e) 1998 for carers in receipt of Invalid Care Allowance. [105251]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the costs which would result if the state second pension were backdated to (a) 1978, (b) 1981, (c) 1986, (d) 1992 and (e) 1998 for carers of ill, elderly or disabled relatives in receipt of Home Responsibilities Protection. [105252]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available.

Home Responsibilities Protection can currently be claimed at any time up to State Pension age for qualifying periods since 1978. Since only very small numbers have so far claimed Home Responsibilities Protection for caring for a sick or disabled person, any estimate based on our usual 1 per cent. sampling method would not be reliable.

Asset Sales

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the items in the National Assets Register sold by his Department, its agencies and associated public bodies since 16 February 1999, stating in each case the amount of money realised; if he will estimate the total amount raised from such sales to date; and if he will make a statement. [104486]

Mr. Rooker: The National Asset Register published in November 1997 showed the assets held by the Department, its agencies and associated public bodies to be 195 freehold properties, 54 historic leasehold properties, 59,500 personal computers, 24,400 printers and 2,853 vehicles.

The Department's freehold and historic leasehold properties were transferred to the private sector as part of two Private Finance Initiative deals. On 8 January 1998 the Department transferred the six properties in the Newcastle Estate (Newcastle Longbenton, Gosforth Broadway West, Newcastle Ponteland Road, Washington Emerson House, Newcastle Tyneview Park and Washington Durham House) to the Newcastle Estate Partnership. The Department did not receive a cash sum but will be charged rentals at a reduced rate for the period of the contract. On 1 April 1998 the remainder of the Departmental estate was transferred as part of the Private Sector Resource Initiative for Management of the Estate (PRIME). The Department received cash consideration of £250 million. In addition, the sale of vehicles in the period up to the end of January 1999 realised an estimated £2,223,458.

Following the transfer of properties, the Department no longer holds fixed assets of significant value. In the period from the beginning of February 1999 to the end of December 1999, the Department sold a small number of low value items such as personal computers and printers. In addition, sales of vehicles realised an estimated £794,998.

The estimated total cash raised from such sales to date is therefore £253,018,456.

Stakeholder Pension Credits

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate he has made of the additional cost to the Exchequer of providing credits to a stakeholder pension for a parent with a child under the age of five years who stays at home to look after the child; [104873]

(2) what estimate he has made of the additional cost to the Exchequer of providing credits to a stakeholder pension for someone not in employment who looks after a dependent relative. [104874]

Mr. Rooker: We have no plans to provide credits to stakeholder pension schemes. Under our proposals for State Second Pension qualifying carers will be treated as if they had earnings of £9,500. This will, for the first time, give carers the chance to build up a second pension. A qualifying carer will be:

someone receiving Child Benefit for a child under six;

someone entitled to Invalid Care Allowance; or someone given Home Responsibilities Protection because they were caring for a disabled person.

Assuming State Second Pension is introduced in 2002, the estimated gross costs of giving carers of disabled people and those receiving Child Benefit for a child aged under six State Second Pension entitlement are shown in the following table.

	2010	2020	2030	2040	2050
Carers of disabled	0.0	0.1	0.2	0.4	0.7
Carers of child under six	0.0	0.0	0.1	0.7	2.0
Total	0.0	0.1	0.3	1.1	2.7

Notes:

1. Figures, supplied by the Government Actuary's Department, are in £ billion at 1999–2000 prices. They make no allowance for income-related benefit offsets.
2. Figures are calculated to the nearest £100 million. Totals may include amounts of less than £100 million not otherwise shown in the table.
3. Real earnings growth of 1.5 per cent. per annum has been assumed.

Automated Credit Transfer

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the assumptions about the proportion of benefit recipients opting to receive their benefits by automated credit transfer which underlie his estimate of a saving of £400 million on benefit delivery by 2005. [104148]

Mr. Rooker: The move to automated credit transfer as the normal method of payment from 2003 brings significant savings in DSS administrative costs. This is anticipated to be in the region of £400 million per year once the transition from current paper based methods of payment is complete, and the majority of benefit recipients have moved to ACT. Further savings on fraud are also expected. Estimates of these range from £140 million to £240 million.

One third of benefit recipients already choose to have their benefits paid by automated credit transfer, direct into to their bank accounts, and the vast majority—around 85 per cent.—already have access to a bank account.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many winter fuel payments were paid out before Christmas; how many eligible persons failed to receive payments before Christmas; if he will pay £10 compensation to each person receiving payments after Christmas; if he will estimate how much such compensation would cost; and if he will make a statement. [104317]

Angela Eagle: This winter, some 10.2 million Winter Fuel Payments were issued before Christmas 1999.

Of the payments issued, around five million were sent directly to Post Offices. For security reasons, Post Offices were advised to return any uncollected girocheques to the Benefits Agency on 20 December 1999 which would enable them to determine why the girocheques were not collected and issue replacements as necessary.

Information on those who remain unpaid will not be available until the end of January 2000.

There are no plans to pay compensation to people who may have received their payments after Christmas.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received from pensioners who reached pension age after 23 September in respect of the winter fuel allowance; and if he will make a statement. [104368]

Angela Eagle: 130 representations were received compared with the 10 million payments which have been made. This winter the qualifying week of 20 September was used to enable all those eligible to be identified and paid before Christmas.

Combined Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the first combined pension forecasts to be issued, as described on page 89 of the Partnership in Pensions White Paper. [105151]

Mr. Rooker: The first combined forecasts will be issued to individuals in the Spring as part of a series of pilot exercises we have under way with private and public sector employers and pension providers.

We have announced that we want to make this service generally available to employers and pension providers from 2002. We expect to meet or better this target date.

National Insurance Staff

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes have been made in the past year to identity checks on staff issuing National Insurance numbers. [104612]

Mr. Rooker: A number of changes have been made in the past year to control procedures for the staff who are enabled to issue adult National Insurance numbers. Firstly, reductions have been made in the number of staff who have access to the allocation process. The introduction of these new procedures has reduced the number of people who are able to allocate new numbers from over 1,500 to less than 525.

We have also created a database of the staff who are able to allocate numbers. This allows checks to be made on exactly how many people have access to this process at any one time, who those people are, why they need access and how many National Insurance numbers any one individual has allocated. This process is controlled via a security procedure agreed between this Department and the Inland Revenue.

Finally we have introduced automatic security checks which enable managers to investigate whether staff have a continuing need to have access to the allocation process. The system will highlight unusual activity and prompt a Management check.

Remote Access Terminals

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many local authorities had installed remote access terminals (a) on the most recent date for which he has information and (b) at the end of March 1999. [104657]

Angela Eagle: By the 1 December 1999, when the Departmental 'Millennium Operating Regime' limiting IT development around the year 2000 came into effect, there were 349 Local Authorities (LAs) with 368 Remote Access Terminals (RATs). The comparable figure for March 1999 was 336 LAs with 362 RATs. We expect 393 LAs to have at least one RAT by the end of March 2000.

We have recently invited those LAs that have still not applied for a RAT to do so as they provide LAs with on-line access to benefit data held by the Benefits Agency that are needed to administer Housing and Council Tax benefits efficiently.

Personal Details Computer System

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many records were held on the Personal Details Computer System at (a) the start of January 1999 and (b) the end of December 1999. [104658]

Mr. Rooker: The number of records held on the Personal Details Computer System at the start of January 1999 was 11,796,041 and the end of December 1999 was 22,513,887.

Benefit Post Scheme

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if every local authority had been invited by the end of January 1999 to join his Department's scheme to ensure that benefit post is not redirected; and how many have joined. [104619]

Angela Eagle: The Royal Mail "do not redirect" service became legally operable from 1 February 1999. A circular was sent to all local authority housing benefit managers on 2 February 1999 describing the arrangements and inviting them to join the scheme.

At 14 January 2000, the Royal Mail had confirmed that 225 local authorities were using the service.

Departmental Productivity

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he is taking to increase the productivity and reduce the running costs of his Department. [103855]

Mr. Rooker: Delivering efficient and modern public services is a key part of our agenda for improving efficiency. Greater efficiency is being sought therefore within the public sector to ensure that the most effective results are obtained from available resources. The Department's Public Service Agreement (PSA) Cm 4315, includes a range of measures for taking this forward, both within the Department itself and in other public bodies.

Those measures which will help raise the Department's own productivity are as follows:

Reducing Fraud

"A new contract for welfare: Safeguarding Social Security" (Cm 4276) sets out our strategy for tackling fraud and error. It explains how the Department will shift the emphasis from detection to prevention of fraud and error in the Social Security system.

Work is under way to bring forward the other elements of the strategy by developing an integrated approach across the Department, and those other bodies with whom it works.

Better Quality Services

Better Quality Services (BQS) reviews are part of the Department's approach to Modernising Government. BQS is a cross-Government approach led by Cabinet Office, under which Government Departments must examine all options to achieve best quality and value for money in delivering their services. Cabinet Office has approved a five year BQS Action Plan to review rigorously all functions across the Department. Our reviews will focus on end results, maximising potential for synergies in service delivery across the Department and delivering continuous improvement. We have completed reviews of IS/IT, procurement, consultancy, audit and finance and planning activities. 60 per cent. of services and activities will be reviewed by March 2003 in line with the PSA target.

Electronic Government

In 1997 my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced that by October 2002, one quarter of dealings with the Government can be done by a member of the public electronically, through their telephone, TV or computer. The Modernising Government White Paper (MGWP) (www.citu.gov.uk/moderngov.whitepaper/4310.htm) added additional capability milestones of 50 per cent. by 2005 and 100 per cent. by 2008. Progress is monitored every six months, and put on the web (www.citu.gov.uk/25percent menu.htm).

This White Paper committed the Department to delivering a Corporate IT Strategy that will enable stronger co-ordination on key issues such as Government Websites, Call Centres, Smart Cards, Digital TV and the inter-operability of Government IT Systems. The aim of the Strategy is to further a more coherent approach to the development of the Government's use of IT, and its integration with that of the wider public sector.

The Strategy, which will be completed in March, is being developed by the Information Age Government Champions team drawn from all Government departments. The website (www.iagchampions.gov.uk) has their terms of reference and has, or will, publish for consultation the guidelines on

Call centres

Digital television

Government on the Internet

Data standards

Smartcards

At the infrastructure level, we are preparing our key objectives for data management and established technology frameworks, and we are developing public sector coherence through the use of our Government Secure Intranet.

Reducing Sickness absence

Progress includes an improved model for measuring sickness absence, detailed analyses of the patterns and causes of sickness, issuing guidance to managers and raising awareness within the Department. Each Agency has also been set a target to reduce absences by December 1999 as part of a contribution towards meeting the overall PSA target.

Improving procurement

(i) DSS spends about 50 per cent. of its running costs on goods and services. In 1998–99 this amounted to about £1.5 billion.

(ii) DSS has adopted a strategic approach to supply management. A Supply Strategy Steering Group (SSSG) with senior cross-Business Unit representation was established in 1997 to steer, develop and articulate DSS policy and strategy for use of external resources in the provision of business services. Martin Sykes was appointed Director of Supply Strategy (DoSS) from the private sector on 1 June 1998, he reports to the Departmental Board (DB) and sits on the ITSA Board.

(iii) Past exercises to test DSS supply requirements against the market have led to a significant proportion of DSS support services now being provided by external suppliers—significant areas of business currently provided in this way are:

Estate management, accommodation and office services;

Information Systems/Information Technology operations; and Medical services.

(iv) In partnership with the private sector the Department is seeking to support Modern Service delivery, for example by the replacement of Information Systems/Information Technology systems through the ACCORD project.

(v) A fundamental review of procurement and supply arrangements across DSS recommended changes which were approved by DB in November 1999. The review addressed the requirements of Better Quality Services and focused on ways to improve the quality of the procurement service and develop our ability to contribute to business objectives, particularly Modern Service delivery. It identified ways to streamline the organisation, develop and focus expertise and improve assurance and VFM in supply arrangements. A key initiative will reorganise the current procurement units which support specific Business Units or office complexes into a coordinated, streamlined corporate structure. The new structure will provide better quality procurement services. It will also eliminate duplication, giving local managers opportunity to redeploy staff or realise efficiency savings. Plans to implement these recommendations by end September 2000 are being developed.

(vi) We have completed a Contract Management Development Project and developed a strategy for contract management and initiatives to strengthen contract management in DSS.

(vii) An External Resources Project has examined our use of consultants and contractors and has proposed ways to improve control and value in its Final Report dated 27 July 1999. A further piece of work is under way to address Ministers' request that we examine the potential to reduce our use of external personnel by enhancing our in-house capability.

(viii) The Department is committed to the Government Procurement Card (GPC) and has developed plans to roll out GPC in order to reduce transaction costs and meet payment time obligations.

(ix) In the Department about 120 staff are engaged full-time in procurement activity, of whom 73 (61 per cent.) are qualified to at least CIPS foundation level. In addition about 30 staff are currently training towards qualification. We are on course to meet the PSA target to increase our proportion of CIPS qualified staff. A parallel target is 75 per cent. CIPS qualified staff by 2000.

(x) The Department has worked with external partners to develop a Contract Management Best Practice Model. The model will enable the Department contract management groups to assess performance against best practice and develop plans for improvement. Following a successful pilot the model has been rolled out.

Efficiency Targets

At the heart of the Department's welfare reform programme is the need to transform delivery from a passive to an active modern service promoting opportunity as well as paying benefit and exercising far better control over programme costs.

The Department will seek to achieve this by the introduction of a mixture of administrative and legislative measures

The Department will:

continue to develop better measures of efficiency and extend these to cover a wider range of Departmental initiatives;

achieve a better alignment of resources with services delivered, through more systematic use of output prices, and the wider disciplines of Resource Accounting and Budgeting; publish service first charters and baseline performance and achieve the agreed targets;

reduce by 30 per cent. benefit losses from fraud and errors in Income Support and Jobseekers Allowance by March 2007, with at least a 10 per cent. reduction by March 2002;

deliver existing services within the running costs total implying an annual efficiency gain of at least 4 per cent. and aiming particularly to ensure tighter control of central costs and overheads; and, invest in modernisation as the route to a more secure and efficient welfare system.

Agency Targets

To support the Departmental commitments in the PSA, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State sets annual targets for the Department's Agencies. A full list of these can be found in the Next Steps Report and in individual Agency Business Plans and Charters. Copies of these documents can be found in the Library.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list those councils which have never prosecuted claimants for housing benefit fraud; [104616]

(2) if he will give details for the most recent year for which he has data of how many individual cases of fraud have been committed by local authority (i) members and (ii) officers; what the total value of that fraud is; how many prosecutions have so far occurred; how much of the money has been returned; and how many of the (a) members and (b) officials were dismissed from local authority employment. [104656]

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many (a) councillors and (b) council officers he estimates are involved in housing benefit fraud; [105017]

(2) what powers local authorities have to prosecute (a) councillors and (b) council officers involved in housing benefit fraud. [104989]

Angela Eagle: The Department collects information on the total number of cases referred for prosecution by local authorities and whether they have been successful. In 1997–98, 212 local authorities referred 1,148 cases for prosecution, of which 631 were successfully convicted. This information is not broken down by type. Information about those authorities who did not prosecute any cases, or did not provide information on whether they had, has been placed in the Library.

Evidence from the Audit Commission provided to the Public Accounts Committee indicated that 382 cases involving housing benefit fraud by council staff and councillors in 57 local authorities in England and Wales had occurred in 1998–99.

We are as dissatisfied as the PAC with the level of fraud and error in housing benefit—particularly where council members or officers are found to be involved. Local authorities should take a firm line and prosecute fraud wherever it occurs. This is why we set up a pilot exercise giving 174 authorities access to DSS solicitors to help prosecute wrongdoing and to establish why authorities are slow to prosecute.

Councillors and council officers should always be prosecuted where they are found to be fraudulent and it is in the public interest to do so. There also has to be sufficient evidence to prosecute. The ethical standards Bill will put in place a new framework to deliver high standards of conduct throughout local government.

Local authorities have the same powers to prosecute councillors and council officers as those used to prosecute benefit claimants who commit housing benefit fraud. Councillors and officers would normally be prosecuted under the Theft Act 1968 or the Social Security Administration Act 1992.

Reforms we have already set in train such as the Verification Framework (an intensive case checking regime), combined with rigorous identity checks and the requirement on claimants to provide National Insurance numbers will help to prevent and root out all types of fraud. New financial incentives will reward local authorities for prosecuting benefit fraudsters.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's follow-up procedure for Benefit Fraud Inspectorate reports on local authorities; what follow-up assessments have been made to date; and if he will place the follow-up assessments in the Library. [104613]

Angela Eagle: Following publication of a Benefit Fraud Inspectorate report, the Department invites the local authority to consider and respond to the report and to submit any proposals for improving its performance and remedying any failings identified by the report. The report and any proposals made by the local authority in response to it are then considered to determine whether the Secretary of State should give directions to the authority as to any standards the authority is to attain and the time within which they are to be attained.

To date, 37 reports on local authorities have been published and responses by local authorities in respect of 33 of them have been, or are currently being, considered by the Department. In those cases where consideration has been completed the local authorities have been requested to provide periodic progress reports to enable us to monitor implementation of their action plans and future performance.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many local authorities have implemented the Verification Framework relating to housing benefit fraud. [104618]

Angela Eagle: At 12 January 2000, 226 local authorities have received funds to implement the Verification Framework.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what procedures he has established to assess the fraud savings from the best value project. [104614]

Angela Eagle: The central purpose of best value is to make a real and positive difference to the service people receive from their local authorities. We are setting from this April best value performance indicators for housing benefit and council tax benefit delivery, including an interim security indicator for 2000–01. These will help drive forward continuous improvements in the standards of service authorities provide to people claiming the benefits.

We remain committed to reducing substantially the amount lost each year through fraud and error. We are continuing to press local authorities to root out fraud. For example, we have just announced new financial incentives for authorities to encourage them to undertake more prosecutions and to stop fraud getting into the system by implementing the Verification Framework.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many (a) administrative financial penalties and (b) formal cautions were issued to benefit claimants in the year for which he has the most recent data; [104660]

(2) what, in the last year for which figures are available, was the total amount collected from the 30 per cent. penalty on minor frauds when the scheme first came into operation; and what enhancements were made to the scheme between January and July 1999. [104617]

Mr. Rooker: The number of administrative penalties and cautions issued for the year 1998–99 and the year to date are as follows:

	Administration Penalties	Cautions
1998–99	1,637	1,239
1999 to date	2,945	3,717

These figures are constantly being updated as notification of penalties and cautions for 1998–99 and 1999 to date are still being received.

The value of Administrative Penalties imposed to date is £1,070,934. The overpayment is fully collected before the penalty, so therefore in the majority of cases the recovery of the penalty has not yet commenced, but it will.

There have been no enhancements to the scheme.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases of housing benefit fraud by local authority (a) members and (b) officials were detected in the City of Edinburgh in 1998–99. [104653]

Angela Eagle: The City of Edinburgh has advised that no cases of benefit fraud were detected involving council members. One case was detected involving an officer in 1998–99.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Football Taskforce

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he will announce the publication of the Football Taskforce report. [104913]

Kate Hoey: The Government welcome the final report of the Football Taskforce on commercial issues which was published by the Taskforce on 22 December. Copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 30 November 1999 regarding a constituent (ref. C99/24781). [104816]

Mr. Chris Smith: My hon. Friend the Minister for Tourism, Film and Broadcasting sent a reply on 11 January.

Sporting Talent

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to improve and encourage sporting talent in the UK. [105103]

Kate Hoey: The United Kingdom Sports Council (UK Sport) was established in January 1997 to focus on high performance sport at the UK level, with the aim of achieving sporting excellence on the world stage. The work of UK Sport, in liaison with the four Home Country Sports Councils, is to build a framework for success. Crucial to this is underpinning the base of participation and ensuring opportunities for youngsters to participate both in and out of school.

The United Kingdom Sports Institute (UKSI) will provide our best sports men and women with the facilities and services they need to help them compete successfully at the highest level. The UKSI will be made up of a central services, to be part of UK Sport, and a network of centres throughout the UK, which are being delivered by the Home Country Sports Councils. These will deliver a range of sports science and sports medicine services, including sports physiology, biomechanics, sports nutrition, physiotherapy and podiatry.

Work has also been undertaken in full consultation with Performance Directors, coaches and athletes to identify the services they need to support them in their training and competition programmes—such as, the Athlete Career and Education programme (ACE UK) and the High Performance Coaching Programme (CPD), both launched last year—to be delivered directly to our top athletes and coaches.

The development of sporting excellence, including disability sport, is also being provided through the World Class Programme. Over £80 million has already been made available from the Lottery to some 33 sports and over 2,000 athletes for World Class Performance. World Class Start and World Class Potential (to be funded from the Lottery by Sport England) will provide £25 million per annum to find, nurture and develop those with the characteristics and sporting talent to achieve success at the highest sporting level.

Sports Facilities

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what resources for (a) youth cricket, (b) Rugby League, (c) Rugby Union, (d) track and field sports and (e) swimming were made available for the current financial year and will be made available in the next financial year. [105104]

Kate Hoey: My Department's funding for sport is channelled primarily through the Sports Councils: Sport England and UK Sport. The resources made available by the two Sports Councils is as follows:

Sport England

	Financial year	Exchequer grant (£)	Lottery Community Project funding[1, 2] (£)
Cricket[3]	1999–2000	216,220	4,468,279
	2000–01	288,550	—
Rugby League	1999–2000	338,250	1,481,651
	2000–01	250,000	—
Rugby Union	1999–2000	251,667	5,130,915
	2000–01	335,833	—
Track and Field	1999–2000	41,666	6,482,107
	2000–01	337,000	—
Swimming	1999–2000	314,000	17,778,329
	2000–01	315,000	—

[1] It is not possible to provide details of funds that will be made available to these sports for the remainder of this or the next financial year as there is no prior allocation of Lottery Community Project funding, which is application led.

[2] 1 April 1999 to 30 November 1999.

[3] Precise details of funding for "youth cricket" are not available. However in most cases, if not all, the awards made to cricket will benefit youth in some way.

UK Sport

£

	Exchequer grants	Lottery revenue funding[1]
Athletics
1 January 1999–31 December 1999	490,000	9,487,699
1 January 2000–31 December 2000	To be agreed	—
Swimming
1 October 1999–30 September 2000	230,000	5,399,656
1 October 2000–30 September 2001	To be agreed	—

[1] Made available from 1 May 1998

In addition to the listed funds made available by UK Sport and Sport England, my Department also provides funding to the Sportsmatch scheme. This scheme encourages commercial sponsors to invest in grass root sport, particularly youth development programmes. During the last full financial year (1998–99) the awards made to these sports were:

	£
Cricket	231,000
Rugby League	305,000
Rugby Union	607,000
Athletics	36,000
Swimming	15,000

My Department will provide £3.373 million to Sportsmatch both this and the next financial year, of which approximately £2.9 million will be directly spent on awards. It is not possible to provide figures for each of these sports as awards to the individual sports vary from year to year and the process is application led.

Olympic Swimmers

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assistance his Department provides to Olympic swimmers. [105086]

Kate Hoey: From 1 October 1999 to January 2000 the Amateur Swimming Association of Great Britain was awarded £396,029 towards the Programme costs for these swimmers which includes training at home and abroad, access to equipment and facilities, and coaching. In addition to this the swimmers themselves were awarded approximately £224,876 in subsistence support. This support will continue, the next funding period will run from 1 February 2000 to 30 September 2000, with the precise details to be agreed shortly. The final squad selection for the Sydney Olympics will be made on 30 July 2000. Currently 47 elite swimmers are supported by UK Sport and Sport England under the Lottery funded World Class Performance Programme.

Running Tracks

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many local authority running tracks there are in Lancashire. [105106]

Kate Hoey: There are 19 local authority running tracks in Lancashire.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many district authority areas in England do not have all-weather running tracks. [105105]

Kate Hoey: Of the 366 district authorities, there are 194 without all-weather running tracks.

Film Industry

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what revenue was generated by the exports of (a) animated films and (b) all films produced in the UK in the last year for which figures are available. [105046]

Janet Anderson: Receipts from abroad to film companies in the UK totalled £581 million in 1998. This figure relates to all films and is not broken down by genre. Separate figures for animated films are not therefore available.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what is his estimate of the number of animated films to be made in the United Kingdom in 2000; [105092]

(2) how many animated films were made in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years; [105093]

(3) how many people are employed in the animated film industry. [105044]

Janet Anderson: This information is not available. However, production spend on animation in the UK is around £200 million annually, which supports some 350 independent companies. These range in size from one or two-person outfits creating small-scale experimental works, to large set ups producing multi-episode series for major broadcasters such as Channel 4, BBC and Granada. Animated product is provided across the whole spectrum of the audiovisual industries in the UK, from commercials, television, feature films and corporate videos to the new industries dealing with websites and computer games.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what grants are available to support the production of animated films; [105090]

(2) what support his Department gives to the animated film industry. [105091]

Janet Anderson: Public funds for the support of the film industry, including film production will, from 1 April, be channelled through the Film Council. This support will comprise grant-in-aid from my Department and a dedicated percentage of National Lottery proceeds. Over the next three years the Film Council will have about £150 million at its disposal to support the film industry and film culture. It will be for the Council itself to determine the appropriate form and level of support for animation, within its overall strategy for developing a sustainable UK film industry.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of likely growth in the production of films in the UK in the next five years. [105045]

Janet Anderson: My Department does not make forecasts of film production levels. The past decade has seen considerable fluctuation in the numbers of films produced in the UK, from a low of 47 in 1992 to a high of 128 in 1996. The first five years of the decade saw a total of 317 productions with the last five years totalling 479. With the policies we have been implementing over the past three years to build on and sustain this upward trend I fully expect the current levels of film production activity to at least be maintained over the next five years.

Royal Ballet

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will take steps to encourage the Royal Ballet to make tours to all the English regions. [105043]

Mr. Alan Howarth: In 2000–01 English National Ballet will receive over £4.1 million from the Arts Council of England to tour extensively throughout England.

Their grant from the Arts Council enables the company to visit a selection of English cities every season. For example, the full company has recently toured to Oxford, Bristol, Liverpool, Manchester, Southampton, Stoke-on-Trent and London. In addition, the company divides into two and has recently toured to smaller towns and cities including Barnstaple, Barrow-in-Furness, Bexhill-on-Sea, Blackpool, Cambridge, Cheltenham, Crawley, Crewe, Poole, Richmond, Scunthorpe, Swindon, Truro, Tunbridge Wells and Woking.

Tourism

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding his Department has made available to increase the number of tourists to the North West. [105050]

Janet Anderson: The North West region currently receives an allocation of funds for tourism from the English Tourism Council. More funds will be made available from the next financial year for the support of tourism in the regions and more work will be undertaken at regional levels to deliver the actions in Tomorrow's Tourism. The overall North West Region, as all other regions, will also benefit from other funds such as lottery funding, the Single Regeneration Budget and European Regional Development Budget.

Sports Equipment

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if he will make grants available to Rugby League clubs for renewing and replacing equipment; [105089]

(2) if he will make grants available to cricket clubs for renewing and replacing cricket equipment. [105088]

Kate Hoey: Under the Millennium Festival Awards for All scheme, grants are already available to, among other things, provide opportunities for all clubs, including cricket and rugby league, to purchase new equipment. This scheme was introduced specifically to ensure that the widest possible range of projects benefit from the National Lottery.

Sport (Centres of Excellence)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will establish a centre of excellence for Rugby League and Rugby Union in the North West. [105101]

Kate Hoey: Sport England is currently in discussions with the governing bodies of Rugby League and Rugby Union about their requirements for developing performance to the highest level. Whatever is developed will be linked in to the services and facilities provided by the United Kingdom Sports Institute.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the centres of excellence for sport in England. [105107]

Kate Hoey: The United Kingdom Sports Institute in England will have 10 National Network Centres. These will be at Bath University, Bedford, Bisham Abbey, Crystal Palace, Gateshead, Holme Pierrepont/Loughborough, Lilleshall, Manchester, Southampton University, and Sheffield. Each will be supported by regional sites of expertise, ensuring best practice is harnessed for the benefit of athletes and coaches through a consortium approach. In October 1999, Sports England confirmed up to £120 million of Lottery funds towards project costs of £175 million to support the English element of the United Kingdom Sports Institute.

Cricket

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support his Department provides to local cricket clubs to encourage wider participation in the game. [105087]

Kate Hoey: Exchequer funding for cricket, via Sport England, is supporting development officers who are working to increase participation in the game, focusing particularly on junior players. Cricket is also benefiting from BT Top Sport delivered by the Youth Sports Trust and Sport England which is aimed at encouraging young people to participate in sport. In addition, local cricket clubs can apply for funding under the Millennium Festival Awards for All scheme whereby applicants must demonstrate, among other things, that they intend to use the funding to encourage wider participation at a local level.

Theatres (Rural Areas)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he is taking to extend access to theatres for people living in rural areas. [105042]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Arts Council of England aims to increase access to theatres for people living in rural areas by continuing to fund the touring activities of our arts organisations. Significantly, the Arts Council will be announcing later this year details of the National Touring Programme, a new Lottery scheme. This Programme, which has initially been allocated £10 million over two years, will fund new and existing touring by supporting the distribution of work from across a broad range of arts disciplines and scales to audiences throughout England.

In addition, the New Audiences Fund is supporting over 100 projects with an annual budget of £5 million. The projects supported include those which aim to deliver more arts events and activities to more people throughout the country, primarily by extending existing 'tours' to increase their geographical reach and by exploring new methods and means of distribution. A selection of projects will also promote broader access by addressing practical barriers to attendance in rural areas, including transport.

Royal Parks

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the permissions granted, giving dates and organisations involved, for demonstrations to take place in each of the Royal Parks since 1 May 1997. [104650]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 13 January 2000]: Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency under its Chief Executive, David Welch. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Welch to Mr. Norman Baker, dated 17 January 2000:

I have been asked by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the number of demonstrations for which permission has been granted and the organisations involved, because it is a matter for which responsibility has been passed to this Agency.

I attach a list of all assemblies, rallies and demonstrations for which permission has been granted in Hyde Park. Hyde Park is the only park where we permit these activities to take place.

List of assemblies, demonstrations, rallies in Hyde Park

Date	Assembly/demonstration/rally	Organisation
17 May 1997	A'shura day of mourning	Islamic Universal Association
17 May 1997	Sportsman's Association rally
24 May 1997	Iranians in exile
6 June 1997	Krishna Consciousness
7 June 1997	Europeans march against unemployment
8 June 1997	International Sikh Youth Foundation	Federation of UK Sikhs
21 June 1997	Iraqi opposition groups in London
22 June 1997	Eritrean rally (Consulate of Eritrea)
5 July 1997	Gay Pride Assembly	Gay Pride
10 July 1997	Countryside Rally	Countryside Alliance
12 July 1997	Megan's Law Assembly
13 July 1997	Young Indian Vegetarian rally
19 July 1997	Eid-Ul-Millad-Un-Nabbi Birthday
20 July 1997	Federation of Cypriots Rally	Federation of Cypriots
26 July 1997	United Tamils Organisation
2 August 1997	National Anti-Hunt Campaign
3 August 1997	The voice of world Muslims
17 August 1997	Dr. Ambedkar Memorial Committee Assembly
6 September 1997	Campaign for the rights of survivors of sexual abuse
28 September 1997	Sportsman's Association
18 October 1997	Cuba Solidarity Campaign
25 October 1997	Kashmir Co-ordination Committee
1 November 1997	Anti Tuition Fee Assembly
28 November 1997	Campaign for Free Education
24 January 1998	Islamic Human Rights Commission
1 February 1998	United Tamils Organisation
28 February 1998	Let's Rescue Ethiopia Assembly
1 March 1998	Countryside Alliance March
28 March 1998	Cannabis March	Independent on Sunday
25 March 1998	Iraqi Muslim Community Assembly
7 May 1998	A'shura day of mourning	Islamic Universal Association
17 May 1998	Sinhala Bala Mandalaya Anti Tamil Tigers March
6 June 1998	Krishna Awareness
7 June 1998	Federation of Sikh Organisations Assembly	Federation of Sikh Organisations UK
4 July 1998	Gay Pride Assembly (Gay Pride)
26 September 1998	National Association for People Abused in Childhood	NAPAC
4 October 1998	Kosova Solidarity March
31 October 1998	Movement Against the Monarchy
18 October 1998	Campaign for Free Education
1 November 1998	Ethiopians for Peace and Development Association
16 January 1999	United Islamic Students Association
31 January 1999	United Tamils Organisation
20 February 1999	Cricklewood Against Nuclear Trains
21 February 1999	British Eritrean Association Assembly	BEA
10 April 1999	Campaign Against Genetically Modified Food
17 April 1999	Campaign Against Sanctions and War on Iraq
25 April 1999	Albania Community Rally
27 April 1999	A'shuru day of mourning	Islamic Universal Association
13 June 1999	Federation of Sikh Organisations Assembly
20 June 1999	Freedom of Choice Rally
20 June 1999	Eritrean Rally	Consulate of Eritrea

List of assemblies, demonstrations, rallies in Hyde Park

Date	Assembly/demonstration/rally	Organisation
3 July 1999	Gay Pride Assembly	Gay Pride
10 July 1999	Justice for Livia Assembly
12 July 1999	Holy Grave Destruction Protest
17 July 1999	Kent Against Live Exports Assembly
15 August 1999	Krishna Awareness
9 September 1999	Iraqi Cancer Epidemic Rally	Mariam Appeal
3 October 1999	Assembly of the Camden Trust	Camden Trust
31 October 1999	Keep Barnet Alive
31 December 1999	Young Indian Vegetarian Rally

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he plans to respond to the review of concessionary television licences carried out by the Davies Panel. [104604]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 13 January 2000]: I intend to announce the Government's conclusions on all the Davies panel's recommendations shortly.

Nautical Archaeology

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action he is taking following the letters to him of 15 December 1999 from Valerie Fenwick, and of 17 December from Angela Groome, to update the Protection of Wrecks Act 1973 and to provide resources for nautical archaeology. [104511]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 13 January 2000]: It is Government policy, as announced following our Departmental Spending Review, to grant English Heritage powers in respect of underwater archaeology. This will allow access to English Heritage grant funds currently unavailable to underwater archaeology projects. Expansion of English Heritage's remit in this way will require legislative changes, and we will continue to seek an early legislative opportunity for this purpose.

It will be a matter for English Heritage, once they have been given responsibility for underwater archaeology, to advise on whether the Protection of Wrecks Act 1973 needs updating.

Wembley Stadium

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received from UK Athletics concerning the proposals for the English National Stadium at Wembley put forward by Wembley Stadium Ltd. regarding the proposals' suitability for hosting the World Athletics Championships and an Olympic athletics competition. [104334]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 10 January 2000]: My Department was in close contact with UK Athletics about the proposals for athletics at Wembley. Following the announcement made by my right hon. Friend to the House on 1 December 1999, Official Report, columns 305–06, and a further statement issued on 22 December 1999, my Department are continuing to work with UK Athletics and the British Olympic Association to develop and assess non-Wembley options for staging international athletics events.

Athletics

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the suitability of the Copland School site or a location for a warm-up track for the World Athletics Championships in 2005. [104325]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 10 January 2000]: The suitability of a number of options for warm up facilities around the stadium at Wembley were considered by Sport England including the Copeland School site. Although providing a lasting legacy for school and community use, Sport England expressed reservations in respect of access to the stadium during an event which would have weakened a World Athletics Championship bid.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what discussions he has had with the Chief Executive of UK Athletics about the feasibility of hosting the World Athletics Championships and an Olympic athletics competition at Twickenham; [104340]

(2) if all seats in the stadium at Twickenham would comply with the C60 minimum sightlines specification of the Green Guide and the Football Stadium Advisory Design Council for a world athletics championship staged there without relocating the site of the present stands; [104329]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of the cost of upgrading the public transport infrastructure at Twickenham so as to make it capable of hosting a world athletics championship and an Olympic athletics competition; [104333]

(4) when designs for the conversion of Twickenham, such as would render it suitable to accommodate a World Athletics Championship and an Olympic athletics competition, will be ready for submission to the local planning authority; [104341]

(5) what assessment he has made of the cost of demolishing and rebuilding the South Stand at Twickenham on a (a) hydraulic and (b) roller system so as to accommodate an athletics track suitable for hosting a world athletics championship and Olympic athletics competition and of providing additional infill seating between the new south stand and the existing east and west stands, inclusive of lost revenue whilst such alterations are being carried out; [104342]

(6) what assessment he has made of the cost of upgrading seating and corporate hospitality at Twickenham to render it suitable to host a World Athletics Championship and Olympic athletic competition; [104337]

(7) what assessment he has made as to whether the timescale for converting Twickenham into a stadium capable of hosting the World Athletics Championship and an Olympic athletics competition will allow a successful bid for the 2005 World Athletics Championships; [104339]

(8) what assessment he has made of the need to upgrade the corporate hospitality facilities at Twickenham as part of a bid to host the 2005 World Athletics Championships and an Olympic athletic competition; [104336]

(9) what investigations he has made into locating a suitable warm-up track for the 2005 World Athletics championships close to Twickenham. [104324]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 10 January 2000]: Sport England, together with UK Sport, UK Athletics, the BOA and the Department, is undertaking further work on non-Wembley options for staging international athletics events. The Rugby Football Union (RFU) proposed that Twickenham might be used for such events and constructive discussions are underway between the Department, Sport England, UK Athletics, the BOA, the RFU and the London Borough of Richmond upon Thames. A further announcement will be made once this work is completed.

Departmental Employee Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) men and (b) women in each of the standard age groups were employed in his Department in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1999. [104018]

Mr. Chris Smith: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport was established in April 1992 following machinery of government changes.

The information for 1 April 1999 is as follows:

	Men	Women
16–19	1	0
20–24	5	1
25–29	18	21
30–34	41	40
35–39	46	35
40–44	31	19
45–49	35	15
50+	24	28

Digital Television

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent representations he has received regarding the number of transmitters and the power of transmissions for digital television services; and if he will make a statement. [104725]

Janet Anderson: DCMS has received a number of representations from MPs and members of the public about the coverage of digital terrestrial television (DTT) services.

The BBC and Independent Television Commission (ITC) jointly planned for the launch of digital terrestrial television and developed a plan comprising a network of 81 transmitter sites across the UK, most of which are now broadcasting.

The BBC and ITC, with the transmission providers, are now considering, in consultation with the digital broadcasters, Government and representatives of manufacturers and consumers, how to improve coverage across all six digital terrestrial television multiplexes at all of the 81 sites. It is hoped, as a result of initial work in the London and surrounding area, that significant improvements will be possible.

Television News Coverage

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will instruct the ITC to obtain from ITV the latest figures showing (a) the change in the numbers watching news on Channel 3 since the abolition of "News at Ten" and (b) the change in the viewing numbers for the 10.00 to 10.30 p.m. weekday slot on Channel 3 since the abolition of "News at Ten". [104467]

Janet Anderson: The Independent Television Commission is monitoring the performance of ITV following changes to its news provision in March 1999. For the four weeks beginning 6 December 1999 the average audiences who were watching news on Channel 3 and the figures for the equivalent weeks in 1998 are as follows:

(a)

	Million
1998
5.40–6.00	5.6
10.00–10.30	6.5
Total	12.1
1999
6.30–7.00	6.2
11.00–11.15	3.2
Total	9.5

(b) The average Channel 3 audience between 10.00 and 10.30 p.m. was 0.9 million less in the four weeks beginning 6 December 1999 than it was in the equivalent weeks in 1998.

TREASURY

Smuggling

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of Martin Taylor's report on the Government's Strategy to Combat Tobacco Smuggling. [105332]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Martin Taylor's advice to the Chancellor was personal and confidential, including areas of operational sensitivity to HM Customs and Excise. It would therefore not be appropriate to place Mr. Taylor's advice in the Library.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the amount of UK duty lost through the smuggling of alcohol in each of the last three years. [105358]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire (Mrs. Lawrence) on 26 November 1999, Official Report, columns 254–55W, and to the technical report on cross-Channel smuggling placed in the Library of the House on 19 September 1998.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 25 November regarding a constituent. [104815]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I have responded.

Cigarette Exports (Labelling)

Mr. Barron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has asked or intends to ask representatives of the UK tobacco manufacturers, distributors or exporters to provide data on quantities of UK manufactured cigarettes that have been exported from the UK with UK health warnings and markings and to explain the purpose of exporting cigarettes so labelled. [104642]

Dawn Primarolo: Such matters are laid to HM Customs and Excise. Customs does not routinely require tobacco manufacturers or other exporters to provide data on cigarettes exported with UK health warnings and markings. Customs is considering whether there is a case for doing so in future.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates HM Customs and Excise has made of the quantity of UK-manufactured cigarettes (a) exported from the UK with UK health warnings and markings and (b) sold on cross-channel ferries since July 1999 with UK health warnings and markings but with duty paid in France or Belgium. [104641]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise have no estimates for the extent of these activities.

Energy Saving (VAT)

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the VAT rates levied on a private citizen on (a) 1 January 1999 and (b) 1 January 2000 installing energy saving measures using a contractor in (i) France, (ii) Italy and (iii) the UK. [104690]

Dawn Primarolo: The VAT rates for the installation of energy saving measures by a private citizen on 1 January 1999 and 1 January 2000 are:

(i) For installation in France

On 1 January 1999 the VAT rate for the installation of energy saving materials was 22.5 per cent. France brought in a reduced rate of 5.5 per cent. for renovation and repair to private dwellings over two years old as part of their Autumn Budget in September 1999. The installation of energy saving materials is included within the scope of this reduced rate.

(ii) For installation in Italy

On 1 January 1999 the VAT rate for the installation of energy saving materials was 20 per cent. Italy has applied to the European Commission to apply a reduced rate of 10 per cent. to the renovation, routine maintenance and repair of private dwellings from 1 January 2000. It is not clear whether Italy intend to include the installation of energy saving materials in their reduced rate.

(iii) For installation in the UK

In July 1998 this Government introduced a reduced VAT rate of 5 per cent. for the grant-funded installation of energy saving materials in the homes of the less well off. All other installations of energy saving materials attracted VAT at the standard rate of 17.5 per cent. on 1 January 1999 and continue to do so.

Staff Bonuses

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department, its agencies and associated public bodies spent in total on extra bonuses above usual payments for staff working over the New Year period; what were the (a) maximum and (b) minimum bonuses paid; how many people received the (i) maximum and (ii) minimum payments; and if he will make a statement. [104478]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It is too early to determine accurately what special additional payments will be made to staff for the new year period.

Asset Sales

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the value of asset disposals, at 1997–98 prices, for each year from 1992–93 to 2001–02 for (a) central Government, (b) local authorities and (c) other public bodies. [104477]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Receipts from the sale of fixed assets for central Government, local authorities and public corporations for 1993–94 to 2001–02 in 1997–98 prices are as shown.

1997–98 prices £ million

	Central government	Local authorities	Public corporations
1993–94	640	3,987	1,165
1994–95	704	3,086	1,048
1995–96	844	2,579	993
1996–97	1,861	2,607	1,045
1997–98	1,568	2,483	950
1998–99[1]	1,557	2,151	763
1999–2000[2]	947	2,604	552
2000–01[2]	924	2,541	614
2001–02[2]	901	2,479	560

[1] Estimated outturn
[2] Plan

It should be noted that plans not outturn figures are shown for the current and future years. 1992–93 data cannot be provided on a consistent series.

Advance Corporation Tax

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the overall cost of the changes in advance corporation tax in his 1997 Budget to public sector-funded pension schemes, broken down between the different schemes. [104624]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The information is not available and could be gathered only at disproportionate cost. Over time the abolition of dividend tax credits should be of benefit to anyone investing in business—including pension funds—because it removes an artificial tax bias to pay dividends instead of retaining and reinvesting profits.

Orphan Asset Surplus Funds

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what decisions he has made since 1998 in respect of requests from financial services companies for the disposal of orphan asset surplus funds; and if he will make a statement. [105073]

Miss Melanie Johnson: None.

Dividend Tax Credits

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many applications have been (a) received and (b) refused for the repayment of dividend tax credits since 5 April 1999. [104890]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Inland Revenue does not record this information.

Appropriation Orders

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 6 December 1999, Official Report, column 448W, concerning transfers of appropriations, if he will list the titles and purposes of all such orders made in the 1999 financial year. [105132]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A list of all transfers of appropriations made during each quarter of 1999 is attached to the unsigned Explanatory Memorandum submitted following the end of each quarter. The First and Second Quarterly Reports were submitted on 11 November 1999. The Third Quarterly Report will be submitted shortly, and the Fourth Quarterly Report will be prepared as soon as all the relevant documents have been received from the European Commission, the Council and the European Parliament.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Ministers will attend meetings of the Council of Ministers of the European Union concerned with financial and economic affairs during the current presidency; and if he will list the relevant dates and the topics expected to be discussed. [104992]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Chancellor of the Exchequer will be attending the meetings of ECOFIN scheduled for 31 January, 28 February, 13 March, 7–8 April, 2 May and 5 June. The agendas for the meetings are not yet known.

Interest Rates

Mr. White: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to review the link between the Treasury standard interest rate and mortgage rates. [104841]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Treasury sets a number of interest rates. Most rates are set in relation to National Loans Fund rates, which in turn are set by the Treasury marginally above the rate at which the Government can borrow in the gilts market.

The Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee sets official interest rates in order to meet the Government's inflation target. Changes in official rates affect market interest rates, including mortgage rates. Mortgage rates are set by the lenders concerned taking into account market conditions and other factors. The Government has no plans to set Treasury rates by reference to mortgage rates.

EU Fraud

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the cost to the United Kingdom as a result of fraud within the European Union in each of the last three years. [104257]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The European Commission produces a report each year entitled "Protecting the Community's financial interests and the Fight against Fraud", which includes figures for detected fraud and irregularities against the EC budget. The latest report, for 1998, was published on the Commission's public internet website on 19 November 1999 and previous reports are available in the House of Commons Library. However, it is important to note that the majority of the cases are not deliberate frauds but irregularities which may be the result of genuine errors, for instance payment made outside prescribed time limits.

Classification between fraud and irregularity is difficult because cases where there is a suspicion of fraud will be subject to lengthy investigations and legal proceedings. The Commission estimates in its report on the 1998 figures that, on a preliminary analysis, there was a suspicion of fraud in about 20 per cent. of the cases detected.

Stress Counselling

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the tax liability of the provision by employers of stress counselling for employees. [105333]

Dawn Primarolo: Medical or health benefits, including stress or other welfare counselling, provided by employers for employees are, like other benefits, usually taxable on employees—except where the counselling relates directly to something which has happened in carrying out the duties of the employment. But the benefit per employee of a generally available counselling service can be very small and tax may not in practice be charged.

However, as I announced to the House on 19 November 1999, in response to a written question from my hon. Friend the Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire (Mrs. Lawrence), Official Report, column 13W, we will be bringing forward legislation in the next Finance Bill to provide an exemption for the benefit of an employer-provided welfare counselling service generally available to employees.

VAT (Housing)

Mr. Curry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the impact on tax revenue in a full year of levying a 5 per cent. rate of VAT both on house refurbishment and repair and on construction on previously undeveloped land. [105145]

Dawn Primarolo: The full year cost in 2000–01 of levying a 5 per cent. rate of VAT on both house refurbishment and repair and on construction on previously undeveloped land would be approximately £670 million, assuming no consequential change in pre-tax prices.

Consultation

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what bodies his Department has consulted on each of its programmes since May 1997. [105243]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Chancellor's departments consult widely on proposals across the diverse range of policies for which they are responsible. There is no central record of consultees, and one could be assembled only at disproportionate expense.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 18 January 2000

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Aircraft Incidents (Heathrow)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the incidents involving objects falling from aircraft landing or taking off from Heathrow in the last five years. [104633]

Mr. Mullin: In the last five years, the Civil Aviation Authority has received 62 reports of objects landing in the London area, which are presumed to have fallen from aircraft using Heathrow airport. Forty of these reports involved ice, 21 involved aircraft parts or related objects such as tools and one involved the body of a stowaway.

Airport Traffic

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list in order of the number of their air traffic movements for the last five years all airports where cover is provided other than by National Air Traffic Services, stating the numbers of passengers using those airports in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99. [104627]

Mr. Mullin: The following list details passenger traffic for 1996–98 (1999 not yet available), through the major UK airports which do not have air traffic control provided by National Air Traffic Services. The airports are listed in order of their air traffic movements over the last five years, which include both commercial and non-commercial movements.

Air traffic and passenger data for UK airports which do not have air traffic control provided by National Air Traffic Services

	Passenger traffic (thousand)
UK airports without NATS ATC provision [1]	1996	1997	1998
Bournemouth	162	265	313
Biggin Hill	6	7	7
Liverpool	620	682	869
Jersey	1,645	1,687	1,694
Gloucestershire	2	2	2
Newcastle	2,433	2,592	2,920
Shoreham	3	3	2
East Midlands	1,822	1,878	2,136
Prestwick	522	567	558
Cambridge	29	20	17
Teeside	444	557	651
Guernsey	846	871	890
Luton	2,411	3,221	4,116
Coventry	3	2	3
Bristol	1,394	1,586	1,814
Southend	551	618	725
Leeds/Bradford	1,053	1,247	1,398
Southampton	551	618	725
Norwich	258	264	318
Blackpool	85	83	94
Exeter	205	213	241
Belfast City	1,361	1,282	1,314
Dundee	13	16	9
Isle of Man	605	677	701
Humberside	279	332	344
Plymouth	98	103	110
Carlisle	1	1	1
Lydd	–	3	2
Inverness	285	379	324
Sumburgh	401	345	287
Kent International	2	3	2
Alderney	84	81	77
Isles of Scilly—St Mary's	125	128	132
Londonderry	64	56	49
Kirkwall	92	89	83
Stornaway	94	96	96
Penzance Heliport	106	109	120
Wick	28	25	23
Scatsta	79	102	104
Sheffield City	–	–	47

[1] Listed in decreasing order of air traffic movements

Notes:

1. Air Traffic Movements include both commercial and non-commercial movements

2. Passenger traffic figures are collated in calender years. The 1999 figures are not yet available.

3. Sheffield City began reporting passenger figures in June 1997.

National Air Traffic Services

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 539W, on National Air Traffic Services, when he expects to be able to offer a detailed list of all property (a) leased and (b) owned by NATS, with a valuation and a list of sites. [104668]

Mr. Mullin: A list of properties which are leased or owned by National Air Traffic Services (NATS) is being put together as part of the due diligence exercise for the NATS public–private partnership. A valuation will be produced for the key sites which are owned by NATS. This work is currently scheduled for completion in late Spring 2000.

Underground Storage Tanks

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals are being considered to oblige owners of sub-standard underground storage tanks to replace them, line them or retrofit cathodic protection. [104635]

Mr. Meacher: Existing health and safety legislation requires all employers to assess the risks from their work activities. Where the result of the assessment indicates that storage tanks may be sub-standard, the employer should select the most suitable remedial measure to reduce the risk of a leak. Suitable measures for underground petrol storage tanks include replacement, taking the tank out of use, lining the tank, or fitting cathodic protection.

Petroleum Licensing Officers may specifically require the above matters as part of a petrol licence if they consider this is appropriate.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to require underground storage tank owners to measure the risk of corrosion failure. [104637]

Mr. Meacher: Employers are required to assess the risks to people's heath and safety in the event of a leak from an underground storage tank, and the likelihood of a tank corroding is one of the factors that should be taken into account in the assessment.

The Health and Safety Executive has issued guidance on the need to provide corrosion protection where appropriate and it is included in recently published industry guidance as one of the methods to manage the risk of a leak. Measuring the actual degree of corrosion is technically difficult and can be hazardous to the workers involved. For these reasons HSE would advocate leak protection and detection methods.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received on the reliability of tightness testing with regard to underground storage tanks. [104639]

Mr. Meacher: Tightness testing is one of a number of options available to employers to check the integrity of a new underground storage tank or to confirm a suspected leak in an existing tank. No recent representations have been received on the reliability of tightness testing.

Petroleum Licensing

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received on the replacement of petroleum licensing by a safety regime for petrol stations. [104636]

Mr. Meacher: No recent representations have been received on replacement of petroleum licensing.

The existing petrol licensing scheme, provided for under the Petroleum (Consolidation) Act 1928, is currently being reviewed by the Health and Safety Commission as part of a project to implement the EU Chemical Agents Directive. Particular consideration is being given to safety controls at petrol stations and the continuing need for a permissioning regime. Discussions to date have included the Petrol Retailers' Association, the United Kingdom Petroleum Industry Association, the Association of United Kingdom Oil Independents and the TUC. The Health and Safety Commission plans to consult on proposals for new legislation to implement the Directive in the autumn.

Environment Agency

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what information was conveyed by the Minister for the Environment at the board meeting of the Environment Agency, held on 15 December 1999; and what matters raised at the meeting have been acted upon by his Department. [104700]

Mr. Meacher: I attended part of the December Board meeting. I participated in discussions on the Chief Executive's update on key issues. A summary of the meeting, including my comments, is on the Agency's web site, www.environment-agency.gov.uk. There was no direct action for my Department resulting from my attendance.

Biggin Hill

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will set out the powers of (a) his Department and (b) other statutory bodies in respect of applications to provide scheduled and charter aircraft services at Biggin Hill Airfield, Kent. [104851]

Mr. Mullin: Biggin Hill Airport Ltd. presented a development strategy for Biggin Hill airfield to Bromley Borough Council in November 1999. No planning application has been received by the Council.

Depending on the circumstances and size of a proposed development, some or all of the following may be required in order to provide aircraft services: planning permission following the completion of an environmental impact assessment, the granting of a Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) operators safety licence, and permission by the CAA to levy airport charges.

In most cases planning permission for proposed developments would be decided by the relevant local planning authority. However, the Secretary of State has the reserve power to call in a planning application if issues of more than local importance are involved.

French Hauliers

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the obligations of the French Government under EU law in relation to free trade within France and the action it has taken to fulfil these obligations in respect of the dispute by French hauliers. [105007]

Mr. Hill: Council Regulation (EC) 2679/98 requires member states to take all necessary and proportionate measures in order to facilitate the free movement of goods on their territories. Such measures must not, however, affect the exercise of fundamental rights, including the right or freedom to strike. The blockades, which were set up in France on 10 January, were removed on 12 January.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has made to the (a) French Government and (b) European Commission, regarding the dispute by French hauliers; and if he will make a statement. [105006]

Mr. Hill: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Transport wrote to the French Transport Minister on Tuesday 11 January to express our concern that yet again British hauliers were being prevented from going about their lawful business by a domestic dispute in France. My right hon. and noble Friend also sought assurances that the French Government would ensure the safety and well being of any British lorry drivers caught up in the dispute, and would act quickly to restore the free movement of goods. The letter was copied to the European Commission.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimates the Government have received of the cost to British companies of the French hauliers' dispute; and if he will make a statement. [105012]

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the cost to British business of the latest road blockade in France. [105265]

Mr. Hill: Regrettably, a number of companies and individuals will have incurred financial loss and suffered delay and general inconvenience as a result of the dispute in France. The Government have received no estimates of these overall costs and have no means of assessing what they might be.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he has discussed with the French Government the issue of compensation for British lorry drivers whose livelihoods are affected by the French hauliers' dispute. [105008]

Mr. Hill: It is a cause for concern that, yet again, British hauliers have suffered financially as a result of a domestic dispute in France. However, as the French Government gave notice of this dispute on Friday 7 January, any hauliers who subsequently chose to travel to France and were then blockaded there are unlikely to be eligible for compensation under the relevant French law. Similarly, vehicles that were delayed outside French territory would not be eligible for compensation under French legislation.

Lorry Netting

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what recent representations he has received regarding the use of netting to secure scrap metal carried in open-top lorries; [105141]

(2) what recent guidance he has issued to road haulage companies regarding the securing of scrap metal carried in lorries. [105142]

Mr. Hill: There have been no representations regarding the use of netting to secure scrap metal carried in open top lorries.

Sections 1 and 2 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 and the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986 require any load carried by a vehicle to be secured at all times and if necessary by physical restraints. To support this my Department issues a Code of Practice on the Safety of Loads on Goods Vehicles, which advises on the best practices for securing loads. This Code is widely used throughout the road haulage industry.

Waste Disposal (London)

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of waste from London boroughs in 1998 was disposed of outside the area of the former Greater London Council. [105326]

Mr. Mullin: It is for each individual Waste Disposal Authority in London to make its own arrangements for the disposal of municipal waste arising in its area. My Department does not seek or keep information on where that waste is disposed.

Capital Receipts (Stoke)

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what resources have been made available to Stoke-on-Trent City Council under the housing capital receipts policy in each year since its inception, including amounts agreed for 2000–01. [105156]

Mr. Mullin: The allocations made to Stoke-on-Trent City Council under the Capital Receipts Initiative (CRI) were as follows:

	£
1997–98	907,000
1998–99	3,141,000
1999–2000	2,894,000

There is no separate CRI allocation for 2000–01 as the resources for the CRI, and for support for private sector renovation grants, have been included within the main housing allocation. This has been done to provide authorities with more flexibility over the use of capital resources and to reduce the administrative burdens of operating the three separate funding streams.

Stoke-on-Trent's main housing allocation for 2000–01 is £11.7 million, 49 per cent. more than its equivalent allocation (including CRI and private sector renovation) for 1999–2000 (£7.8 million).

Ambleside Bypass

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans for the proposed Ambleside bypass. [105224]

Mr. Hill: The Government have no plans for an Ambleside bypass.

Driving Agencies

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 13 January 2000, Official Report, column 213W, on driving agencies, when the Audit Commission report on the DVLA and the DSA will be published. [105644]

Mr. Hill: I now understand that the Public Services Productivity Panel intend to publish this report on 27 January.

Conservation Funding

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans to provide enhanced funding for the management and conservation of areas of outstanding natural beauty. [105291]

Mr. Mullin: Funding for Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONBs) has already been increased this year by allocating an additional £2.5 million to the Countryside Agency to be spent on the management and conservation of designated AONBs. This is more than double the amount previously available. This increased funding will be carried through into the next year, to be supplemented by a further £1 million, bringing the countryside Agency's budget for AONBs in 2000–01 to £5.7 million.

My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment expects to make an announcement soon on other measures to strengthen the protection and management of designated AONBs.

Road Congestion

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his estimate of the cost to the economy of road congestion in each of the last 10 years. [105696]

Mr. Hill: No complete and consistent set of estimates has, to my knowledge, been compiled. A number of estimates have been made of the value road users place on the extra journey times caused by congestion, for different years and using different methods. They agree that this runs to billions of pounds every year, and has been rising. These estimates do not, though, take into account the very considerable costs of providing congestion-free conditions. We will be examining the economic implications as part of the follow-up to our report, "Tackling Congestion and Pollution", published today.

Housing

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the total amount of money that local authorities were allowed to spend on (a) housing repairs and (b) new build for each of the past 10 years. [105230]

Mr. Mullin: The size and composition of local authorities' housing capital programmes is for them to decide in the light of the resources available (from their own resources and in allocations from central Government) and their assessment of expenditure priorities. Registered social landlords (RSLs) are now the main providers of new social housing as they can, through the use of private finance, deliver higher levels of outputs. RSL new build is supported through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme (ADP) as well as by grants from local authorities. Details of central Government allocations to support English local authorities housing capital programmes, a substantial proportion of which goes on renovation of council housing, and the ADP over the past 10 years (in £ million) are as set out.

	Local authority housing capital [1]	ADP [2]
1991–92	1,682	1,732
1992–93	1,593	2,369
1993–94	1,434	1,843
1994–95	1,220	1,530
1995–96	1,147	1,183
1996–97	1,059	1,068
1997–98	925	702
1998–99	1,210	621
1999–2000	1,252	643
2000–01	1,891	674

[1] Excludes allocations for area based regeneration work delivered through the Single Regeneration Budget and Estate Action and the allowance for expenditure assumed to be financed from receipts included in the allocations for individual authorities.
[2] Gross expenditure, including support for rough sleepers and City Challenge.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many local authority/private partnerships there are in the rented sector, other than housing association partnerships; and what assessment he has made of their effectiveness. [105226]

Mr. Mullin: Information is not available on how many local authority/private partnerships there are for the provision of housing services in the rented sector. However, eight local authorities in England are piloting arrangements with the private sector for the refurbishment and management of housing stock via the Private Finance Initiative. We will be monitoring the effectiveness of these arrangements as they progress.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the total number of houses in multiple occupation in use in each of the past 10 years. [105229]

Mr. Mullin: There are a number of different types of Houses in Multiple Occupation (HMOs). The main information on the numbers of HMOs for England are the English House Condition Survey (which is carried out every five years, the last two surveys being conducted in 1991 and 1996) and the Census (1991). There are no reliable sources of information for the intervening years.

The table provides best estimates for different types of HMOs. This shows a small decline in the number of HMOs from 1991 to 1996. For traditional and purpose built HMOs and converted flats, the building contains more than one accommodation unit and can therefore be fully or partially occupied. This is reflected in the difference between the number of accommodation units provided and the number of households in occupation for these categories of HMO.

Buildings, units of accommodation and households in Houses in Multiple Occupation (HMO) in England (all tenures) by given type of HMO, 1991 and 1996

Thousand

	1991			1996
	Buildings	Accommodation units	Households	Buildings	Accommodation units	Households
Traditional HMOs (bedsits)	75	337	313	64	251	195
Shared houses and flats	220	220	220	201	201	201
Households with lodgers	213	213	213	203	203	203
Purpose built HMOs	2	51	50	4	49	35
Converted flats	250	1,028	956	232	812	754
Total	760	1,849	1,752	704	1,516	1,388

Notes:
1. Figures exclude hostels, guest houses, boarding houses and bed and breakfast accommodation. Information for this type of HMO is available only from the 1991 Census which reported 45,000 buildings providing 274,000 units of accommodation under this category.
2. There are slight variations between the statistics quoted above and the figures published in the 1996 English House Condition Survey report. This is because of minor modifications made to improve the EHCS database since publication. The modifications do not affect any of the patterns, findings or conclusions contained in the report.
3. There is a margin of error involved in the estimates arising from the sample nature of the English House Condition Survey and from the complexities of classifying some types of HMO from information obtained through the Census.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the total number of council houses available for rent in each of the past 10 years. [105227]

Mr. Mullin: The number of local authority-owned properties which were tenanted, or available for letting, in England since 1990 is as follows:

Year	Dwellings (million)
1990	3.990
1991	3.859
1992	3.810
1993	3.729
1994	3.637
1995	3.534
1996	3.438
1997	3.369
1998	3.277
1999	3.142

Source:
DETR Annual Housing Investment Programme returns

Bus Services

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the level of funding for rural bus subsidies in each of the last 10 years. [105698]

Mr. Hill: No funding was specifically provided for the subsidy of rural bus services during the period 1989–90 to 1997–98, apart from £4 million in 1989–90 and £1 million in 1990–91 of residual spending on the transitional rural bus grant scheme under the Transport Act 1985.

New funding for the support of rural buses was introduced by this Government in 1998–99. In that year my Department paid a total of £25.7 million to English local authorities under the Rural Bus Subsidy Grant and Rural Bus Challenge schemes. I understand that allocations by the Welsh Office in 1998–99 to Welsh local authorities under the Bus Partnership Fund totalled £2.25 million.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many bus passenger journeys there were in each of the last 10 years. [105697]

Mr. Hill: The figures up to 1998–99 are taken from table 2 of the Transport Statistics Bulletin, "A Bulletin of Public Transport Statistics: Great Britain 1999". Local bus passenger journeys made in Great Britain over the last decade are as summarised.

Local bus services: passenger journeys

	Millions
1989–90	5,068
1990–91	4,844
1991–92	4,660
1992–93	4,475
1993–94	4,380
1994–95	4,415
1995–96	4,378
1996–97	4,345
1997–98	4,325
1998–99	4,243

Protection of Conservation Areas

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he intends to take to ensure sites submitted to the European Commission as candidate special areas of conservation under the Habitats Directive are given appropriate protection during delays in the adoption of such sites. [105976]

Mr. Meacher: I intend to bring forward Regulations which will extend the provisions of the Conservation (Natural Habitats, &c.) Regulations 1994 to candidate Special Areas of Conservation in England as soon as practicable. I am proposing to give these sites the same level of protection as would be available on sites which become Sites of Community Interest or is already available to sites classified as Special Protection Areas under the Birds Directive. This enhanced protection will ensure that the integrity of sites we have proposed as candidate Special Areas of Conservation is not adversely affected by, for example, damaging operations prior to their adoption by Europe.

Policy for such matters falls within the responsibilities of the devolved administrations in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Road Traffic Reduction

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish the Government's first report under the Road Traffic Reduction (National Targets) Act 1998. [106040]

Mr. Hill: We have today laid before the House "Tackling Congestion and Pollution", our first report under this Act.

We agree with the Commission for Integrated Transport that we should not set a national road traffic reduction target. The national volume of road traffic is not a good measure of our success in improving the outcomes that matter, particularly congestion and pollution. Targets for air quality, greenhouse gas emissions, health and road safety are already in place or are shortly to be published. The report invites views on our proposal to develop new benchmarks and targets for congestion for different area or road types.

With widespread support from local authorities, businesses and the general public for the policies in the Integrated Transport White Paper and Transport Bill, we can also tackle congestion. The report shows that it should be possible to reduce congestion over the next decade, even when national traffic levels are rising.

The report shows that we can expect to see a reduction of more than half in the effect of traffic pollution on air quality over the next decade, mainly through better designed cars and fuels. We can also reduce emissions of greenhouse gases from road transport, though only to slightly below 1990 levels.

Council Tax

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the police authorities of England and Wales in order of their Band D council tax precept. [105181]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The information requested on Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

The information requested for England is shown in the following table.

Band D council tax precepts issued by English police authorities in 1999–2000

Police authority	£
Metropolitan	83
Lincolnshire	82
Staffordshire	79
Cumbria	78
Merseyside	77
Dorset	77
Northamptonshire	76
Surrey	75
Warwickshire	71
Wiltshire	69
Gloucestershire	69
Derbyshire	66
Essex	65
Norfolk	64
Leicestershire	64
Hertfordshire	64
Cleveland	63
Nottinghamshire	62
Bedfordshire	61
Avon and Somerset	61
Greater Manchester	60
West Mercia	59
Lancashire	58
South Yorkshire	57
Thames Valley	57
Cheshire	56
Suffolk	56
Humberside	55
West Yorkshire	55
Hampshire	54
Devon and Cornwall	54
Sussex	53
Kent	52
North Yorkshire	52
Cambridgeshire	52
West Midlands	51
Durham	50
Northumbria	50

HOME DEPARTMENT

Millennium Celebrations (Drug and Drink Offences)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests were made in central London during the millennium celebrations for suspected offences involving (a) alcohol, (b) heroin and (c) cannabis. [104916]

Mr. Boateng: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that during the central London millennium celebrations the numbers of arrests for suspected offences were: (a) alcohol, 43; (b) heroin, nil; and, (c) cannabis, five.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letters dated 21 September, 25 October and 9 December 1999 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Aftab Ahmed Butt. [105559]

Mrs. Roche: I am sorry my right hon. Friend has not received a reply to his letters. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has written to my right hon. Friend today.

Mike Tyson

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he made of the extent of potential financial hardship to British businesses and individuals of Mr. Mike Tyson not being granted entry to the United Kingdom; and what influence this had on his decision in this case. [105719]

Mr. Straw: In reaching my decision about Mr. Tyson's application for entry to take part in a sporting contest in Manchester on 29 January I had regard not merely to the financial loss which might ensue for a number of companies and individuals should Mr. Tyson be refused entry, but also to the potentially ruinous consequences of such losses to smaller concerns in particular, all of whom had acted in good faith in the expectation that the contest would take place. Together with the general effect on business in the Manchester area and the inconvenience and disappointment of the many thousands who had bought tickets for the promotion this was a significant consideration in reaching my decision.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received, and from whom, about the case of Mr. Mike Tyson. [105716]

Mr. Straw: Following a letter from the United Kingdom Immigration Service dated 11 January, Mr. Frank Warren, promoter of the sporting event, made representations about the entry of Mr. Tyson. These representations enclosed others from various companies and individuals with a direct or indirect interest in the promotion. In addition, representations and comments from a number of sources have been received at the Home Office. These are being registered and will receive a reply in due course.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the grounds which influenced his decision in the case of Mr. Mike Tyson. [105713]

Mr. Straw: In the special circumstances of Mr. Tyson's case I considered that it would have been invidious for an individual immigration officer to have to weigh the competing considerations involved. I therefore decided, having carefully examined the representations submitted by Mr. Frank Warren, promoter of the sporting event, to issue an instruction to the Immigration Service that Mr. Tyson should be granted leave to enter until 30 January 2000 for the purpose of taking part in the scheduled contest.

I considered that there were exceptional circumstances which justified my decision. In particular I was mindful of the evidence of the likely effects on the small providers of ancillary services, some of which might have faced bankruptcy, had the promotion been cancelled as a consequence of Mr. Tyson being refused entry. I also had regard to the effect of cancellation on business in the Manchester area and to the great inconvenience and disappointment which many thousands of boxing fans who had purchased tickets would experience.

I weighed these factors against the nature and seriousness of Mr. Tyson's convictions, and I decided on balance that the exceptional circumstances of this case were such that Mr. Tyson should be granted leave to enter for the purpose of the match. This decision was entirely consistent with the Immigration Rules.

In reaching my decision I also took into account the fact that in practice the Immigration Rule relating to refusal of entry on the ground of criminal convictions had not been applied consistently in the past. This Rule and the way in which it is applied will now be reviewed.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice he gave to the Immigration Service about the case of Mr. Mike Tyson. [105717]

Mr. Straw: Generally the decision as to whether a person is or is not given leave to enter the United Kingdom is one for the immigration officer to take, considering any relevant representations and advice. The Secretary of State for the Home Department has the power under paragraph 1(3) of Schedule 2 to give instructions to immigration officers. Once the content and sweep of the representations about Mr. Tyson's entry were known I decided that it would be invidious for the decision to be made by an individual immigration officer and that it was appropriate to give instructions on this particular case given its high profile and complexity. After careful consideration I instructed the Immigration Service to admit Mr. Tyson for the purpose of taking part in the sporting contest at Manchester on 29 January.

Sinn Fein

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that Sinn Fein complies with rules relating to the funding of political parties from overseas sources; and if he will make a statement. [105360]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In its report on the Funding of Political Parties, the Neill Committee recommended some adjustment for Northern Ireland parties, on a temporary basis, from the provisions on party funding which it recommended should be put in place. The Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Bill, which is designed to implement the Neill Committee's report, would accordingly allow my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to make such provision by Order. Consideration is being given to precisely what form the adjustment would take.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many firearms certificates were revoked in each of the last five years and in the current year in each police force area; and of these how many were revoked on the grounds of no good reason to possess the firearms in question. [105818]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Firearms licensing statistics for England and Wales are published annually in Home Office statistical bulletins, copies of which are placed in the Library of the House. The most recent bulletin (Issue 22–99) relates to the year 1998 and was published on 26 November 1999.

Although the statistics give details of the number of revocations in each force, no information is collected centrally about the grounds for this action.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on the requirement for a national database under Section 39 of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997; and who is responsible for the implementation of that Section of the Act. [105817]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997 does not specify the person or organisation which is to provide the central register referred to in section 39. It is being developed as part of the PHOENIX database of the Police National Computer, which is maintained by the Police Information Technology Organisation. As a next step a detailed impact assessment is to be carried out of the work which needs to be done to link the Police National Computer to existing firearms systems in forces. This is expected to be completed in April.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for each police force in England and Wales, if he will list the systems used to hold the register of privately held firearms and persons holding firearms certificates, naming each electronic system concerned; and if he will place a copy of the functional specification and user guide of each such electronic system in the Library. [105824]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I understand that most forces use or have purchased either the ORBIS system or the SHOGUN system, as set out:

Forces using ORBIS

Bedfordshire
Cambridgeshire
Cheshire
Cleveland
Dyfed-Powys
Essex
Gwent
Hampshire
Kent
Lincolnshire
Metropolitan
North Wales
Northamptonshire
Northumbria
Nottinghamshire
South Wales
South Yorkshire
Staffordshire
Suffolk
Surrey
Sussex
Thames Valley
Warwickshire
West Midlands

Forces using SHOGUN

Avon and Somerset
Derbyshire
Devon and Cornwall
Durham
Gloucestershire
Greater Manchester
Hertfordshire
Lancashire
Leicestershire
Merseyside
North Yorkshire
West Yorkshire
Wiltshire

Forces using other systems

City of London
Cumbria
Dorset
Humberside
Norfolk
West Mercia.

The functional specifications and user guides are not held centrally.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons held (a) certificates relating to the holding of (i) firearms, (ii) shotguns and (iii) explosives and (b) dealer certificates at the latest date for which figures are available. [105821]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The most recent year for which firearm certificate statistics for England and Wales are available is 1998. At the end of that year, 131,900 firearm certificates and 627,000 shotgun certificates were on issue, and 2,180 persons were registered as firearms dealers.

The most recent figures for explosive certificates for England and Wales relate to 1997. At the end of that year, a total of 6,794 certificates relating to the acquisition and keeping of explosives, and a further 2,432 relating to their acquisition only, were in force.

Local Crime Partnerships

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of local crime partnerships in England and Wales. [105705]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The crime and disorder reduction partnerships brought into being by the 1998 Crime and Disorder Act published their strategies on 1 April 1999 and are currently implementing them. We recently published a national crime reduction strategy which includes measures to support partnerships and develop their effectiveness so that they can fulfil their potential.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent from public funds on CCTV in each of the past 10 years; and what plans he has for spending on CCTV in each of the next three years. [105707]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Under the Crime Reduction Programme Closed Circuit Television (CCTV) Initiative, the Government are investing £153 million over three years on public area CCTV systems in England and Wales. We have already allocated nearly £40 million for 218 schemes and anticipate that expenditure under the first round could reach £64 million. The balance of the available £153 million will be allocated in years two and three of the Initiative.

From 1994 to 1999, a total of £38.5 million was spent under the Home Office CCTV Challenge Competition, as follows:

	Year	£ million
Round 1	1994–95	5
Round 2	1996–97	17
Round 3	1997–98	15
Round 4	1998–99	1.5

Crime prevention measures funded under the earlier Safe Cities Programme and the Single Regeneration Budget may have included elements of CCTV, but these are not separately identifiable.

Victim Support

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the funding for Victim Support in each of the last 10 years; and what plans he has for its funding in each of the next three years. [105709]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Home Office grant to Victim Support for the last ten years is as follows:

£ million

Financial year	Grant
1990–91	4.7
1991–92	5.7
1992–93	7.3
1993–94	8.4
1994–95	10.0
1995–96	10.8
1996–97	11.7
1997–98	12.7
1998–99	12.7
1999–2000	17.3

Following the last Comprehensive Spending Review grant for 2000–01 was set at £18.3 million and for 2001–02 at £19.0 million. Grant for 2001–02 and beyond is currently being reviewed in the current spending review.

Electronic Tagging

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminals have been electronically tagged in each year since the introduction of tagging; and if he will make a statement. [105710]

Mr. Boateng: In 1999, a total of 18,049 persons were subject to electronic monitoring. The great majority of these (15,320) were prisoners released on Home Detention Curfew under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998.

Information is not available in the form requested in earlier years. The available information for the period from July 1995, when trials of curfew orders under the Criminal Justice Act 1991 began, to the end of 1998 is set out in the table.

Description/period	Number monitored
Curfew order under the Criminal Justice Act 1991
July 1995-June 1996	83
July 1996-June 1997	375
July 1997-December 1998	[1]—
Curfew order under the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997
1998	232
Bail cases
1998	72

[1] Not available

Violent Crime

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many violent crimes were reported and how many convictions there were for violent crime in each of the past 10 years. [105701]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The figures available cover the ten years to 1998 and relate to violent notifiable offences recorded by the police, and to persons convicted of violent indictable offences, and are as follows:

England and Wales

	Notifiable violent offences recorded by the police [1]	Persons convicted of violent offences [2]
1989	239,858	67,475
1990	249,904	63,909
1991	265,085	57,517
1992	284,199	53,601
1993	294,231	48,298
1994	310,332	47,009
1995	310,936	38,977
1996	344,768	40,345
1997	347,064	44,674
1998	[3]331,843	47,159

[1] Violent crime comprises the offence groups of violence against the person, sexual offences and robbery. Figures for persons convicted are not directly comparable with recorded crime figures, as they relate to individuals found guilty, rather than offences.

[2] Covers offences within the indictable offence groups of violence against the person, sexual offences and robbery.

[3] Estimate of the total for the year ending March 1999 using the coverage and the counting rules used up to March 1998. New counting rules were introduced on 1 April 1998.

Source:

Home Office Court Proceedings Database

Burglary

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent from public funds on measures to combat burglary in each of the last 10 years; and what plans he has for such spending in each of the next three years. [105706]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Details of individual police force expenditure in England and Wales on measures to combat burglary are not held centrally. However, burglary is one of the key strategic objectives of most of the local Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships. Centrally, of the £250 million budget for the Crime Reduction Programme, which runs from 1999–2000 to 2001–02, £62 million has been allocated to the Reducing Burglary Initiative. This Initiative supports projects undertaken by the Partnerships which apply a range of anti-burglary measures. These projects are to be evaluated to identify what works and where, most cost-effectively.

So far, £4 million has been committed under the Initiative on the first 63 projects now under way. The balance will be allocated over the remaining two years of the Initiative with up to 200 round two projects beginning in March.

Police Manpower

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is his policy to encourage police authorities to increase the civilian staff of police forces in order to release more police officers for operational duties; and if he will make a statement. [105422]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Staffing levels in a police force, whether police officers or civilians, are a matter for the police authority and chief officer to determine. It is my policy to encourage authorities and chief officers to make efficient and effective use of staff resources.

Police authorities have been required to plan and deliver efficiency gains of 2 per cent. year on year between 1999–2002. Efficiency gains totalling £440 million will be redeployed to support front-line policing. Civilianisation of non-operational posts can play a key role in releasing resources for operational work.

General Pinochet

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he took the decision to ask for a medical report on General Pinochet. [105712]

Mr. Straw: I took the decision on 4 November 1999.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will supply the Spanish judicial authorities with a copy of the medical report carried out on General Pinochet. [105718]

Mr. Straw: Senator Pinochet consented to the medical examination on the express basis that none of its contents were disclosed to anyone other than his legal representatives, to me and my advisers, and to the Law Officers and Director of Public Prosecutions. Senator Pinochet has been asked to agree to Spain and the other countries with an outstanding extradition request being provided with a copy of the medical report. He has declined to do so.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received requesting him to make public the medical report on General Pinochet; and if he will make a statement. [105711]

Mr. Straw: I have received a number of representations asking me to make public the medical report on Senator Pinochet. I will make a full statement on the case when it is finally concluded.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date the Chilean authorities requested a medical report on General Pinochet; to whom the request was made; and if he will make a statement. [105714]

Mr. Straw: On 14 October 1999, representations were submitted by the Chilean Embassy to me, through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, attaching recent medical reports on Senator Pinochet. They suggested that there had been a recent and significant deterioration in his medical condition.

I have a clear legal duty to operate the Extradition Act 1989 properly. In the light of the information from the Chilean Embassy, that duty included informing myself of the true facts about Senator Pinochet's health. I therefore asked him to undergo a thorough and extensive medical examination, to be undertaken by an independent team of clinicians.

SCOTLAND

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what figures he can require from local authorities about the composition of their work forces in terms of (a) standard age groups, (b) ethnic origins and (c) gender. [104013]

Dr. Reid: I do not collect figures from local authorities on the detailed composition of their work forces. In some cases, other UK Ministers may seek information direct from Scottish local authorities in areas reserved to the UK Parliament, although this information is unlikely to cover detailed composition of their work forces either. Any collection of information about local authorities' work in areas of devolved competence would be a matter for the Scottish Executive. It is, of course, for local authorities themselves, as independent corporate bodies, to ensure that they comply with employment law, including equal opportunity requirements.

Firearms Certificates

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons held (a) certificates relating to the holding of (i) firearms, (ii) shotguns and (iii) explosives and (b) dealer certificates at the latest date for which information is available. [105820]

Dr. Reid: The latest dates for which information is available regarding certificates relating to firearms, shotguns and dealers is the end of December 1998 and relating to explosives the end of December 1997.

At 31 December 1998, 31,072 persons held firearms certificates and 63,100 held shotgun certificates.

At 31 December 1997, 499 persons held certificates relating to the acquisition and keeping of explosives, and 64 held certificates relating to the acquisition of explosives only.

At 31 December 1998, 295 persons held dealer certificates.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for each police force in Scotland, if he will list the system used to hold the register of privately held firearms and persons holding firearms certificates, naming each electronic system concerned; and if he will place the functional specification and user guide of each such system in the Library. [105823]

Dr. Reid: This information is not held centrally.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Departmental Assets

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much of his Department's assets have been disposed of during each of the last five years; what valuation the Government puts upon his Department's assets; and if he will list his Department's assets, broken down by (a) the Department of Trade and Industry (Core Department) (b) agencies, (c) trading funds, (d) non-departmental public bodies, (e) research councils, (f) public corporations, (g) the Office of Fair Trading, (h) the Office of Telecommunications, (i) the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets and (j) the Export Credit Guarantee Department. [103603]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 21 December 1999]: (a) During the 1998–99 financial year tangible fixed assets comprising land and buildings to the value of £8,475,000 were disposed of. Information for the preceding four financial years is not available in the form requested.

The value of assets held by the Department of Trade and Industry (core department) as at 31 March 1999 is set out in the following tables:

	£000
Fixed Assets—Tangibles
Land and Buildings	21,568
Office Machinery	235
Computer Equipment	3,079
Scientific Equipment	14,775
Telecommunication Equipment	70
Furniture, Fixtures and Fittings	3,127
Plant and Machinery	343
Total	43,197
Fixed Assets—Investments
British Coal Staff Superannuation Scheme Investment Reserve	1,059,000
Mineworkers Pension Scheme Investment Reserve	713,000
Ordinary Shares	32,668
Public Dividend Capital	72,214
Launch Investment	1,206,700
Loans to Trading Funds	6,237
Loans to Industry	5,160
Total	3,094,979
Current Assets
Debtors	338,658
Short-term Investments	1,663,000
Cash at Bank and in hand	410,831
Total	1,663,000

(b)-(f) The net book value of assets held by ACAS on 31 March 1999 was £1,975,000, consisting of computer and office equipment, furniture, fixtures and fittings. Information on the assets of the Department's agencies, including its trading funds, of its larger executive NDPBs (those employing 25 staff or more, which are the Research Councils, the Gas Consumer Council, the National Consumer Council, the Design Council, the Coal Authority, the UKAEA, and the Monopolies and Mergers Commission (replaced by the Competition Commission on 1 April 1999)), and of the Post Office, BNFL and British Shipbuilders, can be found in their annual reports and accounts for 1998–99. These are available in the Library of the House.

(g) As at 31 March 1999 the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) considered the net book value of its assets to be £4.7 million. This was made up of IT hardware and software (£2.3 million), furniture and fittings (£0.1 million) and assets under construction (£2.3 million). All of the OFT's IT hardware assets have either been replaced or upgraded over the last five years. All redundant hardware was disposed of at nil value, having been depreciated out. There has been no significant disposal of furniture over the period. The OFT had no holdings of land or buildings over the period.

(h) Within the last year, Oftel modernised its run-down accommodation and office equipment. Most furniture and IT has been replaced or upgraded. Over the last four years, receipts for asset disposals were as follows:

Year	£
1995–96	2,316
1996–97	1,853
1997–98	150
1998–99	1,370

Note:
Only figures for the last four years are available

The draft resource accounts (unaudited) for 1998–99 show Oftel's net book value of assets as £979,000 including computer, other office and telephone equipment. Oftel's assets are recorded in the National Asset Register published by HM Treasury in November 1997.

(i) Offer: as at 31 March 1999
(extract from 1998–99 resource account)

£000

	Gross replacement cost @ 31 March 1999	Net book value @ 31 March 1999
Computer Pool	334	201
Computers	431	260
Furniture, Office Equipment Pool	233	127
Furniture and Office Equipment	200	157
Official Vehicles	98	83
Total	1,296	828

(i) Ofgas: As at 31 March 1999 (fixed asset, operating lease)

	Land and buildings	Office equipment	Computer equipment	Laboratory	Fixture and fittings	Motor vehicle	London consolidation	Total
Cost b/f	1,790,109	367,818	329,284	454,962	395,560	—	—	3,337,733
1999 Additions	43,957	—	518	—	48,496	13,865	1,823,472	1,930,308
Disposals	−140,000	−2,826	—	—	—	—	—	−142,826
Revaluation	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Indexation	183,407	11,680	0	0	48,869	458	—	244,414
Cost c/f	1,877,473	376,672	329,802	454,962	492,925	14,323	1,823,472	5,369,629

(i) Ofgas: As at 31 March 1999 (fixed asset, operating lease)

	Land and buildings	Office equipment	Computer equipment	Laboratory	Fixture and fittings	Motor vehicle	London consolidation	Total
Depreciation b/f	66,169	176,474	238,443	284,183	290,586	0	0	1,055,855
Charge for the year	73,383	73,564	65,960	90,992	88,811	2,773	911,736	1,307,199
Disposals	−5,600	−565	—	—	—	—	—	−6,165
Revaluation	7,336	2,336	0	0	9,774	92	0	19,538
Depreciation c/f	141,268	251,808	304,403	375,175	389,171	2,865	911,736	2,376,426
NBV-1/4/99	1,736,205	124,863	25,399	79,786	103,754	11,459	911,736	2,993,202
NBV-1/4/98	1,723,940	191,344	90,841	170,779	104,974	0	0	2,281,878

(j) ECGD has made no material disposal of property over the period. However, the nature of its operation means that it has disposed of the following assets over the period:

(a) Debt Sales: Since 1992 the Paris Club has been encouraging creditors to sell or convert a portion of their rescheduled debt. By the end of 1995–96 ECGD had successfully converted approximately £70 million of debts owed to it by Egypt, Mozambique, Nigeria and Tanzania and in 1996–97 seven sales involving Nigerian and Tanzanian debt, to the value of £20 million, were concluded. No sales were made in 1997–98 and 1998–99. (Source: Annual Report and Trading Accounts 1995–96 to 1998–99)

b) Forgiveness of Unrecovered Claims: Forgiveness of unrecovered claims for the last five financial years is as follows:

Year	£ million
1994–95	450.2
1995–96	14.6
1996–97	118.9
1997–98	115.6
1998–99	11.3

Source:
1998–99 Annual Report and Trading Accounts—Treatment of Forgiveness of Sovereign Debt

Plutonium Holdings

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the United Kingdom's civil plutonium holdings, indicating details of imports and exports. [104699]

Mrs. Liddell: Figures for the United Kingdom's civil plutonium holdings are published by my Department each year and are placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The most recent were published on 21 June 1999 covering holdings at 31 December 1998.

The publication of these figures is in the format agreed by an informal group of nine countries, as part of the international guidelines on the management of national holdings of civil plutonium. This is a format which facilitates international comparisons on a consistent basis.

Information relating to exports and imports of plutonium is no longer published, but the figures for separated plutonium show both the holdings in the United Kingdom belonging to foreign bodies and the quantity of plutonium belonging to the United Kingdom which is held in locations in other countries as of 31 December each year.

Military Exports

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, in respect of each of the countries listed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Gilbert Murray Memorial Lecture on 11 January, he will list the (a) number and (b) aggregate value of (i) ECGD and (ii) other Government-supported credits approved by his Department in respect of exporting British military equipment to each of those countries in each year from 1987 to 1997. [105065]

Mr. Caborn: Of the countries listed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, ECGD support for defence-related business has been given only in respect of Kenya.

The number and value of guarantees in support of this business with Kenya are as follows:

1987–88: 1 guarantee valued at £20 million

1988–89: 2 guarantees valued at £43 million.

There are no other Government-supported credits in respect of exports of UK defence-related exports to these countries.

Chrysotile Asbestos

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consideration has been given in the WTO to extending the market access of Canadian chrysotile asbestos; and what is the United Kingdom's policy on this issue. [104661]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 17 January 2000]: Canada has brought dispute settlement action in the WTO to challenge the French ban on imports and use of chrysotile asbestos. A final report by the WTO Dispute Settlement Panel is expected in May. Since the French ban was introduced, the UK and the EU have conducted further scientific analysis and have also taken action to ban the import of chrysotile asbestos on health grounds. The UK action came into affect on 24 November 1999. The EU requires all member states to have similar action by 1 January 2005. A number of specialised safety-critical uses are temporarily permitted until safe substitutes have been developed.

Company Assistance

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support his Department makes available to manufacturing companies based in non-assisted areas in (a) Chorley and (b) the North West. [105275]

Mr. Caborn: Support for manufacturers is listed at Annex A of the DTI report, "Manufacturing in the Knowledge Driven Economy". This report provides contact details for further information and can be found on the DTI website www.dti.gov.uk/comp/competitive.

In recent months my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has also announced a number of new initiatives which will assist in the creation and development of manufacturing companies: Regional Capital Venture Funds; a Phoenix Fund, the UK High Technology Fund and the Innovative High Growth Start Up Initiative which will be open to companies across the whole of the North West, including Chorley.

In addition, in the New Year my right hon. Friend announced the new Enterprise Grant scheme. This is part of the Government's response to the financing problems of SMEs. It is proposed that this will cover 64 per cent. of the population in the North West.

British Exports

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list for the years (a) 1980, (b) 1985, (c) 1990, (d) 1995, (e) 1996, (f) 1997, (g) 1998 and (h) 1999 the value of British exports of (i) goods and (ii) traded services to (1) the other 14 present members of the EU and (2) the three members of NAFTA. [105336]

Mr. Caborn: The available information is given in the following table. Consistent figures for 1980 and 1985 are not available. Details for exports of services by partner country are only available annually.

UK exports of goods and services—balance of payments basis

£ million

	1990	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999[1]
Goods
Austria	694	1,126	1,267	1,157	1,185	945
Belgium-Lux	5,557	8,312	8,538	8,444	8,423	7,377
Denmark	1,390	2,113	2,216	2,089	2,050	1,688
Finland	1,034	1,718	1,818	1,569	1,435	1,111
France	10,762	15,290	17,132	16,581	16,466	13,774
Germany	13,007	20,274	20,761	20,650	20,611	16,654
Greece	672	1,047	1,141	1,046	1,051	911
Ireland	5,224	7,806	8,683	9,347	9,610	8,674
Italy	5,525	7,895	8,043	8,200	8,615	6,348
Netherlands	7,393	12,362	13,516	13,901	13,004	11,190
Portugal	1,016	1,471	1,683	1,750	1,717	1,397
Spain	3,780	6,110	6,738	6,730	7,171	6,242
Sweden	2,669	4,160	4,429	4,444	4,401	3,314
EU	58,723	89,684	95,965	95,908	95,739	79,625
Canada	1,919	1,804	1,970	2,147	2,178	2,132
Mexico	263	277	317	428	544	487
USA	13,042	17,901	19,761	20,901	21,702	20,032
NAFTA	15,224	19,982	22,048	23,476	24,424	22,651

[1] January to October

Note:
EU totals include exports to EU institutions.
Sources:
United Kingdom Balance of Payments, Pink Book, 1999, ONS. Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics, ONS

UK exports of goods and services—balance of payments basis

£ million

	1990	1995	1996	1997	1998
Services
Austria	181	341	360	308	322
Belgium-Lux	801	1,440	1,415	1,577	1,722
Denmark	311	504	860	866	946
Finland	186	297	466	389	409
France	1,908	2,656	2,776	2,852	3,312
Germany	2,544	4,007	3,958	4,384	4,228
Greece	329	491	473	552	613
Ireland	853	1,926	2,168	2,255	2,412
Italy	1,096	1,468	1,581	1,687	1,835
Netherlands	1,067	1,775	2,017	2,299	2,535
Portugal	158	305	315	262	321
Spain	731	1,087	1,244	1,179	1,422
Sweden	561	817	907	948	1,078
EU	10,831	17,487	18,685	19,790	21,380
Canada	696	975	940	1,180	1,377
Mexico	102	143	104	145	148
USA	6,873	10,774	12,247	13,866	14,106
NAFTA	7,671	11,892	13,291	15,191	15,631

Note:
EU totals include exports to EU institutions.
Sources:
United Kingdom Balance of Payments, Pink Book, 1999, ONS. Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics, ONS.

EU Regional Funds

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action his Department is taking to ensure that assisted area status grants for the Sussex Coastal Strip are paid promptly by the European Commission. [105216]

Mr. Caborn: Payments of Regional Selective Assistance in the Assisted Areas in England are made by the UK Government.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received regarding the late payment of assisted area status grants to the Sussex Coastal Strip by the European Commission. [105215]

Mr. Caborn: None.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with the European Commission regarding grants awarded for assisted area status for the Sussex Coastal Strip between Shoreham and Newhaven. [105214]

Mr. Caborn: Discussions with the Commission on the proposals for new Assisted Areas, including the Sussex Coastal Strip between Shoreham and Newhaven, are continuing. We will announce the new map as soon as possible.

Anglo-French Trade Issues

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet the Prime Minister of France to discuss trade issues. [104206]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry would not normally meet the French Prime Minister to discuss trade issues and consequently has no plans to meet him in the future. My right hon. Friend met his opposite number, the French Minister for the Economy, Finance and Industry, at the Anglo-French Summit in London in November 1999 and Trade issues were discussed at this meeting. In addition, I met the French Minister for Trade in October 1999 and we are in touch regarding bilateral meetings as and when the need arises.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

World Cup

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the economic benefits which will accrue to each nation of the UK as a result of the England World Cup 2006 bid being successful; what account was taken of such an assessment in granting Government assistance to the England World Cup 2006 bid; and if he will make a statement. [103752]

Kate Hoey: As the bid for the 2006 World Cup has been made by the English Football Association, and as all matches will be played in England if the bid is successful, no separate assessments of the economic benefits of holding the tournament in the Home Nations have been carried out. However, studies of the effects of major sports events held in the UK in the past strongly suggest that a successful bid will bring benefits to all parts of the UK. Sport England took account of these studies, together with analyses of the economic effects of previous World Cup tournaments, in considering its grant to the FA in support of the bid.

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was the cost of Government expenditure and support since 1997, other than in grants and loans, for the England World Cup 2006 bid. [103755]

Kate Hoey: The Government are fully committed to supporting the Football Association's bid for the 2006 World Cup, and Sport England has earmarked £3 million in grant-in-aid to the bid. Direct costs to the Government have arisen in respect of the previous Minister of Sport's visits to a number of countries in support of the bid. The cost of these visits was £102,780, although some other Government business was also conducted. Mr. Banks's duties as Special Envoy to the bid have involved further overseas visits, the costs of which are principally being met by the FA and by sponsorship, although the Government are making a contribution to these costs.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when Sport England will publish its full accounts on its contribution to the FA (FIFA) World Cup 2006 bid. [104169]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 10 January 2000]: Sport England made an award of £3 million in 1998 in respect of the Football Association's bid for the 2006 World Cup. In accordance with the Accounts Direction for Sport England's National Lottery Distribution Accounts, that award was reflected within the overall totals for grant commitments in the annual accounts for 1998–99. To date, Sport England has paid £1,328,404 to the Football Association in respect of the bid. This and future payments in respect of the bid will be included in the overall totals of commitments met in Sport England's accounts.

Wembley Stadium

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment Sport England has made of the proposals for the English National Stadium at Wembley put forward by Wembley National Stadium Ltd. regarding the proposals' compliance with the Lottery Funding Agreement concluded between them. [104335]

Kate Hoey [holding answer 10 January 2000]: While Sport England were satisfied that Wembley National Stadium Limited (WNSL) and the Football Association had complied with the technical requirements of the Lottery Funding Agreement, the solution for athletics was not ideal. The DLA Ellerbe Beckett report raised serious concerns about the proposed solution for athletics in terms of the practicality and cost. Further discussions between my Department and all interested parties concluded that athletics should be removed from Wembley.

Sport England, the Football Association and WNSL are currently considering whether amendments are necessary to the existing Lottery Funding Agreement to reflect Wembley's new role as the centrepiece for football and rugby league in England. In the light of the prospective agreement, the Football Association has proposed that £20 million be returned to Sport England.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what discussions his Department has had with Sport England over the handling of the money agreed to be refunded by the developers of Wembley Stadium; and if these funds will be held separately; [105348]

(2) if Sport England has received any funds due to be returned to his Department in respect of failure by the developers of Wembley Stadium to provide adequate athletics provision; [105347]

(3) how much of the money due to be repaid to Sport England has been received to date from the developers of Wembley Stadium; [105349]

(4) on what date Sport England expects full payment of the money agreed to be refunded by the developers of Wembley Stadium. [105350]

Kate Hoey: As signatories to the Lottery Funding Agreement, it is for Sport England, the Football Association and Wembley National Stadium Ltd. to agree the details in respect of the proposal to return £20 million of the Lottery award. Discussions are currently ongoing and a further announcement will be made in due course.

London Freedom Pass

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment his Department has made of (a) customer awareness of the London Freedom Pass and (b) uptake of the Pass. [105018]

Janet Anderson: This Department has made no direct assessment of customer awareness of the London Pass or its uptake. However, we understand that there has been widespread national and international media coverage about the London Pass since its launch on 10 November last year. Information about the pass is also available through British Tourist Authority and London Tourist Board publicity. The pass is purchased from a private company and currently allows free entry to 43 attractions in the capital.

The producers of the pass predict first year sales figures of 100,000 and they say that advance sales are looking healthy. We hope that the pass will widen access to a range of attractions and leave visitors to London more satisfied and ready to return again.

Royal Opera House

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many opera performances have been cancelled by the Royal Opera House since the publication of the new season's programme; and at what estimated cost in lost revenue income. [105339]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 17 January 2000]: The Royal Opera House has cancelled nine performances of opera since the opening season was announced in January 1999. I understand the overall loss to the Royal Opera House of the nine cancelled performances is estimated at £243,115 when the value of lost revenue is offset by savings in expenditure. The Royal Opera House's contingency budget will accommodate this loss.

Running Tracks

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make it his policy to provide support for the creation of running tracks in each district authority area. [105545]

Kate Hoey: The majority of Government money specifically allocated to sport and active recreation is channelled through Sport England, an independent body sponsored by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport which, within an overall policy framework set by the Department, dispenses these funds according to its own detailed policies and priorities.

Sport England is also responsible for overseeing the Sports Lottery Fund. Last year, it published its Lottery Strategy document which sets out the broad strategic framework within which it will distribute Lottery money to sport over the next ten years.

Sport England's Lottery Community Projects capital fund will invest £115 million per year between 1999–2000, with £21 million earmarked for projects requiring under £100,000, and will inject a total investment of £1.115 billion over the next ten years to sports capital projects, which could include running tracks, making a significant contribution to the sporting life of communities.

Local authorities may apply for Sports Lottery Funding for specialist facilities, such as running tracks, with the support of the governing body, UK Athletics, through the National Athletics Facilities Strategy.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to increase the number of running tracks in Lancashire. [105546]

Kate Hoey: My right hon. Friend has no plans to increase the number of running tracks in Lancashire. The existing number of running tracks in Lancashire fully meets the requirements of Sport England's National Athletics Facilities Strategy, which was produced in partnership with the athletics governing body, UK Athletics.

However, we would both welcome any proposals for further investment in the sporting infrastructure in Lancashire to ensure that every community has access to as wide a range of facilities as possible, and that the opportunities to use them exist for everybody.

National Athletics Stadium

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what assessment he has made of the offer to adapt the City of Manchester Stadium to accommodate the British National Athletics Stadium; and if he will make a statement; [105550]

(2) when he intends to announce his decision on the location for a British National Athletics Stadium; and if he will make a statement; [105501]

(3) if he will make a statement on his plans for a British national athletics stadium. [105502]

Kate Hoey: Following the announcement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 20 December 1999, Sport England has, together with UK Sport, UK Athletics, the British Olympic Association (BOA) and my Department undertaken further work on the non-Wembley options for staging international athletics events. Sport England is taking forward further work to establish the viability of possible alternative venues although the final decision on timing and location of bids for the 2005 World Athletics Championship and a UK Olympic bid, rests with UK Athletics and the BOA respectively, Although a final decision has yet to be made and no options have been ruled out, both UK Athletics and the BOA consider that the strongest option for a successful bid would be to base it in London. The BOA is therefore conducting a feasibility study of a possible future London-based Olympic bid, which they will submit to Government in the next few months.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action his Department has taken to identify potential sites for a national athletics stadium. [105346]

Kate Hoey: Following the announcement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, Sport England has, together with UK Sport, UK Athletics, the BOA and my Department undertaken further work on the non-Wembley options for staging international athletics events.

Sport England is taking forward further work to establish the viability of possible venues for the World Athletics Championships in 2005 and further details will be announced once this work has been completed. Sport England will also be assessing, with the BOA, the extent to which possible venues can be readily upgraded to accommodate Olympic requirements.

Tourism Industry

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assistance his Department gives local authorities for employing tourism officers. [105049]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 17 January 2000]: This Department gives no direct assistance to local authorities for employing tourism officers. However, our guidance pack, "Measuring the Local Impact of Tourism", offers useful advice to tourism officers and others in measuring the value and volume of tourism in local authority areas. The results of any such work may help local authorities determine the number and nature of tourism officers they wish to employ.

Relevant and reliable statistics will also form a useful base for the Cultural Strategies my Department is encouraging local authorities to produces. These will express the local cultural vision and priorities in response to the needs and aspirations of local communities, as well as recognising the role of cultural services—including tourism—in tackling the wider objectives of social inclusion, regeneration, lifelong learning, and healthier and safer communities.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of tourists to the UK in the last year for which figures are available visited (a) the North West and (b) London. [105048]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 17 January 2000]: An estimated 23.4 million visits were made to the UK from overseas in 1998, excluding visits from the Republic of Ireland. Overseas visitors spent at least one night in (a) the North West Tourist board regions (encompassing Merseyside, Greater Manchester, Lancashire and Cheshire) on 5 per cent. (1.2 million) and (b) London on 52 per cent. (12.3 million) of these trips. Visits on which both the North West and London were visited will be included in the figures for both the respective regions.

Historic Buildings (Chorley)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assistance his Department is giving to (a) Astley Hall and (b) other historic buildings in Chorley. [105036]

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 17 January 2000]: My Department does not directly fund historic buildings. However, Astley Hall and other historic buildings in Chorley have received assistance from English Heritage and the Heritage Lottery Fund as follows:

English Heritage

Astley Hall:
£9,000 (1983)
£7,100 (1985)
£5,000 (1987)
a further £4,750 was also made available in 1987

St. Georges Conservation Area Partnership Scheme (includes works to historic buildings)—£50,000 (1996–99)

Bank Hall—£25,478 offered to date

Heritage Lottery Fund

Astley Hall: No awards made

Lower Kem Mill: £68,530

Heapey and Wheelton War Memorial: £12,000

St. Paul's Church, Adlington: £64,200.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Family Law Act 1996

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to bring forward proposals to reform the law relating to divorce. [104881]

Jane Kennedy: I refer my hon. Friend to the written parliamentary answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Dartford (Dr. Stoate) on 17 June 1999, Official Report, column 213W. The position remains unchanged.

Persistent Young Offenders

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the average period between arrest and sentencing for persistent young offenders in each of the last 10 years. [105702]

Jane Kennedy: The average time from arrest to sentence for persistent young offenders in England and Wales was 142 days in 1996, 141 days in 1997, 125 days in 1998, and an estimated 110 days in the first six months of 1999. Figures for earlier years are not available.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

"Raising Aspirations in the 21st Century"

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the cost of printing Raising Aspirations in the 21st Century; how many copies have been printed; to whom they have been distributed; and at what cost. [105301]

Mr. Wills: The cost of producing this document was £12,000. 5,000 copies have been printed. Copies were distributed at the North of England Education Conference in Wigan on 6 January 2000. Other copies have been distributed to interested parties on demand. Copies are available to others on request and are free of charge.

Summer Camps

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for introduction of informal summer camp activities for young people; what will be the initial cost, and funded by whom; who will be able to run such camps under official auspices; by whom they will be vetted and inspected; if a structure of certification and qualifications is envisaged; who will carry the liability for participants and third parties; and if he will make a statement. [105560]

Jacqui Smith: We envisage that a range of opportunities, including but not confined to adventure activities, will be made available to those 16-year-olds wishing to take part during the summer after their GCSEs, to help their transition between school and advanced study or work or training. The Department is working with the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, and with others, on how to take this initiative forward, including the matters mentioned by the hon. Member. We expect to make further announcements in due course.

Curriculum 2000

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the minimum number of sixth form students necessary for an 11 to 18 school effectively to implement Curriculum 2000. [104850]

Mr. Wicks: No assessment of the minimum number of sixth form students necessary for an 11 to 18 school effectively to implement the forthcoming reforms to post-16 qualifications has been made by my Department. A range of circumstances, of which student numbers is only one, will affect the ways in which schools and colleges implement the reforms. The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority has published detailed curriculum guidance on the reforms covering a range of relevant factors, including the size of the institution.

Youth Support Service

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what criteria will be used to assess which careers guidance services are appropriate for transfer to the combined Youth Support Service; who will undertake this assessment; and what role interested partners will play in this process. [104695]

Mr. Wicks: We are creating a new service with a new vision to ensure that all young people have access to the support and guidance services they need, when and where they need it, co-ordinating the services currently provided by an array of different agencies concerned with different aspects of young people's lives. We expect that the best careers service companies, together with a range of other local partners, will play a major role in the new arrangements. At this stage no decision has been made regarding any assessment criteria. We shall be announcing shortly the key functions that we expect the new support service to perform and how we will involve major partners in developing and implementing the new service.

Teachers' Pensions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will set out the rescheduled increase in employers' contributions for teachers' pensions in the next and future financial years, the actuarial basis of the calculation and the impact on the budget of each local education authority. [105100]

Mr. Wicks [holding answer 17 January 2000]: The employer contribution rate for members of the teachers' pension scheme is currently 7.2 per cent. The rate from 1 April 2000 will be 7.4 per cent; from 1 April 2002 the rate will be 8.35 per cent.

The increase from 1 April 2000 is to fund improvements to scheme benefits which will be introduced from that date. The increase from 1 April 2002 is to eliminate the balance of liabilities identified by the Government Actuary's valuation of the scheme as at 31 March 1996. I shall shortly be laying before the House the Government Actuary's report on the valuation of the scheme.

Rescheduling the planned increase will reduce pressures on Local Education Authority budgets by £90 million in 2000–01 and 2001–02. The reduced pressure for each Local Education Authority is as follows:

Local education authority	£000
City of London	4
Camden	386
Greenwich	554
Hackney	455
Hammersmith	283
Islington	407
Kensington and Chelsea	182
Lambeth	490
Lewisham	565
Southwark	546
Tower Hamlets	631
Wandsworth	427
Westminster	297
Barking	375
Barnet	599
Bexley	471
Brent	542
Bromley	560
Croydon	628
Ealing	573
Enfield	616
Haringey	494
Harrow	361
Havering	437
Hillingdon	484
Hounslow	473
Kingston upon Thames	235
Merton	287
Newham	702
Redbridge	528
Richmond upon Thames	228
Sutton	352
Waltham Forest	488
Birmingham	2,213
Coventry	595
Dudley	526
Sandwell	590
Solihull	387
Walsall	546
Wolverhampton	490
Knowsley	373
Liverpool	1,041

Local education authority	£000
St. Helens	337
Sefton	537
Wirral	652
Bolton	516
Bury	316
Manchester	906
Oldham	473
Rochdale	429
Salford	414
Stockport	461
Tameside	421
Trafford	401
Wigan	547
Barnsley	383
Doncaster	594
Rotherham	507
Sheffield	859
Bradford	1,023
Calderdale	390
Kirklees	723
Leeds	1,285
Wakefield	568
Gateshead	345
Newcastle upon Tyne	480
North Tyneside	341
South Tyneside	301
Sunderland	558
Isles of Scilly	5
Bath and North East Somerset	274
City of Bristol	589
North Somerset	297
South Gloucestershire	414
Hartlepool	189
Middlesbrough	297
Redcar and Cleveland	287
Stockton-on-Tees	360
Kingston-upon-Hull	506
East Riding of Yorkshire	540
North East Lincolnshire	324
North Lincolnshire	284
North Yorkshire	973
York	266
Bedfordshire	712
Luton	385
Buckinghamshire	855
Milton Keynes	407
Derbyshire	1,207
Derby	428
Dorset	603
Poole	217
Bournemouth	245
Durham	889
Darlington	176
East Sussex	776
Brighton and Hove	370
Hampshire	1,973
Portsmouth	325
Southampton	383
Leicestershire	1,010
Leicester	584
Rutland	51
Staffordshire	1,411
Stoke-on-Trent	440
Wiltshire	705
Swindon	324
Bracknell Forest	181
Windsor and Maidenhead	226
West Berkshire	271
Reading	211
Slough	261
Wokingham	257
Cambridgeshire	843
Peterborough	348
Cheshire	1,156
Halton	258
Warrington	345
Devon	1,077
Plymouth	476
Torbay	220
Essex	2,326
Southend-on-Sea	307
Thurrock	268
Herefordshire	271
Worcestershire	874
Kent	2,465
Medway Towns	527
Lancashire	2,064
Blackburn with Darwen	309
Blackpool	239
Nottinghamshire	1,305
Nottingham City	506
Shropshire	441
The Wrekin	293
Cornwall	836
Cumbria	862
Gloucestershire	947
Hertfordshire	1,975
Isle of Wight	240
Lincolnshire	1,113
Norfolk	1,273
Northamptonshire	1,135
Northumberland	565
Oxfordshire	962
Somerset	780
Suffolk	1,109
Surrey	1,589
Warwickshire	824
West Sussex	1,195

TREASURY

Golden Jubilee (Commemorative Coin)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans Her Majesty's Government have to issue a coin to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth's accession to the throne. [104810]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Her Majesty The Queen has been graciously pleased to approve my recommendation that in 2002 a crown piece should be issued to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of Her Majesty's accession to the throne. Further details will be announced in due course.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the objectives and purpose of each working group participating in the Outline National Changeover Plan. [105658]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Details of the working groups are outlined in pages 8 and 9 of HM Treasury's "Third Report on euro preparations" which was published in November 1999. Copies of the report were placed in the Library of the House.

Beer Duty

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will reduce the duty on beer. [105357]

Mr. Timms: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget Statement.

Exports

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the effect of the strength of the pound on UK exports in the last 12 months. [105413]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Export volumes have grown strongly since early 1999, with the third quarter level up 6 per cent. on a year earlier, and CBI surveys show that exporters' optimism improved steadily throughout the year.

Smuggling

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer of the smuggling of petrol and diesel into the UK in each of the last three years. [105359]

Mr. Timms: HM Customs and Excise does not have sufficient reliable information on which to base published estimates of the revenue lost through road fuel smuggling into the UK.

Information Technology Services Agency

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the outsourcing of the Information Technology Services Agency will be subject to pre-contract review by the Treasury PFI Taskforce. [105195]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Yes. The outsourcing of the Information Technology Services Agency is a part of the ACCORD PFI project with which the Treasury Taskforce is closely involved, and it will be subject to a pre-contract review which will be carried out by the Taskforce in association with the McCartney Committee which has been set up to examine the lessons that can be learnt from past Government IT projects and to give guidance on the conduct of future projects.

Interest Rates

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the annual cumulative savings to the Exchequer which would result from lower debt interest costs if United Kingdom interest rates were (a) 0.5 per cent., (b) 0.75 per cent., (c) 1 per cent., (d) 2 per cent. and (e) 3 per cent. lower across the yield curve for (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01, (iii) 2001–02, (iv) 2002–03, (v) 2003–04 and (vi) 2004–05. [105428]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The information is in the table.

Cumulative savings in debt interest

£ billion

Percentage point change in interest rates	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
-0.5	–0.3	–0.6	–1.0	–1.4	–1.8	–2.3
-0.75	–0.5	–1.0	–1.5	–2.1	–2.7	–3.4
-1.0	–0.6	–1.3	–2.0	–2.8	–3.6	–4.5
-2.0	–1.3	–2.6	–4.0	–5.5	–7.1	–8.9
-3.0	–1.9	–3.8	–5.9	–8.1	–10.5	–13.2

Note:
Figures shown are cumulative from the current year to date, i.e. the figures for 2004–05 represent the savings in debt interest over the whole five year period.

Benefit Claimants (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in Tamworth were unemployed and claiming benefit in (a) 1997 and (b) 1999. [105152]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated 18 January 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on how many people in Tamworth were unemployed and claiming benefit in (a) 1997 and (b) 1999.

The ONS publish a monthly count of claimants of unemployment-related benefits. The claimant count consists of all people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance or National Insurance credits at Employment Service local offices. They must declare that they are out of work, capable of, available for and actively seeking work during the week in which the claim is made.

The average unadjusted claimant count level in the Tamworth constituency was 1,775 or 4.5% of the workforce in 1997 and 1,633 or 4.1% of the workforce in 1999*.

* Average of 11 months: January to November 1999.

CABINET OFFICE

Civil Service

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what criteria are used to determine the civil service grades classified as politically free groups. [105615]

Mr. Stringer: Operating within the scope of the Servants of the Crown (Parliamentary, European Parliamentary and Northern Ireland Assembly Candidature) Order 1987, departments and agencies must allow civil servants in industrial and non-office grades the freedom to take part in all political activities.

DEFENCE

RAF Future Procurement

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons his Department ordered a review of the proposals for the RAF's airlifts requirement; and how long he expects this review to take. [104403]

Mr. Spellar: We are continuing to assess the proposals for both our short term and longer term airlift requirements. We are seeking the best value for money solution to our airlift requirements and hope to be in a position to make a decision early this year.

Territorial Army

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps, and at what cost, he is taking (a) to increase recruitment into the Territorial Army and (b) to increase the retention of personnel. [103929]

Mr. Spellar: Activity to attract recruits to the Territorial Army (TA) falls into two categories:

recruit marketing which is managed centrally by Headquarters Land Command and Recruiting Group and at local and regional level by Territorial, Auxiliary and Volunteer Reserve Associations (TAVRAs), and direct recruiting which is the responsibility of Unit Commanding Officers.

Over the last 12–18 months, recruit marketing work to maintain awareness of the TA and to engender a good recruiting environment for the future has comprised:

Date/event	Cost
1998–99 Normal trickle recruit marketing culminating in a major Spring Awareness National and Regional Campaign and TA Open Day (13 March 1999). This included the making of a new TV commercial.	£5.94 million
1998–99 Corporate Communication strategy developed and delivered in conjunction with Consolidated Communications PR. This included News sheets, Bulletins, leaflet, wide-ranging PR and Video.	£280k
1999–2000 By Spring 2000 the year's recruit marketing will have cost £5.3 million. Specific marketing includes a focused Army Medical Service TA Recruit Marketing Campaign (£500,000), an Autumn campaign mainly in cinemas, and a Spring campaign culminating in TA Day on 25 March 2000. The Campaign will include TV at National level, with support from radio and press at Regional level.	£5.3 million

It is not possible to identify separately the money spent by individual units on direct recruiting because these costs are inextricably linked to payments to individual soldiers.

As far as retention is concerned, the assurance given under the Strategic Defence Review that the TA would be fully resourced and that the TA is to be more usable, relevant and integrated, combined with realistic and exciting training on current equipment, will encourage volunteers to serve on. Over the last 18 months, a TA Retention Working Group has been producing a report which includes a Three Year Retention Action Plan. This contains a number of new ideas and initiatives. In advance of finalisation of the report, three relatively inexpensive but important measures have been achieved:

Introduction of a Retention Brochure—£25,000.

Introduction of TA Record of Service and Achievement (TARSA) with a TA soldier can use to record both his military and civilian skills, thus allowing a direct read across from one to the other—£50,000. It is planned that this work on TARSA should migrate into the pan-Army development of Personal Development Records (PDR), which is part of the Adjutant Generals Human Resources Strategy and links with "Learning Force Measures".

Setting of in-year targets for all units with a view to reducing the level of avoidable wastage from the TA. Overall wastage is currently about 30 per cent. and the target for 2000–01 will be set at 27 per cent.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice he has issued to the Territorial Army on compliance with the working time directive. [105624]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Raytheon Systems

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the contract with Raytheon Systems for 5 Air Bourne stand-off radar will be spent with (a) UK-based companies, (b) other Europe-based companies and (c) US-based companies. [104833]

Mr. Spellar: About 75 per cent. of the contract will be spent with UK-based companies. The remainder will mainly be spent with US/Canadian based companies. Raytheon have undertaken to provide additional work to UK companies to bring the total to 100 per cent. of the contract value.

Medical Reserves

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he has taken to implement the proposal outlined in paragraph 106 of the Strategic Defence Review to call out medical reserves at lower scales of effort; and what assessment he has made of the level of success in establishing this proposal without disruption to the National Health Service. [104807]

Mr. Spellar: My Department and the Department of Health are currently progressing work to assess the implications for the National Health Service of deploying substantial numbers of Territorial Army and other medical Reservists on military operations, should that prove necessary. The initial stages of this work are expected to be completed by this summer.

Kosovo

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the adequacy of accommodation for British forces in Kosovo in the absence of the planned temporary field accommodation; and if he will make a statement. [104798]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 17 January 2000]: In order to bridge the gap between the current in-service tentage and the more robust Temporary Field

Accommodation, an interim solution, known as Improved Tented Camps, has been put in place. This has been a great success which has provided warm, dry and comfortable accommodation and met with the approval of the British forces who use it.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Salisbury of 10 January 2000, Official Report, column 92W, for what reasons the temporary field accommodation project in Kosovo was not fully deployed by December 1999; and under contract penalty clauses how much of the cost he will claw back from the contractor. [104797]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 17 January 2000]: The original requirement and camp build sequence were drawn up before UK forces had entered Kosovo. Delays have been caused partly by the need to change the requirement and Temporary Field Accommodation (TFA) camp build sequence to reflect the circumstances actually encountered on entry into Kosovo and partly by supply, communications, transport and technical problems experienced by the contractor. Improved tented camps have been made available which provide a good enhancement to accommodation standards. Under the TFA contract we are withholding a significant element of the payment for each camp pending completion and will seek liquidated damages where delay can be shown to be the fault of the contractor.

Royal Marines Rifle Range, Deal

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the report on the long-term management of the redundant Royal Marines rifle range at Kingsdown in Deal, commissioned by his Department in 1988 and conducted by the consultants Mouchel, will be made available to Dover District Council. [105210]

Mr. Spellar: Mouchels sent their report to W. S. Atkins, as Dover District Council's technical consultants, on 7 January 2000.

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received in connection with coastal protection work at the redundant Royal Marines rifle range at Kingsdown in Deal. [105209]

Mr. Spellar: My Department has received representations from, and been in dialogue over a number of years with, various individuals and bodies about aspects of the future of Kingsdown Range, including coastal protection issues. These include the present hon. Member for Dover and his predecessor as MP, Dover District Council, Kent County Council, Ringwould with Kingsdown Parish Council and a number of members of the public.

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he intends taking in the immediate term to prevent the potential collapse of Undercliff Road at the redundant Royal Marines rifle range at Kingsdown in Deal into the sea. [105211]

Mr. Spellar: Undercliffe Road is a public road and neither the property nor responsibility of my Department, but of Dover District Council, who are statutorily empowered to take what action it considers appropriate to protect its road from the sea.

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects works to commence to secure the long-term future of Undercliff Road at the redundant Royal Marines rifle range at Kingsdown in Deal in line with proposals made by his Department in May 1996. [105212]

Mr. Spellar: My Department did not in May 1996, nor has at any other time, make proposals to carry out work intended to secure the long-term future of Undercliffe Road. As a public road, it is neither the property nor the responsibility of my Department, but of Dover District Council.

Far East Prisoners of War

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of ex-servicemen and women who are former Far East prisoners of war. [105239]

Mr. Spellar: 50,016 Service personnel from the Armed Forces of the United Kingdom were captured by Japanese forces during the Second World War. No centrally collated figures exist of the number of former FEPOWS still living since, once their military liability had ended, any subsequent deaths of ex-Service personnel were not centrally recorded.

Sandhurst

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 January 2000, Official Report, columns 89–90W, on Sandhurst, how many of the British officer cadets who were medically discharged from the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst, in each of the years 1995 to 1999 received their secondary education at (a) Welbeck College, (b) state schools, (c) independent schools and (d) overseas schools. [105241]

Mr. Spellar: From the records available, the information requested is as follows:

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Welbeck College	2	2	3	2	—
State Schools	19	13	10	11	3
Independent Schools	18	11	7	3	3
Overseas Schools	1	—	—	—	—
Number Recorded	—	—	2	3	—
Total	40	26	22	19	6

Nuclear Deterrent

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in implementing the aspects of the Strategic Defence Review relating to the nuclear deterrent; and if he will make a statement. [105643]

Mr. Hoon: The SDR conducted a rigorous re-examination of our deterrence requirements. The Government have made it clear that we shall maintain the minimum credible nuclear deterrent while working towards the global elimination of nuclear weapons. The longer-term goals of arms control, non-proliferation and multilateral disarmament were advanced considerably by a range of SDR measures. In addition to announcing Trident as the UK's only nuclear weapon system, these included: a reduction in the number of warheads deployed in each submarine; a significant reduction in the size of the UK's total nuclear weapon stockpile; the de-targeting of Trident missiles; having only one submarine on deterrent patrol, and the placing of the submarine on deterrent patrol at several days' notice to fire. These measures have all been introduced.

Following a trial period of moving towards single crewing of SSBNs, we have however decided to retain double crews. This decision reflects our determination, as part of our policy for people, to minimise the pressure on our service personnel and give them greater stability and time with their families.

Married Quarters

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the locations where there are more than 100 married quarters. [105562]

Mr. Spellar: A list of locations where there are more than 100 married quarters is as follows:

Chivenor
Culdrose
Lympstone
Plymouth
St. Eval
St. Mawgan
Torpoint
Colerne
Corsham
Rudloe Manor
Devizes
Hullavington
Locking
Lyneham
South Cerney
Taunton
Warminster
Wroughton
Yeovil
Brecon
Chepstow
Haverfordwest
Hereford
Innsworth
St. Athan
Cosford
Donnington
Kineton
Lichfield
Nuneaton
Shawbury
Stafford
Ternhill
Blanford
Bovington
Poole
Portland
Weymouth
Andover
Larkhill
Middle Wallop
RAF Boscombe Down
Upavon
Wilton
Drayton
Eastney
Fareham
Hilsea
Marchwood
Old Rowner
Paulsgrove
Stamshaw
Thorney Island
Winchester
Worthy Down
Bulford
Tidworth
Aborfield
Bracknell
Hermitage, Thatcham
Sandhurst
Shrivenham
Aldershot
Waddington
Wittering
Dishforth
Fulford
Gatenby
Harrogate
Hemswell Cliff
Kirton in Linsey
Leconfield
Linton on Ouse
Ripon
Strensall
Topcliffe
Catterick (N)
Catterick (S)
Longhoughton
Newcastle-upon-Tyne
Benbecula
Lossiemouth
Aldershot North Camp
Bordon
Burghfield
Church Crookham
Cove
Deepcut
Farnborough
Odiham
Pirbright
Heston
Salamanca Park
Bushey
Mill Hill
Northolt
Northwood
Stanmore Park

Uxbridge
Whetstone
Chelsea
Hounslow
Kingston
Knightsbridge
Putney
Victoria
Windsor
Woolwich
Canterbury
Chatham
Dover
Maidstone
Shorncliffe
Abingdon
Benson
Bicester
Brize Norton
High Wycombe
Basic Bassingbourne
Brampton
Chicksand
Halton
Henlow
Oakington
Waterbeach
Wyton
Coltishall
Honington
Marham
Swanton Morley
Colchester
Wattisham
Wimbish
Woodbridge
Chester
Preston
Sealand
Valley
Chilwell
Coningsby
Cranwell
Digby
Leicester (Wigston)
North Luffenham
RAF Cottesmore
Scampton
Churchill
Colgrain
Machrihanish
Rhu
Arbroath
Dreghorn
Leuchars
Longstone
Polton
Redford
Rosyth
Buchan
Elgin
Forres
Inverness
Kinloss.

Bullying

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what recent measures he has taken to stop bullying in the armed forces; [105223]

(2) what percentage of armed forces personnel who have gone absent without leave gave bullying as the main reason for absconding in each of the last three years; [105217]

(3) what is the recorded incidence of bullying in each branch of the armed forces for each of the past 10 years; [105218]

(4) if he will publish a breakdown by regiment of incidents of bullying in each of the past 10 years; [105219]

(5) if he will make it his policy to collate information on incidents of (a) racial, (b) sexual, (c) verbal and (d) physical bullying; [105220]

(6) what help is offered to victims of bullying in the armed services; [105221]

(7) how many armed forces personnel have been disciplined for bullying in each branch of the armed services for each of the last 10 years. [105222]

Mr. Spellar: There is not a specific military offence of bullying in the Services.

Any information provided on reported incidents or complaints of bullying, or what is perceived as bullying by the victim, leading to personnel being subsequently charged with a disciplinary offence, is complicated by the number of different specific charge which could be more generally interpreted as bullying. Furthermore, not all disciplinary cases are processed through the Court-Martial system; some cases of a less serious nature might well be dealt with by a Commanding Officer summarily, and are only recorded on local personnel files. Each individual file would therefore need to be searched manually to provide appropriate data. This could be completed only at a disproportionate cost.

Similar difficulties apply in determining whether Service personnel go Absent Without Leave (AWOL) because of bullying. The only way to determine a cause for AWOL would be to examine every Service interview record following the return of an absentee. This could be completed only at a disproportionate cost.

The Services policy, which is promulgated to all personnel, is that bullying, or sexual and racial harassment, will not be tolerated. Furthermore, before enlistment procedures are carried out, recruits are made aware of the Services' policies on bullying and harassment. It is the responsibility of officers and senior ranks/rates to preserve good order and discipline at all times, and this is reinforced on the appropriate training courses. All allegations of bullying or ill-treatment are investigated, and depending on the strength of the evidence, appropriate disciplinary action is taken against the perpetrators. The policy of zero tolerance towards bullying was re-emphasised when the new code of social conduct was issued to all personnel on 12 January 2000. All these measures are kept under review and re-focused as necessary.

Additionally, the Services have produced Equal Opportunities Directives and pamphlets, which emphasise that bullying, and racial or sexual harassment are unacceptable, and give guidance on making complaints.

Within the last 18 months, the Services have also set up confidential telephone helplines. The contact numbers are well publicised throughout the Services and are accessible to all personnel. While there is some difference in the methods of operation, the Services hope that personnel will use the helplines should they be subjected to harassment or bullying, or would welcome advice if they wish to discuss issues in complete confidence. All those in positions of authority have a responsibility for personnel under their command. Individuals can make their case known through the chain of command, direct, to their commanding officer, medical officer or padre if they do not feel that the initial support offered is adequate.

All three Services have been required, since December 1997, to record and submit quarterly returns to the Ministry of Defence detailing all formal complaints to the chain of command of sexual and racial discrimination and bullying. The details of each complaint record whether the specific complaint is physical or verbal in nature. There are some differences between the Services in the way that information is recorded, and some of the information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The information that is available is being collated. I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the House.

Warships (Portsmouth)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the Royal Navy warships in Portsmouth Harbour at 0900 hours on (a) 2 January, (b) 9 January and (c) 16 January. [104925]

Mr. Spellar: The following Royal Navy warships were scheduled to be in Portsmouth harbour on the specified dates:

Warships in Portsmouth Naval base at 0900

Ship	Type	2 January 2000	9 January 2000	16 January 2000
Anglesey	Patrol vessel	Yes	No	No
Atherstone	MCMV[1]	Yes	No	No
Bangor	Mine hunter	Yes	Yes	Yes
Berkeley	MCMV	Yes	No	No
Bicester	MCMV	Yes	Yes	Yes
Birmingham	T42	Yes	No	No
Blazer	Fast training boat	Yes	Yes	No
Brocklesby	MCMV	Yes	No	No
Cardiff	T42	Yes	Yes	Yes
Cattistock	MCMV	Yes	Yes	Yes
Chiddingfold	MCMV	Yes	Yes	Yes
Dasher	Fast training boat	Yes	Yes	No
Edinburgh	T42	Yes	Yes	Yes
Endurance	Ice patrol ship	Yes	No	No
Fearless	Landing platform dock	Yes	Yes	Yes
Glasgow	T42	Yes	Yes	Yes
Gloucester	T42	Yes	Yes	Yes
Grafton	T23	Yes	Yes	Yes
Grimsby	Mine hunter	Yes	Yes	No
Guernsey	Patrol vessel	Yes	Yes	No
Hurworth	MCMV	Yes	No	No
Illustrious	Aircraft carrier	Yes	Yes	Yes
Intrepid	Landing platform dock	Yes	Yes	Yes
Invincible	Aircraft carrier	Yes	Yes	Yes
Iron Duke	T23	Yes	Yes	Yes
Leeds Castle	Patrol vessel	Yes	Yes	Yes
Lindisfarne	Patrol vessel	Yes	Yes	Yes
Liverpool	T42	Yes	Yes	Yes
Manchester	T42	Yes	Yes	Yes
Marlborough	T23	Yes	Yes	Yes
Middleton	MCMV	Yes	Yes	Yes
Newcastle	T42	Yes	Yes	No
Pembroke	MCMV	Yes	Yes	No
Puncher	Fast training boat	No	Yes	Yes
Pursuer	Fast training boat	Yes	Yes	Yes
Quorn	MCMV	Yes	Yes	No
Raider	Fast training boat	Yes	Yes	No
Richmond	T23	Yes	Yes	Yes
Shetland	Patrol vessel	Yes	Yes	Yes
Southampton	T42	Yes	Yes	Yes
Tracker	Fast training boat	No	Yes	Yes
Westminster	T23	Yes	Yes	Yes
York	T42

[1] MCMV mine counter measures vessel

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Defence Evaluation Research Agency. [105623]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Dunfermline, West (Ms Squire) on 26 October 1999, Official Report, column 768W.

RAF Pilots

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how under strength the RAF is with regard to qualified (a) fast jet and (b) support aircraft pilots. [105620]

Mr. Spellar: The position is as follows:

	Requirement [1, 2]	Trained strength [3]	+/–
All ranks—Fast Jet	882	857	–25
All ranks—Multi Engine/Rotary Wing	1,315	1,360	+45
Total	2,197	2,217	+20
Junior Officer Pilot[4]—Fast Jet	554	459	–95

[1] Includes non-flying posts for which aircrew experience and knowledge are required. The majority of these non-flying posts require senior officers.
[2] 1 April 2000.
[3] 1 December 1999.
[4] Flight lieutenant (and squadron leader specialist aircrew) and below included in all ranks total. This is the RAF's most critical manning category.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many qualified (a) fast jet and (b) support aircraft RAF pilots are currently undertaking non-flying duties. [105619]

Mr. Spellar: The number of qualified pilots who, on 1 December 1999, were not filling specific flying appointments, was as follows:

	Number
All ranks—Fast Jet	298
All ranks—Multi Engine and Rotary Wing	428
Total	726

These pilots were either filling ground appointments or were on approved Manning and Training Margin activity, which included those undertaking further flying training.

Cancelled Military Activities

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the eight (a) NATO and (b) UN exercises that went ahead without the planned UK participation; [105617]

(2) if he will list the deployments and exercises cancelled in the 1999–2000 financial year to help (a) alleviate overstretch and (b) achieve financial savings. [105616]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Greater London Defence Estates Study

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Greater London Defence Estates Study will be completed. [105621]

Mr. Spellar: The initial phase of the strategic review of MOD's estate in the London area identified several proposals which could lead to further estate being vacated. Since then, in a still ongoing second phase of work, the current users of the estate have been undertaking detailed studies to verify the validity of these proposals and we expect to be able to announce some of the results arising from this work later this year.

Our review of the Estate in London, as elsewhere, is constantly evolving and in the case of the London Study there will be a further phase of work (Phase III) to take forward the implementation of the current work as well as to review the potential for further rationalisation of the London Estate.

War Stocks

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the inquiry into war stocks will be completed. [105622]

Mr. Spellar: Cm 3999 (The Strategic Defence Review) indicated that we would be looking at the longer-term scope for reducing the war reserves of ammunition and guided weapons as a result of longer post-Cold War readiness preparation times. A review of war reserves of key munitions and guided weapons is expected to be completed this year. Stockpiles of munitions will then be reviewed on a regular basis as part of the normal departmental planning process.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

EU Enlargement

15. Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made on the enlargement of the EU following the Helsinki Council meeting. [104204]

16. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent developments in the European Union enlargement process. [104205]

26. Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made on the enlargement of the EU following the Helsinki Council meeting. [104217]

Mr. Vaz: The Helsinki European Council agreed to invite six more countries to open negotiations in February and decided that Turkey is a candidate for membership. The European Council agreed that the EU should have institutional reforms in place and be in a position to welcome new Member States from the end of 2002. The UK fully supports these developments.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects Poland and Hungary to become full members of the European Union; and what assessment he has made of the implications for the Common Agricultural Policy. [104202]

Mr. Vaz: The Helsinki European Council in December agreed that the EU will make every effort to be able to receive new members from 2002. Poland and Hungary, like other applicant countries, have been making good progress in their preparations for enlargement. We want these countries to join the European Union as soon as they are able to meet the obligations of membership. It is too early to say when this will be.

Poland and Hungary both have significant agricultural sectors. Their membership will strengthen the case for further reform of the Common Agricultural Policy, which the UK supports.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, when he last met his colleagues from other member states of the European Union, they discussed matters relating to the enlargement of the EU and the timetable for the acceptance of the applicant states. [104207]

Mr. Vaz: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State discussed enlargement of the EU with his colleagues at the Helsinki European Council in December. The European Council agreed that the EU will make every effort to be able to receive new members from 2002. Applicant states have been making good progress in their preparations for enlargement. We want these countries to join the European Union as soon as they are able to meet the obligations of membership. It is too early to say when this will be.

Africa

18. Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the United States over recent developments in Africa. [104209]

Mr. Peter Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier in the House today to my hon. Friend the Member for Enfield, North (Ms Ryan), column 678.

Cyprus

19. Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the efforts to find a settlement for the situation in Cyprus. [104210]

Mr. Vaz: We warmly welcomed the launch of UN proximity talks in New York in December preparing for the negotiations of a comprehensive settlement in Cyprus.

We strongly endorse the UN Secretary-General's intention to continue these talks early this year and will give him every support in his efforts.

Falkland Islands

20. Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future status of the Falkland Islands. [104211]

Mr. Battle: We have good relations with the Government of Argentina. Former President Menem's visit to Britain assisted in the process of reconciliation and paved the way for the agreement of last July resolving communications with the Falkland Islands and co-operation on fish stocks in the South Atlantic. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary invited the Foreign Minister of the new Government to visit Britain and hopes to meet him next week in the margins of an international conference.

Indonesia

21. Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made over the future territorial integrity of Indonesia. [104212]

Mr. Battle: The statement by the EU Presidency on the situation in Aceh on 26 November 1999 makes it clear that we wish to see a peaceful resolution of separatist tensions in Indonesia. The EU supports in particular an inclusive dialogue between all concerned.

Drugs Trade

22. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department has taken to combat the drugs trade, with particular reference to Latin America. [104213]

Mr. Battle: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given earlier today in the House to my hon. Friend the Member for Motherwell and Wishaw (Mr. Roy), columns 474-75.

Chechnya

23. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent meetings he has held with elected representatives of the people of Chechnya. [104214]

Mr. Vaz: I have not met Chechen representatives. FCO officials had a private meeting with two Chechen parliamentarians, Mr. Idigov and Mr. Magomedov, on 15 December to hear their views on the situation in Chechnya.

EU (Trade and Finance)

24. Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in co-operation with EU partners over matters of trade and finance in the past 12 months. [104215]

Mr. Vaz: We have been working closely with our EU partners to improve the functioning of the EU economy—work that will help to increase employment and prosperity throughout the 15 member states. That policy approach is outlined in the Presidency Conclusions from the Cologne and Helsinki European Councils.

Palestinian Refugees

25. Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation of Palestinian refugees in (a) Gaza, (b) the West Bank and (c) elsewhere in the Middle East, indicating the assistance Her Majesty's Government have given since 1969. [104216]

27. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Palestinian refugees. [104218]

Mr. Hain: At the end of 1998 the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) were caring for 790,000 refugees registered in the Gaza Strip, 560,000 in the West Bank and 2,220,000 elsewhere in the Middle East.

Through our bilateral contribution to UNRWA and our share of EU funding, we are the largest EU contributor to UNRWA, and the second largest contributor globally (second only to the US), so we make a very significant contribution to alleviating the condition of Palestinian refugees.

The status of Palestinian refugees is also of great importance, and among the main issues to be resolved in negotiations between the countries of the region. The Government have repeatedly made clear their concern for the Palestinian refugees. The Foreign Secretary visited Deir al-Balah refugee camp in the Gaza Strip on 25 October, and will tomorrow visit the Beqaa refugee camp in Jordan.

Russia

28. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to discuss with his Russian counterpart attacks on Jewish people and their property in Russia. [104219]

Mr. Keith Vaz: Anti-semitism and other human rights issues are regular subjects of discussion in my meetings with my Russian counterpart. My officials also raised our concerns on anti-semitism in the recent annual UK/Russia human rights talks in London.

We will continue to be active on this issue.

Iran

29. Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last made representations to the Government of Iran on the 13 Jews arrested on charges of espionage. [104220]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary raised the cases of those detained on espionage charges, including 13 members of the Iranian Jewish community, with Foreign Minister Kharrazi during his visit from 10–12 January. Dr. Kharrazi assured them both that those detained would receive a fair trial including access to families and legal representation.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of the Russian Federation relating to the supply of missile-related goods and technology to Iran. [104771]

Mr. Hain: We are concerned that a number of Russian companies and institutions may have exported missile-related goods and technology to Iran. This would not be consistent with Russia's commitments under the terms of the conventions and export control regimes of which she is a member.

We regularly discuss these concerns with the Government of the Russian Federation, both bilaterally and in multilateral fora, such as the Missile Technology Control Regime (MTCR).

During the visit of my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to Russia from 3–5 March 1999, he discussed the dangers of exporting weapons and related technology to the Middle East.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports he has received on Iran's ability to produce missiles with a range of more than 500 miles. [104768]

Mr. Hain: In conjunction with other government departments we regularly assess Iran's ability to produce long range ballistic missiles, drawing on numerous sources.

We and our EU partners remain concerned by Iran's development of the Shahab-3 ballistic missile, with a range of 1300kms. We regularly engage the Iranian authorities on proliferation issues and have urged Iran to refrain from the further development of such missiles, while understanding Iran's legitimate security concerns.

We are aware that Iran has ambitions to develop a satellite launch vehicle capability.

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Iran since the testing of the Shahab-3 missile in July 1999. [104855]

Mr. Hain: We have established regular dialogue with the Government of Iran on non-proliferation issues. During our contacts, while mindful of legitimate Iranian security concerns, we have repeatedly stressed the importance we attach to global efforts to limit the development of long range ballistic missiles, and shall continue to do so.

During the official visit to the UK of the Iranian Minister of Foreign Affairs Dr. Kamal Kharrazi from 10–12 January, Dr. Kharrazi and the Secretary of State agreed to continue dialogue on bilateral, regional and international political issues.

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what intelligence reports he has received regarding the range, payload capacity and purpose of the Shahab-4 missile currently under development in Iran. [104857]

Mr. Hain: My hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, North-East will understand the security constraints that prevent us from discussing intelligence reporting.

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his assessment of Iran's capability to produce nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and their delivery systems without outside help. [104854]

Mr. Hain: In conjunction with other Government Departments, we regularly assess the status of efforts by a number of countries to develop or acquire weapons of mass destruction and the means to deliver them. Such assessments draw heavily on intelligence sources and we are therefore unable to comment further.

Iran is a Non-Nuclear-Weapon State Party to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and a State Party to the Chemical Weapons Convention and the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention. We continue to encourage Iran to respect these treaties and to comply fully with its obligations under them.

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) the evidence of the involvement of Hamas in terrorism and (b) the threat from Hamas to UK interests. [104859]

Mr. Battle: Any such assessment of Hamas's involvement could only be made from intelligence sources and would, therefore, be exempted from disclosure under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on access to Government Information.

Hamas leaders have repeatedly stated publicly that their area of activity is Israel and that they have no policy of attacking external interests. UK interests are therefore not directly targeted, although we condemn terrorism in all its forms and at whomever it is directed.

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the evidence concerning financial links between Iran and Hamas; and if he will make a statement. [104858]

Mr. Battle: This Government and our EU colleagues have frequently raised with the Iranians our concerns about their support for groups who use violent methods to oppose the Middle East Peace Process and will continue to do so. Any assessment by HMG of the extent of the financial links could only come from intelligence and is, therefore, exempted from disclosure under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on access to Government Information.

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the range of the Shahab-3 missile tested by Iran in July 1999 and of the countries that fall within its range. [104856]

Mr. Hain: We regularly discuss proliferation issues with Iran and have frequently expressed our concern about Iranian attempts to develop ballistic missile systems. We remain particularly concerned by Iran's development of the Shahab-3 ballistic missile, with a range of 1,300kms and therefore capable of reaching any of the neighbouring countries within this range. Such a system could pose a threat to stability in the region.

Iran is not the only country in the region to possess such technology, and we understand Iran's legitimate security concerns. However we continue to urge Iran to refrain from the development of ballistic missiles.

Iraq

30. Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the UK's relationship with Iraq. [104221]

Mr. Hain: As a permanent member of the UN Security Council, our relationship with Iraq is governed by the need to ensure Iraqi compliance with its obligations under Security Council resolutions. The most recent of these is SCR 1284, adopted on 17 December, after months of negotiations led by the UK. SCR 1284 establishes a new platform for the UN's dealings with Iraq, with provisions covering disarmament, humanitarian and Kuwaiti issues. Our priority now is its implementation.

Middle East Peace Process

31. Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the middle east peace process. [104222]

Mr. Hain: We welcome the recent progress in the resumption of talks on the Syrian track. Progress will undoubtedly be hard work, but both sides have already shown a high degree of commitment to intensive talks and we hope a just and lasting agreement will follow.

Implementation of the Sharm el-Sheikh Memorandum by the Israelis and Palestinians is proceeding again, after a short hiatus. We wish both parties every success in their negotiations towards a Framework Agreement for Permanent Status, due in February. The United Kingdom will support them in any way it can in their search for an agreement.

Montenegro

32. Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Government policy towards Montenegro. [104223]

34. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in Montenegro. [104225]

Mr. Vaz: The UK Government are keeping a close eye on the situation in Montenegro. We continue to support the reformist and democratic Government of President Djukanovic and will work with our EU partners to encourage the extension of the culture of democracy in Montenegro to the whole of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

Intergovernmental Conference

33. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals for treaty changes he plans to place on the agenda at the forthcoming Inter-Governmental Conference. [104224]

Mr. Keith Vaz: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary earlier in the House today to the hon. Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson), columns 668-69.

EU Charter of Fundamental Rights

35. Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the expected contents of the EU Charter of Fundamental Rights. [104226]

Mr. Keith Vaz: The Charter drafting body has only just started its work. The first meeting on 17 December 1999 was largely procedural. The next meeting on 1–2 February will be the first opportunity to discuss substance, though exchanges at this stage are likely to be fairly general. But the conclusions of the Cologne European council in June 1999 provide an indication of the ground that might be covered.

Nuclear Proliferation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department has received a copy of the report of the US Director of Central Intelligence made to the US Congress on 2 February 1999 on the Acquisition of Technology Relating to Weapons of Mass Destruction and Advanced Conventional Munitions; and if he will make a statement on its contents. [104782]

Mr. Hain: The Department of the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs is aware of the report referred to by my hon. Friend, but did not receive a copy.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last made representations to the Russian Government about the role Russian companies are playing in the construction of the nuclear power plant in Bushehr, Iran; and what assurances he has sought to ensure that the plant is purely for civilian use. [104785]

Mr. Vaz: In March 1999 my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed with Foreign Minister Ivanov the dangers of arms exports and technology assistance to countries of concern. Officials also raise these concerns, including the specific case of Bushehr, during regular meetings with the Russians on export control and strategic stability issues. The Russians assure us that their assistance for Bushehr is limited to civil nuclear applications and subject to IAEA safeguards. We are watching the situation closely.

State-sponsored Terrorism

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what data his Department compiles on countries which sponsor terrorist organisations; and if he will publish it. [104770]

Mr. Battle: This Government condemn state sponsorship of terrorism and monitor closely any evidence of such activities. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office makes the responsible Governments aware of our concerns when they arise. The information the hon. Member asks to be published is, however, exempted from disclosure under Exemption 1 (Defence, Security and International Relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Ethiopia

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Government are taking to encourage the Ethiopian administration to accept the technical arrangements for the implementation of the framework agreement to resolve the conflict with Eritrea. [104804]

Mr. Hain: We have made it clear to Ethiopia and Eritrea that we and the international community want an early and negotiated settlement to this conflict. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development and I underlined this message in meetings with the Ethiopian Foreign Minister on 9 December.

Since then, the Ethiopian Government has received from the Organisation of African Unity clarification of several queries about the Technical Arrangements. We now await a response from the Government.

France

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet representatives of the Government of France; and if he will make a statement. [105010]

Mr. Vaz: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary next plans to meet Foreign Minister M. Hubert Vedrine at the General Affairs Council in Brussels on 24 January. I met members of the French Government at the Franco—British colloque on 14 January.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of the British Embassy in Paris in easing the plight of British hauliers in France. [105011]

Mr. Vaz: During the recent road haulier's dispute in France, the British Embassy in Paris was in regular contact with the French authorities at both the national and local levels. Their aim was to encourage an early end to the dispute and to ensure the safety and well-being of British drivers. The Embassy also provided regular updates and advice on the situation in France to the Road Hauliers Association and the Freight Transport Association in the UK, to British drivers stranded in France, and to Government Ministries in Whitehall. The Freight Transport Association has thanked the Embassy for their advice and assistance.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last spoke to a representative of the Government of France; and if he will make a statement. [105009]

Mr. Vaz: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is in regular contact with Foreign Minister M. Hubert Vedrine and maintains a dialogue with him on a wide range of issues of mutual interest. I also meet my counterpart, M. Pierre Moscovici, regularly.

Libyan Scud Missiles

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date he was first informed of the discovery at Gatwick Airport of scud missile parts en route to Libya; and what considerations underlay the timing of the release of information on the matter to the media. [105080]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon (Mr. Maples) on 17 January 2000, Official Report, column 326W.

"Your Britain, Your Europe" Roadshow

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the constituencies visited by the "Your Britain, Your Europe" Roadshow; and how the destinations were chosen. [105693]

Mr. Vaz: I visited Newcastle, Hull, Rotherham, Manchester, Bristol, Bath, Nuneaton, Birmingham and Leicester, each of which is a regional centre of population. This covered the constituencies of: Sedgefield; Tyne Bridge; Gateshead and Washington, East; Houghton and Washington, East; Hull, North; Rotherham; Manchester, Central; Wythenshawe and Sale, East; Bristol, South; Bath; Nuneaton; Birmingham Ladywood and Leicester, South. In each town or city we visited a variety of venues to meet a broad spectrum of society. This included calls on EU funded projects and visits to companies, schools and universities. All local Members of Parliament and Members of the European Parliament were informed of my visit and given the opportunity to participate.

European Court of Justice

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the European Court of Justice has completed the review of its operations and procedures; and if he will place a copy of the review in the Library. [105720]

Mr. Vaz: The Court of Justice submitted a paper to the Council of Ministers on 10 May putting forward ideas on the future of the European Union's judicial system. A copy of the paper has been placed in the Library.

The proposed reforms are designed to improve the workings of the Court, including greater flexibility in the application of the Court's Rules of procedure to facilitate the handling of complex or urgent cases. The proposals should therefore allow the Court to cope more quickly and efficiently with its ever increasing workload.

Some of the proposed reforms would require Treaty change. These might be considered by member states either as part of the IGC or in parallel process.

International Criminal Court

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made on establishing an International Criminal Court; and if he will make a statement. [104198]

Mr. Hain: The Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court was adopted on 17 July 1998. Since then 92 States, including the UK, have signed the Statute and six have ratified. The Court will be established once 60 States have ratified. A Preparatory Commission is making good progress on drafting important subsidiary documents to the Statute.

India (UK Citizens)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received about United Kingdom citizens experiencing difficulties in arranging for funds to be remitted from bank accounts in India to the UK; and if he will make a statement. [104901]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 17 January 2000]: We are aware of the difficulties faced by UK citizens in remitting funds from India. High Commission staff in India are active in assisting UK citizens in this process. We recognise, however, that this can often be a lengthy process which is bound by the relevant Indian exchange regulations.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the (a) Government of Sri Lanka and (b) Tamil forces on the resolution of the conflict in Sri Lanka. [104908]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 17 January 2000]: We remain deeply concerned about the tragic conflict in Sri Lanka and believe that a lasting solution can be reached only through a political settlement. We continue to explore with a wide range of contacts ways of achieving this.

Pursuant to my previous answer to my hon. Friend on 6 December 1999, Official Report, column 401W, we have made clear to both sides our readiness to help if asked.

PRIME MINISTER

Qualified Majority Voting

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those areas identified by EU member states for discussion of extension of qualified majority voting at the next InterGovernmental Conference. [105541]

The Prime Minister: The Helsinki European Council confirmed that the possible extension of qualified majority voting will be on the agenda for the next IGC. Formal proposals for individual articles will only be made during the IGC, which will begin next month.

Iranian Foreign Minister

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his recent meeting with the Iranian Foreign Minister. [105340]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 17 January 2000]: I welcomed Dr. Kharrazi as the first Iranian Minister to visit the United Kingdom since the Islamic Revolution in 1979. I stressed the importance we attach to continuing the development of the relationship between the UK and Iran, as a major country in an area of strategic importance to the UK.

Dr. Kharrazi and I agreed that relations between the UK and Iran should be based on co-operation and mutual trust.

There of course remain areas of concern for both sides. I raised with Dr. Kharrazi the continued detention of 13 members of the Jewish community in Iran. Dr. Kharrazi assured me that those detained would receive a fair and open trial, including access to visitors and legal representation. I also mentioned our concern that Iranian commitments on Salman Rushdie's safety should be upheld.

Mike Tyson

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he and his Office received, and from whom, about the case of Mr. Mike Tyson. [105715]

The Prime Minister: My hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Baillieston (Mr. Wray), asked me a Question on the floor of the House on 12 January 2000, Official Report, column 271. Neither I nor my Office have received any other representations on this matter.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

House of Lords

Angela Smith: To ask the President of the Council when the report of the Royal Commission on Reform of the House of Lords will be published. [105603]

Mrs. Beckett: I understand that the Royal Commission proposes to publish its Report on Thursday 20 January. Copies of the Report will be placed in the Library of the House after publication.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Staff Bonuses

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department, its agencies and associated public bodies spent in total on extra bonuses above usual payments for staff working over the New Year period; what were the (a) maximum and (b) minimum bonuses paid; how many people received the (i) maximum and (ii) minimum payments; and if he will make a statement. [104480]

Mr. Morley: No extra bonuses were paid to core-MAFF, Pesticides Safety Directorate, Veterinary Medicines Directorate, Farming and Rural Conservation Agency, Central Science Laboratory, Meat Hygiene Service, Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science and Intervention Board Executive Agency staff working over the New Year period. Staff working, or on-call, during this period received enhanced rates of overtime, travel time and on-call allowances. Claims are still being received and it is therefore not possible at this stage to say how many staff in total benefited from these arrangements.

The Veterinary Laboratory Agency also adopted the same arrangements but, in addition, paid a £100 bonus to staff working between 11.00 pm on 31 December 1999 to 4.00 am on 1 January 2000. Again, claims are still being received and it is not possible at this stage to say how many staff in total benefited from the bonus payment.

Biocides

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment he has made of the health implications of the cocktail effect of exposure to several different types of biocides; [104526]

(2) what steps he takes to protect citizens from the cocktail effect of exposure to several different types of biocides. [104525]

Ms Quin [holding answer 13 January 2000]: The possibility of interactions with other pesticides is considered before approval is given to a particular pesticide. Possible synergistic effects of the joint toxicity of pesticide active ingredients are addressed by requesting data on the toxicity of new pesticide products that contain more than one active ingredient.

The pesticide regulatory authorities have also examined more broadly the possibility of synergistic effects of pesticides several times. The Advisory Committee on Pesticides considered the matter in the early 1990s and advised that possible interactions of pesticides were at worst additive rather than synergistic. In 1994 MAFF commissioned a literature review of the possible synergistic effects of mixes of active ingredients. The results of this review supported the Advisory Committee's earlier conclusion.

More recently, the interaction between the effects of chemicals was also considered by the Department of Health's Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment as part of their review of organophosphates. The Committee advised that interactions resulting from altered metabolism are, in general, only important at relatively high exposure levels, since at low levels there is usually sufficient metabolic capacity to cope with the multiple exposures with efficient detoxification and elimination of all compounds.

Beta Carotene

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent assessment he has made of the safety of the additive beta carotene, with particular reference to the concentrations available in soft drink products. [104529]

Ms Quin [holding answer 13 January 2000]: Beta carotene is naturally present in a wide variety of foods. It is also added to foods as a means of providing additional Vitamin A to consumers (it is converted to Vitamin A in the body). In addition, it may be used as a food colour.

There is no evidence that the amounts consumed by adults and children from food are harmful. However, the UK Expert Group on Vitamins and Minerals will be reviewing the safety of this substance later this year as part of a wide ranging study of the safety of vitamins and minerals generally. In addition, the EU Scientific Committee for Food is currently considering the safety aspects of its use as a colour. Intakes from this latter source are however low compared to its use as a source of Vitamin A and its natural occurrence.

Food Labelling

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department is taking to ensure that products that do not meet United Kingdom quality and animal welfare standards are labelled accordingly. [105111]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 January 2000]: Consumers who wish to support British quality and animal welfare standards tell us they actively choose foods which are marked as British. Following concerns that such labelling can sometimes mislead, we have consulted a wide range of interested parties on strengthened guidance aimed at ensuring that country of origin markings on food labels do not mislead consumers about the true origin of the ingredients that have been used. Officials will be discussing the responses with some of those consulted on 19 January and an announcement will be made shortly thereafter.

Organic Farming (Lancashire)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many hectares of land in Lancashire are used for organic farming. [105034]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 January 2000]: From the information available to us, some 2,500 hectares in Lancashire are fully organic or are in conversion to organic farming.

Abattoirs and Meat Processing Plants

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many abattoirs and meat processing plants have closed in the last year for which figures are available. [103355]

Ms Quin: The Meat Hygiene and Inspection Regulations provide for licences to be revoked for a number of different reasons. These include where premises either fail to comply with hygiene requirements or cease operating for commercial reasons; and where the nature of the business has changed. In Great Britain, 39 abattoirs and 58 cutting premises producing fresh meat or poultry meat had their licences revoked between 1 November 1998 and 30 October 1999. Details of licence revocations are published in the Meat Hygiene Enforcement Report, a copy of which is placed in the Library of the House each month.

GM Crops

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, (1) pursuant to the answer of 8 December 1999, Official Report, column 541W, on GM crops, if he will identify the evidence with which he has been provided concerning the quantities of GM pollen found in honey, indicating that on which he bases his assessment that such quantities are very small; [102841]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 8 December 1999, Official Report, column 541W, on GM crops, what consultations he has held with consumers on the acceptability of traces of GM pollen in honey, indicating the (a) dates and (b) manner of the consultation, and the advice he received; [102829]

(3) pursuant to the answer of 8 December 1999, Official Report, column 541W, on GM crops, if he has carried out an economic analysis of the impact of United Kingdom honey containing GM pollen on the British beekeeping and honey industry; [102830]

(4) pursuant to the answer of 8 December 1999, Official Report, column 541W, on GM crops, if he will list the research on which both ACRE and ACNFP based their advice to him that they do not consider the presence in honey of pollen from GM crops to pose a risk to health; [102831]

(5) pursuant to the answer of 8 December 1999, Official Report, column 541W, on GM crops, what consultations he has held with beekeepers on the acceptability of traces of GM pollen in honey, indicating (a) the organisations and individuals he consulted, (b) the dates of meetings and (c) the advice given to him. [102832]

Ms Quin: All GM crops intended for deliberate release in this country, and indeed in the rest of the European Community, are thoroughly assessed for human and environmental safety in accordance with the requirements of EC Directive 90/220 before they are allowed to be planted. This assessment, which is carried out in the UK by ACRE, includes the safety implications of any exposure to pollen through ingestion or inhalation.

The ACNFP considered the issue of GM pollen in honey at a workshop held in 1991 and concluded that the safeguards provided by ACRE and other Government advisory committees were adequate. The Committee also concluded that the ingestion of protein from pollen in honey was likely to be very small, typically around 0.00007 g to 0.003 g per day, and did not give rise to any health concerns. A copy of the 1991 and 1992 ACNFP Annual Reports which contain the conclusions of this workshop are available in the Library of the House.

Since then, the Laboratory of the Government Chemist has undertaken research on the pollen content of honey, at MAFF's request, and has confirmed that levels of GM protein are likely to be several orders of magnitude lower than previously thought. It estimated that consumers would ingest at most no more than 30 picogrammes (0.00000000003 g) to 5 nanogrammes (0.000000005 g) of transgenic protein in every 500 g of honey. The report of this research has been available in the MAFF Library since its completion but I am now arranging for it to be deposited in the Library of the House. In addition to this work, the British Honey Importers and Packers Association report on their website that they have found no traces of GM material in any of the honey they have tested to date. As a result of all these findings we see no reason to undertake an economic analysis of the impact of United Kingdom honey containing GM pollen on the British beekeeping and honey industry.

My noble Friend the Minister of State (Baroness Hayman) has not held consultations with consumers or beekeepers on the acceptability of traces of GM pollen in honey, however, officials hold regular meetings with representatives from the beekeeping industry and honey producers and importers to discuss issues of mutual concern including the development of GM crops. The last such meeting took place on 10 November.

The ACNFP has an independent member, representing consumer interests, who would be consulted on any changes to the Committee's view on the acceptability of traces of GM pollen in honey. Consumers' organisations, along with other interested parties, were consulted on the recent EC proposals to introduce a threshold of 1 per cent. for the adventitious contamination of non GM soya and maize, in respect of the labelling of food and food ingredients.

HEALTH

Waiting Lists

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information is routinely available to him on NHS waiting lists for (a) all services that are not normally consultant-led and (b) audiology. [104310]

Mr. Denham: Information is available on National Health Service waiting lists only for services which are consultant led. In audiological medicine, 61 per cent. of patients were seen within 13 weeks and 80 per cent. within 26 weeks of being referred by their general practitioner.

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in the last year for which figures are available, how many people in each NHS region on NHS waiting lists are aged (a) under 29, (b) 30 to 49, (c) 50 to 64, (d) 65 to 74, (e) 75 to 84 and (f) 85 years and over. [103955]

Mr. Denham: Data are not collected by age group on the number of patients in each National Health Service region currently on National Health Service waiting lists. The total number of patients on NHS waiting lists is, however, collected by each region and is shown in the table.

Monthly inpatient waiting list data by Regional Office area (NHS Trust based)

Month	Northern and Yorkshire	Trent	West Midlands	North West	Eastern	London	South East	South West	England
October 1998	142,168	115,061	106,860	185,121	134,756	195,053	203,211	111,253	1,193,483
November 1998	138,213	112,850	103,339	180,827	131,285	187,694	198,384	109,470	1,162,062
December 1998	141,051	114,165	104,034	183,880	132,574	187,032	199,645	111,217	1,173,598
January 1999	139,347	113,825	104,406	183,452	130,769	183,990	194,341	109,238	1,159,368
February 1999	134,787	110,522	99,226	177,445	126,057	176,238	188,695	106,700	1,119,670
March 1999	128,527	106,552	93,581	171,694	119,889	167,783	181,122	103,712	1,072,860
April 1999	133,013	106,546	95,448	173,838	121,915	169,967	185,479	106,388	1,092,594
May 1999	133,017	107,342	95,830	174,515	122,842	170,096	186,181	106,274	1,096,097
June 1999	134,650	106,851	96,056	174,323	121,546	169,894	184,120	106,811	1,094,251
July 1999	133,766	105,446	96,109	173,900	120,784	168,529	185,715	107,286	1,091,535
August 1999	134,255	104,082	96,053	174,517	118,860	167,887	185,271	107,944	1,088,869
September 1999	133,343	103,763	97,204	173,255	118,517	167,338	184,587	106,522	1,084,529
October 1999	133,301	102,720	96,141	171,980	118,269	167,078	184,378	105,581	1,079,448

Respiratory Illnesses

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans are in place to cope with a possible increase in respiratory-associated illnesses in elderly people this winter. [104165]

Mr. Hutton: Local Winter Planning Groups (LWPG) were established in April 1999 to co-ordinate the planning and provision of health and social care services over the winter and the millennium. Each LWPG includes health authorities, social services, National Health Service trusts, primary care groups, out-of-hours and deputising services, NHS Direct, police and fire services, the voluntary and private sector, community health councils and other local authority departments.

As part of the planning process LWPG's were required to submit robust plans at the end of September 1999 setting out how services would respond to increased winter demand including that linked to respiratory-associated illnesses. The plans, which were assessed by the NHS regional offices, together with visits to a number of health authorities, showed a high state of readiness for the winter.

Many viruses contribute to respiratory-associated illness in older people in the winter and influenza is the only one we have an effective vaccine against. In 1998, we extended the annual immunisation programme for influenza to offer free flu vaccine to everyone aged 75 and over. Flu immunisation was well publicised. The Chief Medical Officer launched "Flu Awareness Week" at a press conference in October which resulted in widespread media coverage and provided a useful opportunity to get key messages across. Many health authorities also took an active role in promoting flu immunisation locally last year.

Also, as part of planning for this winter, NHS Trust have arrangements in place to provide more intensive care and high dependency beds than ever before.

Informing the public of the range of healthcare options available and encouraging them to use the appropriate service has also been a key component of planning for the winter. General campaigns of particular relevance to older people have been: "Keep Warm, Keep Well" which provides advice to older and other vulnerable people on how to keep themselves and their homes warm in winter and "Choose the Right Remedy this Winter" which encourages the public to consider all the options open to them when they are unwell such as self care, pharmacy, and NHS Direct.

The NHS and local authorities have planned well for this winter and the current peaks in demand are being managed.

Transplants

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) in the last year for which figures are available, how many people in each NHS region who have received heart transplants are aged (a) under 29, (b) 30 to 49, (c) 50 to 59, (d) 60 to 74 and (e) 75 years and over; [103953]

(2) how many people in each NHS region who have received renal transplants in the last year for which figures are available are aged (a) under 29, (b) 30 to 49, (c) 50 to 64, (d) 65 to 74, (e) 75 to 84 and (f) 85 years and over; [103949]

(3) in the last year for which figures are available, how many people in each NHS region who are waiting for renal transplants are aged (a) under 29, (b) 30 to 49, (c) 50 to 64, (d) 65 to 74, (e) 75 to 84 and (f) 85 years and over; [103954]

(4) in the last year for which figures are available, how many people in each NHS region who are waiting for heart transplants are aged (a) under 29, (b) 30 to 49, (c) 50 to 59, (d) 60 to 74 and (e) 75 years and over. [103952]

Mr. Denham: The information requested on the questions has been placed in the Library.

Neurology Treatment

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to provide additional funding to treat people with neurological conditions; and if he will make a statement. [104581]

Mr. Hutton: There are no plans to provide additional funding over and above the extra resources currently being provided to the National Health Service to treat people with neurological conditions.

Under the present system it is, of course, for health authorities and primary care groups to plan and arrange the services to people in their care. They are closest to the patients and best placed to respond sensitively to their needs.

National Beds Inquiry

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the findings of the National Beds Inquiry; and if he will make a statement. [105064]

Mr. Denham: The National Beds Inquiry is nearing completion. Its findings will be published shortly.

Bed Occupancy

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent guidance he has given to health authorities concerning bed occupancy rates in NHS hospitals. [104900]

Ms Stuart: No specific guidance has been issued. However, an analysis of the research into the relationship between bed occupancy and the management of elective and emergency pressures was set out in the first report of the Emergency Services Action Team in 1997, and referred to in subsequent ESAT reports. The report was published under cover of an Executive Letter (MISC 97/62), which followed the guidance on Access to Secondary Care Services set out in Executive Letter (EL97/42). Copies of the reports and both ELs are in the Library.

Mental Health

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if paragraph 30 of the Local Government Ombudsman's report 98/B/0341 setting out the Department's view in March 1997 on section 117 of the Mental Health Act 1983 still represents the Department's view; [104988]

(2) if he will list the local authorities that charge for residential services under section 117 of the Mental Health Act 1983; [104986]

(3) from what date he determined that local authorities should not charge for residential services under section 117 of the Mental Health Act 1983. [104987]

Mr. Hutton: There are no provisions in the Mental Health Act 1983 to charge for after-care services provided under section 117. The Act does not specify which services should be provided for a patient who qualifies for after-care under section 117. In the absence of case law on this subject before the High Court's ruling on 28 July 1999, there has been variation in practice between local authorities on the issue of whether residential care provided for patients who qualify for after-care under section 117 was considered to be provided under section 117 or under other statutes.

The Department has not issued formal guidance on this issue but advice in response to questions on this point has consistently been that, where residential care is provided as part of a package of services under section 117, then it should not be charged for. This is in line with paragraph 30 of the Local Ombudsman's report 98/B/0341 in so far as it deals with not charging for section 117 after-care services. The Department does not have information about which local authorities currently charge for such services.

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate what savings there would be to public funds if those entitled to free residential care under section 117 of the Mental Health Act 1983 (a) were disallowed from receiving income support residential allowance and (b) had their benefit income reduced by other means. [104985]

Mr. Bayley: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available. The Department does not collect information on the specific legislation under which placements in residential care or nursing home are made.

Internet (Medicinal Drug Sales)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives his Department has taken (a) unilaterally and (b) in partnership with other members of the EU to prevent problems arising from the unrestricted sale of medicinal drugs on the Internet. [104825]

Ms Stuart: The Medicine Control Agency investigates cases referred to it of alleged breaches of medicines legislation arising from the internet. It works closely with the European Union and international regulatory and enforcement bodies and will continue to do so. The European Commission has established a group to consider the impact of e-commerce in pharmaceuticals on the existing safeguards to patients. The United Kingdom will be playing an active role in its deliberations.

NHS Beds

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds were available for patient care in the NHS on 1 May in (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 1999; and how many of these were acute beds. [105636]

Ms Stuart: The average daily number of available beds is published annually in "Bed Availability and Occupancy, England", copies of which are in the Library. The latest information is for 1997–98.

NHS Manpower

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff were employed directly by the NHS in (a) medical positions, (b) administrative positions and (c) in total, as at (i) 1 January 1997 and (ii) 1 January 2000. [105213]

Mr. Denham: Information about numbers of staff employed directly by the National Health Service is not collected in January of each year. Information about numbers of staff employed directly by the National Health Service on 30 September in the last three years for which data are available is shown in the table.

NHS hospital and community health services: all directly employed staff in England as at 30 September for each year

Whole-time equivalents

	1996	1997	1998
All directly employed staff	761,240	758,060	765,950
Medical staff	51,780	54,640	56,270
Administration and estates staff	167,430	166,960	167,700
Other	542,030	536,460	541,970

Notes:
Figures are rounded to the nearest 10
Due to rounding totals may not equal the sum of component parts
Sources:
Department of Health Non-Medical Workforce Census

Nursing Homes

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what circumstances people who, through ill health, require nursing care have to pay for accommodation in nursing homes. [105565]

Mr. Hutton: Guidance issued by the Department to health authorities in 1995 set out a national framework against which health authorities, in consultation with local authorities, were required to review their existing arrangements for continuing health care and to draw up local policies and eligibility criteria for individual case decisions about the need for National Health Service funded care. This includes the range, location and level of services which will be arranged and funded by the NHS to meet continuing health care needs in their area.

We are currently reviewing continuing care policy with a view to issuing revised guidance later this year.

Local authority social services have always had a very important role in supporting people, either in their own homes or in residential care. Where a person is provided with nursing home or residential care accommodation by a local authority under Part III of the National Assistance Act 1948, section 22 of that Act provides for them to be charged for the accommodation.

The Royal Commission on Long-Term Care recommended changes to the charging system. Decisions on the system of funding long-term care will be taken as part of the current spending review.

Myxoedema

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training is given to student doctors in diagnosing myxoedema; what treatment is recommended for this disease; and if he will make a statement. [105290]

Mr. Denham: Responsibility for the content and standards of medical education is shared between the regulatory bodies (eg The General Medical Council and Specialist Training Authority), professional bodies (notably the medical Royal Colleges) and universities. It is neither practicable nor desirable for the Government to prescribe the exact training that any individual doctor will receive.

The recommended maintenance treatment for myxoedema is replacement thyroid hormone. Thyroxine sodium tablets is the normal maintenance therapy but in severe cases Liothyronine sodium tablets or injection may be used for a rapid response.

SOCIAL SECURITY

State Second Pension

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people he estimates will receive the state second pension (a) when it is introduced and (b) at each five year interval following its introduction over the next 20 years. [104092]

Mr. Rooker: In the first year of introduction, no one will receive payment of State Second Pension, although individuals will begin to accrue entitlement to it.

It is not possible to provide precise estimates of the number of individuals who will receive State Second Pension for specific years following its introduction.

The following table shows very broad brush estimates of the numbers who will benefit from State Second Pension. These are subject to uncertainty and possible subsequent revision.

Numbers benefiting from State Second Pension at the end of the financial year

Year	Million
2003–04	0.3
2008–09	2.1
2013–14	4.0
2018–19	5.5
2023–24	7.5

Notes:

1. The numbers given are the estimated numbers of individuals who will benefit from State Second Pension at the end of each year. For example, with the first year of awards being 2003–04, the entry in the table headed 2003–04 shows the number of beneficiaries after the first full year of awards.

2. Numbers for 2003–04 and 2008–09 have been rounded to the nearest 0.1 million. Numbers for later years are rounded to the nearest 0.5 million.

3. Figures include people who would receive State Second Pension payments as well as those receiving contracted-out pensions where they have benefited from higher contracted-out rebates than would have applied under SERPS.

4. The figures exclude those higher earning individuals who are contracted-out and whose rebates would be the same under State Second Pension as under SERPS, since such individuals would not benefit from awards of State Second Pension, nor would they gain from any increase in contracted-out rebates.

Departmental Statistics

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the publication dates of statistics to be released by his Department and agencies in this calendar year. [104599]

Mr. Rooker: The information in the table relates to statistics published by the Department under the Government Statistical Service banner.

Although many of the dates are provisional at this stage, final release dates will be notified in the Office National Statistics Update in the month prior to the publication. This is in line with DSS release practice.

Title	Period of issue	Period ending	Date of release
Imminent publications
Cross Benefit Analysis Quarterly Bulletin on the Population of working age on key benefits	Quarterly	May 1999	13 January 2000
Abstract of Statistics for Social Security Benefits and indices of prices and earnings	Annual	April 1999	27 January 2000
Cross Benefit Analysis for Pensioners of the Population over State Retirement Age	Bi-annual	May 1998	27 January 2000
Pensioners Income Series 1997–98	Annual	1997–98	27 January 2000
Statistical summary	Quarterly	December 1999	27 January 2000
Tax Benefit Model Tables	Annual	June 1999	27 January 2000
Provisional publication dates
Child's Special Allowance	Annual	December 1999	February 2000
Housing Benefit Summary Statistics	Quarterly	May 1999	February 2000
Retirement Pensions Summary of Statistics	Bi-annual	September 1999	February 2000
Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary of Statistics	Quarterly	November 1999	10 February 2000
Disability Living Allowance, Attendance Allowance, Invalid Care Allowance	Quarterly	August 1999	17 February 2000
Income Support Quarterly Statistical Inquiry	Quarterly	November 1999	24 February 2000
Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit—quarterly summary of statistics on new claims (accidents and prescribed diseases) and first diagnoses (prescribed diseases only)	Quarterly	September 1999	24 February 2000
Jobseekers allowance statistics—quarterly inquiry	Quarterly	November 1999	31 March 2000
Incapacity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance quarterly summary of statistics	Quarterly	November 1999	31 March 2000
Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit and Reduced Earnings	Annual	1997–98	31 March 2000
Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit—quarterly summary of statistics on new claims (accidents and prescribed diseases) and first diagnoses (prescribed diseases only)	Quarterly	December 1999	17 April 2000
Statistical summary	Quarterly	—	27 April 2000
Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary of Statistics	Quarterly	May 2000	12 May 2000
Disability Living Allowance, Attendance Allowance, Invalid Care Allowance	Quarterly	November 1999	18 May 2000
Income Support Quarterly Statistical Inquiry	Quarterly	February 2000	25 May 2000
Jobseekers Allowance statistics—quarterly inquiry	Quarterly	February 2000	8 June 2000
Incapacity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance quarterly summary of statistics	Quarterly	February 2000	30 June 2000
Family Resources Survey report	Annual	1998–99	July 2000
Industrial injuries disablement benefit—quarterly summary of statistics on new claims (accidents and prescribed diseases) and first diagnoses (prescribed diseases only)	Quarterly	March 2000	17 July 2000
Statistical summary	Quarterly	—	27 July 2000
Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary of Statistics	Quarterly	August 2000	17 August 2000
Disability Living Allowance, Attendance Allowance, Invalid Care Allowance	Quarterly	February 2000	17 August 2000
Income Support Quarterly Statistical Inquiry	Quarterly	May 2000	24 August 2000
Jobseekers Allowance statistics—quarterly inquiry	Quarterly	May 2000	14 September 2000
Incapacity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance quarterly summary of statistics	Quarterly	May 2000	29 September 2000
Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit—quarterly summary of statistics on new claims (accidents and prescribed diseases) and first diagnoses (prescribed diseases only)	Quarterly	June 2000	17 October 2000
Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary of Statistics	Quarterly	August 2000	16 November 2000
Disability Living Allowance, Attendance Allowance, Invalid Care Allowance	Quarterly	May 2000	16 November 2000
Provisional Publication Dates
Income Support Quarterly Statistical Inquiry	Quarterly	August 2000	23 November 2000
Jobseekers Allowance statistics—quarterly inquiry	Quarterly	August 2000	14 December 2000
Incapacity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance quarterly summary of statistics	Quarterly	August 2000	15 December 2000
Fraud and error in Income Support and JSA	Annual	1998–99	28 January 2000
Release date to be determined
Housing Benefit Summary Statistics	Quarterly	August 1999	Yet to be determined
Housing Benefit Summary Statistics	Quarterly	November 1999	Yet to be determined
Take-up of Income Related Benefits	Annual	1998–99	Yet to be determined (Summer 2000)
Appeals Service Adjudication Statistics	Quarterly	December 1999	Yet to be determined
Disability Working Allowance Quarterly Inquiry	Quarterly	October 1999	Yet to be determined
Disability Working Allowance Quarterly Inquiry	Quarterly	January 2000	Yet to be determined
Family Credit Statistics—Quarterly Inquiry	Quarterly	November 1999	Yet to be determined
Family Credit Statistics—Quarterly Inquiry	Quarterly	February 2000	Yet to be determined
Cross Benefit Analysis Quarterly Bulletin on the Population of working age on key	Quarterly	August 1999	Yet to be determined

Title	Period of issue	Period ending	Date of release
benefits
Cross Benefit Analysis Quarterly Bulletin on the Population of working age on key benefits	Quarterly	November 1999	Yet to be determined
Cross Benefit Analysis Quarterly Bulletin on the Population of working age on key benefits	Quarterly	February 2000	Yet to be determined
Cross Benefit Analysis for Pensioners of the Population over State Retirement Age	Tri-annual	May 1999	Yet to be determined
Cross Benefit Analysis for Pensioners of the Population over State Retirement Age	Tri-annual	November 1999	Yet to be determined
Households below average Income Statistics	Annual	1994–95 1998–99	Yet to be determined (Summer 2000)

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Halesowen and Rowley Regis (Mrs. Heal) on 10 January 2000, Official Report, column 5, if he will estimate (a) how many people will benefit and (b) what the cost will be of extending eligibility to Attendance Allowance and Disability Living Allowance to people who pay the full cost of their care in local authority care homes; and if he will provide a breakdown of people in local authority care homes by (i) age and (ii) who is paying the cost of their care. [105074]

Mr. Bayley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Estimated cost of extending DLA Care/AA eligibility to self-financiers in local authority owned/managed residential care homes

	Estimated number of gainers	Estimated additional benefit expenditure £ million
2000–01	2,000	4
2001–02	2,000	4
2002–03	2,000	4

Note:
The estimated costs and numbers of gainers are approximate and subject to a large margin of error given the limitations of the available data

Breakdown by age of local authority care home residents

Age	Number of residents
Under age 65	10,783
65–74	6,460
75–84	19,482
85+	27,284

Notes:
1. Provided by Department of Health annual return RAC5. Relates to 1996 which is the last year for which data collected. Relates to England only.
2. 61,943 residents of local authority staffed homes were supported by a local authority, but it is not known how the remaining 2,066 residents funded their care fees[1].

Source:
[1] Information provided by Department of Health return SR1 relates to 1996, this being the last year for which data was collected. Relates to England only.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost in 1999–2000 of (a) administration and (b) publicity for the winter fuel payments scheme. [104686]

Angela Eagle: The administration costs for making winter fuel payments this winter (1999–2000) were in the region of £14 million.

To ensure that pensioners were not worried about turning up their heating this winter it was necessary to inform them of the increase in the amount of the payments and to remind them that they were on their way. This required a major publicity campaign—the costs of which were in the region of £620,000.

Industrial Injuries Benefit

Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to change the system whereby Income Support is recovered from recipients of Industrial Injuries Benefit. [104840]

Mr. Bayley: There are no plans to change the system of recovering amounts of Income Support paid pending the payment of other benefits, such as Industrial Injuries Benefit.

Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the legal advice he received that clause 49 of the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill is compatible with the European Convention on Human Rights under the Human Rights Act 1998; [104991]

(2) if he will set out the basis for his statement that clause 49 of the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill is compatible with the European Convention on Human Rights under the Human Rights Act 1998. [104990]

Angela Eagle: The proposals in clause 49 are compatible with UK obligations under the European Convention on Human Rights. In arriving at this conclusion we have considered a number of issues, which are discussed below.

The obligations under Article 6 of the Convention (the right to a fair trial) are complied with as those affected by this measure will have a right of appeal to an independent tribunal in respect of the decision to withdraw or reduce benefits and the magistrates or Crown Court will establish the facts of the alleged breach, as now.

Article 7 (no punishment without law) does not arise as the measure (even if it was regarded as criminal in nature) will only apply to those given community sentences after this Bill has become law and been commenced. There will be no retrospection.

Although the exchange of information between the Probation Service and the Benefits Agency may raise issues under Article 8, on privacy, the exchange proposed is the minimum necessary to achieve the legitimate aims of matching benefit rights to responsibilities.

In considering any question in relation to Article 14 (prohibition of discrimination) these proposals are to be seen as part of the reform of the welfare state on the basis of a contract between the citizen and the state, whereby rights to benefits and responsibilities to society are more closely linked. Our concern is not only to achieve better compliance with community sentences, but to reflect the view that it is not fair that offenders who breach community sentences should have the same rights to benefits as those who comply. People who do comply would not lose financially, nor would those who claim no rights to benefits. Benefits are conditional on the fulfilment of responsibilities to society. It therefore does not breach Article 14 by any unjustified different treatment of those on benefits compared with others. Any different treatment as may arise is justified as it has an objective aim that is in the public interest, as set out above.

Article 1 of the First Protocol (protection of property) does not apply to all Social Security benefits, although contributory Jobseeker's Allowance may be regarded as a "possession" for the purposes of this Article. This proposal to withdraw benefit in these limited and specified circumstances is justifiable as it is in the public interest, striking a fair balance between the interests of the community and those of the individual, and will be provided for by law.

The advice tendered by our legal advisers is internal policy advice and is not normally disclosed under Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Debt Recovery

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress he has made in developing the Debt Accounting and Management System for debt recovery; and when he expects the system to be operational. [104659]

Angela Eagle: The administration of benefits is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Frank Field, dated 17 January 2000:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what progress the Benefits Agency has made in developing the Debt Accounting and Management system; and when we expect it to be operational.

The Debt Accounting and Management system was intended to provide a means of accounting for and assisting in the control and management of benefit overpayment debt.

Development of the solution was based on a commercially available software package. Once work was underway, it became clear that because of the complex nature of BA business processes that this would not be feasible as originally envisaged. It was agreed that it would be more appropriate to incorporate this into the wider work being carried out as part of the Departmental Modernisation Programme.

The decision not to proceed with DAMS resulted in the need for a different solution to the difficulties surrounding benefit debt accounting and management.

The Strategic Debt Solution Project was initiated to draw on the knowledge gained from DAMS and to provide a set of solutions that would allow the BA to progress to a strategic solution that supports a wider debt management requirement.

The aim of the Strategic Debt Solution [SDS] Project is underpinned by six high level objectives:

1. Over the lifetime of the solution, to contribute towards meeting Resource Accounting and Budgeting [RAB] requirements by making stepped improvements
2. To report Benefit debt balances as accurately as possible, in the absence of an integrated end to end debt management and accounting system
3. To implement, maintain and monitor a range of internal controls within the debt management process
4. To identify a strategic solution for debt management and accounting working in conjunction with the Departmental Modernisation Programme
5. To raise the profile of debt management and improve debt management capability
6. To optimise the investment to date and any future spend

An Options Appraisal is currently being carried out in order to identify the solution that most effectively meets these aims and objectives. The Options Appraisal involves identifying and confirming:

The weaknesses of the current debt management and accounting processes and systems

The high level requirements for improved processes and systems

The various options available for meeting these requirements

The completion of the Options Appraisal is planned for April 2000. The detailed requirements for the preferred option will then be developed in a Full Study, which will be completed by August 2000.

I hope this is helpful.

Girocheques

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the provisions which allow a benefit recipient to sign the reverse of their giro to authorise another person to collect their benefit from a post office will continue once the transfer to benefit payment by automated credit transfer is complete. [105568]

Mr. Rooker: Arrangements currently exist for customers paid by girocheque and order book who are unable to attend the post office, that ensure customers can access their benefit. Similarly arrangements also exist for customers currently paid by automated credit transfer (ACT) who are unable to attend the bank or building society.

Arrangements ensuring that all customers who are unable to attend the post office or bank can access their benefit, will continue once the transfer to payment by ACT is complete.

Income Support

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when his campaign to encourage the take-up of income support by pensioners will begin. [104914]

Mr. Rooker: An announcement of our plans to encourage pensioners to take-up their entitlement to the minimum income guarantee will be made shortly.

Fraud

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps his Department has taken in the past year to ensure that appraisal of the performance of staff working for the Department's agencies takes account of anti-fraud work. [105567]

Mr. Rooker: Each Agency currently has its own appraisal system to reflect differing business needs, but each has a system on which staff are assessed annually across a range of objectives and competencies, including anti-fraud activity. All staff in the Department has a role to play in the fight against fraud. The Department is currently reviewing staff performance appraisal and will be seeking to further strengthen the role between individual performance and the drive to reduce fraud.

Benefit Rules

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his Department's examination of benefit rules to see if they contribute to fraud and error as detailed in section 2.13 of the White Paper, Safeguarding Social Security. [105566]

Mr. Rooker: The examination of the rule whereby a couple who declare they are living together receive less benefit than 2 people who purport to live separately is still under way.

The other rules are being reviewed as part of wider welfare reform work.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total public expenditure on housing benefit in each of the past 10 years in respect of (a) private and (b) public rented housing. [105231]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

£ million

	Rent allowances	Rent rebates	Total housing benefit
1989–90	1,359	2,941	4,299
1990–91	1,779	3,368	5,147
1991–92	2,426	4,068	6,494
1992–93	3,284	4,593	7,877
1993–94	4,195	5,019	9,214
1994–95	4,883	5,229	10,112
1995–96	5,455	5,431	10,886
1996–97	5,810	5,569	11,380
1997–98	5,682	5,498	11,180
1998–99	5,667	5,405	11,072

Notes:
1. Sum of DSS-funded and additional Local Authority expenditure.
2. Figures for 1989–90 to 1996–97—source: table 8 of Social Security Departmental Report 1999 (Cm 4214) and earlier equivalents. Figures for 1997–98 and 1998–99 are estimated outturn.
3. Figures may not sum due to rounding.

WALES

Petrol Prices

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding the continued rise in petrol prices in rural Wales. [105569]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I met my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer to discuss a range of issues. As part of his pre-Budget Report late last year, he announced that the fuel duty escalator would be scrapped, which means that in future there will no longer be automatic rises in fuel prices but the appropriate level of fuel duties will be set on a Budget by Budget basis. Revenues from any increases in fuel duties over and above inflation will go straight to a ring-fenced fund for improving public transport and improving the road network.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 19 January 2000

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Further and Higher Education

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures he is taking to improve the pay and conditions of teaching staff in (a) colleges of further education and (b) universities. [105143]

Mr. Wicks: The pay and conditions of staff in further education colleges and higher education institutions are matters for employers and staff. The Government are investing heavily in both sectors and announced in November 1999 increases of £365 million for further education and £295 million for higher education for 2001–02.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will appoint an ombudsman for further and higher education. [105480]

Mr. Wicks: My right hon. Friend has no plans to establish an Ombudsman for further and higher education.

School Standards

Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how standards are being raised in areas not in education action zones. [105601]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government are committed to creating a world-class education service. We have made it clear that raising standards is our top priority and are taking practical steps to help schools, teachers and Local Education Authorities (LEAs) to improve. To back up this pledge, the Government have provided an additional £19 billion for education over the three years 1999–2000 to 2001–02.

New initiatives are being put in place to raise standards in schools and LEAs all across the country. The literacy and numeracy strategies and their stretching targets for 2002 are at the forefront of the nationwide drive to improve standards. Other initiatives include Sure Start for early years, Education Development Plans (EDPs) for LEAs, Excellence in Cities, and the expansion of the number of Specialist and Beacon schools. Both Schools and LEAs are also subject to regular inspections by OFSTED. Success is now being rewarded and failure tackled. We also recognise that teachers are of central importance in the drive to raise standards. We have committed up to a billion pounds over the next two years in modernisation measures aimed at increasing teacher professionalism and morale.

Standards are beginning to rise. In 1997, 57 per cent. of 11-year-olds achieved the standard for their age in English and 54 per cent. the standard for maths. In 1999, this rose to 70 per cent. in English and 69 per cent. in maths. We are well on track to meet the 2002 targets of 80 per cent. in English and 75 per cent. in maths.

Local Education Authority Administration Costs

Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 11 January 2000, Official Report, column 148W, on local education authority administration costs, if he will update his reply for the financial year 1998–99. [105671]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information requested is not yet available. I will write to my hon. Friend when I am able to reply, and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library.

Departmental Smoking Policy

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action he is taking to reduce smoking in his Department. [105804]

Mr. Wills: The Department for Education and Employment has smoking policies in place which provide a non-smoking working environment. Smoking is restricted to specially designated areas, such as smoking rooms. Literature on giving up smoking is available in our training centres, and DfEE HQ sites have in the past offered further support for staff wishing to give up smoking through a number of health promotion events.

School Governors

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many school governor vacancies there are in each local education authority area; and if he will make a statement. [105530]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department does not routinely collect information about school governor vacancies, but is aware from recent and current research that the level of vacancies is higher than desirable.

School governors have a valuable part to play in raising standards in our schools. The new framework for schools has increased the number of governors to approximately 360,000 (compared with 300,000) previously. Finding governors is a local matter, for schools, local education authorities and other appointing bodies. The Department recognises the need to recruit more school governors and is active in supporting local efforts. In particular, the School Governors' One Stop Shop, supported by the Department, is now recruiting governors with business and management skills in the inner city areas covered by the Government's Excellence in Cities initiative. In addition, the Department has produced general recruitment materials, developed with local education authority (LEA) advice, as well as a leaflet produced jointly with the National Governors Council (NGC) which encourages people from ethnic minorities to become governors. The Department is also following up recommendations of the Education and Employment Committee report on the role of school governors, including guidance to encourage LEAs to fill their governor vacancies according to the contribution people can make rather than their political affiliation and to collect information about governor vacancies and make it available.

New Deal (North-West)

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will give the destination of those who have left the New Deal for 18–24 year olds (a) at the time at which they left the New Deal, (b) 13 weeks after leaving the New Deal and (c) 26 weeks after leaving the New Deal, for each parliamentary constituency in the (i) City of Liverpool and (ii) Wirral. [104615]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 17 January 2000]: The following table summarises the immediate destinations of young people who leave the New Deal in each of the constituencies named. In addition to those recorded as leaving for unsubsidised employment, we know that many of those recorded as leaving for unknown destinations will have found work without notifying the Employment Service. A recent survey found that of those leaving for unknown destinations from the Gateway stage of New Deal, 57 per cent. entered paid employment.

We do not hold information on the destinations of young people 13 and 26 weeks after leaving New Deal. Our figures for sustained jobs cover those who leave for a job and do not return to claim JSA within 13 weeks.

Immediate destination on leaving New Deal: cumulative to end October 1999

	Sustained unsubsidised jobs	Other benefits	Other known destination	Unknown destination
Liverpool Garston	254	92	97	141
Liverpool Riverside	429	232	258	410
Liverpool Walton	430	166	173	330
Liverpool Wavertree	343	119	226	277
Liverpool West Derby	400	147	182	279
Southport	168	22	40	70
Crosby	165	32	67	80
Bootle	424	142	142	224
Knowsley North and Sefton East	386	171	135	236
St. Helens North	228	81	93	120
St. Helens South	278	118	89	150
Knowsley South	418	183	170	264
Birkenhead	457	157	261	324
Wallasey	328	120	196	203
Wirral South	194	35	57	143
Wirral West	223	31	99	127

LEA Administrative Costs

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 11 January 2000 to the hon. Member for Rotherham (Mr. MacShane), Official Report, columns 148–52W, concerning local education authority administrative costs, if he will publish on a cost per pupil basis the expenditure on administration for each local education authority listed. [105300]

Ms Estelle Morris: The following table gives for each local education authority in England information on administration expenditure, encompassing central management and administration, and service, strategy and regulation costs, in the form of costs per pupil for the financial year 1997–98.

Expenditure on administration by LEAs in England for financial year 1997–98

LEA name	Expenditure on central management administration and service strategy and regulation costs per pupil	Total education expenditure cost per pupil
London, City of	3,168	15,074
Camden	304	4,296
Greenwich	237	3,406
Hackney	319	4,347
Hammersmith and Fulham	246	4,507
Islington	217	4,025
Kensington and Chelsea	271	5,722
Lambeth	40	5,243

Expenditure on administration by LEAs in England for financial year 1997–98

LEA name	Expenditure on central management administration and service strategy and regulation costs per pupil	Total education expenditure cost per pupil
Lewisham	166	3,828
Southwark	233	4,145
Tower Hamlets	253	3,936
Wandsworth	207	4,402
Westminster, City of	297	4,576
Barking and Dagenham	138	3,002
Barnet	117	3,450
Bexley	145	2,551
Brent	131	4,051
Bromley	200	3,144
Croydon	99	3,218
Ealing	202	3,434
Enfield	179	3,125
Haringey	109	3,678
Harrow	126	3,308
Havering	82	2,619
Hillingdon	188	3,142
Hounslow	121	3,129
Kingston upon Thames	125	3,024
Merton	171	3,142
Newham	99	3,160
Redbridge	69	2,999
Richmond upon Thames	120	3,189
Sutton	206	3,181
Waltham Forest	249	3,419
Birmingham	83	2,988
Coventry	50	2,974

Expenditure on administration by LEAs in England for financial year 1997–98

LEA name	Expenditure on central management administration and service strategy and regulation costs per pupil	Total education expenditure cost per pupil
Dudley	70	2,501
Sandwell	86	2,716
Solihull	84	2,485
Walsall	58	2,726
Wolverhampton	90	2,909
Knowsley	126	2,607
Liverpool	111	2,836
St. Helens	85	2,659
Sefton	77	2,742
Wirral	104	2,680
Bolton	77	2,592
Bury	76	2,537
Manchester	104	2,917
Oldham	57	2,577
Rochdale	97	2,704
Salford	188	2,777
Stockport	80	2,489
Tameside	84	2,461
Trafford	68	2,649
Wigan	81	2,532
Barnsley	75	2,495
Doncaster	70	2,663
Rotherham	81	2,446
Sheffield	93	2,678
Bradford	82	2,724
Calderdale	125	2,747
Kirklees	104	2,611
Leeds	84	2,673
Wakefield	96	2,403
Gateshead	146	2,877
Newcastle upon Tyne	130	3,115
North Tyneside	40	2,592
South Tyneside	125	2,612
Sunderland	45	2,477
Isles of Scilly	184	5,038
Bath and North East Somerset	117	2,847
Bristol, City of	145	2,945
North Somerset	130	2,787
South Gloucestershire	136	2,542
Hartlepool	116	2,431
Middlesbrough	116	2,576
Redcar and Cleveland	74	2,546
Stockton on Tees	80	2,429
Kingston upon Hull, City of	82	2,574
East Riding of Yorkshire	85	2,636
North East Lincolnshire	92	2,476
North Lincolnshire	208	2,734
North Yorkshire	81	2,661
York, City of	56	2,668
Bedfordshire	88	2,698
Luton	94	2,971
Buckinghamshire	160	2,885
Milton Keynes	191	2,661
Derbyshire	49	2,601
Derby City	84	2,656
Dorset	63	2,742
Poole	114	2,379
Bournemouth	147	2,790
Durham	95	2,621
Darlington	105	2,447
East Sussex	123	2,751
Brighton and Hove	140	2,925
Hampshire	87	2,728
Portsmouth	85	2,818
Southampton	37	2,812
Leicestershire	90	2,652
Leicester City	343	2,984
Rutland	153	3,418
Staffordshire	18	2,387
Stoke-on-Trent	90	2,471

Expenditure on administration by LEAs in England for financial year 1997–98

LEA name	Expenditure on central management administration and service strategy and regulation costs per pupil	Total education expenditure cost per pupil
Wiltshire	134	2,844
Swindon	64	2,442
Berkshire	83	2,652
Cambridgeshire	101	2,834
Cheshire	57	2,637
Cornwall	68	2,704
Cumbria	60	2,873
Devon	63	2,640
Essex	42	3,006
Gloucestershire	123	2,901
Hereford and Worcester	49	2,606
Hertfordshire	87	2,810
Isle of Wight	172	2,830
Kent	159	2,797
Lancashire	92	2,775
Lincolnshire	120	2,910
Norfolk	56	2,758
Northamptonshire	67	2,514
Northumberland	98	2,533
Nottinghamshire	106	2,662
Oxfordshire	104	2,756
Shropshire	61	2,748
Somerset	97	2,735
Suffolk	55	2,651
Surrey	109	2,922
Warwickshire	103	2,621
West Sussex	87	2,741
Total/Average	101	2,814

Further Education Colleges (Agency Staff)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent guidance he has issued to further education colleges on the use of agency staff; and what plans he has to evaluate the impact of the use of agency staff on (a) the quality, reliability and professional development of staff and (b) on student retention and achievement. [104848]

Mr. Wicks: My right hon. Friend has no plans to evaluate the use of agency staff in the further education sector. Further education colleges are independent and consequently the teaching, internal organisation and management are the responsibility of the college management.

Medical Students

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applicants for medical schools, in each of the last three years for which figures are available, were (a) accepted and (b) rejected; how many qualified; and how many took up positions in NHS hospitals. [104577]

Mr. Wicks: The available data for applicants in the three most recent years are given in the table. Not all those applicants who failed to obtain a place will necessarily have been rejected; some may have declined their offers, withdrawn from the scheme or opted for a year out.

Students applying for undergraduate medical courses in the UK via UCAS

Year of entry	Number of applicants	Number of applicants who were accepted
1997	12,025	4,894
1998	12,078	5,029
1999	11,807	5,119

Information showing the number of students who completed first degrees in medicine is given in the table. Data on the number of students taking up employment in NHS hospitals are not held centrally.

Students obtaining first degrees in medicine in the UK

Year	Number
1995–96	4,888
1996–97	5,072
1997–98	5,137

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) men and (b) women in each of the standard age groups were employed (i) in his predecessor Departments in 1979 and (ii) in his Department in 1999. [104016]

Mr. Wills: The number of men and women employed by the Department in each of the standard age groups is:

Age band	Male	Female	Total
60+	43	20	63
55–59	105	113	218
50–54	279	233	512
45–49	367	313	680
40–44	344	362	706
35–39	305	459	764
30–34	282	464	746
25–29	178	273	451
20–24	80	102	182
Under 20	6	16	22
Total	1989	2,355	4,344

There are no corresponding data available for 1979.

New Deal (Greater London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of jobs that have been created in the Greater London area as a result of the New Deal. [104794]

Ms Jowell: New Deal is not a job creation scheme; rather it is designed to help unemployed people improve their skills and compete effectively for vacancies. The latest figures to the end of October 1999 show that this policy is working; over 21,000 young people, and 5,800 long term unemployed people aged 25 and over, have gained jobs through the New Deal in the Greater London area.

SATs

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children achieved one, two or three level 5s in last year's SATs; and how many achieved level 6 in each subject. [105561]

Mr. Wicks: The information requested is given in the following table. The answers were derived from a provisional matching of the 1999 National Curriculum Assessments at Key Stages 2 and 3.

Percentage

	Key Stage 2	Key Stage 3
Percentage of pupils who achieved at least Level 5 in all three of 1999 Key Stage tests:
English, mathematics and science	11	43
Percentage of pupils who achieved at least Level 5 in only two of the three 1999 Key Stage tests:
English and mathematics	3	7
English and science	3	3
Mathematics and science	5	5
Percentage of pupils who achieved at least Level 5 in only one of the three 1999 Key Stage tests:
English	4	8
Mathematics	4	4
Science	7	2
The percentage of pupils who achieved at least Level 6 in 1999 Key Stage tests:
English	[1]—	28
Mathematics	[1]—	38
Science	[1]—	24

[1] Indicates a figure below 0.5 per cent.

CABINET OFFICE

Investors in People

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what progress the Civil Service has made towards the target that all civil servants will be working in organisations recognised as Investors in People by the year 2000. [106129]

Mr. Stringer: Some 88 per cent. of Civil Servants now work in organisations recognised as Investors in People. This is a significant achievement by all concerned and Departments and Agencies should be congratulated on their progress. The Investors in People Standard is an important element of the Civil Service reform agenda and this achievement demonstrates the commitment of the Service. I would refer hon. Members to the report

"Investors in People in Government Departments and Agencies" which I have placed in the Libraries of the House.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what is the number and value of contracts let by her Department since May 1997 to external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. [103607]

Mr. Stringer: Since May 1997, my Department has let 15 contracts with external consultants and advisers for the management of competitive tendering processes. The total value of those contracts is £601,694.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Clerks

Mr. Winnick: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, how many House of Commons Clerks have been appointed in the last five years, indicating the number and percentage broken down by (a) gender and (b) ethnic origin. [104532]

Mr. Kirkwood [holding answer 13 January 2000]: Since the beginning of 1995, there have been 17 external recruits to the grade of Assistant Clerk and Senior Clerk, including faststream entrants, in the Department of the Clerk of the House. The table sets out the breakdown.

Year	Number of Assistant and Senior Clerks recruited	Male	Female
1995	2	0	2
1996	3	2	1
1997	4	2	2
1998	6	4	2
1999	2	1	1
Total	17	[1]9	[2]8

[1] 53 per cent.
[2] 47 per cent.

Approximately 80 per cent. of these recruits have declared their ethnic origin. All of those who did so are white.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reason the figures for compensation paid by the Police Authority indicated at the foot of claims against the Chief Constable were omitted from this year's Annual report; and if he will instruct the Police Authority to provide this information to all recipients of their annual report. [103822]

Mr. Ingram: A graph showing the amounts of compensation paid during 1998–99 was mistakenly omitted from the 1998–99 Police Authority Annual Report and not detected at final proof reading. This information will be provided to anyone requesting it and will be displayed on the Police Authority website at http://www.pani.org.uk.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the (a) cost of compensation and (b) legal costs incurred as a result of claims against the Chief Constable, including the costs of the Crown Solicitor's Office, in each year from 1985 to date. [103823]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is not readily available prior to April 1997. The following table shows the compensation paid and the costs incurred from April 1997 to March 1999. Figures for the current financial year are not yet available.

£

	April 1997 to March 1998	April 1998 to March 1999
Damages paid	720,297	1,046,115
Plaintiffs Solicitors costs	529,829	619,885
Crown Solicitors costs	840,362	735,637
Crown Solicitors outlay	560,975	408,159

Human Rights

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what written guidance on the Human Rights Act 1998 has been prepared by the Northern Ireland Office; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [103826]

Mr. George Howarth: No specific written guidance on the Human Rights Act has been prepared by the Northern Ireland Office. The various forms of guidance that have been produced by the Home Office and the Cabinet Office are adequate for staff in the Northern Ireland Office and its associated public bodies.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which individual in the Northern Ireland Office has been tasked with responsibility for implementing the Human Rights Act 1998. [103827]

Mr. George Howarth: It is not appropriate for me to name individual officers. The Human Rights Unit in the Northern Ireland Office is responsible for co-ordinating the Department's preparations for the implementation of the Act, under the direction of senior officials.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements have been made to prepare non-departmental public bodies for the impact of the Human Rights Act 1998. [103833]

Mr. George Howarth: The public authorities for which the Northern Ireland Office is responsible have been alerted to the requirements of the Act, and will be provided with appropriate training. An inter-departmental working group has been established to monitor progress being made by individual public bodies in preparing for the Act and to identify any issues on which a joint approach would be most effective.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what additional resources have been made available to the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission for consultation on a Bill of Rights for Northern Ireland. [103835]

Mr. George Howarth: The Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission is defined as a non departmental public body and is funded by means of a grant in aid. The Commission's grant in aid for each of its first three years is £750,000. This figure represents the Government's considered judgment as to the amount of funding that would be needed in order to allow the Commission to discharge its functions effectively.

No additional resources have been made available to the Commission for its consultation exercise on the scope for defining a Bill of Rights for Northern Ireland. The Bill of Rights exercise has always been part of the Commission's remit as set out in statute. It was taken into account when the original grant in aid was determined and the Government therefore expect it to be funded within the allocated resources.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will lay the designation order specifying which additional public bodies are to be obliged to develop equality schemes in order to comply with section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998; and which bodies external to the public service he consulted when determining which organisations to designate under the proposed designation order. [103813]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 17 January 2000]: In compiling the designation order, the Secretary of State consulted with the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland. This consultation raised a number of queries that are still receiving attention. When these have been resolved, the Secretary of State will be in a position to lay the designation order before Parliament.

Judges and Lawyers

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he took in response to the report of the United Nations' Special Rapporteur on the Independence of Judges and Lawyers, presented to the United Nations in 1998. [103819]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 17 January 2000]: My right hon. Friend the Member for Redcar (Marjorie Mowlam), then Secretary of State, met Mr. Param Cumaraswamy, UN Special Rapporteur on the Independence of Judges and Lawyers on 14 April 1999 to discuss the issues which he raised in his report presented to the United Nations in 1998. A copy of the statement that she issued afterwards is available in the Library.

The report called for an independent inquiry into the murder of Patrick Finucane. In February 1999 the Government took receipt of alleged new evidence into the murder. We undertook to consider this very carefully before deciding whether any further action was necessary. The DPP(NI) decided to ask the Chief Constable to look into the allegations and a further police inquiry was announced on 28 April into the murder and related issues. A person has been charged with Mr. Finucane's murder. We will be in a better position to decide what, if any, further action is needed when the police investigation and criminal proceedings have been completed.

Mr. Cumaraswamy refers in his report to the introduction of the new Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland. On 11 October 1999, the Government announced the appointment of Mrs. Nuala O'Loan as Police Ombudsman Designate for Northern Ireland. The Ombudsman will have complete control over the Police Complaints system. She will be required to carry out independent investigations into serious complaints against the police. The Police Ombudsman has been appointed on a designate basis until the new office is established. This interim period will enable the Ombudsman Designate to have a direct say in the structure, staff and ethos of the office. This highlights the independence of the office.

The report also comments on audio/video recording in the holding centres. The police have a statutory Code of Practice which governs video recording and the detention, treatment, questioning and identification of terrorist suspects. A statutory Code of Practice on audio recording became mandatory on 24 May 1999. It is a disciplinary offence for a police officer to breach either of the Codes of Practice. Full audio recording and video recording of all interviews of persons in custody now takes place. The Chief Constable of the RUC has invited the Law Society to be involved in the training of Detective Officers who are involved in such interviews.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Departmental Properties

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those properties held by his Department and agencies responsible to him which are (a) wholly and (b) mainly unoccupied at present, giving locations and when they became so unoccupied in each case. [105312]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The information is as follows:

Property centre	Property	Location	Wholly unoccupied	Mainly unoccupied	Date unoccupied from
DETR(C)	Concord House	Paignton	Yes	—	February 1999
	Mullberry House	Edinburgh	Yes	—	March 1999
	Westpoint	Manchester	Yes	—	June 1999
	Highwood Pavilions	Bristol	Yes	—	April 1999
	Seymour House	Hemel Hempstead	Yes	—	July 1999
	Ogle Road	Southampton	Yes	—	May 1997
	St. Clare House	Ipswich	Yes	—	July 1997
	Caradog House	Cardiff	Yes	—	April 1997
Valuation Tribunals	Lynton House	Woking	Yes	—	November 1999
	34 St. Leonards Road	Eastbourne	Yes	—	November 1999
	100–102 Winchcombe Street	Cheltenham	Yes	—	December 1999
	Hamilton House	Chester	Yes	—	May 1999

Property centre	Property	Location	Wholly unoccupied	Mainly unoccupied	Date unoccupied from
Driving Standards Agency	Test Centres	Derby	Yes	—	1996
		Bilston	Yes	—	1996
		Kidderminster	—	Yes	1995
		Oswestry	—	Yes	1996
		Cardiff	—	Yes	1996
		Skipton	—	Yes	1996
		Harrogate	—	Yes	1996
		Sunderland	—	Yes	1996

Note:
The above refers to those areas solely the responsibility of the DETR or its agencies in the buildings referred to.

Powered Water Craft

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's policy in regulating the use of (a) jet-skis and (b) other powered water craft. [103179]

Mr. Meacher: The responsibility for the management of jet-skis and other powered watercraft is primarily for local authorities. Local byelaws, either inland or on the coast, give authorities the power to regulate such craft, for instance by imposing strict speed limits which result in the exclusion of many watercraft from specific areas. Speed limits already apply in some areas, such as parts of the Broads.

The Review of Byelaw Powers for the Coast recommended, among other things, that local authorities should be given a new power to create exclusive bathing zones and more general powers to regulate activities on the coast which affect the wider environment, such as the use of personal watercraft. We shall be looking for an opportunity to introduce legislation where it is needed to implement the Review's recommendations. In the meantime, we have published a voluntary code of best and safe practice for leisure craft users, and we are exploring options for a voluntary boat registration and identification scheme, which would include jet-skis.

Transport Supplementary Grant

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is offered as the level of transport supplementary grant for local authorities for 2000–01. [104229]

Mr. Prescott: £13.519 million in transport supplementary grant (TSG) has been allocated in the 2000–01 local transport capital settlement. This funding is given for a number of existing local authority major road scheme commitments.

In previous years TSG was used for the capital maintenance of bridges and principal road carriageways. From 2000–01 onwards this will now be funded exclusively in the form of borrowing approvals, for which local authorities receive revenue support grant (RSG) each year to meet the cost of repayment. The total allocation within the 2000–01 settlement for capital bridge and carriageway maintenance is £301 million, representing a 24 per cent. increase over 1999–2000.

Aircraft Crashes

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the latest estimate by the Civil Aviation Authority of the statistical probability in a year of a ground fatality occurring as a result of aircraft crashing on take-off or landing at (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick and (c) Stansted. [104634]

Mr. Mullin: The Civil Aviation Authority has identified two landing or take-off accidents within the United Kingdom during the last 40 years in which there were fatalities on the ground. These took place at Gatwick and Dunsfold and involved, respectively, two and six such fatalities. The Authority estimates that some 18.2 million aircraft movements took place at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted over the same period. Because of the very small number of accidents involving ground fatalities it is not possible to produce a statistically meaningful estimate for individual airports.

Gleneagles Hotel

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much was realised by the sale of Gleneagles Hotel. [104830]

Mr. Hill: The Gleneagles Hotel, the Caledonian Hotel (Edinburgh) and the North British Hotel (Edinburgh) were sold together by the British Railways Board in 1981 by means of a company sale. Two thirds of the shares were sold for £13.5 million and the rest were sold later for £6.1 million.

Railways (Nottingham)

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent discussions he has had with (a) Railtrack and (b) Midland Mainline regarding the upgrading of the track between Nottingham and London. [104894]

Mr. Hill: My right hon. Friend has had no discussions with Railtrack or Midland Main Line. However, I understand that Railtrack and Midland Main Line are currently discussing plans to improve the Midland Main Line.

Environment Agency

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to make a decision on the new charging regime proposed by the Environment Agency. [105079]

Mr. Meacher: The Environment Agency is currently consulting on its charging proposals for 2000–01. I expect to receive formal proposals from the Agency next month and to take decisions on them before the start of the new financial year.

Ports

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for changes in the law relating to ports. [105185]

Mr. Hill: We are considering options for legislation in respect of ports, including matters arising from both the Review of the Pilotage Act, published in July 1998 and from our Review of Trust Ports which has now produced the Guide to Good Governance that I launched earlier this month.

New Deal for Communities

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what factors were taken into account, other than indices for local deprivation, when deciding which London authorities would be invited to submit delivery plans for Round 2 of the New Deal for Communities. [105166]

Ms Beverley Hughes: In addition to information drawn from the Index of Local Deprivation, we applied a regional quota. That quota was used to balance our twin goals of spreading the impact of the new approach we are piloting under the New Deal for Communities as widely as possible, and focusing help and support on the areas of greatest need. On that basis, six of the 22 local authority districts eligible to participate in Round 2 are in London. The only other criteria we applied was that local authority areas in London eligible to participate in Round 1 of the programme, should not be eligible under Round 2.

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what factors will be taken into account when choosing which local authorities will be invited to submit delivery plans for Round 3 of the New Deal for Communities. [105165]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The targeting of regeneration funds, including those of the New Deal for Communities, will be considered in our cross cutting review of Government interventions in deprived areas and the forthcoming spending review.

Railways

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will set minimum standards of facility provision at town centre railway stations in relation to (a) CCTV and (b) park and ride. [105547]

Mr. Hill: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 17 January 2000, Official Report, column 251W.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will investigate the extent of the availability of special offer tickets offered by rail companies. [105548]

Mr. Hill: APEX fares and other concessionary fares are not regulated by the Franchise Director and are offered by train companies at their discretion. We do not maintain records of unregulated fares which are on offer, but I understand that some train operators have reduced the number of concessions offered because of increased demand for services.

Crowe Report

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to respond to the Crowe report; and if he will make a statement. [105329]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I refer my hon. Friend to the letter my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning, sent on 23 November about the South East Regional Planning Guidance Panel Report. The principles that will underpin our consideration of the Panel's recommendations are set out in that letter. We hope to announce the changes we propose to the draft RPG, as put forward by SERPLAN, soon. Parliament will, of course, be informed.

Countryside Traffic Measures Group

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many times the Countryside Traffic Measures Group has met since July 1998. [105279]

Mr. Hill: I understand that the Countryside Agency's Countryside Traffic Measures Group has met on three occasions since 1998.

Eurostar

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the consultant's study into the viability of Eurostar services north of London; if he will publish the consultant's report; and when he will make a statement on the report. [105486]

Mr. Hill: The consultants' report is currently being considered by my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Transport, who will make a statement soon. The report will be published at the same time.

Transport Expenditure

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the level of public expenditure, in each of the last 10 years, in each EU member state, on (a) railways and (b) roads. [105188]

Mr. Hill: Details of public investment in British railways and roads in each of the 10 years 1988–89 to 1997–98 are shown in Table 1.16 of the Government Statistical Office's publication Transport Statistics Great Britain 1999 Edition. We do not have the requested information in relation to other EU member states.

Cruise Ships

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what regulations govern the practice of placing passengers' luggage in corridors outside cabins on cruise ships; and if he will make a statement. [105186]

Mr. Hill: In the case of a UK flag ship, there are general provisions in the Merchant, Shipping and Fishing (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997 (SI 1997 No. 2962) about providing and maintaining a safe environment for persons aboard ship. There are also relevant provisions in the Merchant Shipping (Safe Movement on Board Ship) Regulations 1988 (SI 1988 No. 1641); for example regulation 4 provides that "the employer and master shall ensure that safe means of access is provided and maintained to any place on the ship to which a person may be expected to go". Such provisions are enforceable on UK ships wherever they may be and could cover matters such as a safety hazard caused by luggage in corridors. In the case of a non-UK ship, the requirements will depend on the provisions in the regulations of the state where the ship is registered. As the UK requirements implement provisions contained in the International Labour Organisation Convention 147, they may also be enforced on a non-UK ship while in a UK port.

Railway Fatalities

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many railway passenger fatalities there were in each EU member state in the last 10 years. [105189]

Mr. Hill: Information about railway passenger fatalities is published by the European Commission in "Transport in Figures". The latest readily available information is as follows:

Number of passenger fatalities

	Persons killed in accidents involving railways
	1990	1995	1996
Belgium	0	3	6
Denmark	1	0	0
Germany	50	34	35
Greece	0	3	0
Spain	4	0	0
France	30	22	14
Ireland	1	0	0
Italy	9	4	1
Luxembourg	0	0	0
Netherlands	2	0	1
Austria	6	7	3
Portugal	22	12	10
Finland	0	1	3
Sweden	3	2	0
Great Britain[1]	37	10	17

[1] Described as UK in 'Transport in Figures'

Source:
UIC (GB from national statistics)

These statistics are not necessarily based on common definitions and there is thus uncertainty about their comparability. The GB figures cover accidents on National Rail, London Underground and other urban railways, and included all passenger fatalities, both on trains and railway premises.

Street Lighting

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what statutory obligations local authorities have to provide street lighting. [105341]

Mr. Hill: Highway Authorities provide lighting under powers given by the Highways Act 1980. There are no statutory obligations for local authorities to provide street lighting.

Railtrack

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the (a) budgeted and (b) outturn investment by Railtrack in each year since its creation. [105703]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 18 January 2000]: Railtrack's budgets for investment are a commercial matter for the company.

The table provides details of Railtrack's outturn infrastructure expenditure in each financial year since 1996–97, when it was privatised.

Analysis of Railtrack infrastructure expenditure, 1996–97 to 1998–99

£ million cash prices

	1996–97	1997–98[1]	1998–99
Infrastructure maintenance	732	702	694
Expenditure on renewals	821	1,073	1,098
Backlog expenditure	28	63	92
Enhancement investment	170	208	294
Total infrastructure expenditure	1,751	2,046	2,178

[1] As restated in Railtrack's Annual Report and Accounts 1998–99

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum Seekers

Ms Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will announce which company has been chosen to operate the new voucher scheme for asylum seekers; and if he will make a statement. [106372]

Mrs. Roche: On 7 January, the Home Office awarded a contract for the operation of the new voucher scheme to Sodexho Pass International.

The voucher scheme will form an essential part of the new arrangements for supporting asylum seekers which were included in the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 and will come into operation on 1 April 2000. The provision of vouchers supplemented by a small weekly cash allowance will enable asylum seekers to meet their essential living needs while reducing the incentive to economic migration inherent in a fully cash based system of support.

Data Protection

Ms Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to lay the subordinate legislation to be made under the Data Protection Act 1998. [106373]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I intend to lay in draft next week the subordinate legislation subject to the affirmative resolution procedure. I shall publish on Thursday 20 January a draft of the Data Protection (Notification and Notification Fees) Regulations on the Internet at www.homeoffice.gov.uk and place copies in the Library. I intend to lay these Regulations and the other subordinate legislation subject to the negative resolution procedure in good time before the Data Protection Act 1998 comes into force on 1 March.

Contraband Tobacco

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many retailers were (a) arrested, (b) prosecuted and (c) convicted for selling contraband tobacco in each year since 1996. [104632]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Data on arrests are not collected centrally by individual offence.

The Home Office Court Proceedings Database does not hold information on the employment status of individuals or the characteristics of defendants who are not individuals. Nor does it hold information about the characteristics of individual cases apart from those that are evident from the description of the offence with which the defendant has been charged.

Retailers selling contraband tobacco can be prosecuted under section 170 of the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 (either subsection (1) or (2); Common Law (cheating the revenue) and section 1 of the Criminal Law Act 1977 (conspiracy to evade excise duty). Such cases cannot be identified separately from the many other offences prosecuted under this legislation, which will include beer, wine and spirits, for example, as well as tobacco.

London Prisons

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors to each of the London prisons were (a) charged with and (b) convicted of seeking to take illegal drugs into a prison in 1999. [104459]

Mr. Boateng: Figures for the number of visitors to London prisons who were charged with, or convicted of seeking to take illegal drugs into a prison in 1999 are not recorded by the Prison Service.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates at each of the London prisons were put on a governor's report in 1999. [104463]

Mr. Boateng: Adjudication statistics refer to charges rather than individuals and the available information, for January to November 1999, is given in the table.

Number of adjudications (governor's reports) on offences against prison discipline, January to November 1999

Prison establishments in Greater London	Number
Belmarsh	1,430
Brixton	1,055
Downview	114
Feltham	1,832
High Down	1,081
Holloway	1,279
Latchmere House	93
Pentonville	1,220
Wandsworth	1,060
Wormwood Scrubs	744
Total	9,908

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many strip-searches of inmates took place in each of the London prisons in each of the last 12 months. [104462]

Mr. Boateng: Prisons are not required to maintain statistics of the number of strip searches carried out. Strip searching is an essential element in maintaining security and good order in prisons. It is not possible to record every occasion on which it takes place, as at present this would have to be done manually. This would pose an unacceptable administrative burden, achievable only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women were being held in London prisons for alleged immigration offences on 1 January. [104461]

Mr. Boateng: The available information is for 30 November 1999 and relates to the number of persons held in London prisons under the Immigration Act 1971. On that date, there were 59 males and 25 females held in London prisons under the Immigration Act 1971.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates held in London prisons attempted (a) to commit suicide and (b) to cause self-inflicted injuries in 1999. [104460]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is given in the table, which covers the period 1 April 1998 to 31 March 1999.

Establishment	Incidents of self-harm financial year 1998–99
Belmarsh	61
Brixton	186
Downview	1
Feltham	292
High Down	61
Holloway	250
Latchmere House	0
Pentonville	94
Wandsworth	305
Wormwood Scrubs	185

Notes:
1. These data are derived from information provided by establishments to the Directorate of Health Care.
2. Incidents do not equate to numbers of prisoners as an individual prisoner may self-harm more than once.
3. Statistics on self-harm are collected on a financial year basis.
4. The establishments listed are those in the Greater London area.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates at each of the London prisons were charged with being in possession of illegal drugs while in prison in 1999. [104458]

Mr. Boateng: The number of offences of possession considered at adjudication is given in the table.

Number of adjudications on offences of possession of a controlled drug, January to November 1999

Prison establishments in Greater London	Number of offences[1]
Belmarsh	2
Brixton	18
Downview	1
Feltham	60
High Down	26
Holloway	4
Latchmere House	1
Pentonville	59
Wandsworth	6
Wormwood Scrubs	21

[1] Individual prisoners may be charged with more than one offence

Long-service Medals

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to equalise the length of service required to qualify for a police long-service medal with periods which apply in respect of the fire and ambulance services. [104502]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The respective qualifying periods for the long-service award—Police (22 years), Fire Service (20 years) and Ambulance Service (20 years) are directly related to conditions of employment. I am not aware of any suggestion by the Police Service that there should be any change to the qualifying period for their long-service medal. I have, therefore, no plans at present to make any such change.

Holocaust Denial Legislation

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce Holocaust denial legislation; and if he will make a statement. [104504]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Holocaust denial is a very difficult area in which to legislate. It is not easy to strike a balance between outlawing such offensive statements while ensuring that freedom of speech is not unduly restricted.

Therefore, while the Government are following carefully the current debates on this issue within the Jewish community and elsewhere, we have no immediate plan to introduce legislation.

Corporate Manslaughter

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he has held on the question of legislation relating to corporate manslaughter; and how soon he will introduce such legislation. [104598]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We are currently considering the conclusions of the inter-departmental working group of officials which has been examining the recommendations made in the Law Commission's report no. 237 "Legislating the Criminal Code: Involuntary Manslaughter". The Law Commission's report included a recommendation that there should be a new offence of corporate killing.

We will be consulting our colleagues shortly and then expect to publish our conclusions for consultation. We will also be considering the prospects for future legislation.

Police Officers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if validated figures for the total number of police officers per police force and in total at the end of October 1999 are available; and if he will make a statement. [104728]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 14 December 1999, Official Report, column 145W.

We collect police strength information only on a six monthly basis in order to reduce administrative burdens on the police. Police strength figures as at October 1999 will not therefore be requested from forces.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many serving police officers there were on 30 June and 31 December in each of the years 1992 to 1999 for which figures are available. [104465]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information on police numbers is set out in the table. From 1995, this information has been collected only twice yearly, in March and September.

Police numbers 1992 to 1999

	Number
June
1992	127,626
1993	128,031
1994	127,328
December
1992	128,045
1993	127,658
1994	127,358
March
1995	127,222
1996	126,901
1997	127,158
1998	126,814
1999	126,096
September
1995	126,808
1996	127,123
1997	126,862
1998	126,504
1999	[1] —

[1] Not yet available

Prison Service

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if the former Prison Service Director of Security has had access to the criteria for the competition for the operation of HMP Manchester and HMP Blakenhurst; and if he will make a statement; [104737]

(2) if members of the Prison Service Management Board have had access to the criteria for the competition for the design, construction, management and financing of HMP Peterborough and HMP Ashford; and if he will make a statement. [104738]

Mr. Boateng: The competitions for Blakenhurst, Manchester, Peterborough and Ashford prisons have not yet started and the evaluation criteria for those competitions have not yet been developed.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what rules govern senior employees of the Prison Service taking new employment with private companies which have contracts with or are seeking contracts with the Prison Service; how the rules have operated in relation to the former Director of Security; and if he will make a statement. [104739]

Mr. Boateng: The rules governing business appointments were last revised by the Cabinet Office in 1996 in the light of recommendations made by the Nolan Committee. The rules require senior civil servants in certain categories or other civil servants who have had official dealings with their prospective employer to report offers of appointment. Approval is required for the initial appointment and any further appointment within two years of leaving Crown employment. These rules have been applied in relation to the former Prison Service Director of Security who made an application on 7 January 2000. In compliance with these rules, the advice of the Cabinet Office is being obtained before her application can be responded to.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Home Office business appointment rules apply to members of the Prison Service Management Board; and if he will make a statement. [104735]

Mr. Boateng: All members of the Prison Service Management Board are subject to the rules on business appointments which have been issued by the Cabinet Office.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if members of the Prison Service Management Board had access to the deliberations of the evaluation panel reports of the bids for HMP Doncaster; and if he will make a statement. [104736]

Mr. Boateng: The members of the Prison Service Management Board received copies of the evaluation report of the bids for Doncaster prison in October 1999.

Jury Trial

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in each of the last five years for which figures are available, in how many and what percentage of either-way cases in which (a) magistrates declined jurisdiction and (b) defendants elected to go to the higher court, defendants pleaded (i) guilty and (ii) not guilty; and if he will make a statement. [104731]

Mr. Charles Clarke: No regular statistics are collected on this. However, there is some information available from the baseline data collected by the Home Office in 1998 for the evaluation of the pilot schemes to reduce delay in the criminal justice system. In a sample of nearly 1,000 triable either way cases dealt with in the Crown Court, guilty pleas were entered by 80 per cent. defendants in cases in which the magistrates declined jurisdiction and by 59 per cent. of defendants who elected to go to the higher court. In 11 per cent. of cases in which magistrates declined jurisdiction and 30 per cent. of those where defendants elected Crown Court trial, the defendant entered a not guilty plea and there was a contested trial. In the remainder—most of which were dropped—no information is available as to plea.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in each of the last five years for which figures are available, in what percentage of all either-way cases defendants elected for jury trial; and if he will make a statement. [104734]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Figures provided by the Attorney General's Department, which relate to prosecutions by the Crown Prosecution Service, are given in the table.

	Percentage of either way cases committed for trial on election of defendant	Year on year change
1995	33	—
1996	32	–1
1997	28	–4
1998	28	0
1999[1]	32	+4

[1] January-September

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in each of the last five years for which figures are available, in how many and what percentage of summary-only cases defendants pleaded (i) guilty and (ii) not guilty. [104733]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in each of the last five years for which figures are available, in how many and what percentage of indictable-only cases defendants pleaded (i) guilty and (ii) not guilty. [104732]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information is contained in the table:

Number and proportion of defendants tried at the Crown Court for indictable-only offences by final plea, 1995[1]-98

		Type of plea
		Guilty		Not guilty		Not known
Year	Total tried [=100 per cent.]	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
1995[1]	6,899	3,550	51	3,319	48	30	0
1996	15,565	8,327	53	7,203	46	35	0
1997	15,710	8,300	53	7,368	47	42	0
1998	16,740	8,644	52	8,046	48	50	0

[1] Plea data collected as from July 1995.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of (a) police officers and (b) police civilian staff (i) per Metropolitan police division and (ii) in total at the end of each of the last eight years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [104729]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan police informs me that the total number of police officers per Metropolitan police division as at 31 December for each of the last eight years is provided in the tables. Figures may not be strictly comparable year on year as a result of boundary and organisational changes. A comparable breakdown of police civilian staff figures is not available. The figures for civilians in the table refer to Area totals.

Police strengths at the end of December of year shown

	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Kensington and Chelsea Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	563.7
Notting Hill	229	238	245	229	250.6	243.6	230	—
Brompton	—	—	371.83	375.4	391.8	365.5	341.58	—
Chelsea	187	199	—	—	—	—	—	—
Kensington	216	218.1	—	—	—	—	—	—
Westminster
Belgravia	339.8	341.5	324.55	308.15	306.26	308.71	306.3	286.8
West End Central	373	339	328	316	308	309	298	304.6
Charing Cross	419.4	446.3	411.9	398.1	403.7	398.6	395.2	394.38
Marylebone	265.65	267.8	268.9	335.7	332.7	329.1	307.3	292.1
Paddington	—	—	466.2	356.6	350	352	324.2	345.11
Paddington Green	284	282.6	—	—	—	—	—	—
Harrow Road	224	224	—	—	—	—	—	—
Hammersmith and Fulham Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	532.12
Fulham	197	298	217	216.73	225.73	230.76	217.16	—
Hammersmith	344	340.33	328.2	316.4	335.52	311.02	300.82	—
Area sub-total	3,078.85	3,104.63	2,961.58	2,852.08	2,904.31	2,848.29	2,720.56	2,718.81
Camden Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	676.36
Hampstead	249	230	220	211	208.15	213.35	186.5	—
Kentish Town	263	260	269.7	276.86	274	285.46	291.66	—
Holborn	209.7	201.7	214.2	210.9	199.8	197.7	186.9	—
Islington Borough
Holloway	260	272.6	270.6	269.9	255.9	250.5	245.01	226.4
Islington	287	295.5	297.3	292.1	313.7	298.9	284.4	284.2
Harrow Borough	272.2	277.2	272.2	293.8	283.4	289.05	281.45	291
Brent Borough
Brent	240.91	253.7	266.7	258.6	272.6	266.48	257.48	246.01
Kilburn	383	366.4	385.28	359.14	367.26	346.75	336.18	313.88
Barnet Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	680.73
Barnet	306	316.4	323	300.3	285.26	277.26	225.55	—
Colindale	—	—	—	—	—	428.73	427.79	—
Golders Green	213.3	215.6	211.1	208.9	215.15	—	—	—
West Hendon	240	248.6	256.75	243.35	235.65	—	—	—
Ealing Borough
Ealing	338.58	361.23	355.93	363.68	354.28	338.35	312.8	324.77
Southall	281.7	291.78	287.93	296.96	291.19	288.16	281.99	269.9
Haringey Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	511.75
Hornsey	270.6	276.6	284.95	273.6	263.3	261.4	245.4	—
Tottenham	291	285	295	271	271.7	265.1	273.1	—
Hillingdon Borough	453.9	443.98	439.5	437	418.7	398.2	395.5	409.3
Area sub-total	4,559.89	4,596.29	4,650.14	4,567.09	4,510.04	4,405.39	4,231.71	4,234.3
Hackney Borough
Shoreditch and Hackney	333	324	336.68	324.6	326.8	330.4	329.32	313.12
Stoke Newington	278	309	356.5	334.94	349.24	346.24	338.1	325.25
Tower Hamlets Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	539.3
Limehouse	285	305	292	279	267	267.09	259.8	—
Whitechapel	—	—	341.7	334.7	329.4	300.4	301.3	—
Bethnal Green	187	184	—	—	—	—	—	—
Leman Street	197	201	—	—	—	—	—	—
Redbridge Borough
Barkingside	270	279.4	296.4	291.1	292.4	268	260.98	255.88
Ilford	250	257	257.49	254	259.6	228.95	231.65	232.25
Waltham Forest Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	467.81
Chingford	234.4	242.4	243.8	237.3	238.3	238.7	241.9	—
Leyton	227.4	231.4	243.4	226	238.92	224.8	220.2	—

Police strengths at the end of December of year shown

	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Havering Borough	366	375.01	377.17	363.49	351.05	334.33	326.38	326.54
Barking Borough
Dagenham	286	287	304.6	303.2	299.85	299.8	279.12	276.72
Newham Borough
Forest Gate	285	269.68	306.28	316.68	314.48	303.48	295.48	280.2
Plaistow	285	307.8	316.8	310	311.4	286.88	286.88	290.88
Enfield Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	533.57
Edmonton	258	259.46	270.2	265.38	261.78	268.3	267.68	—
Enfield	274	290	273.4	280.1	292.1	282	277	—
Area sub-total	4,015.8	4,122.15	4,216.42	4,120.49	4,132.32	3,979.37	3,915.79	3,841.52
Southwark Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	851.8
Southwark	283	293.53	289.12	306.08	308.88	289.18	296.87	—
Peckham	294.65	308.25	307.35	316.38	303.78	302.63	296.76	—
Walworth	239	248	275	280.4	265.5	268.7	282.8	—
Lewisham Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	533.57
Catford	280	257.6	260.7	294.8	[illegible]	290.85	287.9	—
Lewisham	313.6	330.8	337.6	347.8	[illegible]	319.38	307.56	—
Bromley Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	432.47
Bromley and Orpington	—	—	500.43	490.44	471.44	464.1	442.66	—
Orpington	211.44	217.58	—	—	—	—	—	—
Bromley	262	263	—	—	—	—	—	—
Greenwich Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	626.33
Plumstead	284	271	308.5	336.95	320.35	313.49	303.04	—
Greenwich	261	246.8	264.7	286.36	302.5	298.4	292.45	—
Bexley Borough
Bexley Heath	277.5	273	285	295.5	287.3	282	274.4	281
Croydon Borough
Croydon	285	277	296.5	291.3	297.36	272.84	265.38	246.73
South Norwood	312.6	302.69	327.3	342.58	327.98	327.77	324.34	321.83
Epsom and Ewell	373.9	390	428.9	431.38	405.23	404.5	392.81	387.12
Area sub-total	3,677.69	3,679.25	3,881.1	4,019.97	3,916.62	3,833.84	3,766.97	3,700.95
Heathrow division	441.55	423.94	414.39	396.19	366.99	362.06	340.73	297.23
Lambeth Borough
Brixton	302	309	322.5	316.85	322.65	299.08	290.58	269.58
Streatham	266	262.8	273.9	280.01	272.71	251.3	253.3	242.65
Vauxhall	—	—	406.65	372.95	371.94	366.51	350.11	335.96
Kennington	182	175.1	—	—	—	—	—	—
Clapham	230.5	200.5	—	—	—	—	—	—
Hounslow Borough	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	416.48
Chiswick	190.4	210.7	202.7	206.5	197.2	186.3	171.71	—
Hounslow	261	272.2	263.6	277.7	272.7	270.26	266.3	—
Spelthorne	189.4	208.2	199.2	199.8	198.2	178.4	180.8	155.05
Richmond Borough
Twickenham	298	321.35	297.45	319.85	295.85	283.15	267	279.14
Kingston Borough	375.4	395.7	373.14	393.34	362.24	366.89	329.89	325.89
Merton Borough	291.4	312	354.45	334.85	325.25	292.48	294.83	310.1
Wandsworth Borough
Battersea	222	229.8	298.8	288.8	306.9	268.7	263.4	252
Wandsworth	217	217.6	348.98	349.38	355.38	327.18	312.58	320.03
Tooting	232.6	245.9	—	—	—	—	—	—
Area sub-total	3,699.25	3,784.79	3,755.76	3,736.22	3,648.01	3,452.31	3,321.53	3,204.11
Area total	19,031.48	19,287.11	19,465.00	19,295.85	19,111.30	18,519.20	17,956.56	17,699.69
MPS total	28,229.66	28,045.31	28,070.59	27,719.35	27,420.41	26,960.45	26,523.36	26,164.42

Civil strengths as at the end of December of year shown

Area	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999	Area
Divisional strength totals by area
1. Central	713.22	752.35	743.2	683.68	618.25	595.65	Central
2. North West	945.55	999.19	1,055.55	999.77	966.72	1,951.18	North
3. North East	1,018.21	1,078.99	1,108.07	1,033.81	950.17	—
4. South East	886.92	1,021.32	1,081.65	985.77	945.56	1,723.23	South
5. South West	999.64	1,106.49	1,139.94	1,037.12	1,010.2	—
Total	4,653.54	4,958.34	5,128.41	4,740.15	4,490.9	4,270.06
MPS Total	14,271.23	14,303.09	13,725.1	12,856.22	11,457.3	10,795.94

Notes:
1. Totals for Area 5 South West (1994 to 1998) and South Area (1999) include Heathrow division.
2. All figures exclude traffic wardens and school crossing patrols.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letters dated 26 August, 16 September and 19 November from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mr. A. Richards. [104457]

Mr. Straw: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 13 January in response to his letters of 26 August, 16 September and 19 November on behalf of Mr. Richards. I am extremely sorry that I was unable to do so sooner, and would like, through my right hon. Friend, to extend my apology to Mr. Richards for the delay.

Fire Fatalities

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fatalities in domestic premises were caused by fire in (a) 1998, (b) 1993, (c) 1988, (d) 1983 and (e) 1999. [104507]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information provided relates to the number of deaths occurring in dwelling fires attended by United Kingdom local authority fire brigades.

Deaths in dwelling fires attended by local authority fire brigades, United Kingdom are given in the table:

Year	Deaths
1983	710
1988	731
1993	524
1998[1,2]	489
1999	[3]—

[1] 1998 data are estimated to account for revisions expected due to further information becoming available.
[2] Includes late calls. Heat and smoke incidents not recorded prior to 1994.
[3] Data not yet available.

Asset Sales

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the items in the National Assets Register sold by his Department, its agencies and associated public bodies since 11 February 1999, stating in each case the amount of money realised; if he will estimate the total amount raised from such sales to date; and if he will make a statement. [104472]

Mr. Straw: A review by my Department of sales of fixed assets previously listed in Chapter seven of the National Assets Register, is being undertaken. To date, it has revealed the following information for the Home Office, including the Prison Service:

Since 11 February 1999, land and buildings have been sold generating revenue of approximately £10,914,000; revenue from sales of vehicles was approximately £188,000; and sales of plant, machinery and Information Technology equipment produced £76,000.

Therefore, the total estimated revenue from such sales to date is £11,179,000 (rounded).

I regret that it is not possible to give an itemised list of such sales because of the large numbers involved and the disproportionate cost of compiling this information.

As soon as the remaining Home Office entities and the executive Non Departmental Bodies have completed their review, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Stalking

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, further to his written answer of 10 January 2000, Official Report, column 20W, on stalking, when he expects to receive the research report he has commissioned into the effectiveness of the Protection of Harassment Act 1997; and who is undertaking the research. [104843]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The research is currently being undertaken by my Research, Development and Statistics Directorate. I expect to receive the report by July.

British Greyhound Racing Funds

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the implications for animal welfare of the operation of the British Greyhound Racing Fund; and if he will make a statement. [104839]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have received a number of letters suggesting that not enough of the contributions made by bookmakers to the British Greyhound Racing Fund is devoted to the aftercare of greyhounds on retirement from racing. The distribution of Fund income is not a matter for the Government. We are, however, pleased that the Fund and the National Greyhound Racing Club are both financially supporting the work of the Retired Greyhound Trust, which has had some success in increasing the number of dogs re-homed at the end of their racing careers.

CS Spray

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis indicating, in each year since 1997, the amount of CS spray which the Commissioner (a) purchased, (b) distributed, (c) returned to storage, (d) wrote off as no longer safe for operational purposes, indicating how such unsafe stocks are disposed of and (e) has not otherwise accounted for. [105075]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police tells me that in 1997, approximately 29,500 canisters of CS spray were purchased and distributed among Operational Command Units (OCUs). An annual breakdown of purchases since 1997 is not readily available, but since then, a total of approximately 1,000 canisters have been purchased by individual OCUs throughout the Metropolitan Police District. As of 13 January, approximately 1,500 used and 15 damaged canisters had been returned to storage at local OCUs for ultimate destruction by the Army. I understand that no canisters are unaccounted for.

LD50 Animal Test

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in encouraging the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development to rescind guideline 401 concerning the LD50 animal test; what is Her Majesty's Government's policy toward this test; and if he will make a statement. [105072]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Section 5(5) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, as amended in September 1998, does not allow licensing of the LD50 (Guideline 401) test for the purpose of meeting international regulatory requirements. The general principle is that a test will be licensed only where there is not a scientifically valid and reasonably practicable and accepted alternative. There may be cases where no exact alternative is available and Guideline 401 (the LD50 test) can lawfully be licensed.

With the support of the United Kingdom Government, the European Commission has invited the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development to delete test 401 from its guidelines.

West Mercia Police

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many notifiable offences there were in West Mercia in each year from 1992 to date; and if he will make a statement; [105070]

(2) if he will list the clear-up rates for reported crime for West Mercia Police for each year from 1992 to date; and if he will make a statement. [105068]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The figures are given in the table.

	Notifiable offences	Clear-up rate (%)
1992	79,175	34
1993	82,832	29
1994	83,949	29
1995	80,013	28
1996	82,254	26
1997	76,762	28
1998–99[1]	81,782	34

[1] Year ending 31 March. The counting rules for notifiable offences changed on 1 April 1998. The figures given for this year are based on the new counting rules, which are not directly comparable to the previous figures. The clear-up rate is likewise not directly comparable.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers West Mercia Police Authority had in each year from 1992 to date; and if he will make a statement. [105069]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is set out in the table.

West Mercia constabulary: Police numbers between 1992 and 1999

Year[1]	Police numbers
1992	2,034
1993	2,054
1994	2,059
1995	2,046
1996	2,017
1997	2,040
1998	2,010
1999	2,025

[1] As at 31 March

Handguns

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many handguns have been surrendered under the provisions of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997; and of these how many have been (a) destroyed, (b) retained for training purposes, (c) retained for museum and display purposes, (d) sold for (i) export and (ii) re-use and (e) earmarked for other uses. [104802]

Mr. Charles Clarke: A total of 162,198 handguns were surrendered to the police under the terms of the Firearms (Amendment) (No. 2) Act 1997. The vast majority of these handguns will have been, or will be, destroyed when the associated compensation claims have been resolved. There are now less than 800 claims outstanding. A small number of surrendered handguns will be retained by the police, Her Majesty's Customs and the Forensic Science Service for training purposes. No central records are held of the number of handguns retained for this purpose. Examples of particular note or historic interest will be made available to suitably authorised museums. The National Museums Consortium, which represented museums in England and Wales for the purposes of the surrender exercise, has selected approximately 4,600 handguns for consideration for retention by museums. No surrendered handguns have been sold, either here or abroad, and none are earmarked for other purposes.

Rehabilitation

Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 to those sentenced to longer than 30 months. [104842]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Following the recommendation of the Better Regulation Task Force's Review of Fit Persons Criteria, we plan to review all the rehabilitation periods currently established by the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974.

Tharcisse Muvunyi

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the immigration status of Lt Col Tharcisse Muvunyi; when he was admitted to the UK; and what representations his Department has received concerning allegations made against him in respect of crimes against humanity. [104512]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 13 January 2000]: Lieutenant Colonel Muvunyi has limited leave to remain in the United Kingdom until 12 May 2002, having been admitted on 29 March 1998. The Home Office has received a number of representations concerning Lieutenant Colonel Muvunyi's alleged involvement in the genocide which took place in Rwanda in 1994. The International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda has jurisdiction to prosecute persons responsible for this crime and for other serious violations of international humanitarian law committed in the territory of Rwanda in the period in question, and was indeed established by the United Nations to do so. The Tribunal which is located in Arusha, Tanzania, has extensive powers to request assistance from states. We have assisted the Tribunal in the past by helping it to approach Lieutenant Colonel Muvunyi for an interview and have made it clear that if the Tribunal requests the future assistance of the United Kingdom, we will act appropriately.

Primates

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the import of primates from South-East Asia for onward export abroad for the purpose of experiment. [104280]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food authorises the transportation of animals, including primates, to the United Kingdom. Import licences for primates are issued under the Rabies (Importation of Dogs, Cats and other Mammals) Order 1974 (as amended). These specify the intended use and require the animals to be transported immediately after landing by an authorised carrying agent to an authorised quarantine premises. They must remain there for six calendar months. Licences are not required in the case of animals which land at a port or airport for onward export from the same place within 48 hours. If an animal is exported from the United Kingdom before the period of quarantine is completed, their movement to the port of departure must be licensed.

As such animals are not for use in regulated procedures in the United Kingdom, the Home Office has no involvement with them except where they are held in a supplying establishment designated under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. The establishment will be expected to meet the standards published in the Home Office Codes of Practice for the Housing and Care of Animals. All establishments are regularly inspected, often without prior notice, to assess compliance with the 1986 Act, the terms and conditions of the certificate of designation, and the standards set out in the Codes of Practice.

Police

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by Police Authority for each of the last four years the number of (a) civilian and (b) non-civilian employees who have retired early on the grounds of ill health and the cost of such retirements. [105343]

Mr. Straw: Tables containing the information requested on the number of ill health retirements for civilian and non-civilian employees from each Police Authority during the past four years have been placed in the Library.

The Police Pension Scheme is administered locally by individual police authorities. The costs of ill health retirements are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those properties held by his Department and agencies responsible to him which are (a) wholly and (b) mainly unoccupied at present, giving locations and when they became so unoccupied in each case. [105301]

Mr. Straw: The requested information on unoccupied properties held by my Department and its agencies is set out in the table entitled "Wholly or mainly vacant properties on the Home Office non-prison estate".

In addition, the Home Office is in the process of acquiring/fitting out leasehold offices in London, Croydon and Merseyside to accommodate staff for new initiatives. It is anticipated that these properties will be occupied within a few weeks of acquisition.

Prison Estate

A strategic plan is currently being implemented to sell surplus Prison Service-owned land by 31 March 2002. This mainly involves plots of land near existing prison establishments; however, it does include three whole sites. These are two former stores sites at Branston, Staffordshire and Steventon, Oxfordshire, which are partially unoccupied and a site at Finnamore Wood near Marlow, Buckinghamshire, which is wholly unoccupied. The Service has also recently purchased sites for development at Ashworth—Merseyside, Belmarsh—South London, Peterborough and adjacent to Birmingham prison.

The following residential properties have been notified to the centre as being vacant. The Prison Service's Estate Section does not hold information on the length of time properties have been unoccupied and could only obtain this from the local Governors at disproportionate cost. However, the majority of the properties currently being marketed have been vacant for six months or less.

Wholly or mainly vacant properties on the Home Office non-prison estate

Property	Unoccupied from	Reason
Poltimore near Exeter, Devon (bunker/land)	December 1993	Sale with solicitors
Hope Cove, near Salcombe, Devon (bunker/land)	November 1992	Three separate sales imminent
Southwoods sub-station Southwoods, Yeovil (bunker/land)	November 1992 but used for automatic equipment until recently	Property to be sold
STC Gringley, Nottinghamshire (land)	March 1995	Intended as a Secure Training Centre. Planning consent refused and site is being prepared for sale
Lunar House, Croydon (offices)	July 1999	Property currently being refurbished for re-use
Bridge House, London (offices)	Acquired by HO December 1999	To be refurbished as new UK Passport Agency HQ
RAF Oakington, Cambridge (ex-military camp)	Acquired by HO January 2000	Being refurbished as an Immigration Reception Centre
HMP Aldington, Near Ashford, Kent (ex-prison)	August 1999	Ex-prison estate. To be demolished and site used as an Immigration Detention Centre
2 Marsham Street, London (offices)	Leased by HO April 1999 (mainly unoccupied)	Required for central London accommodation strategy. Bids expected 6 March 2000
16 vacant staff houses at the Fire Service College, Moreton-in-Marsh	1999 (varies, some have been vacant for a year, some have just become available)	To be let short-term pending outcome of College review

Vacant residential properties owned by HMPS in England and Wales listed by establishment as at 17 January 2000

Establishment	Property type	Number
Schedule A—vacant properties currently being disposed of
Birmingham	House	1
Blantyre House, Goudhurst, Kent	House	1
Blundeston, Lowestoft, Sussex	House	1
Deerbolt, Barnard Castle, Co. Durham	House	1
Dover	House	1
Everthorpe, Brough Yorkshire	House	2
Exeter	House	1
Feltham, Middlesex	House	1
Foston Hall, Foston, Derby	House	1
Guys Marsh, Shaftsbury, Dorset	House	1
Haverigg, Millow, Cumbria	House	1
Kirkham, Preston	House	3

Vacant residential properties owned by HMPS in England and Wales listed by establishment as at 17 January 2000

Establishment	Property type	Number
Lindholme, Hatfield Doncaster	House	11
Long Lartin, Evesham, Worc.	House	2
Manchester	Flat	1
Mount, Hemel Hempstead	House	1
Parkhurst, Isle of Wight	House	1
Pentonville, London N7	House	1
Stockten, Stretton Leics.	House	13
Wandsworth, London SW18	Flat	1
Wayland, Griston Norfolk	House	1
Winchester	House	1
Wormwood Scrubs, London W12	House	4
Wymott, Leyland Preston	House	1

Vacant properties owned by HMPS in England and Wales listed by establishment as at 17 January 2000

Establishment	Property type	Number	Retention
Schedule B—vacant properties retained on security/operational grounds (including chaplains) or for future development
Acklington, Morpeth Northumberland	House	1	Chaplain
Askham Grange, Askham Richard York	Flat	3	Operational/Security
Belmarsh, London SE28	House	1	Chaplain
Brixton, London SW2	Flat	1	Chaplain
Brixton	House	1	Chaplain
Buckley Hall, Rochdale Lancs	House	2	Operational/Security
Cookham Wood, Rochester Kent	House	1	Development
Durham	Flat	4	Chaplain
Gartree, Market Harborough Leics	House	1	Chaplain
Hollesley Bay, Woodbridge Suffolk	House	1	Operational/Security
Holloway, London N7	Flat	12	Development
Holloway	House	1	Operational/Security
Hull	House	1	Chaplain
Huntercombe, Nuffield Oxford	House	1	Chaplain
Kirkham, Preston Lancs	House	1	Chaplain
Latchmere House, Richmond Surrey	House	1	Development
Leeds	House	1	Chaplain
Leyhill, Wotton-Under-Edge, Glos	House	2	Chaplain (1)
Lindholme, Hatfield Doncaster	House	2	Chaplains
Long Lartin, Evesham Worcs	House	1	Chaplain
Low Newton, Durham	House	5	Development
Moorland, Hatfield Doncaster	House	2	Operational/Security

Vacant properties owned by HMPS in England and Wales listed by establishment as at 17 January 2000

Establishment	Property type	Number	Retention
Moreton Hall, Swinderby Lincoln	House	4	Development
North Sea Camp, Boston Lincolnshire	House	11	Development
Parkhurst, Isle of Wight	House	1	Development
Pentonville, London N7	House	1	Operational/Security
Portland	House	1	Operational/Security
Rochester	House	1	Operational/Security
Standford Hill, Isle of Sheppy Kent	House	1	Operational/Security
Stocken, Stretton Leics	House	5	Operational/Security
Styal, Wilmslow Cheshire	House	4	Operational/Security
Swinfen Hall, Lichfield Staffs	House	1	Operational/Security
Wandsworth, London SW18	Flat	1	Defective[1]
Wandsworth	House	1	Chaplain
Wormwood Scrubs, London W12	Flat	3	Leasehold[2]
Wormwood Scrubs	Flats	17	Development
		98

[1] But plan to sell if possible
[2] Can be sold if freehold obtained

Refugee Accommodation

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what investigations he has carried out into (a) the quality of accommodation and (b) the value for money offered by accommodation for refugees in the United Kingdom. [105575]

Mrs. Roche: Recognised refugees have freedom of movement within the United Kingdom and access to housing in the same way as other British residents. There is, therefore, no intention to make investigations into the quality of accommodation which they occupy.

A procurement exercise is currently underway for accommodation for destitute asylum seekers under new arrangements for their support by the Home Office. All tenders received are commercially confidential. As part of the process of procurement, checks will be carried out to ensure the quality, suitability and value-for-money of accommodation offered in tenders. We expect these to be carried out in a number of ways, including: scrutiny of financial and other information; visits to some properties; and specified consultation with relevant local authorities.

Seconded Staff

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff were seconded from the private sector to his Department in (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999 and (c) May 1999 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the companies from which staff have been seconded. [103606]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 21 December 1999]: Secondments and attachments are part of the Interchange Initiative which promotes the exchange of people and good practice between the Civil Service and other organisations. All sectors of the economy are involved: Voluntary, Education, Health, Public and Private. Interchange is a key component of the reform agenda. The Modernising Government White Paper committed us to increasing interchange, in particular by bringing in more people on secondment and sending more of our people out.

For the periods in question, two private sector staff are recorded as having been seconded to my Department. One was from Barclay's Bank between January 1997 to January 1999 and the other is from PriceWaterhouseCoopers for 12 months from 4 August 1999. Other inward secondments of three months or more recorded centrally in the above periods, were predominantly from local government, the health service, and the European Union.

PRIME MINISTER

Ayrshire

Q12. Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Prime Minister when he next plans to visit Ayrshire. [103528]

The Prime Minister: I have no immediate plans to do so.

Committee on Standards in Public Life

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement about the vacancy on the Committee on Standards in Public Life. [106130]

The Prime Minister: I am pleased to announce that Ann Abraham has accepted my invitation to serve as a member of the Committee on Standards in Public Life in succession to Baroness Warwick of Undercliffe who stood down at the end of last year.

I should like to take this opportunity to thank Baroness Warwick for her valuable contribution to the work of the Committee over the past five years.

British-Irish Council

Dr. Godman: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the names of those who attended the inaugural meeting of the British-Irish Council, together with the names of their parliaments or assemblies; when and where the Council will next meet; and if he will make a statement. [105572]

The Prime Minister: The British-Irish Council, which was established under the Belfast Agreement, held its inaugural summit meeting in London on 17 December. The membership of the Council comprises the UK and Irish

Governments, the devolved administrations in Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales and the administrations in the Isle of Man, Jersey and Guernsey.

I led the UK delegation and, as host, chaired the meeting. The remainder of the UK delegation consisted of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

The other delegations were as follows:

Ireland

the Taoiseach, Bertie Ahern TD

the Tánaiste, Mary Harney TD

Minister for Foreign Affairs, David Andrews TD

Minister for Justice, John O'Donoghue

Northern Ireland

First Minister, the right hon. David Trimble MLA MP

Deputy First Minister, Seamus Mallon MLA MP

Minister for Enterprise, Trade and Investment, Sir Reg Empey MLA

Minister for Finance and Personnel, Mark Durkan MLA

Minister for Health, Social Services and Public Safety, Bairbre de Brún MLA

Scotland

First Minister, the right hon. Donald Dewar MSP MP

Deputy First Minister, Jim Wallace MSP MP

Permanent Secretary at the Scottish executive, Muir Russell

Wales

First Secretary, the right hon. Alun Michael JP AM MP

Assembly Business Secretary, Andrew Davies AM

Finance Secretary, Edwina Hart AM

Isle of Man

Chief Minister, hon. Donald Gelling MHK

Chief Secretary, Fred Kissack

Jersey

President, Policy and Resources Committee, Senator Pierre Horsfall

Chief Executive, Policy and Resources Committee, John Mills

Guernsey

President, Advisory and Finance Committee, Conseiller Laurie Morgan

Chief Executive, Advisory and Finance Committee, Mike Brown.

The Council agreed that its next summit meeting should take place in Dublin at the end of June 2000.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday, 19 January. [105232]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I will have further such meetings later today.

Joint Cabinet Consultative Committee

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister (1) how many recent papers considered by the Joint Cabinet Consultative Committee have been drafted by Liberal Democrat hon. Members; [105668]

(2) what plans he has to establish joint working groups between Government and Liberal Democrat hon. Members with a brief to report back to the Joint Cabinet Consultative Committee. [105667]

The Prime Minister: As a Cabinet Committee the Joint Consultative Committee's proceedings are exempt from disclosure under the exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, dealing with internal discussion and advice.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Digital Television

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 13 December 1999, Official Report, column 37W, if he will list the organisations and individuals who made representations in favour of the suggested supplement to the licence fee for digital television purposes. [104113]

Janet Anderson [holding answer 10 January 2000]: We will publish details of the responses to the Davies report when we announce the outcome of the review, shortly. This will include a summary of them. Subject to obtaining the permission of the organisations concerned, we will also make available the responses themselves. Pending our obtaining that permission, the responses must be regarded as having been given in confidence.

World Cup

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the progress of the campaign to host the 2006 football World Cup in the United Kingdom. [104793]

Kate Hoey: FIFA will make its final decision as to the host country for the 2006 FIFA World Cup on 6 July and so that FA's bid is entering its final critical stage of campaigning. During their visit in October last year, the FIFA Inspection Team made clear their view that England has a very strong technical bid. Efforts to convey its strengths, together with the many proposed legacy benefit associated with hosting a World Cup in England, will be maximised by the FA bid team in the coming months. The government's Envoy to the bid team will play a full part in this work.

An integral part of recent activity by the bid team has been the stepping up of lobbying of the 24 FIFA voters, involving both receiving visitors in England and the co-ordination of overseas visits. Recent events have included attendance by members of the bid team at the 2002 FIFA World Cup Preliminary Draw in Tokyo, the FIFA Under 17 Championships in New Zealand and the World Club Championship in Brazil involving Manchester United. In the coming months the bid team will make important presentations to each of FIFA's six Confederations across the world. The timetable for these presentations is as follows:

20 January: CAF, Ghana

5 February: CONMEBOL, Paraguay

12–13 May: CONCACAF, Bahamas

18 May: AFC, Malaysia

Week commencing 22 May: OFC, New Zealand

30 June: UEFA, Luxembourg.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iran

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of stockpiled (a) chemical weapons with blister, blood and choking agents and (b) bombs and artillery shells for the agents' delivery being held by Iran. [104783]

Mr. Hain: In conjunction with other Government Departments we regularly assess the status of a number of countries' stockpiles of chemical weapons and the equipment associated with its delivery. Such assessments draw heavily on intelligence sources and we are therefore unable to comment further.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the long-range ballistic missile capability of Iran and its effect on the balance of power in the region. [104997]

Mr. Hain: We regularly discuss proliferation issues with Iran and have frequently expressed our concern about Iranian attempts to develop ballistic missile systems. We remain particularly concerned by Iran's development of the Shahab-3 ballistic missile. Such a system could pose a threat to stability in the region.

Iran is not the only country in the region to possess such technology, and we understand Iran's legitimate security concerns. Despite this we continue to urge Iran to refrain from the development of ballistic missiles.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the progress made by Iran towards the acquisition of non-conventional weapons. [104996]

Mr. Hain: In conjunction with other Government Departments, we regularly assess the status of efforts by a number of countries to develop or acquire weapons of mass destruction and the means to deliver them. Such assessments draw heavily on intelligence sources and we are therefore unable to comment further.

Iran is a Non-Nuclear-Weapon State Party to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and a State Party to the Chemical Weapons Convention and the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention. We continue to encourage Iran to respect these treaties and to comply fully with its obligations under them.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the Iranian President is in control of Iran's Ministry of Intelligence; [105000]

(2) what assessment he has made of the extent to which the Iranian President is in control of Iran's security services. [104999]

Mr. Hain: The internal workings of the Iranian Government are a matter for the Iranian people. As far as our dealings with Iran are concerned, President Khatami is the head of the Iranian Government, with responsibility for all Ministries within that Government.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the role of (a) the Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps and (b) the Iranian Ministry of Intelligence and Security in acts of terror. [105001]

Mr. Battle: This Government condemn terrorism in all its forms. Any such specific assessments could only come from intelligence sources and would, therefore, be exempted from disclosure under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on access to Government Information.

Ukraine

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to Annexe 5, Paragraph 3 of the Common Strategy for the Ukraine agreed at the Helsinki European Council, when and where the Partnership Agreement with the Ukraine was negotiated; when it came or will come into effect; who were its signatories; and to what parliamentary procedures it has been or will be subject. [105082]

Mr. Vaz: The EU Partnership and Co-operation Agreement with Ukraine was negotiated in Brussels during 1993–94 and signed on 14 June 1994. It came into force on 1 March 1998 after ratification by all parties to the PCA: Ukraine, the 15 EU members states, the European Community, the European Coal and Steel Community and the European Atomic Energy Community.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of Her Majesty's Ambassador in Kiev in implementing Her Majesty's Government's policy on relations between the United Kingdom and Ukraine. [105127]

Mr. Vaz: Her Majesty's Ambassador in Kiev is charged with promoting the interests of the United Kingdom in Ukraine. The Ambassador plays a central role in pursuing Her Majesty's Government's policy, explaining that policy to the Government of Ukraine, and advising Her Majesty's Government on developments in Ukraine.

International Court of Justice

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 13 December 1999, Official Report, column 19W, on the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice, if he will make a statement on the application of the Court's jurisdiction to those Member States which had not been party to any decision of the European Council taken under article 23 of the consolidated Treaty on European Union. [105133]

Mr. Vaz: Article 23 of the consolidated Treaty on European Union is not relevant to the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice, which is governed by Article 36 of the Statute of the Court.

HOUSE OF COMMONS PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES (HANSARD) ● 1999-2000
CHADWYCK-HEALEY Vol. 342 cols. W475 - 588 10 - 20 January 2000

European Councils

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requirements are placed on applicants for membership of the European Union as regards accepting all the currently applicable decisions and conclusions of European Councils; and what the basis is for such requirements. [105128]

Mr. Vaz: In order to become members of the EU, applicants must meet the criteria agreed at the Copenhagen European Council in 1993 (annexed).

At the opening of the accession negotiations with Cyprus, the Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Poland and Slovenia on 31 March 1998, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, representing the Presidency, laid down the principles for negotiation, emphasising the necessity of > "full acceptance of the actual and potential rights and obligations attaching to the Union system and its institutional framework, known as the 'acquis' of the Union".

This includes the decisions and conclusions of European Councils. The applicant's acceptance of the 'acquis' may give rise to technical adjustments, and exceptionally to non-permanent transitional measures. The same principles will govern the accession negotiations with Bulgaria, Latvia, Lithuania, Malta, Romania and Slovakia, which will begin in February 2000.

Ilisu Dam

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 10 January 2000, Official Report, column 31W, on the Ilisu Dam, what specific issues were raised by the Syrian Ambassador about the Ilisu Dam at his meeting with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 23 December. [R] [104853]

Mr. Hain: The Syrian Ambassador asked the FCO to take full account of the impact of the Ilisu Dam project on the Syrian economy and people, on relations between Syria and Turkey, and on legal obligations.

These issues are reflected in the statement by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 21 December, which outlined the UK's four key concerns, including the need for an assurance that adequate downstream water flows be maintained at all times.

Counter-terrorism (USA)

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has received a copy of the testimony of the Co-ordinator for Counter-terrorism in the US State Department before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on 2 November 1999; and if he will make a statement. [105002]

Mr. Battle: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has received a copy of the State Department's testimony. We liaise closely with the United States on counter-terrorism issues both bilaterally and in international fora, such as the G8.

Iraq

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what goods on the UK Military List have recently been approved for export to Iraq. [106111]

Mr. Hain: Following consultation with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Ministry of Defence, the Department of Trade and Industry recently approved a licence to export 160 protective vests to Iraq for use by UN personnel in a humanitarian demining programme. The export of the equipment to Iraq was approved under the oil for Food Programme by the UN Sanctions Committee.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those properties held by his Department and agencies responsible to him which are (a) wholly and (b) mainly unoccupied at present, giving locations and when they became so unoccupied in each case. [105302]

Mr. Battle: The following properties are wholly unoccupied:

Frankfurt former Residence—vacant since 1998

Jakarta former Residence—vacant since 1996

Plymouth former Residence—vacant since 1995 (owned by Government of Montserrat)

St. Johns former Residence—vacant since 1999

Tripoli Offices—vacant since 1984.

The following properties are mainly unoccupied:

Baghdad Offices—since 1991

Ho Chi Minh City former Residence—since 1993

Kabul Offices—since 1992

Old Admiralty Building, London—since 1999.

India

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received concerning the Vishwa Hindu Parishad Organisation's attack on a Christian meeting in India; and if he will make a statement. [105576]

Mr. Hain: We are aware of reports of attacks on Christians in India and have received many letters on this subject. We have made clear our concern about attacks on religious minorities to the Indian authorities on a number of occasions. I raised this most recently with my Indian interlocutors, including the Indian Minister of State for External Affairs, during my visit there in November.

Indonesia

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy on extending the arms embargo on Indonesia; and if he will make a statement. [105578]

Mr. Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Pound) on 17 January 2000, Official Report, column 325W.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Debt Relief

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is the role of her Department in monitoring and measuring the bilateral debt relief programme. [105681]

Mr. Foulkes: Our Department has no direct role in monitoring and measuring the use of the bilateral debt relief which is provided as part of an international agreement, including that given under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative. We strongly welcome the sharpened poverty focus of the HIPC Initiative agreed in September 1999. In order to benefit under the enhanced Initiative, HIPC countries will have to produce a poverty reduction strategy (PRS), based around the achievement of the international development targets. Our Department is closely engaged in the international discussions on the development of these strategies, including how they will be monitored. We place great importance on both civil society and the international community being able to monitor their implementation, and we recognise that increased international efforts will be required in this area. In November 1999, the Partnership in Statistics for Development in the 21st Century was launched. Its aims are to provide statistical assistance to HIPC countries in producing their poverty reduction strategies and to develop sustainable statistical capacity in the longer term, to inform and support pro-poor policy making, and programme design. DFID is devoting additional resources to achieve these aims, both bilaterally and multilaterally.

Bilateral debt relief provided on aid loans owed to our Department is given in the context of our development partnership, and monitored in the same way as all other programmes and projects. The Government have recently announced that they will provide 100 per cent. relief on all the bilateral debt owed to the Export Credit Guarantee Department by qualifying HIPC countries. No additional conditionality will be attached to the provision of this relief nor will special efforts be made to monitor its use. We are confident that the conditions of the revised HIPC Initiative are sufficient to guarantee that monies freed up will be spent on poverty reduction.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if the British Council will be involved in monitoring the outcome of debt relief measures. [105683]

Mr. Foulkes: The British Council will not be involved in monitoring the outcome of debt relief measures.

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the countries that will benefit from debt relief, stating (a) by how much in each case and (b) their order of priority. [105235]

Mr. Foulkes: The following 41 countries are classified as Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC):

Angola, Benin, Bolivia, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo, Democratic Republic of Congo, Cote d'Ivoire, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Kenya, Lao PDR, Liberia, Madagascar, Malawi, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, Myanmar, Nicaragua, Niger, Rwanda, Sao Tome, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sudan, Tanzania, Togo, Uganda, Vietnam, Yemen, and Zambia.

To date, debt relief has been provided (in net present value terms) under the HIPC Initiative as follows:

Countries	Date	$ million
Uganda	April 1998	347
Bolivia	September 1998	448
Guyana	May 1999	256
Mozambique	July 1999	1,716

No other country has received debt relief under HIPC to date, and it is not possible to provide figures on what each will receive in the future. Following the revisions agreed last September, the HIPC Initiative will provide faster, deeper and wider debt relief. This will amount to around $50 billion (in nominal terms), which is more than twice as much as under the original framework. The countries listed will receive additional debt relief, and those countries yet to receive relief will be assessed against the new debt sustainability ratios.

Countries not classified as HIPC may nevertheless receive assistance with their debt from the Paris Club of official bilateral creditors. There are a variety of terms which may be offered to a debtor country, in the form of debt reduction for the poorest countries and debt rescheduling.

The Government are pressing for the speedy implementation of the revised HIPC framework. Our target, which was agreed by the international community last year, is for three-quarters of eligible HIPC countries to be receiving relief on their debts by the end of 2000.

Kosovo

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to visit Kosovo. [105688]

Clare Short: I have no plans to do so.

Departmental Casual Staff

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the number of casual staff employed by her Department for every quarter since 1 May 1997. [105682]

Mr. Foulkes: The information is provided in the table:

Date	Number of casual staff in post [1]
1 October 1999	30
1 July 1999	40
1 April 1999	32
1 January 1999	29
1 October 1998	32
1 July 1998	40
1 April 1998	39
1 January 1998	39
1 October 1997	40
1 July 1997	43

[1] Data is available only for the total number of casual staff in post as at the beginning of each quarter. The figures are provided on this basis

Departmental Website

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what was the cost of (a) setting up and (b) updating her Department's website; and how often it is updated. [105692]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development's (DFID) website was set up in 1997 at an initial cost of £10,000. The annual maintenance cost is £12,000 and development costs for 1998–99 were £3,500. The website is updated regularly, usually on a daily basis.

Poverty Reduction

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the role of the IMF in poverty reduction. [105236]

Mr. Foulkes: At the Annual Meetings of the World bank and IMF in September 1999, as part of the discussion on revision of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative it was agreed that all low-income countries would produce poverty reduction strategies (PRS). The process of developing these strategies will be led by national Governments, and involve discussion with civil society and the international community, including the IMF. They will integrate macro-economic objectives, structural reforms and social policies and programmes, and centre on the achievement of the international development targets. The IMF have committed themselves to providing their assistance to the poorest countries within the framework of these poverty reduction strategies; as a sign of this new focus, the Enhanced Structural Adjustment Facility (ESAF) has been redesignated as the Poverty Reduction and Growth Facility (PRGF).

This commitment to the poverty reduction strategy approach is consistent with the recommendations of the 1998 Review of ESAF, which proposed that the IMF should take more account of the social impact of their programmes, consider the quality of Government expenditure and protect budgets in high priority areas such as health and education. It encouraged greater joint working with the World bank, and emphasised the need to build broad-based support for reform programmes, to ensure their success. Following proposals put forward by the UK, the World bank, in consultation with the IMF and the UN, has developed principles of good practices in social policy. We envisage that these principles will be drawn upon in the design of poverty reduction strategies and supporting donor programmes.

Departmental Smoking Policy

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she is taking to reduce smoking in her Department. [105798]

Mr. Foulkes: Smoking is not permitted in the workplace. However, separate accommodation is available for staff and visitors who wish to smoke occasionally. In addition, we provide staff with information on the health implications of smoking and offer counselling and support to those who want to give up smoking.

Staff Bonuses

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department, its agencies and associated public bodies spent in total on extra bonuses above usual payments for staff working over the new year period; what were the (a) maximum and (b) minimum bonuses paid; how many people received the (i) maximum and (ii) minimum payments; and if she will make a statement. [104469]

Clare Short: The total spent on extra bonuses to civil servants in my Department was £16,900. Twenty-nine people received the maximum payment of £500. Fifteen people received the minimum bonus of £100.

This was mainly to ensure that the Department for International Development's (DFID) information systems world wide were functioning properly and to correct any problems before the resumption of normal business on 4 January.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Small Business Service

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Government will publish its response to the consultation document on the Small Business Service. [105978]

Ms Hewitt: I have today placed in the Library of both Houses a document which gives a summary of the replies to the consultation and sets out the Government's response.

We had an excellent response to the consultation to shape the remit of the Small Business Service. We received 700 replies from a wide range of individuals and organisations, including many small businesses. The vast majority warmly welcomed our proposals.

I look forward to the launch of the Small Business Service this April under its Chief Executive, David Irwin.

Household Products (Pesticides)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will set out the labelling requirements which apply to the presence of (a) Lindane and (b) other pesticides in household products. [104652]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 13 January 2000]: All non-agricultural pesticides supplied to consumers must be approved under the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986 (as amended), which require, among other things, that manufacturers must name on the product label the active ingredient(s), such as Lindane, present in the product. Under the regulations, a scientific assessment by the relevant Registration Authority (MAFF or HSE) of each individual product is carried out. This evaluation indicates what other labelling information is required, such as the safe use of the product and warnings about precautions that should be taken. Following approval, products are subject to an on-going review programme which ensures that the data on which the product approvals are based meets current safety standards.

Developing Countries

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his statement to the House on 9 December 1999, Official Report, column 1024, on the World Trade Organisation, what steps the Director General of the World Trade Organisation has taken to achieve the objective of a five-fold increase in the budget for technical assistance and capacity building for developing countries. [104588]

Mr. Caborn: The Director General made a plea to all WTO members to increase regular budget funding for technical assistance to which he hoped to secure agreement in Seattle in the context of wider agreement on the launch of the new Round. In the absence of the wider agreement, there is as yet no consensus for enhanced regular budget funding of technical assistance. The UK will pursue this further in the WTO Budget Committee in Geneva and in discussions with EU and other partners.

Arms Exports

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will provide details of the licences granted (a) for the export of weapons silencers to Turkey since 2 May 1997 and (b) to Law Enforcement International Ltd. for the export of weapons silencers since 2 May 1997. [104156]

Dr. Howells: The entry in the legislation under which the export of goods is controlled is known as their rating and most ratings cover a range of goods. Weapons silencers are controlled under entries ML1, ML2, ML6 and PL5018 in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, as amended, commonly known as the Military List.

As regards export licences granted for the export of weapons silencers to Turkey between 2 May 1997 and 31 December 1998, details of export licensing decisions in this period were set out in the Government's Annual Reports on Strategic Export Controls, published by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; copies are in the Library of the House. As regards licences granted since 1 January 1999, the Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated. Between 1 January 1999 and 3 January 2000, 21 Standard Individual Export Licences (SIELs) and no Open Individual Export Licences (OIELs) were issued for the export of goods with a relevant rating to consignees or end users in Turkey. The paper records of the 21 SIELs have been examined and none covered the export of weapons silencers.

As regards export licences granted to Law Enforcement International Limited for the export of weapons silencers, inquiries are being made under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. Where confidential information is involved, the parties concerned may be asked if they object to disclosure, and this can take some time. I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible and place a copy of that letter in the Library of the House.

This information should be considered in light of the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Kingswood (Mr. Berry) on 27 July 1999, Official Report, columns 307–08W.

Insolvency Practices Council

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the salary is of the newly-appointed chairman of the Insolvency Practices Council. [104889]

Dr. Howells: The Insolvency Practices Council is an independent body which is to be funded by IPR Services Ltd., a company limited by guarantee set up by the insolvency recognised professional bodies. Questions concerning the salary of Mr. Graham Kentfield, the recently appointed chairman of the Council, are a matter for that company.

British Business Promotion

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what initiatives his Department is taking to promote British business abroad. [105268]

Mr. Caborn: British Trade International brings together DTI and FCO responsibilities for trade development and promotion in a new unified operation. The goals of British Trade International are set out in a National Strategy, which was published on 29 October 1999.

Copies of the Strategy have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Truck Manufacturing (North-West)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assistance he is giving to truck manufacturing in the north-west. [105263]

Mr. Alan Johnson: While truck manufacturers based in the north-west of England have received no direct financial assistance from my Department in recent years, officials in London and the Government Office for the north-west in Manchester provide help and advice on a number of issues. In addition, north-west truck manufacturers benefit from wider automotive industry competitiveness and technology initiatives. These include the SMMT Industry Forum, to which the DTI has contributed £6.5 million, and the DTI-led Foresight Vehicle programme, to which the Government are contributing £12 million.

Car Pricing

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on car pricing in the UK. [105276]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Competition Commission is currently investigating the supply of new cars in the United Kingdom. I have no doubt the Commission is looking at car prices as part of its investigation.

The Commission is due to deliver its report to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 31 January. The report will be published as soon as practicable.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the effect of the strong pound on UK manufacturing industry in the last 12 months. [105271]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Government understand the concerns of businesses, and particularly manufacturers trading with Europe, about the value of the pound. However, there are increasing signs that companies are adjusting to the high value of sterling. In the third quarter the volume of exports of goods and services grew at the fastest rate for 20 years. Manufacturing output also increased over the same period by 1.2 per cent., the fastest quarterly rate of growth since 1994, and the CBI's business confidence indicator is also at its highest level since April 1995.

Electricity Meters

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many properties in (a) Tamworth and (b) the United Kingdom have electric card meters; what proportion this represents of all properties; and how much is paid for electricity by a customer using (i) an electric card meter and (ii) standard payment methods. [105146]

Mrs. Liddell: There are no electric card pre-payment meters in Tamworth but there are 5,329 token meters. In the United Kingdom there are 3.6 million pre-payment meters (including card and token meters). This represents around 15 per cent. of the number of domestic customers in the United Kingdom (as at March 1998). An average annual bill for an East Midlands Electricity customer on a pre-payment meter tariff would be £263.15 as opposed to £241.95 for a standard payment tariff (both based on a consumption of 3,300 kWh).

Post Offices

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by what means individuals will be able to exercise their proposed right of access to a post office in circumstances where an existing postmaster or postmistress is retiring and no other person is willing to continue the business. [105150]

Mr. Alan Johnson: For the first time the Government will be setting criteria for access to postal services, and there will be a requirement in law for the new Postal Services Commission to monitor these criteria to ensure that they are being met, and to advise my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State of any concerns about access to postal services in local areas. Particular attention will be paid to rural and socially deprived areas. Following work by the Performance and Innovation Unit (PIU), access criteria for Post Office services will be announced within the next few months.

Sub-postmasters and sub-postmistresses own their businesses and any decision to sell or retire is a matter for them. But our proposals will ensure that the effects of their decision on the provision of services in local areas can be considered. Under our proposals, where an individual sub-post office closes, individuals will be able to appeal to the Post Office Users' Council about the provision of post offices in their area if they do not receive a satisfactory response from the Post Office. Using the access criteria as a benchmark, the Users' Council, through the Commission, will take up specific cases with the Post Office to ensure the access criteria are met.

Coal Industry

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will formulate plans for state aid to the UK coal industry which are compliant with article 2(1) of Commission Decision 3632/93/ECSC. [104902]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 17 January 2000]: Article 2 (1) of Commission Decision 3632/93/ECSC sets out the three objectives for which aid to the coal industry might be considered compatible with the ECSC Treaty.

The Judgment of the Court of First Instance of 9 September 1999 in respect of case T-220/98 made it clear that the three objectives listed correspond individually to particular categories of aid.

The first category refers to operating aid under Article 3 of the Decision, which must cause no distortion of competition or discrimination between UK coal producers or users, requires a plan showing a significant reduction in operating costs over the period to July 2002 with the prospect of viability thereafter. There is also a requirement for degression of aid.

The second category is in respect of aid to solve the social and regional problems created by total or partial reduction in the activity of production units. Aid for the Reduction of Activity under Article 4 requires a closure date to be set, which must normally be before expiry of the Decision in 2002. There is no provision for investment aid within the ECSC state aid code set out in the Decision. The Government have Commission approval under Article 5 of Decision 3632/93/ECSC to pay state aid up to £891 million over the period to July 2002 in respect of residual environmental and ex-employee liabilities inherited from British Coal.

The third category covers objectives to help the coal industry adjust to the introduction of new environmental protection standards which require the modification of existing installations.

We are continuing to work constructively with the industry to promote a level playing field for coal both in the UK and in Europe, and to identify undue regulatory burdens.

Departmental Smoking Policy

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking to reduce smoking in his Department. [105792]

Dr. Howells: In buildings occupied and controlled by my Department, smoking is permitted only in a small number of designated rooms or areas. Advice and guidance is available to staff who wish to give up, cut down, or control their smoking.

Holbeck Holdings

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the date is of the most recent documents received by Companies House concerning the financial standing of Holbeck Holdings of Kilmarnock. [105295]

Dr. Howells: Holbeck Holdings Ltd., Company number 0609393, has its registered office in Horncastle, Lincolnshire. It has a wholly owned subsidiary, Buitelaar (Kilmarnock) Ltd., Company number 2190181, with the same registered office address. Accounts for both companies for the year to 30 April 1998 were received on 14 January 1999 and subsequently registered by Companies House.

Export Credits Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the savings from the recently announced changes to the export credits guarantee scheme in the (a) current and (b) next four financial years. [105839]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 18 January 2000]: ECGD's new Fixed Rate Export Finance (FREF) scheme, which became effective on 1 December, is designed to achieve an improved balance between the interests of the UK exporter and the taxpayer. Financial outturn under the scheme will depend on a number of factors, including the future mix and level of business, which is uncertain. But if the recent business mix is maintained over the coming period, taxpayer savings of around £1 million per annum should accrue for every £1 billion of new loan outstanding supported under the scheme.

Synchrotron Project

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the ADD Report the synchrotron project will be made available to the public. [105625]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 18 January 2000]: The full ADD Report will not be made available to the public. Its release is exempt under Part 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information (Exemption 2—Internal discussions and advice; Exemption 7—Effective management of operations of the public service). The key conclusions of the report together with a summary will be published following the site announcement.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the minimum wage on the (a) level of employment and (b) profitability of businesses. [104882]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Government asked the independent Low Pay Commission to report on the implementation of the national minimum wage, particularly its impact on employment and competitiveness. We received the Commission's Report in December and will publish the Report and the Government's response as soon as Ministers have had an opportunity to consider its findings and recommendations.

Nuclear Materials (Safeguards)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions nuclear materials have been withdrawn from safeguards under the provisions of the Tripartite Agreement between the UK, Euratom and IAEA since May 1997; and if he will list the nuclear establishments involved and respective reasons for withdrawal. [104701]

Dr. Howells: Between May 1997 and the end of 1999 there were 20 advance notifications of the withdrawal of nuclear material from safeguards pursuant to Article 14 of the UK/IAEA/Euratom Safeguards Agreement. The withdrawals comprised small quantities of material for use in instrument calibration or radiation detectors, or as analytical tracers or radiological shielding. The organisations from which the withdrawals took place were UKAEA Harwell, the National Physical Laboratory, Nycomed Amersham, Centronics Ltd., and RSL Equipment Ltd. The establishments to which the material concerned was transferred were AWE Aldermaston, HM Naval Base Devonport, DERA Gosport and NRTE Vulcan, Dounreay.

As indicated by the previous Minister, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle), in his answer of 19 October 1998, Official Report, column 1046W, a study of data on withdrawals from safeguards which took place prior to announcement of the outcome of the Strategic Defence Review (SDR) is being conducted, the outcome of which will be made public later this year.

DEFENCE

Nancekuke Base, Cornwall

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence further to his answer to the hon. Member for Salisbury of 11 November 1999, Official Report, columns 707–08W, on work at Nancekuke, if any additional information has come to light. [104505]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers given to my hon. Friend the Member for Falmouth and Camborne (Ms Atherton) on 11 January 2000, Official Report, columns 125–26W.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on substances buried at the Nancekuke base in Cornwall. [105606]

Mr. Spellar: A Land Quality Assessment is currently under way at RAF Portreath, formerly Nancekuke, in line with the Ministry of Defence's policy of undertaking such assessments over a 10 year period from 1996. As part of this work, surface soil and water samples have been taken for laboratory analysis. This analysis has revealed no signs of contamination from toxic agents.

Common Foreign and Security Policy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answers of 6 December 1999, Official Report, columns 343–44W, on the common foreign and security policy, if he will make a statement on developments in the issues referred to in his answers following the European Council in Helsinki in December 1999. [105657]

Mr. Hoon: At the Helsinki European Council, EU member states committed themselves to improving their military capabilities so that they will be better able to assemble, deploy rapidly and sustain effective forces for NATO or EU-led operations. In particular, they agreed a headline goal, specifying that by 2003 they should be able to deploy within 60 days, and sustain for at least one year, military forces of up to 50,000–60,000 persons capable of undertaking the full range of Petersberg tasks.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

The Helsinki European Council also confirmed the political and military structures that will be necessary for the EU to decide and act in response to crises, where NATO as a whole is not engaged. To this end, EU member states agreed to establish a permanent EU Political and Security Committee, an EU Military Committee, and an EU Military Staff, with interim bodies to be established by March 2000.

This work will be taken forward under the Portuguese Presidency of the EU.

Training Exercises (Ration Packs)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the level of availability of ration packs for training exercises in the field; and what orders have been issued to limit distribution of such items. [105590]

Mr. Spellar: A food war reserve of Operational Ration Packs (ORP) is maintained to support operational deployments. ORP is a lifed product and stock is turned over accordingly. The ORP that is turned over is made available for training and exercises and its distribution is agreed annually with the Services in line with availability. Reductions in the amount of stock carried as a war reserve have reduced the amount of ORP turned over. The implications for the training programme are currently being evaluated, including the option to procure additional ration packs specifically for training.

Kosovo

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of the British contribution to the intervention in Kosovo to the end of 1999; and what are the projected costs for 2000. [105503]

Mr. Hoon: As at the end of October, the Ministry of Defence had incurred net additional expenditure of £125 million on Kosovo operations this financial year. The figure is expected to rise to just below £400 million by the end of 1999–2000.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the costs of the Kosovo deployment for the current financial year. [105618]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 18 January 2000]: The net additional expenditure incurred this financial year on Kosovo operations is expected to be just below £400 million. I have agreed with my Treasury colleagues that these costs will be covered by the Reserve and I am currently discussing the details in the context of my Department's Spring Supplementary Estimates.

Departmental Land (Access Rights)

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rights of access currently exist for hunting wild mammals with dogs on his Department's land. [105496]

Mr. Spellar: There are 35 licensed fox hunts and beagle packs that have access to areas of Ministry of Defence land. The areas into which access is permitted are agreed, with each individual hunt or pack, at the time the annual licence is issued. Entry into these areas is determined throughout the licence period against the military training requirement, which will always take priority.

HMS Westminster

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 January 2000, Official Report, columns 97–98W, concerning HMS Westminster and the In Year Budget Management Measure, what were the sums allocated for fuel for the Fleet in the current year and in the two previous years; and what provision is made in the budget for increases in fuel prices. [105148]

Mr. Spellar: The sums allocated for fuel for the Fleet (HM Warships and RFAs) in the current year and the two previous years were as follows:

	£ million
1997–98	34.572
1998–99	40.283
1999–2000	[1]37.924

[1] The allocation for the current year includes £9.5 million over and above the original allocation.

No specific provision is made in the budget for increases in fuel prices, however my Department uses normal in year management flexibility to cope with the effects of short-term changes such as this.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those properties held by his Department and agencies responsible to him which are (a) wholly and (b) mainly unoccupied at present, giving locations and when they became so unoccupied in each case. [105306]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I will write to the hon. Gentleman and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Meteor Missiles

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what safeguards have been offered to ensure that the UK maintains control over the sale of Meteor missiles as part of the package with Eurofighter Typhoons to third countries. [105648]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Armed Forces Discipline Bill

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Special Investigation Bureau investigators are currently employed and at what locations; and by how many he will expand the service following the enactment of the Armed Forces Discipline Bill. [105649]

Mr. Spellar: The information requested is as follows:

The Naval Service

The Royal Naval Special Investigation Branch comprises a total of 20 investigators, all of whom are based at Portsmouth, but who have a Fleet and world-wide remit. It is not intended to expand their numbers following the enactment of the Armed Forces Discipline Bill.

The Army

Location	Number
Upavon	5
Colchester	6
Aldershot	13
Shorncliffe	2
Bulford	11
Plymouth	1
Bulford (HQ)	15
York	5
Catterick	6
Hounslow	8
Edinburgh	7
Donnington	7
Preston	1
Chichester (Trg)	9
Hohne	7
Osnabruck	7
Bielefeld	3
Gutersloh	6
Rheindahlen (Inc)	16
Sennelager	7
Northern Ireland	20
Cyprus	4
Canada (BATUS)	11
Total	167

The table shows the number of Special Investigation Branch investigators by their permanent location. Eleven of the 167 are currently on overseas short detachments (five to Kosovo, five to Bosnia, and one to East Timor).

There are no plans to increase specific SIB numbers due to the enactment of the Armed Forces Discipline Bill. However, planning for the implementation of the likely provisions of the Act once it has passed into law is under way, and current plans provide for an increase in the overall number of Royal Military Police (other than SIB). As that work progresses over the coming months, that number will be refined and confirmed.

The RAF

The following table shows the number of RAF personnel employed in the criminal investigation element of the RAF's Provost and Security Services (P&SS).

Location	Number
RAF Henlow (HQ)	34
RAF Cranwell	10
RAF Linton-on-Ouse	11
RAF Buchan	7
RAF Halton	11
RAF Innsworth	14
Rheindahlen	7
Cyprus	5
Gibraltar	1
Falkland Islands	1
Total	101

The RAF has no plans to expand the P&SS organisation following the enactment of the Armed Forces Discipline Bill.

Courts Martial Centres

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the locations of courts martial centres. [105650]

Mr. Spellar: The information requested is as follows.

Naval Service

Portsmouth
Plymouth
Faslane
Yeovilton

Army

Aldershot
Bulford
Catterick
Colchester
Long Kesh, Northern Ireland
Hohne
Osnabruck
Gutersloh

RAF

The RAF does not have dedicated courts-martial centres. Individual courts-martial are normally held at the defendant's unit.

Territorial Army

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the change in the size of the Territorial Army was in each of the last six months. [103926]

Mr. Spellar: The change in size of the Territorial Army in each of the last six months for which figures are available was as follows:

	Number
1 December 1999	−314
1 November 1999	876
1 October 1999	−505
1 September 1999	−521
1 August 1999	−1,177
1 July 1999	−1,867

Note:
The above figures do not include non-regular permanent staff (NRPS).

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total intake of new recruits to the Territorial Army was in each of the last six months. [103927]

Mr. Spellar: The total intake of new recruits to the Territorial Army in each of the last six months for which figures are available was as follows:

	Number
June 1999	517
July 1999	395
August 1999	471
September 1999	531
October 1999	1,779
November 1999	712

Note:
The above figures do not include non-regular permanent staff (NRPS).

MOD Hospital Units

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of (a) the value for money provided by Ministry of Defence hospital units and (b) their ability to meet future demands. [104416]

Mr. Spellar: A detailed study of the size and shape of the future operational requirements for medical support was carried out in 1995. This study endorsed the strategy of greater integration with the NHS mainly through the creation of Ministry of Defence Hospital Units. This integration has been shown to be more effective than previous arrangements, particularly in ensuring military medical staff receive the required training. A recent further review has endorsed the continuation of this policy to meet current and future demands for the delivery of secondary care.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn) of 14 December 1999, Official Report, column 93W, if he will publish those data on sub-critical nuclear test experiments and the exchange of details between the United States and the United Kingdom, which have been made publicly available in the United States of America. [104727]

Mr. Hoon: We are not aware that US authorities have made public either the precise data obtained as a result of their sub-critical nuclear test experiments or details of any exchanges with the UK on the subject which are withheld here under the terms of Exemption Category 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. However, details of the intention to conduct such tests and a general description of their purpose have been published in the USA and on the Internet, for example at the US Department of Energy website http://www.doe.gov.

Operational Areas

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the areas in which British armed forces have been (a) deployed and (b) stationed since 1970 which (i) have and (ii) have not been designated as an operational area. [104812]

Mr. Spellar: Information on the many areas throughout the world in which elements of the British Armed Forces have been deployed and stationed since 1970 is available in the annual Statements on the Defence Estimates publications. However there is no centrally collated list covering all these locations or which of those were at the time designated as an operational area, and such a list could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Cluster Bombs

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cluster bombs were used by United Kingdom forces during the Kosovo campaign; and what is his estimate of the number of (a) sub-munitions within the cluster bombs that did not detonate on impact and (b) locations where there are undetonated sub-munitions. [104863]

Mr. Hoon: During Operation Allied Force, some 500 RBL 755 Cluster Bombs were dropped by the RAF against specific, identified, military targets.

The bomblets (sub-munitions) within cluster bombs are designed to detonate on impact, but as with any other similar munitions, a small percentage may fail to do so. The manufacturer's estimated failure rate for the RBL 755 cluster bombs used by the UK during the Kosovo campaign is approximately 5 per cent.

KFOR has now cleared over 7,400 cluster bomb munitions throughout Kosovo, in addition to some 6,100 Serbian anti-personnel mines and 3,400 anti-tank mines. All unexploded ordnance sites in the UK sector of Kosovo have now been marked and 90 per cent. of unexploded cluster bomb munitions cleared.

RAF Chilmark

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost since the closure of RAF Chilmark of (a) annual maintenance and (b) cleaning and preparing the site for disposal. [104801]

Mr. Spellar: The total cost of annual maintenance at RAF Chilmark since closure of the site in 1995 is in the order of £490,000. The cost of cleaning and preparing the site for sale in accordance with MOD policy has amounted to £371,460.

WALES

Farming

8. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met the First Secretary to discuss farming in Wales. [103494]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Secretary on a weekly basis and we discuss a range of issues, including farming in Wales.

Countryside (Access)

9. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the Government's proposals for greater access to the countryside. [103495]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have received letters on this issue and I met the Country Landowners Association in October and the Countryside Council for Wales in December to discuss this and other issues.

Livestock Industry

10. Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on discussions he has had with the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales on prospects for the Welsh livestock industry and their implications for the economy of cross-border areas. [103496]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Secretary on a weekly basis and we discuss a range of issues, including the Welsh livestock industry. I am acutely aware of the long-term problems facing Welsh agriculture, which is heavily dependent on livestock, and the current difficulties.

A number of steps have been taken to address the difficulties faced by the farming community such as the package announced last September by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and measures introduced by the Assembly. However our priority must be to restructure the industry to produce a stable, sustainable and prosperous future for Welsh farming and I know that this is something which the Assembly is working towards.

National Lottery

12. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the opportunities through national lottery funding for promoting cultural exchanges between Wales and Ireland, Scotland, Cornwall, Brittany and the Isle of Man. [103499]

Mr. Hanson: The Secretary of State for Wales meets the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on a regular basis to discuss a number of issues, including cultural exchanges and the broad priorities for future distribution of lottery funding in Wales through the New Opportunities Fund.

He would welcome the development of cultural exchanges between Wales and Ireland, Scotland, Cornwall, Brittany and the Isle of Man, but it would be for the promoters of those exchanges to explore appropriate sources of funding.

Pensioners

13. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales to discuss the impact on pensioners in Wales of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's pre-Budget Statement. [103500]

Mr. Hanson: The Secretary of State meets the First Secretary regularly, and was pleased to be able to inform him that the Chancellor's pre-Budget Statement guarantees the £100 fuel allowance every year for 585,000 Welsh pensioners, that the 230,000 Welsh pensioners who are over 75 will get free television licences, and that the Minimum Pension Guarantee will be up-rated in line with earnings instead of inflation.

Care Provision

14. Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has met the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales to discuss the Government's legislative programme and its impact on care provision in Wales. [103502]

23. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has met the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales to discuss the impact on care provision of the Government's legislative programme. [103511]

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has met the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales to discuss the Government's legislative programme and its impact on care provision in Wales. [103498]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I have both had discussions with the First Secretary and Assembly members about the Government's legislative programme. The Bills that will impact on care provision in Wales have, of course, been included in these discussions.

National Assembly for Wales

15. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions he has attended and participated in the proceedings of the Assembly. [103503]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have attended and participated in one plenary session of the Assembly, the debate on the Government's legislative programme.

Transport

16. Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has met the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales to discuss the Government's legislative programme and its impact on transport in Wales. [103504]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have regular meetings with the First Secretary to discuss a wide range of issues including transport and its impact in Wales.

The introduction of the Transport Bill on 1 December 1999 shows the Government's continued commitment to provide an integrated transport policy for both England and Wales.

I am keen to ensure that the interests of Wales are fully met and will maintain dialogue with Cabinet colleagues and the Assembly.

European Union

17. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what occasions a Minister of the Welsh Executive has (a) accompanied a United Kingdom Minister for discussions with the European Union and (b) led on behalf of the UK at discussions with the European Union. [103505]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Under the terms of the Memorandum of Understanding and Concordat on Co-ordination of European Union Policy Issues between the United Kingdom Government, Scottish Ministers and the Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales, Assembly Secretaries are eligible to form part of UK delegations to the Council of Ministers, by agreement. Decisions on Ministerial attendance, and on whether Ministers from the devolved administrations could speak on behalf of the UK in Council, are taken on a case by case basis by the lead Minister.

To date, no Assembly Secretary has done so. However, I understand that Assembly Secretaries are actively considering which Councils they will be seeking to attend in future.

Worldwide Web

18. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new proposals he has to increase the use of the worldwide web by his Department. [103506]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have no immediate plans to increase the use of the Web by my Department.

Unitary Authorities

19. Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the size of individual unitary authorities in relation to (a) financial viability and (b) maintaining consistent standards of service delivery. [103507]

Mr. Hanson: I meet the Assembly Cabinet's Secretary for Local Government on a regular basis to ensure that I am well informed on local government in Wales. However, the adequacy of the size of individual unitary authorities in Wales is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales, to which responsibility for local government has been devolved.

SMEs

20. Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has met the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales to discuss the impact on small and medium-sized enterprises in Wales of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's pre-Budget Statement and the Government's legislative programme. [103508]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I regularly meet the First Secretary to discuss a variety of issues including SMEs. The First Secretary, the Government and I recognise the importance of SMEs to the Welsh economy and the UK as a whole. The Chancellor of the Exchequer's pre-Budget Statement unveiled plans for £45 million of enterprise grants to foster the growth of SMEs throughout the UK and represents the Government's continuing commitment to stimulate an already established enterprise culture.

21. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the First Secretary about United Kingdom assistance to small and medium-sized businesses. [103509]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I meet the First Secretary regularly and discuss a variety of issues, including assistance to small and medium-sized businesses. Measures giving assistance to small and medium-size businesses were announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer's last pre-budget statement. The introduction of funds for the UK is expected to be worth at least £125 million. These funds will provide welcome but necessary development and support to new and already established ventures.

Regulation

22. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the regulatory burden on businesses in Wales arising from primary legislation. [103510]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Government will introduce the Regulatory Reform Bill this Session. This Bill will make provision to widen the deregulation order making power currently available under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994.

The National Assembly for Wales is being consulted on this and the Wales Office are working to ensure that burdens on business in Wales, as well as in England, stemming from inappropriate or excessive regulation can be tackled under the proposed new order-making power.

Information about the impact of all regulations—which is not held separately for primary and secondary legislation—is held centrally by the Cabinet Office Regulatory Impact Unit. It is not broken down for different areas of the UK but relates to the UK as a whole.

Students (Funding)

24. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the funding of students at Welsh universities. [103512]

Mr. Hanson: None.

Health Resources

25. Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the outcome of his recent discussions with the First Minister on the allocation of health resources in Wales. [103513]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have regular discussions about the NHS in Wales with the First Secretary. These discussions often cover health resources, but it is for the Assembly to decide on the allocation of the resources in Wales.

Theatre

26. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to discuss with the First Secretary issues relating to the theatre in education in Wales. [103514]

Mr. Hanson: Following the Adjournment debate on 1 December 1999, Official Report, columns 93–100WH, I have written to Tom Middlehurst, Assembly Secretary responsible for post-16 education and training, on this issue. The Secretary of State and I will decide whether further discussions with the First Secretary are required when we have had an opportunity to consider Mr. Middlehurst's reply.

Swansea Medical School

27. Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will discuss with the First Secretary the proposal to establish a Swansea Medical School in collaboration with the University of Wales College of Medicine. [103515]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have regular discussions with the First Secretary about health and education issues in Wales. Future discussions may include the proposals to establish a Swansea Medical School in collaboration with the University of Wales College of Medicine. I understand that, at this point, the Assembly, along with the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales, is still considering how the collaboration will work.

Deeside Industrial Park

28. Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the problems surrounding the proposed extension to the Deeside industrial park. [103516]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I understand that a public and local inquiry by the Planning Inspectorate into the proposed extension to the Deeside Industrial Park will be undertaken shortly. The inquiry's findings and conclusions will be reported to the National Assembly for Wales, which will then determine this application.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those properties held by his Department and agencies responsible to him which are (a) wholly and (b) mainly unoccupied at present, giving locations and when they became so unoccupied in each case. [105304]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department holds only one property, and it is fully occupied.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has discussed with Treasury Ministers the introduction of the Working Families Tax Credit in Wales. [103497]

Mr. Hanson: My right hon. Friend and I regularly meet with colleagues in Whitehall and discuss a wide range of issues. I fully support the introduction of the Working Families Tax Credit.

Post Offices

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the Department of Trade and Industry on the potential effect of the proposed payment of benefits into bank accounts and the effect this may have on rural post offices in Wales. [105571]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I speak regularly with colleagues in Whitehall and we discuss a number of issues. My officials have had a number of discussions with their counterparts in the Department of Trade and Industry. I am fully aware of the planned move to an Automated Credit Transfer system that will assure a safer, modern and efficient way of paying benefits. In addition, the Prime Minister announced on 21 October 1999 that the Performance and Innovation Unit (PIU) in the Cabinet Office is to carry out a study on the Post Office network which will seek to identify the contribution made by post offices to the viability of local communities. Close independent monitoring of the post office network will ensure that proposed closures which would create significant problems of access to post office counter services, including in rural areas, are taken up with the Post Office, which will then be able to investigate how access needs can best be met.

SOCIAL SECURITY

State Second Pension

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he plans to publish the Government Actuary's report on the financial effects for the National Insurance Fund of the proposed state second pension. [106278]

Mr. Rooker: The report is being laid before Parliament today (Cm 4573).

Asbestos-related Diseases

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will ask the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council to consider whether lung cancer should be classified as a prescribed industrial disease in cases where significant asbestos-related work history is combined with unprotected exposure to asbestos dust; [104778]

(2) what advice he has received from the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council on the relationship between lung cancer and significant asbestos exposure in the absence of asbestosis; [104779]

(3) what reports he has received on the reliability and sensitivity of CT scans and Chest X-rays in indicating the presence of asbestos-related disease. [104826]

Mr. Bayley: The Industrial Injuries Advisory Council provide us with independent expert advice on the Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit scheme. In their report "Asbestos Related Diseases" (Cm 3467 published in November 1996) the Council investigated thoroughly the prescription of asbestos-related diseases, including the relationship between lung cancer and asbestos exposure, and whether CT scans would be appropriate within this benefit scheme. The Council recommended certain changes that were beneficial to claimants, which were brought into effect from April 1997. The Council continues to carefully monitor research, studies, publications and scientific developments in relation to asbestos-related lung disease, as they do for the other prescribed diseases. The Council have made no recommendations to me about asbestos-related diseases since 1996, and we are confident that the Council would re-examine any issue if new scientific evidence emerged. They would then make recommendations, which we would consider carefully.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what support his Department offers to victims of (a) pneumoconiosis and (b) an asbestos-related disease. [104828]

Mr. Bayley: The Department provides financial support through the Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit scheme, which gives no-fault compensation for disablement resulting from work as an employed earner, either as a result of an accident at work or through contracting certain prescribed occupational diseases. Pneumoconiosis (including asbestosis) and three other asbestos-related diseases are prescribed for this purpose. Other Social Security benefits, as appropriate in individual cases, would also be available depending on the person's circumstances.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals he has to improve the diagnosis of asbestos-related diseases, especially in areas with a high prevalence of such disease. [104827]

Mr. Bayley: We do not propose to change the method of diagnosis of asbestos-related disease for the purposes of the Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit scheme. Diagnosis methods are the same throughout Great Britain, and we are advised by the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council on appropriate criteria.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those properties held by his Department and agencies responsible to him which are (a) wholly and (b) mainly unoccupied at present, giving locations and when they became so unoccupied in each case. [105311]

Angela Eagle: In early 1998, all of the Department's properties were transferred to the private sector under two separate Private Finance Initiative contracts. We now no longer own nor hold any property. Instead, serviced office accommodation is purchased from our two private sector partners, Trillium and the Newcastle Estate Partnership.

The deal which we negotiated with Trillium, the PRIME contract allowed us to hand back all of our "surplus" space, in both wholly and partly unoccupied buildings, to Trillium so that there is now no continuing cost to the Department. The Department also has the flexibility to vacate and hand back further space over the life of the contract, at nil cost, so it is extremely unlikely that we will have any surplus accommodation in the future. The only unoccupied space that is maintained is held for strategic reasons.

Benefit Payments (Post Offices)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received concerning the Government's plans to switch payments from benefits and pension books to bank transfers and the impact of this change on local post offices; and if he will make a statement. [106041]

Mr. Rooker: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Vale of Glamorgan (Mr. Smith) on 6 December 1999, Official Report, column 374W.

Basic State Pension

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the cost of restoring the link between the basic state pension and average earnings in the UK. [105250]

Mr. Rooker: The information is in the table.

Estimated cost of uprating retirement pension by earnings from April 2000

£ million

	Gross Costs	Net Costs
With linked benefits
2000–01	1,300	1,000
2010–11	8,500	7,500
Without linked benefits
2000–01	1,100	850
2010–11	7,500	6,500

Notes:
1. Gross costs have been calculated by GAD. Net costs have been calculated using the 1999–2000 Policy Simulation and PENSIM models to take account of means-tested benefit offsets.
2. Estimates for the year 2000–01 have been rounded to the nearest 50 million, and for 2010–11 to the nearest 100 million. Estimates are in 1999 prices.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Property Sales

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what dates (a) Melbourne Place, Topcliffe Road, Sowerby, North Yorkshire, (b) the former RAF station at Strubby, Alford, Lincolnshire, (c) 4 Almondbank, Perth, (d) 5 Almondbank, Perth, (e) the Experimental Horticultural Station at Efford, Lymington, Hampshire and (f) Barnhall, Wickford, Essex, were offered for sale; and what is the current position with regard to the disposal of each property. [104682]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is as follows:

Property
Melbourne Place, Topcliffe Road, Sowerby, North Yorkshire	Not yet offered for sale. Awaiting issue of Certificate of Lawfulness of Proposed Use or Development by the local planning authority. The site will be marketed thereafter
The former RAF Station at Strubby, Alford, Lincolnshire	First offered for sale in February 1995. Little interest from potential purchasers. The site was finally sold in July 1999
4 Almondbank Perth	First offered for sale in July 1996. Little interest from potential purchasers. Investigations are under way into the potential for redevelopment and discussions are taking place with the local planning authority
5 Almondbank Perth	Not yet offered for sale although part of the site was sold back to a former owner in 1996. Agents have advised that marketing of the site should be delayed until the position with regard to 4 Almondbank is clarified
The Experimental Horticultural Station at Efford, Lymington, Hampshire	Not offered for sale on the open market. Until recently this site was fully occupied by Horticulture Research International under the terms of a lease. They have recently surrendered the northern sector of the site to the Ministry. Part of this was sold in October 1999 to the successor of the former owner under the terms of the Crichel Down Rules. Contracts have been exchanged for the sale of the remainder to the same person on the same basis
Barnhall, Wickford, Essex	Not yet offered for sale. The Ministry is collaborating with the local authority which owns some adjacent land with a view to selling the MAFF land for development in due course

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what dates (a) the former Central Science Laboratory at London Road, Slough, (b) Greythorpe Road and 168 Sinclair Road, Aberdeen, (c) Tangley Place, Worplesdon, Guildford, (d) Pocklington Industrial Estate, East Yorkshire, (e) 130 Hyndford Road, Lanark and (f) Gravel Pit, Hertford Road, Hoddesdon, Hampshire, were offered for sale; and what is the current position with regard to the disposal of each property. [104683]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is as follows:

Property
Central Science Laboratory, London Road, Slough	First offered for sale in November 1998. The property was sold in July 1999
Greythorpe Road and 168 Sinclair Road, Aberdeen	First offered for sale in August 1998. Missives will shortly be concluded, after which the purchaser will apply for detailed planning consent
Tangley Place, Worplesdon, Guildford	First offered for sale in January 1997. This property was sold in January 1999
Pocklington Industrial Estate, East Yorkshire	First offered for sale in June 1997. This property was sold in June 1998
130 Hyndford Road, Lanark	First offered for sale in January 1995. This property was sold in February 1998
Gravel Pit, Hertford Road, Hoddesdon, Hertfordshire	First offered for sale in January 1995. Sale delayed while appropriate planning consents were sought and access problems resolved. This property was sold in October 1999

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what dates the properties at (a) Tattenhall Road, Tattenhall, Chester, (b) Little Glen Road, Glen Parva, Leicester, (c) Kendal Road, Harlescott, Shrewsbury, (d) Trentside, Gunthorpe, Nottingham, (e) Caton Road, Claughton, Lancaster and (f) Nant Alyn Road, Rhydymwyn, Mold, Flint, were offered for sale; and what is the current position with regard to the disposal of each property. [104684]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is as follows:

Property
Tattenhall Road, Tattenhall, Chester	First offered for sale in August 1995. Planning difficulties resulted in the sale being postponed. Currently let on short term lease pending re-assessment of development potential
Little Glen Road, Glen Parva, Leicester	First offered for sale in July 1995. First prospective purchaser unwilling to agree detailed terms. Contract for sale with new purchaser about to be exchanged
Kendal Road, Harlescott, Shrewsbury	First offered for sale in January 1997. Currently awaiting outcome of appeal against refusal to grant planning consent. When this is known the site will be re-marketed
Trentside, Gunthorpe, Nottingham	Not offered for sale on the open market. Negotiations under way for a sale to the successors of the former owners under the terms of the Crichel Down Rules
Caton Road, Claughton, Lancaster	First offered for sale in February 1996. Little realistic interest from potential purchasers. Offer to purchase has recently been accepted and legal documentation is now being prepared
Nant Alyn Road, Rhydymwyn, Mold, Flint	Not yet offered for sale. The site is believed to be contaminated as a result of the use made of it during the last war. The need for decontamination is being assessed

Chlormequat

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the use of chlormequat in the United Kingdom (a) over the last five years and (b) at present. [103292]

Ms Quin: Chlormequat is approved for use in the UK on various cereal and oilseed crops, beans, peas and ornamental plants. Data on pesticide usage in the UK are collected by the Pesticide Usage Survey Group (PUSG), within the Government's Central Science Laboratory.

The PUSG's data for 1995 to 1998 show that around 98 per cent. of chlormequat use in the UK is on cereal crops. This is equivalent to approximately 2.7 million hectares treated per year. The detailed figures for cereals and the other crops on which use is approved are given in PUSG reports numbers 136, 141, 151–153 and 159, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House. Results for 1999 are still being gathered and processed.

Government surveys of pesticide residues in food, conducted under the guidance of the Working Party on Pesticides Residues (WPPR), have suggested that there has been some unproved use of chlormequat on fruiting pear trees in the UK by a minority of growers. An enforcement programme has been put into place. Results from surveys in 1995, 1997 and 1998 can be found in the WPPR reports for those years. Results from the first six months of 1999 were published in November via a pesticides residues monitoring information sheet. A copy of this and the WPPR reports for 1995 to 1998 are available in the Libraries of the House.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Human Rights

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what written material on the Human Rights Act 1998 has been prepared for judges; and if he will place copies in the Library. [103830]

Mr. Lock: The Judicial Studies board for Northern Ireland has held five lectures on several European Conventions on Human Rights topics since February 1998. The following material was provided:

Incorporation of the ECHR—The right hon. Lord Irvine of Lairg.

The Human Rights Bill: Its effect on Criminal Proceedings—Ben Emmerson

The European Convention on Human Rights (as amended by Protocol No. 11) booklet—European Treaty Series, No. 5.

The Human Rights Act and Commercial Law—Michael Smyth.

ECHR and Judicial Review, Briefing Public Policy—Incorporation of the ECHR—The Implications for Business—Murray Hunt.

The Board's programme for 1999–2000 includes a series of three case study events covering civil law, family law and criminal law. A comprehensive pack of reading materials (including case studies, publications and other reading materials) have been issued, in order that the judiciary may prepare for the seminars. The materials included in the pack are as follows:

The Margin of Appreciation, The 'Horizontal' Application of Human Rights and Proportionality—the right hon. Lord Justice Sedley.

The Human Rights Act and the Civil Courts—Richard Plender QC.

Human Rights Act 1998 (Blackstone's)—John Wadham and Helen Mountfield.

Human Rights Law and Practice—Chapters 1 & 2 of Lester and Pannick (Butterworths).

Family Law and the Human Rights Act 1998—Michael Horowitz QC, Michael Nicholls and Geoffrey Kingcote.

Archbold Chapter 16—Ben Emmerson.

Civil Law, Family Law and Criminal Law case studies and Notes of Cases relevant to the Syndicate Exercises.

In addition, steps are being taken to ensure the availability of European Convention on Human Rights case law and textbooks in all court offices before the Act is commenced and the Northern Ireland Court Service intranet will have a Human Rights section which will permit the judiciary access to Northern Ireland judgments, judgments from England and Wales and Scotland and access to Human Rights websites. The purchase of subscription based Human Rights internet products is also being considered.

A complete set of the material issued to date by the Judicial Studies Board for Northern Ireland has been placed in the Library.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the budget is for judicial training in Northern Ireland on the Human Rights Act 1998. [103829]

Mr. Lock: Following the Comprehensive Spending Review allocation, the Northern Ireland Court Service received (in the 1999–2000 financial year) £100,000 to fund judicial training on the Human Rights Act 1998. The allocation was in addition to the Judicial Studies Board annual budget of £30,000, a substantial proportion of which has been used during the years 1998–99 and 1999–2000 to fund the Board's programme of Human Rights Act training.

Consolidated Legislation

Mr. Key: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department in each year since 1991 how many (a) Parliamentary Counsel, (b) senior draftsmen and (c) other draftsmen have been engaged at the Law Commission on consolidation work. [105646]

Mr. Lock: The numbers of Parliamentary Counsel on secondment to the Law Commission, other senior draftsmen employed at the Commission and other draftsmen seconded to, or employed at, the Commission engaged on consolidation in each complete year since 1991 are as follows:

	Parliamentary counsel	Other senior draftsmen	Other draftsmen
1992	4	1	2
1993	3	1	2
1994	2	1	4
1995	1	1	5
1996	2	1	5
1997	1	0	4
1998	1	0	4
1999	0	0	3

Service Discipline Acts

Mr. Key: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what progress has been made in the consolidation of the three Service Discipline Acts commenced in July 1991; and when he expects the work to be completed. [105645]

Mr. Lock: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given to him on 8 June 1999, Official Report, column 318W. Consideration is now being given to the approach to the consolidation of the Acts, in the light of changes to them envisaged in the current Armed Forces Discipline Bill and the probability of further change in the next Armed Forces Bill, and in the light of plans for a tri-Service Act.

Magistrates

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average age of the magistrates who sit on the (a) Barnsley and (b) Doncaster bench. [105168]

Jane Kennedy: The average age of the magistrates who sit on the Barnsley and Doncaster benches is 55 for each.

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) women and (b) disabled magistrates sit on the (i) Barnsley and (ii) Doncaster bench. [105167]

Jane Kennedy: There are currently 66 women on the Barnsley bench and 89 on the Doncaster bench. No formal records are kept of those who are disabled on either the Barnsley or the Doncaster benches.

Judges (Conduct)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list for the period since May 1997 the cases he has investigated involving the conduct of individual Judges and the action taken as a result. [105335]

Jane Kennedy: The principle of judicial independence, which is central to our constitutional arrangements, means that it is not open to the Lord Chancellor or his Department to consider complaints about judicial decisions. However, as Head of the Judiciary the Lord Chancellor does consider complaints about the personal conduct of individual Judges and other judicial office holders. The names of the complainant and the Judge are confidential. However, in the period between August 1998 (when new internal arrangements for handling such complaints came into force) and December 1999, the Lord Chancellor received a total of 3,903 complaints about members of the judiciary. The majority of these related to judicial decisions. Of the remainder, 367 related to personal conduct and were taken forward for investigation by seeking the complainants's consent for the complaint to be copied to the Judge. In 282 cases, consent was received and the Lord Chancellor then approached the Judge concerned for his or her response to the allegations and relayed these to the complainant. On 13 occasions, he saw fit to take further action, either by writing to the Judge or by arranging for him or her to be seen by officials. Comparable figures for the period before August 1998 are unavailable.

Departmental Consultation

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what bodies his Department has consulted on each of its programmes since May 1997. [105242]

Jane Kennedy: The Lord Chancellor's Department consult widely on proposals across the diverse range of policies for which it is responsible. There is no central record of consultees, and one could be assembled only at disproportionate expense.

Northern Ireland Court Service

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many people have been promoted within the Northern Ireland Court Service in each of the last three years; and what is the religious breakdown of such promotions. [105345]

Mr. Lock: I refer the hon. Member to the following table:

	Number of promotions	Protestant	Roman Catholic
1997	11	9	2
1998	0	0	0
1999	6	4	2

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many people are employed in the Northern Ireland Court Service. [105324]

Mr. Lock: There are 668 people employed in the Northern Ireland Court Service.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the current religious breakdown at all levels of staff in the Northern Ireland Court Service; what were the figures for (a) 1992, (b) 1995 and (c) 1997; and if he will make a statement. [105344]

Mr. Lock: For the purposes of consistency and fair comparison the Equality Commission requires all organisations to present their data in Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) Groups.

The table represents the Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) Groups used by the Northern Ireland Court Service and shows the religious breakdown for each SOC Group within the Northern Ireland Court Service for 1999, 1997, 1995 and 1992.

The Community Background information is presented in terms of Numbers within the Organisation (NO).

These numbers are then shown both as a percentage within the Organisation as a whole (% Org) and as a percentage within each SOC Group (% SOC).

The following notable trends are apparent from the table:

The representation of Roman Catholics in SOC 1 has increased from 25 per cent. to 30 per cent. since 1992.

The representation of Roman Catholics has also increased in the Recruitment Grad (SOC 4) by 5 per cent. since 1997.

SOC 6 and 9 are mainly representative of our Security Grades and we continue to work with the Equality Commission towards fair participation.

Religious breakdown by Standard Occupational Classification (SOC)

	1999			1997			1995			1992
	NO	ORG (%)	SOC (%)	NO	ORG (%)	SOC (%)	NO	ORG (%)	SOC (%)	NO	ORG (%)	SOC (%)
SOC1—Managers and Administrators
Protestant	182	27	69	191	29	69	198	29	70	192	28	72
Roman Catholic	78	12	30	78	12	28	79	11	28	66	9.5	25
Non Determined	4	6	1	6	9	2	7	1	2	9	1.3	3
SOC2—Professional Staff
Protestant	4	6	57	2	3	50	1	1	50	—	—	—
Roman Catholic	3	4	43	2	3	50	1	1	50	—	—	—
Non Determined	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
SOC3—Associated Professional
Protestant	1	15	100	1	1	100	2	0.3	100	—	—	—
Roman Catholic	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Non Determined	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—

Religious breakdown by Standard Occupational Classification (SOC)

	1999			1997			1995			1992
	NO	ORG (%)	SOC (%)	NO	ORG (%)	SOC (%)	NO	ORG (%)	SOC (%)	NO	ORG (%)	SOC (%)
SOC 4—Clerical and Secretarial
Protestant	192	29	62	186	28	64	193	28	66	155	22	61
Roman Catholic	105	16	34	84	13	29	88	13	30	74	11	29
Non Determined	13	2	4	21	3	7	13	1.9	4	27	3.9	10
SOC6—Personal and Protective
Protestant	18	2.7	75	21	3	75	25	3.6	78	26	3.7	72
Roman Catholic	4	6	16	3	4	11	2	.3	6	3	0.4	8
Non Determined	2	3	8	4	6	14	5	.7	16	7	1	19
SOC9—Others
Protestant	49	7.3	79	52	7.8	75	54	7.8	74	85	12	64
Roman Catholic	8	1.2	13	8	1.2	12	10	1.4	14	18	2.6	14
Non Determined	5	0.7	8	9	1.3	13	9	1.3	12	29	4.2	22

HEALTH

Haloperidol

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if Haloperidol is available for prescription on the NHS; what steps he has taken to ensure adequate supplies of Haloperidol; and if he will make a statement. [104625]

Ms Stuart: Haloperidol is available for prescription on the National Health Service. We have received no reports of supplies being inadequate.

Health Call Service

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) who assesses the quality control of the out-of-hours Health Call service for Medway-Swale; [104692]

(2) what was the average call-out time for the Health Call service for Sittingbourne and Sheppey in the last year for which figures are available; [104694]

(3) how many on-call doctors there are for Sittingbourne and Sheppey in the out-of-hours Health Call service. [104693]

Ms Stuart: Seventeen doctors are registered with Health Call, which covers the out-of-hours service for Sheppey. The average call out time is just under one hour and everyone is seen within two hours.

All 28 General Practitioners in the Sittingbourne area are registered with Medway Doctors On Call (MedDoc). Call-outs are assessed by a nurse triage and are prioritised according to clinical need.

The patient's GP is responsible for ensuring the quality of care for the patient. Complaints can be made about out-of-hours either directly to the out-of-hours service or via the patients GP. GPs have a contract with the out-of-hours service to provide a certain quality of care. Any complaints are managed through the National Health Service complaints procedure. Where the complainants are not happy with the response they receive through local resolution they will be given the opportunity to write to the local health authority for an independent review.

Isle of Sheppey Hospital

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will extend the minor injuries clinic hours at the hospital on the Isle of Sheppey to 9 pm. [104691]

Ms Stuart: The plans to extend the opening hours of the minor injuries clinic at the hospital on the Isle of Sheppey are currently a matter for discussion between the West Kent Health Authority and Thames Gateway National Health Service Trust.

Jehovah's Witnesses

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Jehovah's Witnesses died as a result of refusing medically advised blood transfusions in each of the last five years. [104764]

Mr. Denham: We do not hold this information centrally. Clinicians are required by law to respect the beliefs of Jehovah's Witnesses who do not wish to receive blood transfusions. In some cases, there are acceptable alternative medical interventions. For instance, for surgical operations, we asked NHS Trusts to consider the introduction of perioperative cell salvage by March 2000. This process retrieves the patient's own blood cells during surgery, which may be acceptable to some Jehovah's Witnesses.

West Sussex Waiting Lists

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were on the NHS waiting list for treatment in the West Sussex Health Authority area on (a) 1 November 1999 and (b) 1 December 1999. [104888]

Mr. Denham: The latest figures available show that as at the end of November there were 19,783 people on the National Health Service waiting list for treatment in the West Sussex Health Authority area.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people had been waiting for 13 weeks or more for a first appointment with a consultant in the West Sussex Health Authority area on (a) 1 November 1999 and (b) 1 December 1999. [104887]

Mr. Denham: The number of people waiting for 13 weeks or more for an outpatient appointment by health authority area is monitored on a quarterly basis. The last available figures for West Sussex are as at 30 September. At that date, there were 8,350 people waiting 13 weeks or more for a first outpatient appointment.

Flu

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact on hospital waiting list targets of the recent influenza outbreak. [104898]

Mr. Denham: During the winter, and particularly over the extended Millennium holiday, the National Health Service has quite rightly focused its attention on the high numbers of emergency cases, including those resulting from the current influenza outbreak. At this time of year, the NHS plans to treat fewer waiting list cases because of expected pressures, and the waiting list normally increases slightly. A seasonal rise in waiting lists is expected over the next couple of months, reflecting the planned priority the NHS has given to winter emergency admissions. This will not affect the achievement of the waiting list target.

Dyspraxia

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children have been diagnosed as dyspraxic since May 1997. [104860]

Mr. Denham: There were 62 admissions for dyspraxia by age (0–16 years) in National Health Service hospitals in England for the financial year 1997–98.

Primary Care Groups

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many primary care groups have applied to become primary care trusts. [105506]

Mr. Denham: Primary care trust applications are locally driven. We have received 63 applications (covering 68 primary care groups) to move to PCT status in April and October 2000. A further 140 PCGs have expressed interest in moving to PCT status from April.

Correspondence

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Barrow and Furness (Mr. Hutton), will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Harborough of 22 November 1999, on behalf of Mr. L. W. Bennett of Oadby, Leicestershire. [105789]

Mr. Hutton: I replied to the hon. Member on 17 January.

Dentistry (Waiting Times)

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) average and (b) maximum waiting times have been for treatment for patients using each of the first two dental access centres. [104776]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 17 January 2000]: The information is not available in the form requested. However, at the Cornwall dentist access centre, protocol is that people presenting with a dental emergency are seen on the same day or the following day. At the Shropshire dental access centre, protocol in both cases is that a patient with a swollen face will be seen the same day and that patients presenting with pains, considering themselves to be in need of urgent treatment, are seen within 24 hours. Patients with minor ailments and suffering no pain will be seen within a week.

Departmental Property

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those properties held by his Department and agencies responsible to him which are (a) wholly and (b) mainly unoccupied at present, giving locations and when they became so unoccupied in each case. [105313]

Ms Stuart: The Department, including its agencies, has no properties which are wholly or mainly unoccupied.

TREASURY

Departmental Properties

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those properties held by his Department and agencies responsible to him which are (a) wholly and (b) mainly unoccupied at present, giving locations and when they became so unoccupied in each case. [105309]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information is given in the table.

Location	Date unoccupied
Buildings wholly unoccupied:
Inland Revenue
Bradford	7 July 1997
Glasgow	1 June 1999
Southampton	29 September 1999
HM Customs and Excise
Hull	1 August 1996
Lisburn	28 February 1997
Newcastle	14 August 1998
St. Albans	31 August 1996
Southend-on-Sea	4 October 1999
Weymouth	1 March 1997
Valuation Office Agency
Eastbourne	May 1999
Office for National Statistics
Fareham	August 1999
Building mainly unoccupied:
Inland Revenue
Poole	1 April 1996
Valuation Office Agency
Doncaster	November 1998
Leamington Spa	April 1999

Company Voluntary Arrangement

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the implications of a company becoming the subject of a company voluntary arrangement under the Insolvency Act for that company's ability to compete for public contracts. [105296]

Mr. Timms: Companies which become the subject of a company voluntary arrangement under the Insolvency Act 1986 would not automatically be barred from bidding for public contracts. The objective in public procurement is to secure value for money, having due regard to propriety and regularity. To achieve this, purchasers need to assess the financial and economic standing of potential bidders and to satisfy themselves that they meet the requirements for the particular contract. Where the EC rules apply there is specific provision which allows purchasers to exclude potential bidders who have an arrangement of this type. It is for the purchasing authority to decide whether to rely upon this provision in any competition.

Child Care Tax Credit

Ms Kelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) the uptake of the child care tax credit by parents with children below the age of one year in a steady state and (b) the cost of providing that credit. [104864]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It is estimated that in 2000–01, the first full year of the Working Families Tax Credit, about 11,000 families with children aged under one will have eligible child care costs for at least one child and will hence be in receipt of the child care tax credit. It is not possible to identify the cost of child care for children aged under one but, if these families no longer received the child care tax credit for any of their children, the cost of the Working Families Tax Credit would reduce by about £35 million.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list by constituency the (a) number and (b) proportion of households with at least one member in work and qualifying for Working Families Tax Credit which are receiving Working Families Tax Credit in the UK, ranked in descending order of the proportion of households. [104917]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I regret that the information requested is not available.

LSVTs

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been raised annually from stamp duty on large-scale voluntary transfers in each of the last five years. [104795]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Transfers of properties to charities are exempt from stamp duty. About three-quarters of registered social landlords are charities, but figures are not readily available on the amount of stamp duty paid on large-scale voluntary transfers from local authorities to non-charitable registered social landlords.

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) men and (b) women in each of the standard age groups were employed in his Department in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1999. [104017]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Details of staff in post in the Treasury on 1 April 1999, broken down by gender and standard age group, are provided in the table. Information on this basis for 1979 is not available. The annual publication "Civil Service Statistics" provides a departmental breakdown of staff by gender for the year in question and service-wide information by age. Information on average age by responsibility level and gender is also provided in the "Equal Opportunities Data Summary 1998".

HM Treasury staff by gender and age as at 1 April 1999

Age group	Men	Women
15–19	2	1
20–24	45	28
25–29	95	77
30–34	119	64
35–39	85	52
40–44	77	50
45–49	63	34
50+	84	69
Total	570	375

EU Fraud

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of fraud and irregularities reported by the United Kingdom in 1998 under Regulations 1681/94 and 1831/94, set out in Official Journal C350, 3 December 1999, page 97, with reference to the increase in sums involved. [105670]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The increase in the level of Structural Funds fraud and irregularities reported by the United Kingdom in 1998 is primarily the result of specific efforts to improve detection and reporting systems during this period, and the detection of two substantial fraud cases.

It is essential that Structural Fund moneys are spent properly and efficiently, and that frauds and irregularities are detected and dealt with appropriately. We are continuing to improve financial control and management systems towards this end.

EU Tax Harmonisation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 2 December 1999, Official Report, column 318W, if he will list those elements of tax harmonisation which have been identified by member states. [105613]

Dawn Primarolo: My answer of 2 December 1999, Official Report, column 318W, concerned Council discussions on tackling harmful tax competition.

Charitable Giving

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the extent of charitable giving is calculated; how much charitable giving there was in (a) 1998, (b) 1978 and (c) 1988; and how the age, gender, race and occupational profile of charitable giving has changed over this period. [105476]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Information on the full extent of charitable giving is not available from administrative sources. The Charities Aid Foundation estimates overall income donated by individuals to be around £5 billion to £6 billion per year. Research on donations to charities by individuals or households has been carried out by the Institute for Fiscal Studies

(using the Family Expenditure Survey), and the National Council for Voluntary Organisations, from which further details are available.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the level of preparedness for the introduction of the Euro among (a) small and medium-sized enterprises and (b) other enterprises on (i) 30 June 1999 and (ii) 31 December 1999. [105814]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Treasury has commissioned a number of surveys of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) to measure the level of euro preparations across the UK. The most recent survey, carried out in April 1999, shows 27 per cent. of SMEs with European Union trading links had prepared for the euro.

The Treasury does not carry out euro preparations surveys of larger companies. The surveys focus on SMEs because they are the prime target of the Treasury's euro preparations information campaign to help businesses prepare for the euro.

Taxpayers (Shropshire)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many taxpayers there are in (a) Shrewsbury and Atcham and (b) Shropshire. [105524]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest estimates for the number of income tax payers in Shrewsbury and Atcham and in Shropshire are 47,000 and 204,000 respectively. The estimate for Shrewsbury and Atcham is uncertain because of the small survey sample size.

These estimates are for 1996–97 and are based on the Inland Revenue Survey of Personal Incomes.

Government Debt

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) nominal and (b) market value of central Government gross debt was on the latest date for which information is available. [105838]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 19 January 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on central government gross debt.

Monthly data for the nominal value of central government gross debt are published in Table 18 of the Bank of England publication Monetary and Financial Statistics (the December 1999 edition providing data up to end-November 1999). At end-November 1999, it was £388.7 billion.

The market value of central government gross debt can be estimated from Quarterly balance sheet data published as part of the National Accounts dataset (in Financial Statistics and United Kingdom Economic Accounts). Market value of central government gross debt at end-1999 Q3 was £427.1 billion (nominal value at that date was £395 billion).

Winter Deaths

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 436W, on winter deaths, if he will assess the contribution of influenza and related conditions to the statistics for excess winter deaths. [105432]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 19 January 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question, pursuant to my answer of 20th December, Official Report, column 436W, on winter deaths, to assess the contribution of influenza and related conditions to the statistics for excess winter deaths.

A breakdown of deaths by influenza, and other selected causes, is given in the attached table for the last five winters for which final figures are available. Influenza activity is known to lead to an increase in respiratory deaths generally, and not just influenza deaths.

The figures presented are for all deaths occurring in England and Wales. These include deaths of non-residents, which were not included in the regional figures provided in the previous response.

Excess winter deaths are defined by ONS as the difference between the number of deaths during the four winter months (December to March) and the average number of deaths during the preceding autumn (August to November) and the following summer (April to July).

Excess winter deaths by underlying cause of death, England and Wales, winter 1993–94 to winter 1997–98

	1997–98	1996–97	1995–96	1994–95	1993–94
Number of deaths
All causes	22,900	47,680	40,190	27,290	25,900
Influenza	30	370	250	50	110
Pneumonia	5,800	15,290	11,080	6,260	6,550
Acute respiratory infections	80	180	150	100	110
Other respiratory diseases	3,850	7,640	6,320	3,950	3,830
Other causes	13,150	24,200	22,400	16,930	15,300
Percentage of total deaths
All causes	100	100	100	100	100
Influenza	0	1	1	0	0
Pneumonia	25	32	28	23	25
Acute respiratory infections	0	0	0	0	0
Other respiratory diseases	17	16	16	14	15
Other causes	57	51	56	62	59

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 436W, on excess winter deaths, if he will provide a breakdown by age for each year of data. [105431]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 19 January 2000:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question, pursuant to my answer of 20 December 1999, Official Report, column 436W, on excess winter deaths, to provide a breakdown by age for each year of data.

The information requested is provided in the attached table for all deaths occurring in England and Wales. These figures include deaths of non-residents, which were not included in the regional figures provided in the previous response.

Excess winter deaths are defined by ONS as the difference between the number of deaths during the four winter months (December to March) and the average number of deaths during the preceding autumn (August to November) and the following summer (April to July).

Excess winter mortality, winter 1988–89 to winter 1997–98, England and Wales

Year	0–64	65–74	75–84	85+	All ages
1988–89	1,720	4,260	8,090	7,100	21,160
1989–90	3,930	8,580	18,510	16,180	47,200
1990–91	2,960	7,070	14,660	13,250	37,940
1991–92	2,740	6,360	13,500	12,250	34,850
1992–93	2,120	4,720	9,330	9,490	25,650
1993–94	2,120	4,160	9,290	10,330	25,900
1994–95	2,200	5,490	9,700	9,910	27,290
1995–96	2,900	7,070	14,370	15,850	40,190
1996–97	3,040	6,970	17,540	20,140	47,680
1997–98	1,700	4,200	7,870	9,130	22,900

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 20 January 2000

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Horizon Working Group

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the report of the Horizon Working Group on post office business issues submitted to the Cabinet Office in December 1999; and if he will make a statement. [104724]

Mr. Byers: The document concerned represents work in progress and contains commercially sensitive information.

Post Offices

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices there were in (a) Somerset and (b) the Yeovil constituency in each year from 1980 to 1999; and if he will make a statement. [104748]

Mr. Byers: I understand from the Post Office that they do not hold historic information on the numbers of post offices in each parliamentary constituency or local administrative area and that such information cannot readily be compiled.

The Post Office advise that in October 1999 the number of post offices in Somerset was 234 and in the Yeovil constituency was 42.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals are being considered by his Department to help sustain and develop the viability of rural and urban sub-post offices. [105859]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Government are making a substantial contribution to the costs of automating the entire post office counters network to strengthen the viability of the network as a whole. Automation will enable Post Office Counters Ltd. to offer substantial enhancements to the services it is able to offer to clients and customers which in turn will increase the attractiveness of post offices compared with other service delivery channels. In addition, the Performance and Innovation Unit in the Cabinet Office is carrying out an urgent study on the post office network.

Lord Archer

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under which section of the Companies Act 1985 he asked officials to investigate Lord Archer of Weston-super-Mare in 1999. [106005]

Mr. Byers: I have never asked my officials to investigate Lord Archer of Weston-super-Mare.

Newspapers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will prevent recent proposed changes in the ownership of newspapers circulating in Wales. [105423]

Dr. Howells: I understand that the question refers to the proposal by Trinity Mirror plc ("Trinity Mirror") to acquire the newspapers and related assets of News Communications & Media plc. Under section 58 of the Fair Trading Act 1973, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's prior written consent is required before such an acquisition is made. I announced on 21 December that I was referring Trinity Mirror's application for consent to the Competition Commission. The reference, which was mandatory under the terms of the Act, does not prejudge the issues involved. The Competition Commission will investigate and report their findings to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State by 13 March 2000.

Soya Imports

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much soya was imported from the USA to the UK in (a) 1996, (b) 1997, (c) 1998 and (d) 1999. [106092]

Mr. Caborn: The available information is as follows:

UK imports of soya from the USA

£000

SITC/CN/Description	1996	1997	1998	1999[1]
08131 Oil cake and residues of soya beans	15,635	34,487	28,836	12,645
22220 Soya beans	77,892	86,232	71,054	20,329
120810000 Flours and meals of soya beans	32	21	16	19
42111 Crude soya bean oil	1	0	47	96
42119 Refined soya bean oil	25	32	22	1
Total	93,585	120,772	99,975	33,090

[1] January-November

Source:

Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom, HM Customs and Excise

National Assembly for Wales

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what training staff in his Department have received on the implications of the establishment of the National Assembly for Wales on their work in giving advice in response to inquiries. [106070]

Mr. Caborn: Information and guidance on the implications of devolution on the work of the Department, including handling of correspondence and inquiries, has been promulgated to staff throughout the Department and placed on the Department's intranet. In addition, a number of seminars have been held to provide information to staff and to encourage discussion on the effect of devolution on their responsibilities. I have also written to all senior officials in DTI to remind them of the need to work with the devolved administrations in accordance with the arrangements set out in the Memorandum of Understanding and concordats (Command Paper Cm 4444, published on 1 October 1999) and in a bilateral concordat between DTI and the National Assembly for Wales which I expect to be published shortly.

Regional Assistance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the new EU regional assistance map for the UK to be agreed. [106078]

Mr. Caborn: Discussions with the Commission on the proposals for new Assisted Areas are continuing. We will announce the new map as soon as possible.

Coal Miners (Compensation)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the payment of compensation to ex-coalminers and their widows in respect of emphysema and chronic bronchitis includes an element of compensation for pain and suffering; and if he will make a statement. [106074]

Mrs. Liddell: Compensation for successful claims in respect of chronic bronchitis and emphysema includes general damages for pain, suffering and loss of amenity.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those properties held by his Department and agencies responsible to him which are (a) wholly and (b) mainly unoccupied at present, giving locations and when they became so unoccupied in each case. [105307]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 19 January 2000]: The information is as follows:

(a) None.

(b) Three.

(i) Lime Grove, Eastcote, Middlesex

My Department vacated this site in late 1998. Part of the site, however, continues to be occupied by US Forces personnel and my officials are therefore exploring a transfer of site responsibility to the Ministry of Defence.

(ii) Dee Hills Park, Chester

(iii) Gordon House, Rochester

These freehold properties were vacated on 6 December 1999 and 9 January 2000 respectively. Sales of both are expected to be completed shortly.

Glassmaking

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the manufacturing capacity of glassmaking in the UK, expressed in tonnes per day. [104766]

Mr. Alan Johnson: This Department has responsibility only for the lead crystal, container, scientific/technical and automotive glassware sectors. No such assessment of the manufacturing capacity in these industries has been undertaken.

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the medium-term demand for manufactured glass in Britain. [104765]

Mr. Alan Johnson: This Department has responsibility only for the lead crystal, container, scientific/technical and automotive glassware sectors. No such assessment of the medium-term demand for manufactured glass in Britain has been undertaken. However, independent reports suggest that the UK glassware market is being increasingly influenced by fashion and design as part of the general trend towards casual dining which has increased the demand for glassware products.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the economic impact of the moratorium on gas-fired power stations, including the direct and indirect impact on employment. [105160]

Mrs. Liddell: I am monitoring carefully the economic impact of the Government's policy of stricter consents for gas-fired power stations. In particular, I have received representations about the impact of the policy on proposals for industrial regeneration in local economies and the impact on employment in the oil and gas, power generation equipment and other sectors. However, the policy is necessary, as a temporary measure, to protect security and diversity of supply while the electricity market is reformed. It will be relaxed as soon as the reform programme has been undertaken and the distortions in the market have been removed.

Business Rates (North-West)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions have taken place between his Department and the DETR about reducing business rates in the North-West. [105272]

Mr. Caborn: There have not been any discussions between the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions specifically about a reduction in business rates in the North-West. However, my Department has been involved in discussions about the arrangements for transitional relief and is also involved in the Government review of the system of revaluation of non-domestic rates in England.

BSkyB and Cable

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Office of Fair Trading's investigation into BSkyB and cable. [105261]

Dr. Howells: The decision to undertake a competition review of BSkyB's position in pay television is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading.

Petrol Sales

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will investigate the prospects for independent petrol retailers. [105269]

Dr. Howells: DTI Ministers have no plans to investigate this particular market sector. In so far as there are any possible competition issues, it would be for the Director General of Fair Trading to investigate.

The Director General last looked at the petrol market in 1998. He found that independent petrol retailers had suffered as a result of strong competition between the oil companies and the supermarkets, but overall the market was competitive and consumers were benefiting.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he investigates regional monopolies of the sale of petrol by oil companies. [105270]

Dr. Howells: Under UK competition legislation, responsibility for investigating allegations of anti-competitive practices, abuse of monopoly position and restrictive trade practices lies with the Director General of Fair Trading.

Any evidence of abuse of monopoly position, on a regional or national basis, should be passed to the Director General of Fair Trading.

Agency Banking Services

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to encourage the major clearing banks to agree agency banking services with Post Office Counters. [105330]

Mr. Alan Johnson: The Government have taken steps to put back on track the Horizon project to automate the post office network thereby establishing a platform for provision of on-line agency banking services at all post offices. However the extension of the provision of agency banking services at post offices is primarily a matter for commercial negotiation between the clearing banks and Post Office Counters Ltd.

Coal Industry

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what were the total tonnages of coal delivered to power stations in Great Britain in 1999, giving the breakdown between (a) collieries in England, Scotland and Wales and (b) deep mines and opencast. [105513]

Mrs. Liddell: Figures for 1999 as a whole are not yet available, but in the first three quarters of 1999 it is estimated that of the 24 million tonnes of coal delivered from collieries and opencast sites in Great Britain to UK power stations, about 15 million tonnes came from England, four million tonnes came from Scotland and less than one million tonnes from Wales with a further four million tonnes from small producers that cannot be readily allocated geographically. Of the 24 million tonnes about 13 million tonnes was deep mined and about 11 million tonnes opencast and recovered coal.

A further five million tonnes of imported coal were reported by power stations in the first three quarters of 1999.

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much coal was imported into the United Kingdom in 1999 (a) in total and (b) from each country supplying coal to the United Kingdom. [105514]

Mrs. Liddell: Figures for 1999 as a whole are not yet available, but in the first three quarters of 1999, it is estimated that 14.6 million tonnes of coal were imported into the UK.

Coal imported[1] into UK, January to September 1999

Country	Thousand tonnes
Belgium/Luxembourg	41
France	2
Germany	12
Irish Republic	39
Netherlands	136
Total EU[2]	230
Australia	4,336
Canada	1,331
China	219
Colombia	2,603
Indonesia	50
Mozambique	19
Norway	21
Poland	975
Russia	83
South Africa	2,101
USA	2,107
Venezuela	435
Vietnam	114
Total Non EU	14,392
Total all countries	14,622

[1] Country of origin basis.

[2] Imports from EU countries include coal from outside the EC routed through these countries.

Electricity Cabling

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of electricity supply cabling in urban areas of England is over (a) 25 years, (b) 35 years and (c) 50 years old. [105665]

Mrs. Liddell: Separate figures are not available for England. Percentages for Great Britain are as follows:

Age	Percentage
Over 25 years old	75
Over 35 years old	52
Over 50 years old	26

Source:
OFGEM 1999 review of Distribution Price Controls

Electricity Market

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the electricity market had been opened up to competition as at July 1999 by each of the member states of the EU. [104886]

Mrs. Liddell: The latest information available from the Commission gives the position as follows:

Member state	Percentage of market opening by May 1999
Germany	100
Sweden	100
Finland	100
UK	100
Denmark	90
Netherlands	33
Spain	30
Italy	30
Portugal	26
Austria	27

Source:
Vol. I of the Second Report from the Commission to the Council and the European Parliament on the State of Liberalisation of the Energy Markets (May 1999)

France and Luxembourg have not yet implemented the Directive and the Commission has initiated infraction proceedings. Their draft laws, however, provide for market opening of 26 per cent. and 45 per cent. respectively. Belgium, Ireland and Greece have been allowed to delay the implementation of the Electricity Directive, Belgium and Ireland until February 2000, Greece until February 2001.

Correspondence

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by what date he intends to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Wells concerning the business dealings of the hon. Member for Coventry, North-West (Mr. Robinson) and his Department's inquiries into those dealings. [104673]

Mr. Byers: I replied to the right hon. Member's letter today.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by what date he intends to reply in full to the letters from the right hon. Member for Wells dated 15 July 1998, 23 November 1998, 26 November 1998 and 11 December 1998 concerning the activities of Hollis Industries plc, TransTec plc and AGB International plc. [104675]

Mr. Byers: My predecessor replied to the right hon. Gentleman's letters as follows:

Letter	Reply
15 July 1998	23 September 1998
23 November 1998	11 December 1998
26 November 1998	11 December 1998
11 December 1998	21 December 1998

Hollis Industries plc

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the report arising from his Department's investigations into Hollis Industries plc and the hon. Member for Coventry, North-West (Mr. Robinson). [104670]

Mr. Byers: These were confidential inquiries and in accordance with established practice and legal constraints I have no proposals to publish the findings of the investigation.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Parades Commission

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the religious and political affiliations of each member of the Parades Commission. [106109]

Mr. Ingram: Three members of the Parades Commission are from the Protestant community, three are from the Roman Catholic community and one is non-denominational. None has any active involvement with any political party.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many facilitators have been employed by the Parades Commission; how much has been paid (a) in total and (b) to each; and to what religious denominations they belong. [106108]

Mr. Ingram: A team of 12 Authorised Officers, representing a balance in gender and religion, has been employed by the Parades Commission, through Mediation Network NI, since April 1998.

The remuneration for 1998–99 was £7,000 per annum, based on a minimum of 80 days commitment per year. The remuneration for 1999–2000 was £7,200. The Commission has recently decided to extend the remit of the Authorised Officers to include education and community development and, accordingly, the days have been increased to a minimum of 100 days per annum with a commensurate increase in remuneration to £9,000 per annum. Since April 1998 to end December 1999 the total remuneration was £151,000.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what are the religious affiliations of the applicants for the post of Chairman of the Parades Commission; [106107]

(2) how many applications have been received for the post of Chairman of the Parades Commission. [106110]

Mr. Ingram: Of the 45 applicants who recently applied for the post of Chairman of the Parades Commission. 18 were Protestant, 11 were Roman Catholic and 16 were from other denominations or did not specify.

This information was obtained for the purposes of equal opportunities monitoring. It was not made available to the interviewing panel.

Mr. Richard Jameson

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made as to whether (a) the murder of Mr. Richard Jameson was carried out by a terrorist organisation and (b) that murder indicates that the ceasefire has been broken. [106102]

Mr. Ingram: The Secretary of State keeps his judgment about the ceasefires under continual review, taking account of all the information he receives from his security advisers. It is the Government's view that the main ceasefires on balance are holding. If there is evidence that an organisation is not maintaining its ceasefire he will not hesitate to act.

Decommissioning

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the cost to date of the International Independent Commission on Decommissioning. [106081]

Mr. Ingram: Updated costs are currently available only to 30 September 1999. The total expenditure shared by the British and Irish Governments from September 1997 to that date was IR£2,528,047. The British Government's share of that was STG£1,005,029.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the dates of the meetings held between the International Independent Commission on Decommissioning and the representatives of each political party and terrorist organisation since the creation of the Commission. [106080]

Mr. Ingram: That is a matter for the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Solicitors (Age Discrimination)

Mr. White: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to prevent age discrimination in the training of solicitors. [105598]

Mr. Lock: The solicitor's profession is independent and self-regulating. It is for the Law Society, in the first place, to set and to apply any requirements in respect of the training of solicitors.

Meanwhile, the Government are committed to tackling age discrimination across the board. On 14 June 1999, the then Minister of State for Employment and Disability Rights launched the Code of Practice for Age Diversity in Employment, with supporting guidance for employers. It is aimed at all employers, including solicitors' firms. Although it is non-statutory, the Code sets the standard for non-ageist approaches to recruitment, training and development, promotion, redundancy and retirement.

Departmental Smoking Policy

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what action he is taking to reduce smoking in his Department. [105797]

Jane Kennedy: My Department has a well established "Smoking Policy" designed to provide smoke-free working conditions for those staff who want them, while offering limited, designated, smoking facilities for smokers and help for those who wish to stop smoking.

Recent Health Awareness events held in various areas of the Department were designed to encourage staff to consider the effect of their life styles on their health, including exercise, diet, smoking and drinking habits. Further such events are currently being considered.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

M60

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list, for each of contracts 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 for the M60 motorway between Denton and Middleton (a) the original price, (b) the cost of the completed contracts and (c) the estimated final cost of the remaining contracts; [104425]

(2) when he expects the M60 between Denton and Middleton to be completed; and if it will be opened in phases or in its entirety. [104426]

Mr. Hill: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Peter Nutt, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. Andrew Bennett, dated 20 January 2000:

The Transport Minister, Keith Hill, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the costs and programme for the M60 Manchester Outer Ring Road.

The scheme is split into four main contracts. The tender prices for each contract were: Contract 1, £101.9M; Contract 2, £48.9M; Contract 3, £50.1M and Contract 4, £18.2M.

Contracts 1 and 3 are still under construction so it will be some while before we know the final cost and although work on Contract 2 is complete, the final account has not been settled. In the circumstances, I am afraid I cannot let you have an estimate of the final outturn cost for these contracts. To do so would prejudice our position with the contractors in the event of disputes over claims or the settlement of accounts.

The final cost of Contract 4 was £30M.

The contract was let under the Institute of Civil Engineers 5th Edition form of contract which allows the contractor to be paid for the actual, rather than the estimated, work done and the risks that occur.

It is not always possible to identify in advance all the necessary work nor the precise nature of the ground and the contract allows for extensions of time for certain risks. In this case, the contract was extended by 37 weeks to allow for unforeseen ground conditions, including contaminated ground. Work was also severely delayed by exceptionally bad weather.

It is this additional work which caused costs to rise.

The disadvantage of this form of contract was the uncertainty of cost and time and the Agency addressed these issues in a review which led to an announcement in 1997 of new procurement initiatives. We are now using other forms of contract which share risk more equitably and encourage a partnering approach to get away from the adversarial way which has marked some of our contracts in the past.

We expect the remaining contracts to be completed and opened in their entirety by Summer this year. There are no plans for phased openings.

Cycle Routes

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the mileage in the Greater London area that has been constructed for use as cycle routes. [104792]

Mr. Hill: The total length of the London Cycle Network routes implemented at 1 April 1999 is some 755 miles.

Sustainable Development Commission

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) when the first meeting of the Sustainable Development Commission will take place; and how often the Commission will meet; [104786]

(2) how many permanent staff the Sustainable Development Commission will employ; [104787]

(3) if he will list the membership of the Sustainable Development Commission; [104788]

(4) what is the proposed budget of the Sustainable Development Commission; and how much of it will come from public funds. [104789]

Mr. Meacher: The Sustainable Development Commission, which will replace the existing UK Round Table and British Government Panel on Sustainable Development, is expected to begin work in the spring. It will be for the Commission to decide the frequency and timing of its meetings along with its other working arrangements. The DETR will provide funds for administrative support for the Commission which will have about 15 members, and a Secretariat that permits an increase on current staffing for the two existing advisory bodies, which currently have six permanent staff. A proposed budget of £492,000 has been allocated for the Commission for 2000–01. It will be open to the Commission to encourage others to contribute support, for example, by providing staff on secondment. The process of appointing members is under way in accordance with the guidance laid down by the Commissioner for Public Appointments.

No-car Days

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce pilot no-car days in the UK. [104837]

Mr. Hill: No. Our view is that it is for local authorities to decide whether they want to introduce no-car days, taking into account local circumstances.

London Cabs (Blind Passengers)

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many complaints have been received by the Public Carriage Office regarding London taxi drivers who have refused to carry blind passengers with guide dogs in the last year; [105203]

(2) if he will estimate how many passengers with guide dogs are carried by London taxi drivers per year. [105204]

Mr. Hill: The Public Carriage Office has no recorded complaints of London licensed taxi drivers refusing to carry guide dogs in the last year.

Neither the Public Carriage Office nor the Department monitors the number or proportion of taxi journeys in London involving passengers with guide dogs.

Road Gritting

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidelines his Department has issued for the gritting of roads in icy conditions. [105056]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 17 January 2000]: The Highways Agency aims to provide a winter maintenance service of de-icing and snow clearing which, as far as possible, allows the safe movement of traffic on motorways and all purpose trunk roads in England, and keeps delays and accidents caused by adverse weather to a minimum. Their maintenance agents undertake the operational management of this service following the guidelines in the Highways Agency Trunk Road Maintenance Manual: Volume 2, Routine and Winter Maintenance Code.

For local authority roads, the Code of Good Practice for Highway Maintenance produced by the local government associations in England and Scotland in 1989 provides advice on systems to predict freezing conditions at Appendix 4.7. A partnership project between DETR, the Local Government Association, the Welsh Assembly, and DOE(NI) is currently considering the revision of this code.

London Elections

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to announce the outcome of his consultation on the proposed spending limits for London Mayoral and Greater London Assembly candidates and his decision on whether candidates will have free mailshots; and if he will make a statement. [105282]

Mr. Hill: We are considering the comments we received on our proposed limits to the spending of Mayoral and Assembly candidates in GLA elections. We will announce our conclusions in a written answer shortly. The limits will be set in an order subject to affirmative resolution.

Road Maintenance

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was his Department's budget for road maintenance in each of the last 10 years. [105704]

Mr. Hill [holding answer 18 January 2000]: Motorway and trunk road maintenance is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions. The Highways Agency (an executive agency of the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions) carries out this function on the Secretary of State's behalf.

The responsibility for maintenance of local roads rests with local highway authorities. Central Government funding for routine maintenance of local authority roads is provided through the highways maintenance element of the Revenue Support Grant (RSG). This is distributed by the Highways Maintenance Standard Spending Assessment (HMSSA).

Funding for structural maintenance of local authority principal roads and bridges has been provided through

Transport Supplementary Grant (TSG) until 1999–2000. In the future it will be provided by the Local Transport Plan capital settlement.

The provisions for the last 10 years were:

Year	£ million
Highway maintenance standard spending assessment
1990–91	1,578
1991–92	1,786
1992–93	1,806
1993–94	1,736
1994–95	1,759
1995–96	1,759
1996–97	1,759
1997–98	1,759
1998–99	1,767
1999–2000	[1]1,813
Transport supplementary grant
1992–93	47.64
1993–94	86.5
1994–95	75.5
1995–96	70.52
1996–97	43.9
1997–98	46
1998–99	40
1999–2000	56.75
Maintenance provision for motorways and trunk roads
1990–91	[2]408
1991–92	[2]430
1992–93	[2]478
1993–94	726
1994–95	690
1995–96	675
1996–97	547
1997–98	531
1998–99	651
1999–2000	765

[1] Provisional figure
[2] Outturn figures
Note:
No separate TSG allocation was made for road maintenance before 1992–93

Deregulation

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what orders his Department has made under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 in each year since 1994; and what plans it has to introduce such orders. [106087]

Ms Beverley Hughes: The five orders my Department has made under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 are listed in table A. We continue to look for opportunities to use such orders to remove legislation where we can. Three areas where we expect to take action are listed in table B.

Table A: Orders already made

Year	Title
1996	The Deregulation (Parking Equipment) Order 1996
	The Deregulation (Motor Vehicles Tests) Order 1996
	The Deregulation (Building) (Initial Notices and Final Certificates) Order 1996
1998	The Deregulation (Exchangeable Driving Licences) Order 1998
	The Deregulation (Taxis and Private Hire Vehicles) Order 1998

Table B: Orders being considered

Topic	Timing
The disposal of houses by local authorities in England	Expected to be made in late April/early May
Amending Section 7 of the Building Act 1984	Expected to be laid before Parliament before the summer recess
Eligibility to drive a private hire vehicle outside London	Under consideration in the light of responses to consultation

Correspondence

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire will receive a reply to his letter of 1 December on behalf of his constituent, Mr. Hall. [105922]

Mr. Raynsford: This letter was sent to the Highways Agency for advice. They transferred the papers to the Government Office for the East of England for reply. Because of a clerical error this transfer was not completed. However the papers are now receiving urgent attention and my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Transport will reply shortly.

Tyneside Metro

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for public investment in the Tyneside Metro. [104829]

Mr. Hill: The Deputy Prime Minister announced the go-ahead for the extension of the Tyne and Wear Metro to Sunderland and South Hylton on 13 December last year. In addition to ERDF funding we expect to support at least £35 million of expenditure on the scheme.

Building Regulations (Fire Safety)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to publish the revised guidance to support Part B (Fire Safety) of the Building Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [106529]

Ms Beverley Hughes: I have today published the 2000 edition of the Approved Document to Part B of Schedule 1 to the Building Regulations 1991. The Building Regulations (Amendment) (No. 2) Regulations 1999, which amended Part B, were laid before Parliament on 21 December 1999. The 2000 edition of the Approved Document offers ways of meeting these revised requirements of the Building Regulations. The amendment Regulations and the 2000 edition of the Approved Document will both come into force on 1 July 2000.

There are a number of changes in this guidance, which was last published in 1992. Many of them have been to address areas where the guidance has become outdated, or where the guidance has needed clarification. In addition the guidance now contains information specifically relating to schools and gives guidance on sandwich panel construction.

Some new issues have also been introduced in the 2000 edition of the Approved Document. The revised Approved Document includes guidance on fire alarm and fire detection systems within all relevant buildings and not just dwellings, as was the case in the 1992 edition of the Approved Document. The revised Approved Document now suggests that within a dwelling all habitable rooms within storeys not more than 4.5 metres above ground level should be provided with an emergency egress window. Guidance has also been added to deal with means of escape from storeys within buildings other than dwellings which are also used for the consumption of food and/or drink by customers. This follows two fatal fires in department stores where it has been shown that people in a cafe are not so quick to respond to a fire alarm compared to the other general shoppers.

As announced on 14 December 1999 by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning, the revised Approved Document now includes a provision for compartmentation or sprinkler protection in single storey retail buildings with a floor area exceeding 2000m^2.

In some areas where it has become evident in the light of experience that the guidance in the 1992 edition of the Approved Document was too onerous, the guidance has been relaxed. An example of this is the provision for firefighting shafts (a protected stair core incorporating a stair, lobby, dry riser and in the case of taller buildings a lift for use by the fire brigade). The guidance on these, which was introduced in the 1992 edition of the Approved Document, was found to be unreasonably onerous in certain low rise (between 7.5 metres and 18 metres higher) buildings which have a floor area of 600m^2 or more. The 2000 edition of the Approved Document relaxes the provision for certain buildings of this type and gives advice that recommends their use only in the shop and commercial, industrial and storage purpose groups.

DEFENCE

Gulf War

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the recommendations in the report of the external audit of the Gulf Veterans' Medical Assessment Programme have been implemented. [106501]

Mr. Spellar: The Ministry of Defence response to the recommendations in the report of the audit of the Gulf Veterans' Medical Assessment Programme (GVMAP) has now been completed. A very small number of issues remain outstanding but the response explains why this is so and what action is being taken.

The staff of the GVMAP have welcomed this opportunity to review their working practices and take action where necessary. The implementation of the audit recommendations will provide an improved service for Gulf veterans.

I am placing a copy of the response to the audit report in the Library of the House and it is also being published on the Ministry of Defence Gulf Veterans' Illnesses website.

Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement regarding the implementation of the immunisation programme against biological warfare agents for United Kingdom forces during the Gulf conflict 1990–91. [106493]

Mr. Spellar: The Government's "New Beginning" policy statement set out the way forward for addressing the health concerns of Gulf veterans and included a commitment to establish a Fact Finding Team to look into the implementation of the anti-biological warfare immunisation programme during the Gulf conflict. Their work has now been completed and I am today publishing a paper entitled "Implementation of the immunisation programme against biological warfare agents for UK forces during the Gulf conflict 1990–91". Copies of the report have been placed in the Library of the House.

The publication of this paper reaffirms the Government's commitment to ensuring that Gulf veterans should have access to whatever information the Ministry of Defence possesses which might be relevant to their illnesses.

The deficiencies in the implementation of the 1990–91 anti-biological warfare immunisation programme have been, and continue to be, addressed in improvements to our current arrangements. When we again deployed to the Gulf in 1998 our immunisation programme was unclassified, all troops were fully briefed using standard material, the nature of the threat and the vaccine were described in detail and all records were updated, showing that the lessons of 1990–91 have been learned.

The report found that the voluntary nature of the immunisation programme operated as intended in the majority of units and locations. It confirms that no unusual or previously undisclosed immunisations were given during the Gulf conflict and also explains the codewords which were sometimes used for the vaccines.

Uptake of the anti-biological warfare immunisations in the early stages of the programme was high. Over 75 per cent. of all personnel deployed to the Gulf region are likely to have had anthrax and pertussis immunisations, and in many units this approached 100 per cent. Uptake of the second anthrax and pertussis immunisations and the first plague was less and varied between and within formations. Uptake of the third anthrax and the second plague immunisation was rare.

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the suggested exposure of United Kingdom troops to chemical warfare agents in Al Jubayl on 19 January 1991. [106495]

Mr. Spellar: The 1997 "A New Beginning" policy statement set out a number of commitments to help address the health concerns of Gulf Veterans. One of these commitments was to review specific incidents of suggested biological or chemical warfare exposures. As part of this commitment I am today publishing a paper entitled "A Review of the Suggested Exposure of UK Forces to Chemical Warfare Agents in Al Jubayl on 19 January 1991". A copy will be placed in the Library.

As a result of our review of the available information we assess that UK troops were not subject to attack or exposed to chemical warfare agents at Al Jubayl on 19 January 1991. Although it is not possible to give a single comprehensive explanation for all the events that took place on the morning of 19 January we conclude from the available information that the indications of the presence of Chemical Warfare agents were false alarms.

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the relationship between organophosphate pesticides and the illnesses suffered by some veterans of the 1990–91 Gulf conflict following recent reports from the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment and the Institute of Occupational Medicine. [106496]

Mr. Spellar: The COT report, published in November, concluded that neuropsychological abnormalities can occur as a long term complication following acute organophosphate (OP) poisoning, particularly if the poisoning is severe. Persistent peripheral neuropathy (disorders of the peripheral nerves) may occur, but not generally at a level which would give rise to symptoms. The body of evidence gives little support to the hypothesis that low-level exposure to OPs can cause chronic disease of the nervous system. However, the report notes that there remains a question over whether a small proportion of subjects may be at increased risk of clinically significant disease following low level exposure and recommends further research in this area.

The Institute of Occupational Medicine (IOM) report on the relationship between OP sheep dips and illness in exposed sheep farmers and dippers found the critical exposure factor to be contact with concentrate dip: much higher rates of symptoms, predominantly of a sensory nature, were reported among those who had been principal concentrate handlers. There is a very limited evidence that long term low-level exposure to organophosphates leads to long term neurotoxic effects.

The conclusions from these reports are in line with the findings of the Defence Scientific Advisory Council's (DSAC) Working Party report, the publication of which I announced on 20 October 1999 and which reviewed existing literature on the long term neurotoxicity of anticholinesterases. It concluded that high doses of organophosphates may have long term effects on the peripheral nervous system, but that there is limited evidence about long term toxic effects following low doses.

During the Gulf conflict very few UK service personnel would have handled concentrated OPs. Those that did would have been Environmental Health Officers or technicians, or individual regimental hygiene duties personnel who were appropriately trained in procedures and the use of equipment. There was no evidence of acute organophosphate poisoning or of subsequent unusual ill health arising in this small group.

Neither the IOM nor the COT report provides evidence which would cause us to reassess our view of the possible role of OPs in relation to Gulf Veterans' illnesses. The case for ill-health effects resulting from long term low level exposure to OPs remains unproven and there is currently no reason to believe that Gulf veterans who might have been in casual contact with dilute pesticide (e.g. from the treatment of tents and equipment) or with the malathion dust used to de-louse Iraqi prisoners of war, are at increased risk of long term ill-health.

Although it remains the case that there is limited evidence of a link between low level exposure to OPs and adverse health effects, MOD will continue to monitor the debate about the safety of OPs. We will continue to review scientific evidence in the light of potential exposures which may have occurred in the Gulf and follow future research, including that recommended by the COT report, very closely.

Duke of York Royal Military School

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Duke of York Royal Military School for the financial year 1999–2000. [106545]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Chief Executive of The Duke of York's Royal Military School has been set the following key targets for 1999–2000:

To achieve 100 per cent. of GCSE passes at grades A* to G.

To achieve five or more GCSE passes at grades A* to C; 1999–2000 target is 86 per cent.

To achieve 88 per cent. of A level passes at grades A to E.

To achieve three or more A level passes at grades A to E; 1999–2000 target is 80 per cent.

To achieve 34 per cent. of A level passes at Grades A and B.

To achieve 100 per cent. award rate for GNVQ Advances and BTEC National Diploma courses.

To achieve places in higher education for at least 80 per cent. of sixth form leavers.

To achieve a pupil per capita cost of no more than £12,922.

To generate income of at least £475,000.

To achieve at least 270 applications for September 2000 intake.

Helsinki Council

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the Annex to the Presidency Conclusions of the European Council held in Helsinki relating to three new military committees under that Council, (a) what is the specific purpose of each and how it relates to the others, (b) what instructions have been sent by the Council to the Secretary General or High Representative of each in respect of his function and duties and (c) what the lines of accountability are. [105131]

Mr. Vaz: I have been asked to reply.

The Helsinki European Council set the framework for the political and military structures that will be necessary for the EU to decide and act on security and defence matters. These bodies are a standing Political and Security Committee (which will handle the full range of Common Foreign and Security Policy issues), the Military Committee and the Military Staff. The incoming Portuguese Presidency was tasked, together with the EU Secretary General/High Representative, to carry this work forward. The terms of reference, guidance and accountability for each body will thus be developed in due course.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many retirement pensioners in Heywood and Middleton aged 75 or over (a) will benefit and (b) will not benefit from free TV licences. [105198]

Janet Anderson: Figures are not available for the number of people aged 75 or over in Heywood and Middleton. However, as my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his pre-Budget statement on 9 November 1999, Official Report, columns 883–91, everyone aged 75 or over will receive their television licence free of charge from this autumn. We shall announce full details of the scheme shortly.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will take steps to ensure that all pensioners receive free TV licences. [105414]

Kate Hoey: As my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced on 9 November 1999, Official Report, columns 883–91, from this autumn, everyone aged 75 or over will receive their television licence free of charge. The Government are introducing this concession for older pensioners because, as a group, they are more likely to rely on television as their window on the world and to be on low incomes. We have no plans to extend the concession to all pensioners, but we are considering the Davies report's recommendations on the existing concessionary television licence scheme in the light of responses to the public consultation and will announce our conclusions shortly.

PRIME MINISTER

Media Policy

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if those dealing with the media in (a) his Office and (b) other ministerial offices, (i) ever, (ii) routinely and (iii) always record conversations with journalists; and for what period (1) unofficial and (2) official recordings are preserved. [106036]

The Prime Minister: It is now standard practice to tape press briefings given by the Prime Minister's Official Spokesman and other Downing street Spokesmen and a written record is circulated around Whitehall Departments, an innovation introduced by this Government. A record is kept on file.

European Defence

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to the answer from the Secretary of State for Defence to the hon. Member for Croydon, South of 10 January 2000, Official Report, column 97W, if he will place in the Library the speech given by his Policy Unit adviser on Europe and Defence, Mr. Liddle, to the French-German-UK Seminar at the Institut de Haute Education de la Défense Nationale, Paris in November 1999. [104803]

The Prime Minister: I am advised that Mr. Liddle's talk was not transcribed. I am therefore unable to consider the hon. Member's request.

Ilisu Dam

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions took place between EU Commission officials and the Prime Minister of Turkey on the Ilisu Dam Project during the 48 hours prior to his attendance at the Helsinki Summit. [105592]

The Prime Minister: I have no responsibility for any discussions which the European Commission officials may enter into. However, I am advised that officials of the Export Credits Guarantee Department and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are not aware of any discussions on the Ilisu Dam project taking place between European Commission officials and the Prime Minister of Turkey during the 48 hours prior to his attendance at the Helsinki Summit.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Higher Education

14. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the Government's plans are in respect of salaries and conditions in higher education. [103688]

28. Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on university staff salaries. [103706]

Mr. Wicks: The pay and conditions of staff in higher education are a matter for the employers not the Government. The Bett Report into higher education pay and conditions, published in June 1999, made a number of recommendations for restructuring the sector's terms and conditions. It will be for the higher education employers to consider how these recommendations can be implemented.

Exclusions

15. Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures the Government have taken to support schools in reducing the number of exclusions. [103690]

Jacqui Smith: Last July we issued new guidance on 'Social Inclusion: Pupil Support' which includes practical preventive strategies, based on good practice, to help schools deal with behaviour problems. This is backed up with nearly £500 million over three years for projects to prevent exclusions.

Learning and Skills Council

16. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what role will be played by business on the Learning and Skills Council. [103691]

Mr. Wicks: As the LSC Prospectus published before Christmas says, business will have a key role in the new Learning and Skills Council. We intend that at least 40 per cent. of the new Council's members will come from the private sector, and we will be looking to people with business experience to chair the national and most local Councils. In addition, the LSC's local arms will work closely with the new Small Business Service on workforce development.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his plans for the Learning and Skills Council. [103713]

Mr. Wicks: On December 14 my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment published a detailed Prospectus for the LSC. Subject to the passage of the Learning and Skills Bill, we expect the Learning and Skills Council to be in full operation from April 2001.

Secondary Schools

17. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to improve the quality of education for secondary school pupils. [103692]

Ms Estelle Morris: An agenda for raising educational standards for secondary school pupils was laid out by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment at the North of England conference on 6 January.

Small Businesses

18. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what structures exist to facilitate communication between his Department and small businesses. [103693]

Ms Jowell: My Department communicates with small business primarily through small business representative bodies, and through intermediary organisations like Training and Enterprise Councils, Business Links, National Training Organisations and enterprise agencies.

Rural Areas

19. Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to address pockets of low expectations and low skills in rural constituencies. [103694]

Mr. Wicks: We are committed to addressing low expectations and low skills wherever they are found. That is why we are setting targets at school and LEA level and creating a new system of post-16 learning that is responsive to local needs.

Labour Market

20. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps his Department is taking to broaden participation in the labour market. [103695]

Ms Jowell: The Government's Welfare to Work programme is the biggest ever initiative to help more people participate in the labour market and get back into work.

Age Discrimination

21. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps are being taken to promote the code of practice on age discrimination in the workplace. [103696]

Ms Hodge: The Code has been well received, with over 40,000 copies being issued since its launch in June. Copies of the Code of Practice were sent to Chambers of Commerce; Training and Enterprise Councils; Local Authorities; National Training Organisations; Trade Associations and 5000 businesses. Advertisements about the Code have appeared in Citizens Advice Bureaux; Jobcentres; local libraries and in a calendar sent to 120,000 small firms. Advertisements have also appeared in a range of publications aimed at management and personnel professionals.

I will be making an announcement next month on further plans for promoting its key messages.

Disabled People

22. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to propose legislation to guarantee legal rights of access for the disabled to education and training. [103697]

Ms Hodge: We announced our intention on 13 December to bring forward legislation to give people with disabilities equal access to schools and further, higher and adult education. The provision of training is generally already covered by Part II of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA) where it concerns employees, or Part III of the DDA where it constitutes a service to the public, depending on the particular circumstances of the disabled person and the provider.

Job Mobility

23. Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment his Department has made of the role of mobility within city boundaries in matching jobseekers to vacancies. [103699]

Ms Jowell: My Department recognises that increasing the mobility of jobseekers is critically important in helping people to find jobs, and employers to find people. The Employment Service has developed a comprehensive strategy to address mobility issues.

Attendance Rates

24. Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what support and advice has been given to schools to improve the rate of attendance by pupils. [103700]

Jacqui Smith: We are investing £500 million over three years on projects tackling truancy and school exclusion and other initiatives to get children back into school and learning. To support this major investment, we issued new guidance to schools in July 1999 entitled "Social Inclusion: Pupil Support", which includes evidence on what works in increasing attendance rates at school.

On 1 November 1999 we also issued our strategy document "Tackling Truancy Together" which sets out our further proposals for helping to reduce unauthorised absence from school. We are currently considering the many responses we received to the proposals in that document, and will make an announcement soon on what further action we want to take to help reduce unauthorised absence from school.

Further Education

25. Mr. Ivan Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his plans for funding the further education sector. [103701]

Mr. Wicks: In November 1999 I announced an additional £365 million for further education in 2001–02, bringing funding to nearly £3.9 billion, a 7.7 per cent. rise in real terms over 2000–01. A consultation document which we published on 11 January sets out how the Learning and Skills Council will fund post-16 education and training from April 2001. Further Education will continue to play its key role in improving the skills base of the country.

32. Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to raise standards in the further education sector. [103710]

Mr. Wicks: Higher standards in further education colleges are being promoted through the Further Education Standards Fund which comprises £275 million over the three years from 1999–2002. The Government will also continue to promote high standards in Further Education through new legislation in the Learning and Skills Bill, which includes provision for improved post-16 inspection arrangements.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many 16 to 19-year-olds are receiving full-time education in (a) school sixth forms, (b) sixth form colleges and (c) general further education colleges. [106014]

Mr. Wicks: The latest provisional figures for 16 to 18-year-olds in full-time education in England are for end of calendar year 1998. They are shown in the table:

	Thousand
Schools[1]	394
Sixth form college	112
Other FE college	380
Total	886

[1] Includes independent and special schools

Source:

Statistical First Release 13/99: Participation in education and training by 16 to 18-year-olds in England, 1988 to 1998

Families

26. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to encourage changes in employment practices to facilitate the combination of employment with family responsibilities. [103703]

34. Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress is being made in developing a campaign to encourage changes in employment practices to bring about a better balance in people's lives between work and home. [103712]

Ms Hodge: Our campaign will be delivered in partnership with leading employers and others. It will promote good practice that both benefits the business and enables employees to balance work and home better. Details are currently being finalised.

Higher Education (External Examiners)

27. Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to assess the independence of external examiners in the higher education degree process. [103705]

Mr. Wicks: My right hon. Friend has no such plans. External examiners are contracted by, and answerable to, the autonomous higher education institutions who appoint them. The institutional reviews undertaken by the Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education look at a range of issues relating to external examiners.

Employment Service

29. Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to make it easier for firms to notify vacancies to the Employment Service and to obtain information on vacancies posted. [103707]

Ms Jowell: From Autumn 2000 the Employment Service will be introducing a new set of IT-based gateways to give its customers convenient, user friendly access to its services. Employers will benefit from having their vacancies displayed to a much wider range of jobseekers through touchscreen kiosks in Jobcentres and elsewhere, and on an Internet Jobsbank. Notifying Jobcentres will be made easier for employers by providing them with a single national telephone number and internet-based links.

New Deal (Young People)

30. Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on progress made under the new deal for young people in meeting the target of moving 250,000 young people into jobs. [103708]

Ms Jowell: With over 169,000 young people having found jobs to the end of October 1999, the trend indicates that we will meet the manifesto commitment to move 250,000 young people into work under the New Deal for Young People. The success of the New Deal so far will be built on by extending further help with basic skills and personal presentation to young people who will benefit, particularly the most disadvantaged. The 60 per cent. cut in long-term youth unemployment since May 1997 is good news for our young people and for the prosperity of the country.

Standard Spending Assessments

31. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to reform the standard spending assessment distribution per pupil to reduce disparities between local education authorities. [103709]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government announced in November 1998 a three year review in partnership with local government to look for a way of distributing revenue support grant which is simpler, more stable, more robust and fairer than the present arrangements for SSAs.

Drug Use

33. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the impact of anti-smoking and anti-illegal drugs education programmes on reducing drug use. [103711]

Jacqui Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 21 December 1999, Official Report, column 555W, in which I announced plans for a long-term study on the effectiveness of drug education.

Curriculum 2000

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of the funds allocated to schools for the implementation of Curriculum 2000 will be allocated to sixth forms with fewer than (a) 50, (b) 100, (c) 150 and (d) 200 pupils; and what will be the method of allocation. [104849]

Mr. Wicks: The Education Standard Spending Assessment for 2000–01 takes into account the estimated additional recurrent costs of successfully implementing the forthcoming reforms to post-16 qualifications in LEA maintained schools. It is for individual local education authorities to decide how to allocate resources to the schools they maintain.

New Deal (Over-50s)

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the progress to date of the New Deal for those aged over 50 years. [103702]

Ms Jowell: New Deal 50plus has made an excellent start in nine selected areas of the country. People aged over 50 who have received one of a number of benefits for six months or more are eligible for a package of advice and other support including a cash employment credit to help them back into work. By early January over 350 people had found work with the support of New Deal 50plus. Many of those finding work so far through this New Deal have been out of work and on benefits for a long time. We will launch New Deal 50plus across the whole country in April.

Ofsted Inspections

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make it his policy that Ofsted inspectors will, as a matter of course, meet the trade union representatives during an inspection. [103704]

Ms Estelle Morris: This is a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools, Chris Woodhead. I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

CABINET OFFICE

On-line Services

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps she has taken to benchmark the extent of on-line Government services in the United Kingdom against other countries, with particular reference to the US and Australia. [105187]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government are very keen to learn from good examples of international electronic service delivery. There are a number of very interesting examples of developments in this area not just in the USA and Australia, but in other countries. We intend to publish a report in the summer that will set out the results of our research and indicate what lessons we can learn from exemplars of international best practice.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps Her Majesty's Government have taken to introduce the use of the Internet for (a) VAT payment, (b) passport renewal, (c) renewal of television licenses, (d) renewal of vehicle licences and (e) Government procurement contracts; and what targets exist for Internet based transactions in these areas. [105249]

Mr. Ian McCartney: As part of our Modernising Government programme we announced in our Action Plan, published in July 1999, that we would provide six-monthly reports on our progress in delivering Government services electronically. The second of these reports was recently published on the Central Information Technology Unit (CITU) website (http://www.citu.gov.uk). Copies of these reports are available in the Libraries of the House.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Warrington, North (Helen Jones), on 17 January 2000, Official Report, column 276W.

Health Appointments

Mr. Brady: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what representations she has made to the Commissioner for Public Appointments regarding the date of publication of her report on appointments to NHS trusts and health authorities. [106018]

Mr. Stringer: None.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when she expects the Commissioner for Public Appointments to publish her report on public appointments to NHS trusts and health authorities. [106019]

Mr. Stringer: The publication of the report is entirely a matter for the Commissioner. However, I understand that a press release issued by the Commissioner's office on 17 January 2000 stated that the Commissioner will announce her findings and recommendations in early March.

Drug Misuse (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what were the numbers of registered drug misusers in Gloucestershire (a) 1997 and (b) 1999. [105552]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Addicts Index was discontinued by the Home Office in 1997. The following table shows the number of drug misusers presenting to treatment agencies in the Gloucestershire Health Authority area. Figures for the six month period ending September 1999 are not yet available.

Six month period ending	Agency episodes reported in Gloucestershire Health Authority area[1]
March 1997	28
September 1997	33
March 1998	63
September 1998	71
March 1999	96

[1] The number of agency episodes is generally higher than the number of users as a person may start an episode during the period at more than one agency

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what measures she is taking to counter the increase in numbers of people registered as drug misusers in Gloucestershire. [105551]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government's strategy for tackling drug misuse was set out in the White Paper "Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain" in 1998. The Government backed this ten-year strategy by allocating an extra £217 million for anti-drugs work as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review. This includes an additional £70.5 million for health and local authorities over the next three years for drug treatment services and £18 million to support drug prevention activities, particularly among young people. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has also announced a further £20 million for the expansion of Arrest Referral Schemes to help drug-misusing offenders obtain treatment. The Gloucestershire Drug Action Team is responsible for co-ordinating local implementation of the strategy.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Departmental Smoking Policy

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Solicitor-General what action he is taking to reduce smoking in his Department. [105793]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers' Departments have different policies on smoking in offices, reflecting the different buildings and the results of locally based decisions. The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) has a general no smoking policy. Staff may not smoke in their own rooms. The provision of a separate smoking room is a matter for managers to decide locally, taking into account the interest of staff. CPS HQ is in two buildings. In the London office, the number of smoking rooms has been reduced to one and in the York office, there is no separate smoking room. Information about the provision of separate smoking rooms in the CPS's 42 Areas is not available centrally.

The Counselling and Support Service of the CPS advertises the now annual National No Smoking Day (in their in-house publication "Inform") and offer literature to assist anyone wishing to give up smoking.

The Treasury Solicitor's Department has a policy of restricting and confining smoking to clearly defined areas. The Department's Health and Safety Advisory Committee is currently reviewing the policy and will in due course be making recommendations.

The Serious Fraud Office accommodation is non-smoking although a small smoking room is provided. Free health screening checks have recently been made available to all staff and these will make staff more aware of the dangers of smoking.

In the Law Officers' Legal Secretariat smoking is not permitted in any of the meeting rooms or the shared offices. Smoking is restricted to a smoking room. Staff are encouraged and supported in giving up smoking.

William Beausire

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Solicitor-General what reports he has received concerning the disappearance of William Beausire in Santiago in 1974; and what requests he has received for a private prosecution. [106029]

The Solicitor-General: Solicitors acting for a number of individuals applied for Law Officer consent to prosecute Senator Pinochet for offences of torture and hostage taking. The papers included reference to William Beausire. On 11 February 1999, the then Attorney-General considered the application and took advice from Treasury Counsel. The solicitors were advised that consent to prosecute was declined. The basis of that decision is that the relevant legislation is not retrospective and the material supplied by the solicitors in support of the application provided insufficient admissible evidence to justify a prosecution.

SCOTLAND

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the number of asylum seekers and refugees seeking places in Scotland. [104808]

Dr. Reid: At present, local authorities in Scotland give support to between about 150 and 200 new asylum seekers each year.

In addition, in 1999, 349 refugees from Kosovo came to Scotland under the Kosovo Humanitarian Evacuation Programme.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Switchboard

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chairman of the Information Committee when the delays in connecting hon. Members to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and other Government Departments via the House switchboard will be remedied; what the cause is of the delays; and when the House authorities became aware of the problem. [106053]

Mr. Allan: This is an operational matter falling within the remit of the Head of Telecommunications. I have therefore asked him to reply directly to the hon. Member.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 25 November 1999, Official Report, column 179W, for what reason he has failed to fulfil the undertaking to reply shortly to the letters dated 4 August, 10 September and 14 October, from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mr. Cleveland Savory. [104466]

Mr. Straw: I am sorry for the delay in replying to my right hon. Friend. I am looking into the matter and will write to him this week.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letters dated 21 September, 27 October and 2 December 1999 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Ahmed Said Mohammed Aderi. [104455]

Mrs. Roche: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary wrote to my right hon. Friend on 17 January 2000. I am sorry for the delay in replying.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letters to him dated 21 September, 27 October and 2 December 1999 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mr. Muhidin Abdul Rahman. [104454]

Mrs. Roche: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary wrote to my right hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Gorton on 19 January 2000. I am sorry for the delay in replying.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letters dated 21 September, 27 October and 2 December 1999 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mr. N. Askander. [104456]

Mrs. Roche: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary wrote to my right hon. Friend on 17 January 2000. I am sorry for the delay in replying.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire will receive a reply to his letter of 30 November on behalf of his constituent, Mrs. Djukic. [105921]

Mrs. Roche: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary wrote to the right hon. Member on 18 January 2000.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire will receive a reply to his letter of 25 November on behalf of his constituent, Mr. Reeves. [105924]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary replied to the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire's letter of 25 November 1999 on 14 January 2000.

Fathers

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment the Government have made of the impact of fathers' involvement in childrearing on the behaviour and attainment of their sons and daughters; and if he will make a statement. [104876]

Mr. Boateng: There is strong evidence that fathers play a critical role in bringing up children. Boys who have no contact with their fathers are more likely to underachieve at school. Supporting fathers is an important part of the Government's family policy. We have also provided fathers with the right to parental leave, and those in receipt of Working Families Tax Credit and some other benefits will receive income support while taking the leave to make it a viable prospect for all parents. Under the Family Support Grants programme, a number of voluntary organisations have been funded to develop work specifically with fathers.

Police

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each police authority in England the percentage of net expenditure in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99 which was funded by (i) council tax, (ii) police grant and (iii) other grants. [105258]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested on council tax and police grant, which has been compiled from the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy's Police Statistics, is set out in the table. Information on the percentage of net expenditure funded by other grants is not readily available.

Percentage of English police force net expenditure met by council tax, Home Office police specific grant and other sources, 1996–97 to 1998–99

	Council tax	Home Office police specific grant	Other sources
1996–97
Avon and Somerset	14.8	50.8	34.4
Bedfordshire	14.9	50.9	34.2
Cambridgeshire	15.7	51.3	33.0
Cheshire	16.0	52.6	31.4
City of London	n/a	48.6	n/a
Cleveland	9.9	50.3	39.7
Cumbria	14.4	50.5	35.2
Derbyshire	14.7	51.3	34.0
Devon and Cornwall	16.1	51.2	32.7
Dorset	22.1	47.9	30.0
Durham	11.4	52.7	35.9
Essex	17.4	50.3	32.3
Gloucestershire	15.2	50.2	34.6
Greater Manchester	10.0	50.4	39.6
Hampshire	16.3	51.0	32.8
Hertfordshire	17.8	51.0	31.2
Humberside	11.7	51.9	36.4
Kent	15.8	51.1	33.1
Lancashire	12.1	50.6	37.2
Leicestershire	13.6	51.0	35.3
Lincolnshire	21.1	48.5	30.3
Merseyside	10.6	50.9	38.5
Metropolitan Police	8.3	50.3	41.4
Norfolk	15.4	50.6	34.0
Northamptonshire	20.7	49.5	29.8
Northumbria	10.0	50.5	39.5

Percentage of English police force net expenditure met by council tax, Home Office police specific grant and other sources, 1996–97 to 1998–99

	Council tax	Home Office police specific grant	Other sources
North Yorkshire	17.7	52.1	30.1
Nottinghamshire	12.1	50.9	37.0
South Yorkshire	10.8	51.7	37.5
Staffordshire	14.5	50.6	34.8
Suffolk	16.2	50.9	32.9
Surrey	17.0	49.3	33.7
Sussex	17.2	50.3	32.5
Thames Valley	17.9	50.5	31.6
Warwickshire	17.0	51.8	31.1
West Mercia	17.0	50.6	32.4
West Midlands	10.1	51.0	38.9
West Yorkshire	10.4	49.2	40.5
Wiltshire	17.4	50.7	31.9
Total	12.3	50.6	37.1

	Council tax	Home Office police specific grant	Other sources
1997–98
Avon and Somerset	16.9	52.1	31.0
Bedfordshire	16.5	51.4	32.1
Cambridgeshire	17.2	50.3	32.6
Cheshire	16.7	49.1	34.2
City of London	n/a	47.5	n/a
Cleveland	11.4	49.7	38.9
Cumbria	15.2	48.7	36.1
Derbyshire	16.0	50.3	33.7
Devon and Cornwall	17.1	50.9	32.0
Dorset	23.9	48.5	27.6
Durham	12.1	48.6	39.3
Essex	18.9	50.6	30.5
Gloucestershire	17.4	51.8	30.8
Greater Manchester	11.4	49.8	38.7
Hampshire	17.8	50.1	32.1
Hertfordshire	19.3	51.0	29.6
Humberside	12.8	49.9	37.2
Kent	16.6	48.6	34.8
Lancashire	13.6	49.5	36.9
Leicestershire	14.8	49.9	35.2
Lincolnshire	20.5	46.5	33.0
Merseyside	12.2	50.7	37.1
Metropolitan Police	9.4	53.7	36.9
Norfolk	16.7	48.7	34.7
Northamptonshire	21.2	46.8	32.1
Northumbria	11.1	49.0	39.9
North Yorkshire	18.4	49.8	31.8
Nottinghamshire	12.4	49.0	38.6
South Yorkshire	11.6	47.8	40.6
Staffordshire	16.3	51.9	31.8
Suffolk	17.8	50.0	32.2
Surrey	16.6	49.3	34.1
Sussex	18.7	49.7	31.6
Thames Valley	19.5	49.7	30.8
Warwickshire	18.2	50.4	31.4
West Mercia	18.5	49.5	32.0
West Midlands	11.1	48.7	40.3
West Yorkshire	11.5	47.0	41.4
Wiltshire	20.1	53.0	26.8
Total	13.5	50.6	35.8

	Council tax	Home Office police specific grant	Other sources
1998–99
Avon and Somerset	17.0	51.6	31.4
Bedfordshire	16.9	50.6	32.6
Cambridgeshire	15.4	50.4	34.3
Cheshire	17.3	50.3	32.4
City of London	n/a	42.9	n/a
Cleveland	9.5	51.3	39.2
Cumbria	18.8	47.0	34.3
Derbyshire	17.2	50.0	32.8
Devon and Cornwall	15.8	51.7	32.4
Dorset	25.8	47.6	26.6
Durham	11.3	53.6	35.1
Essex	22.1	50.1	27.8
Gloucestershire	18.5	48.6	33.0
Greater Manchester	12.0	52.8	35.2
Hampshire	16.9	52.1	31.0
Hertfordshire	21.4	49.2	29.4
Humberside	12.2	50.3	37.5
Kent	15.6	52.3	32.1
Lancashire	13.2	50.6	36.2
Leicestershire	16.9	49.3	33.7
Lincolnshire	23.5	45.7	30.8
Merseyside	12.2	49.6	38.2
Metropolitan Police	11.9	54.3	33.8
Norfolk	17.7	51.5	30.8
Northamptonshire	20.7	48.1	31.2
Northumbria	9.8	51.0	39.2
North Yorkshire	17.3	51.4	31.3
Nottinghamshire	13.1	49.4	37.4
South Yorkshire	11.8	50.6	37.6
Staffordshire	20.5	49.0	30.5
Suffolk	17.8	51.4	30.8
Surrey	24.7	44.5	30.8
Sussex	18.2	51.5	30.3
Thames Valley	19.0	53.6	27.4
Warwickshire	21.3	50.4	28.3
West Mercia	18.8	47.8	33.4
West Midlands	10.1	51.6	38.3
West Yorkshire	11.7	51.4	36.9
Wiltshire	20.0	47.2	32.8
Total	13.7	49.0	37.3

Source:
1996/97–1998/99: CIPFA Police Statistics Actuals

Police force net expenditure, and percentage met by council tax, Home Office police specific grant and other sources, 1996–97 to 1998–99

£000

	1996–97				1997–98
	Council tax	Home Office police specific grant	Other	Net expenditure	Council tax	Home Office police specific grant	Other	Net expenditure
Avon and Somerset	22,443	77,279	52,365	152,087	25,839	79,564	47,270	152,673
Bedfordshire	8,433	28,811	19,383	56,627	9,643	30,102	18,825	58,570
Cambridgeshire	10,236	33,356	21,432	65,024	11,800	n/a	n/a	68,681
Cheshire	15,072	49,500	29,605	94,177	17,322	51,103	35,580	104,005
City of London	n/a	27,832	n/a	57,317	n/a	27,476	n/a	57,893
Cleveland	7,250	36,801	29,057	73,108	8,587	37,523	29,316	75,426
Cumbria	8,168	28,689	19,999	56,856	9,365	30,038	22,306	61,709

Police force net expenditure, and percentage met by council tax, Home Office police specific grant and other sources, 1996–97 to 1998–99

£000

	1996–97				1997–98
	Council tax	Home Office police specific grant	Other	Net expenditure	Council tax	Home Office police specific grant	Other	Net expenditure
Derbyshire	13,333	46,356	30,731	90,420	15,276	48,090	32,275	95,641
Devon and Cornwall	24,192	77,025	49,175	150,392	26,602	79,047	49,786	155,435
Dorset	14,983	32,474	20,374	67,831	16,684	33,804	19,239	69,727
Durham	7,778	35,828	24,429	68,035	9,087	36,513	29,566	75,166
Dyfed-Powys	7,901	24,241	15,727	47,869	8,244	25,198	17,510	50,952
Essex	26,275	76,161	48,976	151,412	29,817	79,694	47,976	157,487
Gloucestershire	8,874	29,316	20,230	58,420	10,223	30,371	18,039	58,633
Greater Manchester	34,075	171,881	135,214	341,170	40,354	176,078	136,887	353,319
Gwent	8,193	31,334	18,215	57,742	8,667	32,423	23,508	64,598
Hampshire	28,134	88,069	56,642	172,845	32,134	90,616	58,041	180,791
Hertfordshire	15,792	45,305	27,766	88,863	17,971	47,465	27,575	93,011
Humberside	11,653	51,746	36,320	99,719	13,622	53,034	39,564	106,220
Kent	25,477	82,584	53,564	161,625	28,909	84,673	60,629	174,211
Lancashire	19,638	81,984	60,243	161,865	22,982	83,768	62,525	169,275
Leicestershire	12,649	47,390	32,814	92,853	14,652	49,336	34,801	98,789
Lincolnshire	12,999	29,848	18,661	61,508	13,544	30,788	21,852	66,184
Merseyside	23,345	112,589	85,238	221,172	27,390	113,660	83,277	224,327
Metropolitan Police	139,075	846,762	697,344	1,683,181	157,930	900,345	618,342	1,676,617
Norfolk	11,666	38,204	25,677	75,547	13,363	39,053	27,806	80,222
Northamptonshire	12,257	29,321	17,674	59,252	13,672	30,218	20,715	64,605
Northumbria	18,644	94,046	73,720	186,410	21,630	95,656	77,806	195,092
North Wales	10,695	34,681	22,890	68,266	11,240	35,696	23,984	70,920
North Yorkshire	11,885	34,961	20,196	67,042	13,200	35,796	22,844	71,840
Nottinghamshire	13,775	57,777	42,039	113,591	14,953	59,070	46,533	120,556
South Wales	18,362	75,247	53,849	147,458	19,491	77,732	62,188	159,411
South Yorkshire	16,366	78,009	56,574	150,949	19,214	79,346	67,467	166,027
Staffordshire	15,658	54,611	37,563	107,832	18,003	57,200	35,061	110,264
Suffolk	9,892	31,033	20,038	60,963	11,327	31,858	20,491	63,676
Surrey	14,528	42,090	28,727	85,345	15,126	44,808	31,042	90,976
Sussex	25,870	75,764	48,992	150,626	29,400	78,415	49,816	157,631
Thames Valley	36,051	101,658	63,688	201,397	41,006	104,631	64,696	210,333
Warwickshire	8,111	24,725	14,850	47,686	9,270	25,725	16,008	51,003
West Mercia	17,397	51,632	33,049	102,078	19,958	53,342	34,488	107,788
West Midlands	34,210	172,343	131,439	337,992	39,829	175,339	144,961	360,129
West Yorkshire	27,479	130,447	107,307	265,233	32,458	132,526	116,761	281,745
Wiltshire	10,442	30,428	19,123	59,993	11,778	31,043	15,714	58,535
Total	819,256	3,350,138	2,420,899	6,619,778	931,562	3,438,163	2,413,070	6,870,093

£000

	1998–99				1999–2000
	Council tax	Home Office police specific grant	Other	Net expenditure	Net expenditure
Avon and Somerset	27,680	83,927	51,119	162,726	174,424
Bedfordshire	10,416	31,236	20,126	61,778	64,027
Cambridgeshire	11,286	36,974	25,172	73,432	75,363
Cheshire	18,573	53,821	34,699	107,093	111,094
City of London	n/a	25,909	n/a	60,350	58,719
Cleveland	7,734	41,731	31,830	81,295	85,397
Cumbria	11,730	29,360	21,442	62,532	64,693
Derbyshire	17,238	50,026	32,800	100,064	107,035
Devon and Cornwall	26,352	86,035	53,943	166,330	173,649
Dorset	18,838	34,838	19,441	73,117	77,749
Durham	8,427	40,023	26,223	74,673	80,712
Dyfed-Powys	10,212	26,041	13,787	50,040	56,143
Essex	34,676	78,591	43,555	156,822	171,590
Gloucestershire	11,604	30,537	20,721	62,862	65,933
Greater Manchester	42,558	186,858	124,755	354,171	387,256
Gwent	9,683	34,265	23,707	67,655	71,414
Hampshire	31,481	97,239	57,941	186,661	196,955
Hertfordshire	20,331	46,771	27,966	95,068	102,361
Humberside	13,762	56,629	42,180	112,571	114,306
Kent	27,473	91,742	56,362	175,577	186,225
Lancashire	23,370	89,725	64,215	177,310	182,679
Leicestershire	17,419	50,708	34,663	102,790	106,279
Lincolnshire	15,645	30,484	20,535	66,664	69,970

£000

	1998–99				1999–2000
	Council tax	Home Office police specific grant	Other	Net expenditure	Net expenditure
Merseyside	29,259	119,156	91,852	240,267	249,522
Metropolitan Police	204,132	931,431	580,862	1,716,425	1,840,245
Norfolk	14,236	41,512	24,795	80,543	86,870
Northamptonshire	13,859	32,266	20,932	67,057	70,432
Northumbria	20,187	104,638	80,445	205,270	213,010
North Wales	13,612	37,434	21,435	72,481	80,505
North Yorkshire	13,020	38,764	23,560	75,344	78,085
Nottinghamshire	16,680	62,799	47,539	127,018	130,173
South Wales	22,394	82,243	56,301	160,938	169,968
South Yorkshire	19,726	84,510	62,923	167,159	173,933
Staffordshire	23,861	56,924	35,446	116,231	127,472
Suffolk	11,786	33,943	20,367	66,096	70,538
Surrey	22,612	40,650	28,163	91,425	100,375
Sussex	29,406	83,399	49,042	161,847	165,804
Thames Valley	39,878	112,357	57,440	209,675	232,729
Warwickshire	11,080	26,196	14,739	52,015	56,157
West Mercia	21,382	54,354	38,019	113,755	116,490
West Midlands	37,194	190,208	141,206	368,608	380,971
West Yorkshire	32,569	142,946	102,479	277,994	288,865
Wiltshire	13,792	32,481	22,538	68,811	69,715
Total	1,027,153	3,641,681	2,367,265	7,070,687	7,485,832

Source:
1996–97 and 1998–99—CIPFA Police Statistics Actuals

Departmental Smoking Policy

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to reduce smoking in his Department. [105799]

Mr. Straw: Since 1997, smoking has not been allowed in the main central London Home Office buildings, except in designated smoking rooms. National "No Smoking" campaigns are regularly promoted by poster displays, leaflets and other publicity material. "Stop Smoking" courses and displays (organised in conjunction with QUIT) have been held to help staff who wish to give up smoking. A similar programme of events will be run this year.

Drug-related Crimes

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were committed (a) in the last 12 months and (b) in the last three years in the UK that were drug-related. [105321]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Statistical data are collected on drug offences only, not on offences which may have been committed due to drug taking. A report published in 1998 on research carried out on behalf of the Home Office by the University of Cambridge sheds light on the links between drugs and crime. Further data are currently being analysed as part of the NEW-ADAM programme for interviewing and drug testing arrestees. It is hoped to publish the next set of full results in the first half of this year.

The research undertaken so far on drug testing of arrestees, based in five locations, indicates that over 60 per cent. of arrestees had recently taken at least one illegal drug prior to arrest. Cannabis was found most often (46 per cent. of cases); heroin/opiates (18 per cent.) and cocaine/crack (10 per cent.) featured quite prominently. These findings confirm the supposition that offenders tend to be heavy consumers of drugs.

Nearly half the arrestees who reported taking drugs within the last year said that their drug misuse was connected with their offending. Among various factors, they emphasised the need for the money to buy drugs. The illegal income of arrestees who said that they had taken heroin and/or crack during the last three days was particularly high—within a range of £10,000 to £20,000 annually. This compared with £4,000 for other arrestees. Illegal income mainly resulted from acquisitive crimes against property. An estimated 32 per cent. of all illegal income was spent on purchasing heroin and/or crack cocaine.

While this study considerably advances knowledge of drugs-crime links, it will always be difficult to calculate a single percentage figure reflecting precisely what proportion of all crimes is drug-related.

Figures on drug offences in 1997 were published in April 1999 in Home Office Statistical Bulletin No. 8/99 "Drug seizure and offender statistics, United Kingdom, 1997". Figures for 1998 will be published in February 2000, copies of which will be placed in the Library.

Drug Seizures

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) heroin, (b) cocaine and (c) synthetic drug seizures have been made in the (i) last and (ii) preceding 12 months; [105322]

(2) what was the average weight of (a) heroin, (b) cocaine, (c) cannabis, (d) synthetic drugs and (e) all controlled drugs in seizures (i) in the last and (ii) in the preceding 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [105323]

Mr. Charles Clarke: In 1997, the last year for which published figures are available, the number and average weights of selected drugs seized by police and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise were as given in the table. It is not meaningful to calculate the average weight of all drug seizures. Further figures on drug seizures in 1997 were published in April 1999 in Home Office Statistical Bulletin No 8–99 "Drug seizure and offender statistics, United Kingdom, 1997". Figures for 1998 will be published in February 2000, copies of which will be placed in the Library.

Number and average weight of seizures by police and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise of selected drugs in 1997

Drug	Number of seizures		Average quantity seized
	Police	Customs	Police	Customs
Heroin	12,311	163	40 grams	10,719 grams
Cocaine	3,068	684	91 grams	3,038 grams
LSD	831	20	195 doses	86 doses
Ecstasy-type	4,996	91	93 doses	16,056 doses
Cannabis (herbal)	25,703	3,684	323 grams	6,197 grams
Cannabis (resin)	77,111	2,135	841 grams	25,304 grams
Cannabis (plants)	3,783	1	30 plants	40 plants
Amphetamine	18,429	146	128 grams	6,405 grams

Note:
"Synthetic drug" has been taken to mean the following—Amphetamine, LSD, and Ecstasy-type drugs
Source:
Home Office Drugs Research and Statistics Section

Drug Prices

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the average street prices of (a) heroin and (b) cocaine per gram in London and Glasgow in the (i) last and (ii) preceding 12 months. [105320]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The National Criminal Intelligence Service collects information on street level prices of drugs. The average prices for heroin and cocaine at the end of 1997 and at the end of 1998 were as given in the table.

Average street prices of heroin and cocaine per gram in London and Glasgow, 1997 and 1998

£

Period	London		Glasgow
	Heroin	Cocaine	Heroin	Cocaine
December 1997	60–100	60–120	60–80	50–80
December 1998	80	60–120	60–80	50–80

Note:
These prices are based on average purity levels and do not reflect the fluctuations in price which may occur within an area as the result of law enforcement action, other interruption of supply, or even over-supply. The ranges quoted for the above areas are indicative of the most typical prices paid for a one gram wrap of the drug(s). It is not possible to give wholly accurate ranges as a large number of factors come in to play. However, the prices quoted represent a reasonable average price in the areas. Drugs are frequently sold for prices outside these ranges, and prices can be inflated by cutting drugs, and by selling under measures. Prices increase when small amounts such as £10 or £20 deals are sold.
Source:
National Criminal Intelligence Service

Car Theft

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to combat car theft. [105155]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government have announced a target to reduce vehicle crime by 30 per cent. over five years and set up a Vehicle Crime Reduction Action Team to develop a strategy for achieving it. The Action Team published a report in September 1999 which set out a comprehensive strategy for achieving the target.

The main measure the Government have taken to date to tackle vehicle crime is to make available £150 million over three years for Closed Circuit Television. Improving car park security (where the 1998 British crime Survey suggests 22 per cent. of vehicle crime takes place) was a priority in Round 1.

Heathrow (CS Gas)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will request a report from the Commissioner for Police for the Metropolis on the incident in which a CS gas canister was discharged at Heathrow Airport on 18 October 1999. [105594]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Commissioner for Police for the Metropolis informs me that at 3.50 pm on 18 October, complaints were received from passengers in Terminal 1 Departures about irritation to their eyes, nose and throat. Emergency services attended and found a CS spray canister in a rubbish bin. It appears that fumes from the canister entered the air conditioning system. Nineteen people were affected by the fumes, 14 of whom were taken to Hillingdon Hospital for treatment but discharged within two hours.

The Commissioner tells me that the canister was manufactured in the United States of America, of a type commonly used there for personal safety, and that it was probably discarded by a passenger prior to being scanned before departure. The canister was taken by the police, for disposal.

Anti-social Behaviour

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was his Department's estimate of the average cost of making and enforcing an anti-social behaviour order at the time of the passage of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998; [105557]

(2) how many anti-social behaviour orders have been enforced since the passing of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 in (a) Birmingham, (b) Leeds, (c) Manchester, (d) Newcastle, (e) Liverpool and (f) Sheffield; [105558]

(3) what is the cost per order of making and enforcing an anti-social behaviour order in (a) Birmingham, (b) Leeds, (c) Manchester, (d) Newcastle, (e) Liverpool and (f) Sheffield. [105556]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The costs quoted in the Financial and Explanatory Memorandum for the Bill assumed an average additional cost of £600 per anti-social behaviour order. This took account of offsetting savings.

Records of the numbers of orders granted and their cost are not held centrally. At this stage, it is too early to say with any accuracy how much it will cost on average to make and enforce orders in these local authority areas.

After an order is made, any breach of it will be subject to criminal proceedings. Enforcement in the form of criminal prosecution for a breach has, as far as we are aware, taken place in respect of one order, in Newcastle.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent on programmes to combat anti-social behaviour in each of the last 10 years. [105708]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 18 January 2000]: The Government provided specific powers to the police and local authorities to tackle anti-social behaviour in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. Since 1999, agencies and partnerships have been able to bid for funding to help them tackle crime and disorder including anti-social behaviour under the Government's three year Crime Reduction Programme. An example of one which has done so is the Humberside police which has received £406,000 for a targeted policing project to reduce anti-social behaviour and low level criminal behaviour on five beats in Kingston upon Hull. The South Wales police have also received funding of almost £1 million for several targeted policing projects which aim to reduce crime and disorder by young people and public disorder.

The Social Exclusion Unit has chaired a Policy Action Team on Anti-Social Behaviour (PAT 8) to inform the preparation of a national strategy for neighbourhood renewal. The PAT 8 report is expected to be published in March. The Home Office, in consultation with the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, will be expected to issue guidance on tackling anti-social behaviour in accordance with the report's recommendations.

Euro 2000

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the likelihood of English football hooligans obtaining tickets for Euro 2000 via the UEFA website; and what guidance he plans to issue to English fans intending to travel on the possibility of violence resulting from such sales. [105248]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Euro 2000 organisers are satisfied that their ticketing arrangements and controls will provide spectators with a safe and secure environment in the stadia and limit the potential for a significant black market in tickets. Experience suggests that the sale of tickets to individuals is easier to control, and poses less risk than a flourishing black market. Arrangements are in place for ensuring that tickets are not sold to people who are banned from attending football matches in their home country. This includes English hooligans who are subject to a Domestic or International Football Banning Order (or Exclusion or Restriction Order prior to enactment of the Football (Offences and Disorder) Act 1999).

The Government, police and Football Association are co-ordinating their preparations and are working closely with the host countries to minimise the risk of some English fans misbehaving during Euro 2000. Guidance will be issued to all fans prior to the tournament, but the message from the Dutch and Belgian authorities is clear: "fans who behave themselves will be made welcome, those who do not will be dealt with very firmly".

DOE Building, Marsham Street

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons are for the length of time taken by the Home Office to decide whether to use the former Department of the Environment buildings at Marsham Street, London SW1. [105499]

Mr. Straw: The reason is the overriding need to examine the options carefully on the basis of which provides the best value for money.

The future of the Marsham Street site rests on the outcome of a public private partnership project to provide modern offices for Home Office and Prison Service staff. The procurement competition was restarted last October after a strategic review of overall Government Office accommodation in the Westminster area.

Proposals from the private sector, including demolition of Marsham Street, are expected shortly. Subject to their evaluation, and the continuing demonstration of value for money, I expect to be in a position to select a Preferred Bidder by mid-year. After a period of negotiations, award of contract would follow towards the end of this year.

As the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Makerfield (Mr. McCartney), informed the hon. Member in his reply of 6 December 1999, Official Report, column 395W, the Home Office has assumed management responsibility for Marsham Street pending final decisions on the future of the site.

Young Offenders

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress his Department has made in implementing those parts of sections 97 and 98 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 giving magistrates the power to remand juveniles to local authority secure accommodation; and what assessment he has made of the financial implications of implementation for local authorities. [105851]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The secure remand provisions in sections 97 and 98 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 were implemented on 1 June 1999. Magistrates can remand direct to local authority secure accommodation 12 to 16-year-old girls; 12 to 14-year-old boys; and 15 and 16-year-old boys who are assessed as vulnerable and for whom a place is identified in advance.

The Home Office refunds the estimated net costs to local authorities. These were agreed with the Local Government Association last year as between £1,745 and £2,148 per placement per week depending on area.

EU Mutual Assistance Convention

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy towards liability under the Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters. [106398]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government consider in principle that, when operating legitimately within the United Kingdom, officials from another member state should have the same liability for offences committed by them as United Kingdom officers. Officials from another member state would have no immunity from arrest and prosecution for an offence committed in the United Kingdom. Officials from outside the European Union or from a multi-national organisation would have the same liability for offences committed by them as a member of the public.

The Government consider in principle that it is the responsibility of officers causing civil damage to repair that damage. Any damage would be repaired as soon as possible, in general by the member state on which the incident took place. A claim would then be made against the law enforcement authority whose officials caused the damage.

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the 229th Justice and Home Affairs Council, with regard to the implications for the United Kingdom of the draft provisions concerning the establishment of joint investigation teams for cross-border criminal investigations. [106386]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The draft provisions concerning the establishment of joint investigation teams for cross-border criminal investigations do not have any specific implications for the United Kingdom. The provisions are designed to provide a framework within the European Union for future joint investigation teams. The provision states explicitly that it is without prejudice to existing arrangements concerning joint investigations teams such as those currently used on a regular basis by United Kingdom law enforcement authorities such as the police service and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

UN Convention on Torture

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been under the United Nations Convention on Torture since it was incorporated into United Kingdom law. [106013]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Data on court proceedings collected centrally show that, to date, one defendant was proceeded against under section 134 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988. This was in 1994.

General Pinochet

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what dates, and from which countries, applications for General Pinochet's extradition have been received. [106016]

Mr. Straw: The Spanish request for Senator Pinochet's provisional arrest was received from the Central Court of Criminal Proceedings No. 5 in Madrid on 16 October 1998. Two requests for his extradition have been received from France, on 13 November 1998 and 4 February 1999. A request for extradition was received from Switzerland on 11 November 1998, and renewed on 7 October 1999. A request for extradition was received from Belgium on 15 December 1998 and renewed in amplified form on 12 October 1999.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent requests he has received, other than from the Government of Chile, for a medical examination to be carried out on General Pinochet. [106011]

Mr. Straw: In the past few days I have received a number of requests for a medical examination of Senator Pinochet, in the context of representations made in response to my indication on 11 January that I was minded to take a decision that I will not extradite Senator Pinochet to Spain.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he received the medical report on the state of General Pinochet's health; and to whom he has sent copies. [106008]

Mr. Straw: My officials received the report on 6 January, and I received it in my weekend box on 8 January. It was sent to Senator Pinochet's legal representatives, and the Law Officers and Director of Public Prosecutions, on 11 January.

Working Partnerships (Merseyside)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the working of local partnerships in Merseyside. [106075]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There is a strong tradition of good partnership working in Merseyside. We have not made any specific local assessment of it. The strategy document 'The Government's Crime Reduction Strategy', published in November, sets out plans to encourage more effective performance by local crime reduction partnerships.

Drugs

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is able to publish the statistics for 1998 concerning drugs in Merseyside referred to in his answer of 21 October 1999, Official Report, columns 618–20W. [106105]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information on drugs referred to in my answer of 21 October to my hon. Friend will be published during February in the Home Office bulletin on Drug Seizure and Offenders Statistics. A copy of the bulletin and its associated Area and Supplementary Tables volumes will be placed in the Library in the usual way. A set of these publications will be sent to my hon. Friend on the day of publication.

Operation Care

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 24 November 1999, Official Report, column 119W, concerning multiple allegations covered by the Operation Care investigation, if he is in a position to provide the information requested. [106104]

Mr. Charles Clarke: In the time available, research has been completed in respect of one scene of investigation as part of the prosecution process. The results are shown in the table which include allegations of sexual and/or physical abuse. Although the table is produced as an illustration, it should not be regarded as representative of the entire database. In most of the other scenes of investigation, the incidence of multiple allegations is significantly lower. I am advised that it is not the intention to produce further separate tabulations as this would divert resources from the continuing inquiries.

Complainants with multiple allegations	Percentage of total complainants
Allegations against 1 person	27.67
Allegations against 2 persons	27.67
Allegations against 3 persons	20.53
Allegations against 4 persons	12.5
Allegations against 5 persons	8.03
Allegations against 6 persons	1.7
Allegations against 7 persons	0.89
Allegations against 8 persons	0.89

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals have been (a) charged and (b) arrested in connection with Operation Care; and how many individuals have claimed to have been abused and over what period of time. [106103]

Mr. Charles Clarke: A total of (a) 41 individuals have been charged and (b) 72 arrested in connection with Operation Care. I am advised that the information on the number of complainants is not readily retrievable from the database.

Charity Commission

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend the Charity Commission's role in advising charities on issues relating to corporate governance; and if he will make a statement. [105918]

Mr. Boateng: I have no plans to extend the Charity Commission's advisory role. The Commission has a statutory role to give trustees

"information and advice on any matter affecting the charity".

It gives such advice in response to trustees' requests and on its own initiative.

If there is misconduct or mismanagement by trustees, the Commission can intervene directly in the running of the charity. It has statutory powers to remove those responsible for misconduct and to protect the charity's assets from misuse.

Trustees who run their charity in accordance with its constitution and the law have full discretion over the charity's policies and activities, and are accountable for their decisions. The Commission may give advice and information, but it is statutorily debarred from acting in the administration of a charity.

Criminal Justice (Mode of Trial) Bill

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the annual number of convicted offenders who would receive a shorter custodial sentence than at present if the Criminal Justice (Mode of Trial) Bill [Lords] became law. [106091]

Mr. Charles Clarke: It is estimated that about 4,300 convicted offenders would receive shorter custodial sentences because their cases would be dealt with in the magistrates' courts, as would be more appropriate.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Debt Relief

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what budget is available from her Department to monitor and measure the bilateral debt relief initiative. [105680]

Mr. Foulkes: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 19 January 2000, Official Report, column 479W. No attempt is made to disaggregate the resources which the Department for International Development (DFID) spends on monitoring and assessment of its bilateral programme.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she expects each of the heavily indebted poor countries to qualify for bilateral debt relief; and what assessment has been made of the amount of extra money each country will have to spend on poverty eradication in the financial years (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02. [105744]

Mr. Foulkes: Decisions have not yet been taken on the amount and timing of each country's debt relief under the enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative. The policy announced by the Government on 21 December is to provide complete relief on the remaining debt owed to the UK, after HIPC debt relief has been granted. The specific amount of extra relief that each country will receive in any one year cannot be known until decisions have been taken on their HIPC debt relief. The Government are working with the World bank and the IMF to ensure that countries come forward for HIPC relief as soon as possible; our target is that three quarters of countries receive relief before the end of 2000.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development in which of the countries qualifying for bilateral debt relief her Department has a representative. [105827]

Mr. Foulkes: Countries that could be eligible for bilateral debt relief, if their governments are committed to poverty reduction, are Angola, Benin, Bolivia, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Democratic Republic of Congo, Republic of Congo, Cote d'Ivoire, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guinea, Guyana, Kenya, Liberia, Madagascar, Malawi, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Niger, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sudan, Tanzania, Togo, Uganda, Vietnam, Yemen and Zambia. The UK Government have representatives accredited to all these countries. DFID has offices in Kenya and Tanzania and is due to open one shortly in Uganda.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent representations she has made to HM Treasury regarding debt relief; and if she will place a copy of the documents in the Library. [105828]

Mr. Foulkes: My right hon. Friend has made no representations to the Treasury on debt relief. She and my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer share the strong conviction that the purpose of debt relief is to allow countries to invest in poverty reduction programmes and achieve the international development targets. They work closely on the Government's debt relief policy, and this partnership enabled us to deliver our ambitious debt relief objectives last year. In particular, they jointly and successfully pressed for the substantial improvement in the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative agreed at the Annual Meetings of the World Bank and IMF in September 1999. The revised HIPC framework not only provides faster, wider and deeper debt relief, it also increases the impact which this relief has on poverty, through the development and implementation of national poverty reduction strategies. A number of joint DFID and HM Treasury papers on debt, produced for the HIPC Review, have already been placed in the Library.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department takes in co-operation with other national Governments to measure the outcome of debt relief measures. [105830]

Mr. Foulkes: We have consistently stressed that debt relief should only be given to countries who would use it to benefit the poor. We therefore welcome the decision at the Annual Meetings of the World Bank and IMF in September 1999 to tie the debt relief provided under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative to the development of national poverty reduction strategies. In this way, HIPC debt relief provides an opportunity to renew and refocus all development efforts, including resources, on making the greatest possible impact on poverty.

To allow these strategies to be developed, and for their implementation to be monitored, it is essential that greater international efforts are made to improve the availability of good quality information in HIPC countries. In November 1999, the Partnership in Statistics for Development in the 21st Century was launched. Its aims are to provide statistical assistance to HIPC countries in producing and monitoring their poverty reduction strategies and to develop sustainable statistical capacity in the longer term, to inform and support pro-poor policy making and programme design. Our Department is devoting additional resources to achieve these aims, both bilaterally and multilaterally, working particularly with the World Bank, the UN and the IMF.

Our Department is also looking at what assistance we can provide to civil society to enable them to participate effectively in the discussions on poverty reduction strategies, and monitor their impact, for example to better understand government budgets.

Overseas Visits

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which countries she has visited in the past six months. [105690]

Mr. Foulkes: My right hon. Friend has visited the following six countries or cities in the last six months:

Countries	Dates
Bolivia—Bilateral country visit	28 August to 3 September
Washington—Annual Meetings of IMF/World bank	25 September to 28 September
New York—Speech on UN Reform	26 October
Brussels—Development Council	10 to 11 November
Brussels—General Affairs Council	15 November
Seattle—(WTO)	28 to 30 November

Indonesia

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what response her Department has made to the situation of refugees from the Maluka Islands in Indonesia. [105591]

Mr. Foulkes: Our Department is monitoring the humanitarian situation in the Maluka Islands in Indonesia, and in particular the plight of those who have been internally displaced by the conflict (estimated at 280,000 by the Government of Indonesia). We have not yet been formally approached for assistance, but will consider any appeals put to us following the UN and Government of Indonesia's forthcoming joint humanitarian needs assessment mission to Maluka.

EU Aid

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to review the efficiency of the EU aid budget. [105691]

Mr. Foulkes: We published a strategy paper for our collaboration with the European Union in December 1998 with 18 specific objectives for improving the effectiveness of the European Community's development programmes. Several of these objectives have been achieved and we continue to review the strategy regularly. We welcome the commitment of the new European Commission to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of European Community assistance but will continue to press them to establish a coherent overall development policy, to increase the proportion of European Community development assistance directed at low income and least developed countries, and to improve the management of European Community programmes.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the recent changes to the European aid programme. [105728]

Mr. Foulkes: We welcome the commitments made by the new European Commission to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the European Community's development programmes. Many of these commitments reflect positions in the strategy paper on working with the European Union published by our Department in December 1998. In particular, the Development Commissioner, Poul Nielson, and the External Relations Commissioner, Chris Patten, both called for a clearer poverty focus and for a considerable improvement in the Commission's management of its programmes. In addition, negotiations on a successor to the Lomé Convention governing the EU's relation with 71 African, Caribbean and Pacific countries due to conclude next month should adopt significant improvements in the development focus of the European Development Fund.

However, as evaluations in recent years have shown, the impact of EC programmes has been poor and major changes are needed to improve this. We are therefore continuing to press the Commission to follow through on their commitments, and notably to adopt an overall development policy, to increase the proportion of European Community development assistance directed at low-income and least developed countries, and to improve the management of European Community programmes.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the effectiveness of partnerships in developing countries to improve access to renewable sources of energy. [105164]

Mr. Foulkes: As we said in the White Paper, we believe that genuine partnerships between developing countries and the donor community are needed if poverty is to be addressed in an effective and coherent way.

With our partners in developing countries we are developing access to renewable sources of energy through our Knowledge and Research programme. As part of this process we have recently produced a guidance note on "Energy for the Rural Poor". A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

French Speaking Countries

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on progress made in advancing co-operation with French speaking countries. [105660]

Mr. Foulkes: My right hon. Friend and I, and officials in our Department, maintain close links with French speaking countries and with our French counterparts and meet regularly. As a result of a series of meetings over the last few months we are working together on a variety of development issues, including co-operation on joint evaluations of selected UK and French activities. Last year we agreed with the French and Germans a Joint Declaration on improving the efficiency and effectiveness of EU development assistance. We will continue to build on these initiatives.

Non-governmental Organisations

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the total number of non-governmental organisations supported by her Department in each year since 1 May 1997 and the amount each has received. [105729]

Mr. Foulkes: Two hundred and twenty three UN NGOs received a total of £172.34 million in the financial year 1997–98 from our Department and 209 UK NGOs received a total of £181.58 million in 1998–99.

Information on spending through overseas NGOs is not held separately, but is included in our bilateral country programme expenditure. Full details appear in "Statistics on International Development", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Information on spending through individual NGOs is not held centrally in the format requested. A full answer to the question in that format could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Export Credits

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the impact that the end of export credits for military expenditure will have on developing countries. [105826]

Mr. Foulkes: We welcome the Chancellor's announcement of 11 January of a unilateral UK ban on export credits in respect of "unproductive expenditure" to 63 of the world's poorest countries. This extends the UK's unilateral 2-year ban on export credits for unproductive expenditure to Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPCs) announced in September 1997. This is now being extended indefinitely and widened to cover all countries which are eligible to borrow from the World Bank only on highly concessional terms.

Many of these countries are currently not on cover to receive export credits from the UK. We believe that export credit should only be granted to the poorest countries only where they are used for productive purposes which enable countries to benefit from faster economic growth and increased spending on social services. There is, therefore, a positive role for export credits in these countries. ECGD support for projects in these countries will be cleared by our Department to ensure they are not "unproductive".

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what percentage of her departmental budget was channelled directly to Governments in the developing world in the last three years; [105730]

(2) what percentage of her departmental budget was spent through the private sector in the last 12 months; [105731]

(3) what proportion of her departmental budget was spent through non-Governmental organisations in the last 12 months. [105732]

Mr. Foulkes: The latest available figures are for the 1998–99 financial year. In that year, we estimate that bilateral aid expenditure was as follows:

Channel	Percentage of 1998–99 bilateral expenditure
Governments	37
Private sector	47
NGOs	16

Departmental Employees

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what changes there have been in full-time staff numbers in her Department in the UK and abroad in each quarter between 1 May 1997 and 13 January 1999; [105684]

(2) what changes there have been in Civil Service staff numbers in her Department for each quarter between 1 May 1997 and 13 January 1999. [105685]

Mr. Foulkes: Changes in numbers of full-time posts financed from DFID's running costs budget during the period May 1997 to January 1999 were as follows:

Calendar year/Quarter	Increase/decrease from the previous quarter
1997 Q3	−10
1997 Q4	+23
1998 Q1	+42
1998 Q2	+5
1998 Q3	+36
1998 Q4	+34
1999 Q1	−21
Total cumulative increase/decrease over the period	+109

Figures are based on full time equivalents and take account of UK staff only. They exclude staff appointed in country and those contracted and paid from Programme budgets. Figures for the latter could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of her officials are registered disabled. [105741]

Mr. Foulkes: Since the introduction of the Disability Discrimination Act in 1995 people formerly registered as disabled are no longer registered as such. However, 2 per cent. of my officials have declared themselves to have a disability.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of her officials are women and how many are senior civil servants. [105740]

Mr. Foulkes: Forty four per cent. of the officials in our Department are women, of who 11 are in the Senior Civil Service.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of her officials are from ethnic minorities. [105743]

Mr. Foulkes: Six per cent. of the officials in our Department are from an ethnic minority background.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many (a) Muslims and (b) Sikhs are employed by her Department. [105742]

Mr. Foulkes: We do not collect information on the religious affiliations of staff.

British Council

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many of her Department's contracts has the British Council applied for since 1 May 1997; and in each case who was successful in securing the contract. [105734]

Mr. Foulkes: The exact number of our Department's contracts for which the British Council have bid is not readily available and could only be secured at disproportionate cost. Since 1 May 1997 the British Council have been awarded 28 contracts after a competition with other bidders.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her policy towards the British Council. [105739]

Mr. Foulkes: The British Council is a key provider of services to the UK's effort to eliminate poverty and promote sustainable development. Our Department recognises its many strengths and breadth of experience and, as with other major suppliers, works through its commercial relationship with the Council to secure value for money.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development on what date the responsibility for the British Council reverted to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. [105733]

Mr. Foulkes: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) assumed full responsibility for the British Council from the start of the financial year 1998–99. From this point, the resources previously set aside in the Department for International Development's (DFID) budget for the Council's Grant-in-aid (£30 million in 1989–99) were transferred to FCO.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many contracts her Department has awarded to the British Council since 1 May 1997. [105735]

Mr. Foulkes: Since 1 May 1997 our Department has awarded 131 contracts to the British Council.

TREASURY

Childcare Tax Credits

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures the Government are taking to encourage the take-up of childcare tax credits by low income families in work. [103674]

Dawn Primarolo: The childcare tax credit can be received only as part of an award of the Working Families or Disabled Persons Tax Credits.

A public information campaign to raise awareness of the new tax credits was launched on 7 September using television and press advertising, leaflets, factsheets and posters in post offices, tax and Benefits Agency offices and in Jobcentres. Also, over 21,000 adviser organisations such as Citizens Advice Bureaux, disability groups and local authorities have been provided with their own free supply of information literature.

In addition, 9,000 community based groups were invited to nine regional roadshows in the UK, or two national roadshows in Scotland and Wales, each attended by a Minister and policy experts providing more information on WFTC and DPTC.

Correspondence

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the right hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire will receive a reply to his letter of 1 December on behalf of his constituent, Mrs. White, forwarded to him by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. [105926]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I replied on 13 January.

Tobacco Revenue

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if real terms increases in spending on the NHS that result from real terms increases in revenues from tobacco will be in addition to the planned increases in real terms spending on the NHS that were announced in the Comprehensive Spending Review. [105465]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Yes, within the total of managed expenditure determined by the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if spending on the NHS during the period of the second Comprehensive Spending Review, excluding any increases in spending that result from real terms increases in revenues from tobacco, will not be reduced in real terms. [105466]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government are committed to real terms increases in spending on the National Health Service.

Transport Spending

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what real terms increases in spending on public transport and the road network that result from real terms increases in revenues from fuel duties will be in addition to the planned increases in spending on transport announced in the Comprehensive Spending Review. [105467]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Pre-Budget Report stated that decisions on road fuel duties will be on a Budget-by-Budget basis and that if there are any real terms rises in road fuel duties, the revenues will go straight into a ring-fenced fund for the modernisation of roads and public transport. I cannot pre-judge my right hon. Friend's Budget decisions.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if spending on public transport and the road network during the period of the second Comprehensive Spending Review will be reduced in real terms excluding increases in spending that result from real terms increases in revenues from fuel duties. [105468]

Mr. Andrew Smith: No decision has been taken on the level of spending on transport over the next expenditure planning period. Allocations to 2003–04 will be announced in July 2000. Further improvement of the UK's transport system will be an important consideration for the Spending Review.

DTI Investigations

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what role his Department played in the 1998 decision to appoint DTI inspectors to investigate Hollis Industries plc; [105833]

(2) what role his Department has played in discussions with the DTI on the cost of the current investigation into Mirror Group Newspapers plc. [105834]

Mr. Timms: None.

Self-assessment

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken to ensure that no low-income and elderly pensioners are sent inappropriate self-assessment forms by the Inland Revenue in April. [105495]

Mr. Andrew Smith: In July last year, the Paymaster General announced a change to the Self Assessment system designed to take around 200,000 pensioners—up to a quarter of those sent tax returns—out of Self Assessment. The Inland Revenue continue to monitor the Self Assessment system and are committed to keeping under review the criteria for issuing tax returns.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pension Funds (Robert Maxwell)

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he has taken to recover money paid by the Exchequer to pension funds of companies connected with the late Robert Maxwell; and what assessment he has made of whether the assets of those companies have been utilised so as to yield the maximum return to those pension funds and other creditors. [104672]

Mr. Rooker: The Department regularly reviews the ability of the Maxwell pension scheme trustees to repay the £2.5 million emergency funding made available in 1992. Emergency funding is only repayable once the position of all members of the pension scheme concerned has been secured and other scheme liabilities met. To date £223,660 has been repaid. We would expect further substantial repayments of emergency funding to be made in the course of the current calendar year. The realisation of assets in Maxwell companies that have gone into liquidation is a matter for the insolvency practitioners concerned.

Maternity Pay

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the cost of extending maternity pay from 18 weeks to (a) 26 weeks, (b) 39 weeks and (c) 52 weeks. [104866]

Mr. Bayley: The information is in the table.

The additional full year cost in 2000–01 of extending statutory maternity pay at the flat rate

£ million

Option	Cost Increase
Extending statutory maternity pay to 26 weeks	140
Extending statutory maternity pay to 39 weeks	370
Extending statutory maternity pay to 52 weeks	590

Note:
These estimates are the overall costs based on the Government Actuary's Department projection of the average number of people on SMP during 2000–01 at any one time of 100,000, assume 100 per cent. take-up and the payment of £59.55 a week.

Carers Allowances

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people aged between 55 and 65 years acting as carers for relatives under the age of 50 years received (a) invalid care allowance and (b) carers premium in (i) 1998, (ii) 1988 and 9 (iii) 1978; and what is the projected figure for 2008. [105177]

Mr. Bayley: The information is not available.

Pensioners

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners in (a) Somerset and (b) Yeovil constituency who are entitled to, but not receiving, (i) income support, (ii) housing benefit and (iii) council tax benefit; how much money in each case is unclaimed; and if he will make a statement. [104711]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available. It is not possible to produce reliable estimates of numbers not claiming their entitlement at constituency level.

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners there are in (a) Somerset, (b) South Somerset and (c) Yeovil constituency; and what is the age distribution of such pensioners, indicating the total number aged 80 years or over in each of those areas. [104719]

Mr. Rooker: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Mid-1998 estimates of the number of people of pensionable age

Age	Somerset	South Somerset
60–64 (women)	13,000	3,900
65–69	25,100	7,700
70–74	23,600	7,400
75–79	20,700	6,600
80–84	12,800	4,100
85 plus	12,400	3,800
Total	107,700	33,400

1991 Census information of the number of people of pensionable age

Age	Yeovil
Pensionable age to 74	12,200
75–84	6,200
85 and over	1,600
Total	20,000

Notes:

1. Mid-1998 population estimates of the number of people of pensionable age in Somerset and South Somerset are the latest available.

2. Mid-year population estimates are not compiled by the Office for National Statistics (ONS) for parliamentary constituencies. The lowest level at which population estimates are available is the local authority level. 1991 Census information has therefore been used to answer part (c).

3. The number of people of pensionable age is not necessarily the same as the number of pensioners.

4. 'Pensionable age' represents males aged 65 and over and females aged 60 and over.

5. Population estimates are rounded to the nearest hundred persons throughout. Age groups have been rounded independently and may not sum to the totals shown.

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he is taking to improve the take-up by pensioners of (a) income support, (b) housing benefit and (c) council tax benefit; and if he will make a statement. [104712]

Mr. Rooker: An announcement of our plans to encourage pensioners to take-up their entitlement to benefits will be made shortly.

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of developing a pensioner prices index; and if he will make a statement. [104713]

Mr. Rooker: The Office for National Statistics publish a Pensioner Price Index which reflects the spending patterns of pensioners in the lowest three income deciles. The Index shows that over the last 20 years the rate of price inflation for this group of pensioners is significantly below that of other groups and, if used as a basis for uprating, basic Retirement Pension would be £12.30 lower than it is now. Therefore we have no plans to adopt the Pensioner Price Index as part of the annual review of benefit levels.

Benefit Payment Methods

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate he has made of the savings to the Exchequer from the proposed payment of benefits into bank accounts rather than through post offices from 2003 onwards; what is the estimated saving in each year from 2003–04 to 2008–09; what assumptions about the amount of business which will be transferred from post offices to banks underlie these figures; and if he will make a statement; [104715]

(2) if he will make a statement on the timescale over which it is proposed to move towards paying benefits directly into bank accounts rather than through post offices; and if he will make a statement; [104750]

(3) if he will make it his policy to delay beyond the planned date of 2003 the proposed payment of benefits directly into bank accounts rather than through post offices; and if he will make a statement. [104714]

Mr. Rooker: We have decided to change the way people are paid benefit, from the current paper based methods to automated credit transfer (ACT). This reflects the fact that customers increasingly choose to be paid this way. The move is expected to generate £640 million savings per year from 2005.

Those benefit recipients who wish to collect their benefit in cash at post offices will continue to be able to do so.

It is planned to move to ACT as the normal method of payment for all benefit customers. The move will begin in 2003 and end in 2005.

Pensioners (Income Support)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 11 November 1999, Official Report, column 801W, what level of take-up of income support for pensioners is assumed in current forecasts of expenditure. [105316]

Mr. Rooker: Current forecasts assume that expenditure as a result of increased take-up by pensioners will increase by £43 million over the period 1999–00 to 2001–02. This estimate will need to be reviewed in the light of our plans for a national programme to increase pensioner take-up.

Correspondence

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the right hon. Member for North West Cambridgeshire will receive a reply to his letter of 2 December on behalf of his constituent, Mrs. Wilson. [105925]

Mr. Darling: I replied to the right hon. Member on 19 January 2000.

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the right hon. Member for North West Cambridgeshire will receive a reply to his letter of 30 November on behalf of his constituent, Mr. Hausell. [105923]

Mr. Darling: A reply will be sent to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Deregulation

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what orders his Department has made under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 in each year since 1994; and what plans it has to introduce such orders. [106083]

Mr. Bayley: This Department has made no orders to date to remove regulatory legislation but we will continue to look for opportunities to use such orders where we can.

We do, however, plan to bring forward an order shortly which will enable our private and voluntary sector partners to play a full role in the delivery of the new ONE service which is currently being piloted.

We have brought forward a range of deregulatory measures on pensions in the Welfare Reform Act 1999 and the current Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Departmental Productivity

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to increase the productivity and reduce the running costs of his Department. [103843]

Mr. Morley: Delivering efficient and modern public services is a key part of the Government's agenda for improving productivity. Greater efficiency is being sought therefore within the public sector to ensure that the most effective results are obtained from available resources. The Ministry's Public Service Agreement (PSA) includes a range of measures for taking this forward, both within the Ministry itself and in other public sector bodies.

Those measures which will help raise the Ministry's own productivity are as follows:

(a) Better Quality Services

The Ministry will regularly and systematically review services and activities over a five year period in line with Government policy as set out in the handbook "Better Quality Services". A review programme has been developed, setting out those services that will be reviewed each year with the intention to review at least 60 per cent. of services by March 2003.

(b) Fraud

The Ministry will continue to apply controls to detect and prevent fraud and other irregularities under the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) farm-based schemes. The Ministry has designated a fraud contact officer to promulgate ministry policy and to give specific advice to managers.

(c) Sickness Absence

In line with the central initiative to improve attendance, an internal audit of the sickness absence recording and monitoring systems has been completed and targets set for reducing absence.

(d) Electronic Government

The Ministry will exploit opportunities for electronic communications and will increase the proportion of business undertaken electronically to contribute to the Government's commitment to a target of at least 25 per cent. for electronic dealings with the public by 2002.

(e) Procurement

The Ministry will combine central responsibility for the management of procurement with devolution of operational procurement where appropriate; develop strategies for delivering best whole life cost solution, optimising operational savings and minimising the administrative costs of procurement; improve information and procedures, and education and training; and undertake benchmarking using maturity profile analysis techniques.

(f) Asset Sales

The Ministry will dispose of most of its surplus land and buildings by April 2000.

(g) CAP Administration

The Ministry aims to increase the productivity of CAP administration by developing, testing and implementing an integrated IT system for administering CAP schemes by March 2002.

(h) Efficiency

The Ministry will also pursue efficiency gains, and will continue to develop better measures of efficiency and extend these to cover a wide range of departmental activities and also the activities of its executive agencies.

The Ministry's running costs provision for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 is set out in its PSA. The productivity measures listed above will enable the Ministry to increase the quantity and quality of its outputs delivered by its running costs expenditure over this period.

Property Sales

Mr. Breed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what dates the properties at (a) Towy Avenue, Llandovery, Dyfed, (b) Station Road, Honeybourne Avenue, Evesham, Worcestershire, (c) New Street, East Shilton, Hinckley, Leicestershire and (d) 357 Station Road, South Leigh, Oxfordshire, were offered for sale; and what is the current position with regard to the disposal of each property. [104685]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is set out as follows:

Property	Current position
Towy Avenue, Llandovery, Dyfed	First offered for sale in June 1997. This property was sold in November 1999.
Station Road, Honeybourne, Evesham, Worcestershire	First offered for sale in August 1997. This property was sold in December 1997.
New Street, Earl Shilton, Hinckley, Leicestershire	First offered for sale in February 1996. Little interest from potential purchasers. Offer to purchase has recently been accepted and legal documentation is now being prepared.
Station Road, South Leigh, Oxfordshire	First offered for sale in November 1994. The property was sold in January 1998.

Fisheries

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what date the six and 12 mile derogations will expire. [105540]

Mr. Morley: Article 6 (1) of Council Regulation (EC) 3760/92 authorises member states to retain restrictions on access by foreign fishing vessels within six and twelve mile limits until 31 December 2002.

The Commission is due to report to the Council by 31 December 2001 on the operation of the Common Fisheries Policy. The Council, acting by Qualified Majority, will then take any necessary decisions, including on the future of the Article 6 provisions, by 31 December 2002. There is clear support for the maintenance of restrictions on access within the six and twelve mile limits. I expect those restrictions to continue after 2002.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his policy towards the encouragement of development of INFOMAR Systems Fishcast and Fishtrade, with particular reference to a possible pilot study on the United Kingdom. [105666]

Mr. Morley: The INFOMAR systems were developed through an EU funded research project. The work led to the development of a software package which facilitates the dissemination of information and provides an ability to trade while at sea. The Government welcome the development of methods of improving communications and the trade in fish. The use of electronic information systems is one area which is being considered for funding under the Agenda 2000 fisheries aid programme.

Rats

Ms Walley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of dwellings in England with rat infestations were (a) not being treated and (b) had not been reported to the local authority on the most recent date for which figures are available. [105484]

Mr. Morley: Details of the treatment of rat infestations are in the recent MAFF report "Rodent infestations in domestic properties in England", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. The figures reflect the situation at a specific point in time and would not include cases where treatment was planned but had not yet started.

Information was not collected on the proportion of rat infestations which had not been reported to the local authority.

Ms Walley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the findings of the (a) 1996 English House Condition Survey and (b) commensal rodent survey undertaken by his Department and the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health in 1993, on the number and proportion of dwellings in England affected by rat infestations. [105481]

Mr. Morley: The results of the 1996 survey show that the general level of rodent infestations in England is low. The figures are lower for both rats and mice compared to the 1993 survey, although the results are not directly comparable due to different sampling methods. Full results of the 1996 survey are in the recent MAFF report "Rodent infestations in domestic properties in England", a copy of which together with the Ministry's News Release, has been placed in the Library of the House.

The Prevention of Damage by Pests Act 1949 requires local authorities to take such steps as may be necessary to keep, so far as is practicable, their district free of rodents and empowers them to require occupiers of land to take the necessary action to remove rodents from their land.

Pig Sector

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the additional costs to the pig sector as a result of the Welfare of Animals at Slaughter Act 1991 and the Welfare of Livestock Regulations 1994 since they came into force on 1 January 1999. [105435]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 January 2000]: The cost to the pig sector of the prohibition on sow stalls and tethers introduced through the 1994 Regulations will have included capital costs prior to the prohibition's entry into force on 1 January 1999 as well as ongoing management costs since. These were all covered in a Compliance Cost Assessment which was placed in the Library of the House at the time the Regulations were made: we have not assessed the costs since 1 January 1999.

The Welfare of Animals at Slaughter Act 1991 does not contain provisions imposing costs on the pig sector.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will seek the introduction of a European ban on stall and tether rearing of pigs and the introduction of standard animal welfare regulations in the European Union. [105029]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 January 2000]: We shall continue to press the EU Commission to bring forward their overdue proposals for updating the existing rules on pig welfare. The Commission's expert Scientific Veterinary Committee—on whose report the Commission's proposals must be based—was published in October 1997 and confirms our view that stalls and tethers for sows are unacceptable.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ban the import from the EU of pork reared in stalls and tethers. [105028]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 January 2000]: Under the Treaty of Rome it is illegal to ban imports of meat on animal welfare grounds. We are actively seeking to improve welfare standards at EU and Council of Europe level.

Sugar

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if it is his policy that reforms of the Sugar Protocol and Lomé Convention should include measures to provide support for traditional suppliers of cane; and if he will make a statement. [105493]

Mr. Foulkes: I have been asked to reply.

Negotiations on a successor to the Lomé Convention between the European Union and the 71 African, Caribbean and Pacific countries are due to conclude next month. We expect the present trade arrangements to be extended during a transition period from 2000 to 2008. After that date, new trade arrangements will enter into force. The Sugar Protocol will roll forward unchanged but will be reviewed before the end of the transition period. We would assess the need for support measures at the time of, and within the context of, the Review of the Sugar Protocol. We recognise the importance of the sugar trade to the economies of many ACP States, and our Department has commissioned research work to consider the consequences of possible reforms of the Sugar Protocol. The work is at an early stage, but it clearly indicates that some countries will face adjustment problems. In the time up to the Review it remains vitally important that the ACP continue their own efforts to improve their competitiveness.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Transport Costs (EU)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress made by the European Commission's Committee of Experts on transport costs. [105608]

Mr. Hill: I have been asked to reply.

As envisaged in the Commission's White Paper on fair payment for infrastructure use, a committee of Government experts on charging for the use of transport infrastructure was set up to advise the Commission. The committee has been supported by a group of independent experts. The experts have produced two reports, one on estimating transport costs, and one on options for charging users directly for transport infrastructure operating costs. These reports cover, among other things, methods of calculating and charging for transport infrastructure costs, congestion and scarcity costs, accident costs and environmental costs. The committee has also acted as a forum for the exchange between member states of research and other information on infrastructure charging issues.

Burma

Mr. Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation in Burma. [105278]

Mr. Battle: There has been no improvement in the political and human rights situation in Burma. The UK remains committed to pressing for change and for dialogue between the regime and democratic leaders, including ethnic minorities. We take every opportunity to do so: for example, we support the EU Common Position on Burma (a package of measures against the regime) and have co-sponsored UN resolutions—most recently at the UN General Assembly in November—critical of the regime.

Pakistan

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy toward arms sales to Pakistan. [105184]

Mr. Hain: There has been no change to our policy of considering export licence applications for Pakistan on a case-by-case basis against our national criteria and those in the EU Code of Conduct for Arms Exports, and in the light of the statement on 10 July 1999, made to the House by my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) following the Pakistani and Indian Nuclear tests.

Child Labour

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the International Labour Organisation on child labour; and which issues were discussed during 1999. [105511]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary had talks with the Director General of the International Labour Organisation (ILO), Juan Somavia, in London last September. They discussed a range of issues including: measures to address child labour, modernisation of the ILO, and co-operation between the ILO, the World Trade Organisation and the International Financial Institutions.

Mr. Somavia also had talks with my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and the then Minister for Employment, Welfare to Work and Equal Opportunities, who confirmed the Government's intention to ratify ILO Conventions 138 and 182, both relating to child labour.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what Ministers from his Department have visited Sri Lanka since 1 May 1997. [105597]

Mr. Hain: The late Minister of State, Derek Fatchett, visited Sri Lanka from 10–11 November 1998. I am planning to visit Sri Lanka later this year.

Subcontinent (UK Entry Applications)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the average waiting time for interview at British High Commission offices in Pakistan, India and Sri Lanka for a person seeking (a) permanent settlement in the United Kingdom, (b) to attend further and higher education courses and (c) visits to members of their family living in the UK in the last 12 months. [105510]

Mr. Vaz: Waiting times for settlement and non-settlement interviews fluctuate over the year in response to seasonal pressures. The following figures were the waiting times for settlement interviews at the end of December 1999 in the countries concerned:

Weeks

Post	Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4
India
Bombay	0	5	5	5
New Delhi	0	7	20	25
Pakistan
Islamabad	9	39	44	50

See explanation of Q1-Q4 system below

The visa sections at Calcutta, Colombo, Karachi and Madras have a standard single queue for all settlement applications. Their current waiting times are:

Calcutta: currently no queue

Colombo: 8 weeks

Karachi: 14 weeks

Madras: 5 weeks

Queue 1–4 system:

Queue 1—Right of Abode cases and Dependant Relatives over 65;

Queue 2—Spouses and Children under 18;

Queue 3—Fiance(e)s and other First Time Applicants; and Queue 4—Re-applicants.

The statistics held centrally on applicants visiting the United Kingdom, either as family visitors or as students, are not held in such a way as to provide figures for parts (b) and (c) of my hon. Friend's question. A comprehensive reply could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Most visit visa applications are straightforward and are normally processed within 24 hours. Many student applications are also processed without delay. However, where a more detailed examination of the application is required, the applicant (student or visitor) will be asked to return at a later date for interview. The waiting times for such interviews (known as Tier 3 interviews) in the countries in question at the end of December 1999 were as follows:

India

Bombay: No queue

Calcutta: No queue

Madras: 2 days

New Delhi: No queue

Pakistan

Islamabad: 5 days

Karachi: 22 days

Sri Lanka

Colombo: 22 days.

I shall be visiting the Sub-Continent shortly to view these arrangements. I have asked the Entry Clearance Manager in Islamabad to see me within the next two weeks.

Cyprus

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent steps he has taken to encourage (a) the Greek Government, (b) the Turkish Government and (c) the Government of Cyprus to resolve the issue of Northern Cyprus. [105159]

Mr. Vaz: The UK is playing a leading role in support of UN efforts towards a settlement in Cyprus. We warmly welcomed the launch of UN proximity talks in New York on 3 December preparing for the negotiation of a comprehensive settlement. We strongly endorse the UN Secretary-General's intention to continue these talks early this year. We are in frequent contact with the Cypriot parties and with the Governments of Greece and Turkey and are encouraging them to co-operate with the Secretary-General constructively and flexibly.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the timetable for the accession of Cyprus to the European Union. [105158]

Mr. Vaz: Cyprus is making good progress in its EU accession negotiations, which we welcome. Twenty-three of the 31 chapters of the EU's legislation and practice have been discussed to date and 11 provisionally closed—the most of any candidate. The remaining chapters should be opened this year. It is not yet possible to predict when any of the candidates will join the EU. The faster Cyprus implements EU legislation the sooner it will be in a position to join.

The Helsinki European Council stated that a political settlement would facilitate, but not be a precondition for, Cyprus' accession. We warmly welcomed the launch of UN proximity talks in New York in December, preparing for the negotiation of a comprehensive settlement in Cyprus, and strongly endorse the UN Secretary-General's intention to continue these talks early this year.

Iran

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the affiliations and roles of Ghobad Mansour-Beigi, Reza Molai and Alireza Ali-Hosseini; and what assessment he has made of these reports. [105238]

Mr. Hain: According to Iranian press reports, the three people named in my hon. Friend's question were killed during a terrorist attack by the Mujaheddin-e-Khalq Organisation in the border town of Ilam on 9 January. I condemn this latest act of terrorism by the Mujaheddin-e-Khalq Organisation.

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he discussed events in the province of Ilam in Iran when he met the Iranian Foreign Minister. [105237]

Mr. Hain: During his recent visit Foreign Minister Kharrazi mentioned an attack by the Mujahedeen-e-Khalq Organisation (MKO) in which several people were killed. Our Embassy in Tehran reported separately that the city of Ilam had been hit by a mortar attack on 8 January which killed three people and injured five. The MKO were reported locally as having claimed responsibility. The UK Government condemn this terrorist attack as we condemn all acts of terrorism, wherever they occur.

Indonesia (Arms Embargo)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the current EU arms embargo on Indonesia covers (a) all arms licences and (b) all military items still awaiting delivery to Indonesia. [105899]

Mr. Battle: As my hon. Friend the Minister of State, the Member for Neath (Mr. Hain) told the House on 17 January 2000, Official Report, column 325W, the EU arms embargo is no longer in effect and, we will therefore consider any future applications strictly according to an agreed criteria, bearing in mind the current and future situation in Indonesia.

General Pinochet

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library (a) notes of meetings and (b) copies of correspondence with the Government of Chile concerning the (i) proposed extradition and (ii) medical condition of General Pinochet. [106009]

Mr. Battle: It is not our practice to make publicly available the contents of either notes of meetings or copies of correspondence with other Governments. The details of contacts of this nature are confidential to the Governments concerned.

Chile

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests have been made to the United Nations Secretary General since September 1973 for an international judicial process on human rights in Chile; and if he will make a statement. [106012]

Mr. Battle: We cannot answer for other Governments, NGOs or individuals, and we are not aware of any requests from HMG. The information required to provide an accurate answer is not centrally held, and to do so would incur disproportionate costs.

Honorary Consuls

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the serving honorary consuls who are British citizens giving (a) the posts in which they serve, (b) the date of their appointment and (c) the honours that have been awarded to them since they took up their appointments. [105895]

Mr. Hain: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those properties held by his Department and agencies responsible to him which are (a) wholly and (b) mainly unoccupied at present, giving locations and when they became so unoccupied in each case. [105302]

Mr. Battle [pursuant to his reply, 19 January 2000, c. 478W]: An administrative error led to an omission in my answer of 19 January to the hon. Member. The correct answer should read as follows:

FCO policy is that no property should be left vacant unless this is unavoidable in the short-term or there are good reasons for retention (such as a break in diplomatic relations, as in Tripoli, Baghdad and Kabul). Properties which are surplus to our requirements are disposed of at an appropriate time (we had the former Residence in Jakarta on the market, but withdrew it when the market collapsed).

HEALTH

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to publish guidelines for the treatment of prostate cancer in the NHS. [101494]

Yvette Cooper: We are determined to improve the prevention, detection and treatment of prostate cancer. The work programme for the National Institute for Clinical Excellence was announced on 4 November and includes the development of clinical guidelines on urological cancers—which will incorporate prostate cancer. This will be the first in the series of guidelines on cancers to look at cancers which affect mostly men. It is expected that the detailed work on this cancer guideline will take until at least the end of 2000.

"The Widening Gap"

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the recent publication, "The Widening Gap", by Bristol University, on inequalities in health provision. [101689]

Yvette Cooper: I was interested to see this report which suggests that there are a number of key determinants which impact on health and health inequalities.

The former Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson), appointed Sir Donald Acheson to carry out an inquiry into health inequalities. Sir Donald's report, published in November 1998, described the socio-economic determinants of health inequalities and made recommendations which contributed to the development of our health strategy, "Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation". A key aim of our strategy is to reduce health inequalities and narrow the health gap.

In "Reducing Health Inequalities: An action report" published with "Saving Lives" we identified some of the key actions we are taking across Government to tackle health inequalities.

Power Lines

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of recent evidence linking radiation from power lines and cancer. [101690]

Yvette Cooper: The results of the first part of the United Kingdom Childhood Cancer Study were published in The Lancet in December. This is the largest UK study on childhood cancer to date. It started in 1992 and has examined a number of factors which might be implicated in childhood cancer. The present study provides no evidence that exposure to magnetic fields associated with the electricity supply in the UK increases risks for childhood leukaemia, cancers of the central nervous system, or any other childhood cancer. Also published in December were two studies in the International Journal of Radiation Biology. In these studies, scientists from Bristol University report observations of increased deposition of natural radionuclides near power lines. From these measurements it is inferred that other pollutants in the environment, such as car exhaust fumes, will behave similarly and this may be a cause of childhood leukaemia. The National Radiological Protection Board Advisory Group on Non Ionising Radiation have been reviewing the research in this area and will be reporting soon.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations the Government have received on Professor Henshaw's report on High Voltage Power Lines and Public Health; and if he will make a statement. [101622]

Yvette Cooper: Professor Henshaw's two reports on "High Voltage Power Lines and Public Health" were published in The International Journal of Radiation Biology on 2 December 1999. The Department has received a number of telephone inquiries from members of the public about the report since its publication.

We are aware of concerns about possible health effects from electromagnetic fields and are supporting some of Professor Henshaw's research among a number of projects within the Department's Radiation Protection Research Programme.

The Department will consider the results of this study in the context of other work in this area and has asked for views from the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB), and its Advisory Group.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of (a) Professor Henshaw's report and (b) that of the Electricity Association about the health aspects of overhead line transmissions; and if he will make a statement. [102134]

Yvette Cooper: Two reports from Professor Henshaw were published in December in the International Journal of Radiation Biology. These studies reported observations of increased deposition of natural radionuclides near power lines. From these measurements it is inferred that other pollutants in the environment, such as car exhaust fumes, will behave similarly and this may be a cause of childhood leukaemia. Also published in December were the results of the first part of the United Kingdom Childhood Cancer Study in The Lancet. The costs of this study were met by leukaemia charities, Government and the electricity supply industry. It is the largest UK study on childhood cancer to date. The study provides no evidence that exposure to magnetic fields associated with the electricity supply in the UK increases risks for childhood leukaemia, cancers of the central nervous system, or any other childhood cancer. The National Radiological Protection Board Advisory Group on Non Ionising Radiation have been reviewing the research in this area and will be reporting soon.

Artificial Sweeteners

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received in relation to (a) Aspartame and (b) other artificial sweeteners; and if he will make a statement. [102309]

Yvette Cooper: In the last 12 months the Department has received 32 representations in relation to Aspartame and six representations in relation to other artificial sweeteners. These raised issues about possible health effects of artificial sweeteners. The Department receives advice on these matters from the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment.

Fluoridation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his policy on fluoridation of drinking water. [102351]

Yvette Cooper: In our White Paper, "Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation", which was published on 6 July we announced that we have commissioned an up-to-date expert scientific review of fluoride and health. If the review confirms that there are benefits to dental health from fluoridation and that there are no significant risks, we intend to introduce an obligation on water companies to fluoridate where there is strong local support for doing so.

NHS Direct

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of NHS Direct calls received each day between 27 December and 12 January were from people complaining of influenza symptoms; and what percentage of these callers were instructed to go to hospital. [105679]

Ms Stuart: NHS Direct received in total 194,521 calls between 27 December and 12 January. Indications are that between 30 per cent. and 40 per cent. of calls during this period related to influenza symptoms. During this period the overall proportion of callers who were advised to attend their accident and emergency department was 6 per cent. and 2 per cent. of callers were diverted to the 999 service.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if a person who has been instructed to go to hospital by NHS Direct and is found to have influenza is included in the official influenza figures. [105678]

Ms Stuart: Influenza activity in England is monitored through the Royal College of General Practitioners sentinel surveillance scheme. This records the number of first visits to a general practitioner with influenza-like illness. Other respiratory illnesses prevalent at this time of year are recorded separately.

This system cannot measure the real incidence of influenza since it is restricted to those people who visit their general practitioner. Patients of the type referred to are therefore not included. This year a major campaign was run to encourage people to choose their own remedy, to consult a pharmacist and to use NHS Direct, as alternative sources of advice.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses working for NHS Direct were, in their previous employment, working full-time in the NHS. [105672]

Ms Stuart: NHS Direct accounts nationally for 600 (whole-time equivalent) nurses, a small number against the overall size of the nursing workforce, which is 332,000 (whole-time equivalent) in England (as of 30 September 1998). Specific information, such as the previous employment of NHS Direct nurses is not collected centrally. NHS Direct has deliberately recruited nurses from a wide range of different backgrounds: hospitals, primary care, outside the NHS. Some will be from a hospital background but others will be from primary care or will have been working outside the NHS. NHS Direct has also provided opportunities for the disabled and those who had to stop working in the ward\hospital because of other injuries. Many staff who work for NHS Direct do so on a part time basis allowing them to combine working for NHS Direct with other clinical duties.

Accident and Emergency Units

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many major accident and emergency units have their full complement of consultants; and how many of these units have consultants on duty 24 hours a day. [105518]

Ms Stuart: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Influenza Vaccination

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will assess the benefits of introducing a programme of systematic vaccination of those health care workers working with the elderly. [105637]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 18 January 2000]: United Kingdom Health Ministers are advised on immunisation policy by the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI). JCVI reviews its recommendations, including immunisation of healthcare workers, annually.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons NHS trusts were advised to vaccinate staff on the grounds of reducing absenteeism over the Millennium holiday. [105632]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 18 January 2000]: Decisions on whether to offer routine vaccinations to staff and, if so, to which groups of staff, were taken at local level by National Health Service trusts as a part of their winter planning arrangements.

Trusts were advised through a Health Service Circular issued on 24 September 1999 to consider the possible impact of staff absence through illness at a time of exceptional pressure over the extended Millennium holiday period.

In reaching their decisions, trusts were also reminded of the possible risks associated with immunisations.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the uptake of influenza vaccine has been among (a) the over 75s, (b) the over 65s, (c) the under 5s and (d) medically vulnerable groups in the last twelve months. [105634]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 18 January 2000]: The most recent estimates of vaccine uptake were published in Health Trends (1998; 30: 51–55). Copies are available in the Library.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason an age limit of 75 years was chosen for a pro-active campaign of influenza vaccination among the elderly. [105639]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 18 January 2000]: People aged 75 and over without underlying risk conditions and not living in residential care were added to the individuals recommended for flu immunisation in 1998. This followed advice from the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation. The rationale was set out in a letter from the Chief Medical Officer and Chief Nursing Officer (PL/CNO/98/4, PL/CNO/98/6), copies of which are available in the Library.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what measures he will take to increase the levels of influenza vaccination among (a) those aged over 75 years, (b) those aged under 5 years and (c) those with medical conditions making them particularly susceptible to influenza; [105640]

(2) what plans he has to increase the level of public awareness about the uptake of the influenza vaccine. [105633]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 18 January 2000]: Influenza immunisation aims to reduce the morbidity and mortality due to flu by immunising those people most likely to have a severe or complicated illness due to flu. Immunisation is, therefore recommended for all those in whom the disease is more likely to be a serious illness, that is people:

with chronic respiratory or heart disease or renal disease, diabetes and those who are immunocompromised living in long stay residential accommodation aged 75 and over.

In advance of this year's winter season the Department was involved in a range of activities to publicise the need for flu immunisation. GPs were reminded of the importance of flu immunisation in last August's CMO Update and about ordering Department of Health leaflets and posters on influenza and influenza immunisation.

Research has shown that the single most important factor affecting whether an individual is immunised or not is whether the doctor or nurse recommended it.

The Chief Medical Officer launched Flu Awareness Week at a press conference in October 1999. This annual event results in widespread media coverage and gives a useful opportunity to get key messages across to the general public. Flu Awareness Week is organised by the Association for Influenza Monitoring and Surveillance (aims) who organise media based awareness work each autumn. Other organisations, such as Help the Aged, support this activity as well as producing their own leaflets for the public.

Those in the risk groups were encouraged to come forward for immunisation through placed articles in the general and women's press and through relevant representative groups. This year's "Keep Warm, Keep Well" campaign encourages older people to keep healthy this winter and included information on influenza and immunisation. Help The Aged's "Senior Line" was briefed on the importance of influenza immunisation. As part of the work on Flu Awareness Week, (aims) worked with various representative groups such as the British Lung Foundation, the British Heart Foundation, to promote awareness.

The Department will review how well these activities worked to increase awareness of influenza immunisation and will plan next winter's activities to increase uptake of vaccine on the basis of the lessons learned from this winter's activity.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doses of the vaccine for the flu are currently available. [105629]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 18 January 2000]: Manufacturers advise that they had over half a million doses of flu vaccine available during the week ending 16 January 2000.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what alternatives to the current influenza vaccine are available to those with an egg allergy. [105638]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 18 January 2000]: Flu vaccine should not be given to individuals with known anaphylactic hypersensitivity to egg products—simple allergy to egg is not a contraindication. For these small number of individuals who are also in high risk groups amantadine hydrochloride may be prescribed prophylactically by the person's doctor where it is clinically necessary.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the extent of regional variations in the availability of the influenza vaccine. [105630]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 18 January 2000]: None. Influenza immunisation is primarily delivered through general practice. General practitioners order vaccine direct from the manufacturers according to their requirements.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the funding available for an influenza vaccination programme. [105631]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 20 January 2000]: The Department will be reviewing this winter's influenza immunisation programme before planning next winter's activity. We will consider any implications for funding the programme in the light of this review.

NHS Dentistry

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he expects to announce the Government's plans to improve the availability of NHS dentistry in (a) Somerset and (b) England as a whole; [104720]

(2) if he will make a statement on the availability of NHS dentistry in the Yeovil constituency; [104721]

(3) what assessment he has made of the areas of England where it is most difficult to register as an adult with an NHS dentist; and if he will make a statement. [104718]

Mr. Hutton: The Government are aware of the current problems experienced in accessing dental services, which we inherited from the previous Government. Access problems for adults are most acute in the south and west of the country, including the Yeovil constituency. We have taken positive steps to address these problems. The Investing in Dentistry initiative saw a £10 million investment in dentistry, including eight approved bids in Somerset, one of which was in Yeovil, while the personal dental services pilots have allowed for local flexibility in service provision. £203,000 has been awarded in grants in Somerset which will allow for 18,750 additional registrations.

We are also piloting dental access centres, providing fast and convenient access to dentistry in areas with acute access problems. Two dental access centres opened last year, and a further six will come on line this winter. On 5 January my noble Friend Lord Hunt of Kings Heath, the Under-Secretary of State, announced 34 successful expressions of interest for a third wave of dental access centre pilots. A proposal from Somerset has been successful at this stage. These potential centres must now submit a full business case, and if successful, will be operational by the end of the year.

More will be done to address problems of access in the NHS dental strategy. The strategy, to be published shortly, will set the future pace and direction of development of dentistry in England.

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of (a) adults and (b) children were registered with an NHS dentist in each English county in (i) 1985–86, (ii) 1990–91, (iii) 1995–96, (iv) 1996–97, (v) 1997–98, (vi) 1998–99 and (vii) 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement; [104716]

(2) what was the total number of (a) adults and (b) children registered with an NHS dentist in each year since 1985 in (i) Somerset and (ii) Yeovil constitutency; and if he will make a statement. [104717]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

NHS Car Parks

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS hospital trusts levy charges for visitor car parking; what is the annual income raised by such charges; and if he has circulated advice to trusts on the waiving of charges, including penalties, in cases of emergency or on compassionate grounds. [106015]

Ms Stuart: The number of National Health Service trusts charging for visitor car parking is not collected centrally. The amount raised from car park charges is not separately identified within trust financial returns. Advice issued to trusts in 1996 on car parking charges suggested that special consideration needed to be given to the needs of some categories of visitors and staff.

WALES

EU Structural Funds (Alyn and Deeside)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with other Departments concerning the award of EU Objective 2 status to the constituency of Alyn and Deeside; and if he will make a statement. [105553]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department worked closely with other Government Departments and with the National Assembly for Wales on the UK's proposed Objective 2 map for the period 2000–06. This was approved last month by the European Commission. The Welsh map was unchanged from the UK Government's proposals of 8 October, a copy of which I sent to all Welsh MPs and MEPs.

Objective 1

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the (a) European Commission and (b) UK representative office in Brussels on spending on the Objective 1 programme in 2000 and the criteria for Wales taking up its full entitlement of such funding; and if he will make a statement. [106062]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I visited Brussels last month and met officials from the UK Permanent Representation to the European Union and from the European Commission to discuss a range of issues. However, the negotiations with the European Commission on the content of the Objective 1 plan, including the spending profile, are a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if funding for expenditure on Objective 1 in Wales in the financial year 2000–01 is additional to the budget provided for the National Assembly for Wales. [106082]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Funding for the European Union grant element of Objective 1 expenditure in Wales will be from within the National Assembly's budget. For the financial year 2000–01 the Assembly estimates Objective 1 expenditure of around £25 million, which I am assured can be met from within the Welsh Block.

Wales Office Staff

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list (a) the number of staff and (b) their grades in the Wales Office in London. [106068]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office in London currently has the following staff:

Grade	Number
Senior Civil Service	2
Band F	4
Band E	1
Band D	5
Band C	7
Band B	7
Band A	6
Drivers	2
Special Adviser	1

The Wales Office also employs the following staff who are based in Cardiff:

Grade	Number
Special Adviser	1
Band G	1

Engagements

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the official engagements of the Under-Secretary of State in the Wales Office for the period 10 to 23 January. [106067]

Mr. Paul Murphy: During this period, my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State attended four Cabinet Committee meetings; various meetings with officials in Cardiff and officials in London and attended to other ministerial business. On 18 January he wound up the opposition debate on the Health Service, on 19 January he answered questions on the Floor of the House; and on 21 January he will meet with local councils to discuss the Local Government Bill and will meet with National Power at Deeside.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 342

SESSION 1999–2000

10th January—20th January 2000

Printed indexes to Hansard

The volume index is one of three printed indexes to Commons Hansard produced from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS). It contains references to material in the bound volumes of Hansard. The other indexes produced are:

- The fortnightly index to Hansard. This covers the same date range as the volume index but references are to the column numbering in the daily parts and weekly edition of Hansard.
- The sessional index to Hansard. This contains references to material in the bound volumes for a whole session.

Indexes on the Parliamentary website

Fortnightly, volume and sessional indexes covering material from the beginning of the 1999/2000 session will also appear on the Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk with links to the full text of Hansard.

SCOPE

The indexes include entries covering:

- The content of all material recorded in Hansard, including debates, procedural motions and questions.
- The names of all Members contributing to the Parliamentary business recorded in Hansard.
- The names of some types of Parliamentary business whenever they occur in Hansard. These are 'Ministerial statements', 'Business statements', 'Opposition days' and 'Estimates days'.

ARRANGEMENT

- All headings are in one word-by-word alphabetical sequence, with Members' contribution entries distinguished from other entries by italics.
- Where a Member contributes to Parliamentary business and is the subject of Parliamentary business there are separate contribution and subject entries, the subject entry coming first.
- Entries beginning 'Mac' and 'Mc' are sorted in one sequence as 'Mac'.
- 'St', when abbreviated for Saint, is filed as 'Saint'.
- Numbers are filed as if spelt out, e.g. '10 Downing Street' as if 'Ten Downing Street'.

HEADINGS

Choice of headings

- Specificity—Entries summarise the overall content of a debate or question as specifically as the various POLIS thesauruses allow. For example, Education, Higher education, Universities or the name of a particular university is used depending on the breadth of the item.
- Name headings—Specific entries are included for the names of people, places, institutions, organisations, committees, programmes, initiatives, publications and legislation when these constitute the overall subject of an item.
- Organisations and subjects—Organisation entries are preferred for material about the general performance, administration and staffing of an organisation (for example, United Kingdom Passports Agency, Standards). Subject entries are preferred for what organisations do as part of their duties (for example, Passports, Fees and charges).

Geographical coverage

- Subject headings—Subject headings are assumed to refer to the whole of England, Great Britain or the United Kingdom unless otherwise stated.
- Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales—Material relating to the whole of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales is indexed under these headings.
- Places within the UK—Material about specific towns, areas and institutions is entered under the name of the specific town, area or institution.
- Foreign countries—Most material relating to foreign countries is collected under the name of that country. Some additional material may be found under the names of—groups of countries, areas within countries, geographical features, place names associated with particular issues, politicians and heads of state, international bodies, and institutions and companies operating in those countries.
- EC/EU material—General material about the European Communities and European institutions as bodies is entered under 'European Communities' and 'EC institutions'. Organisational material about specific communities and institutions is entered under the name of the body, for example 'European Coal and Steel Community' or 'European Parliament'. Material about what the Communities and institutions are doing or propose to do is entered under various subject headings beginning 'EC' such as 'EC environmental policy'.

Parliamentary material and business

- Material about Parliament—This is indexed under 'Parliament', the names of the two Houses, the 'Palace of Westminster' and parts of the Parliamentary estate (such as 'Portcullis House').
- Committees—Material about committees is indexed under 'Committees', types of committee (such as 'Select committees') and the names of individual committees (such as 'Home Affairs Select Committee').
- Parliamentary proceedings/procedures—Material discussing these is indexed under the specific type of proceeding (such as 'Parliamentary questions' or 'Oral questions'), procedure (such as 'Calling of Members') or issue (such as 'Unparliamentary expressions').
- Legislation—Entries for Parliamentary proceedings on bills and statutory instruments are entered under their titles. Where the lead word of the bill or statutory instrument does not provide a full or clear indication of the subject there are additional subject entries when the bill or instrument is debated. For example, debates on the 'Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill' have entries under 'Pensions' and 'Social security benefits' as well as under the title of the Bill.
- Members' names—These are given in the form by which the Member prefers to be known.
- Speaker and Chair—Contributions by the Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Contributions from the chair during Committees of the Whole House are brought together under 'Chairman of Committee of the Whole House'. Significant rulings and statements (as opposed to routine comments) are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements' in both cases.

Guidance on headings

- Cross references—'See' references indicate all the material has been entered under another heading. 'See also' references indicate that additional information may be found under another heading.
- Concept thesaurus—A copy of the subject thesaurus to POLIS, listing the concept entries used in the index, is available on the Parliamentary website. A hard copy is available from the Head of the POLIS Unit, House of Commons Library, 1 Derby Gate, London, SW1A 2DG (020 7219 6456).

REFERENCES

- References in the indexes are to columns rather than pages.
- References to debates, but not questions, are accompanied by the date of the item.
- There are separate sequences in Hansard for the material taken on the floor of the House, Westminster Hall sittings and written questions:
  - References consisting of a number by itself indicate material taken on the floor of the House.
  - References ending in 'wh' indicate Westminster Hall sittings.
  - References ending in 'w' indicate written questions.
- References under all headings except the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in one numerical sequence irrespective of whether the material is taken on the floor of the House, is discussed at a Westminster Hall sitting or is a written question.
- References under the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in numerical sequence under the following headings:
  - Debates etc. (which includes interventions and points of order as well as significant contributions to debates);
  - Sittings in Westminster Hall (covering all debates held as part of the Westminster Hall sittings); and
  - Questions (which includes written, oral and private notice questions).

ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are used in connection with the progress of bills:

- 1R=First reading
- 2R=Second reading
- Com=Committee stage
- Rep=Report stage
- 3R=Third reading
- res=resolution
- amendt(s)=amendment(s)
- *=matter taken formally without debate or division.

Parliamentary background

- The Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk contains a range of information about Parliament and the full text of some Parliamentary papers and proceedings including Hansard.
- Information on current Parliamentary business is provided in the House of Commons Information Office Weekly Information Bulletin, available on the website and from The Stationery Office (020 7873 8499).
- Further information on Parliamentary proceedings and procedures is available from the House of Commons Information Office (020 7219 4272).

Access to work programme
43–4w

Accident and emergency departments
Manpower 585w

Accidents
Aviation 447–8w
Chinook helicopters 98w
Railways 451w
Roads 209–10w

Achondroplasia
73–4w

Acid rain
Fish 133–4

ACP countries
Sugar 577w

Acquittals
321w

Administration of justice
Northern Ireland 266w, 445–6w
Young offenders 388w

Administration Select Committee
(19.01.00) 945

Advisory services
Family planning 63w
Fertility 63w

Aerials
Planning permission (18.01.00) 190–8wh

Africa
Armed conflict 407w, 678–80
Overseas aid 183–4w

Agriculture
see also Farmers
154w
Marketing 239w
Small businesses 415–7
Trade agreements 412–3
Wales 494w

AIDS
Developing countries 676–7

Ainsworth, Mr Peter
Questions
Airport tax 231–2w
British Council, English language 224w
Fireworks, Millennium 248–9w
Further education, English language 223–4w
Millennium Exhibition 212w
Royal Opera House 385w
Tax allowances, Art works 104w
Wembley Stadium 23w

Air force
Insignia (19.01.00) 250–7wh
Manpower 405–6w

Air traffic
211w

Air traffic control
357–8w

Airbus Military
284w

Aircraft carriers
Deployment 96–7w

Airport tax
231–2w

Airports
Noise (19.01.00) 867–9
Wales 830

Alcoholic drinks
Abuse 190–1w
Smuggling 351w

Alder Hey Children's Hospital
62w

Alexander, Mr Douglas
Questions
Drugs, Smuggling 322w

Algeria
Refugees 214–5w

Allan, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1084–7
Millennium compliance (20.01.00) 978–9
Post offices (17.01.00) 622–3
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 444–9, 457, 470–1, 477
Questions
House of Commons, Telephone systems 546–7w
New deal schemes, Scotland 966–7

Alliance and Leicester plc (Group Reorganisation) Bill (HL) 1996/97
Debates etc.
Rep* (13.01.00) 405
3R* (19.01.00) 827

Alternative energy
(10.01.00) 118–26
Developing countries 565w

Alyn and Deeside
EC grants and loans 589w

Alzheimer's disease
Aricept 197w

Ambleside
Bypasses 362w

Amess, Mr David
Questions
EC grants and loans 108w
In vitro fertilisation, Gender selection 136w

Ammunition
406w
Falkirk 90w
Uranium 98w, 279–80w, 282w

Ampthill
Closed circuit television 543–4

Analysis of Costs and Benefits (European Union Membership) Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
1R (20.01.00) 996

Ancillary staff
Compensation 227w

Anderson, Mr Donald
Questions
Pinochet, Augusto 280
Transport, Wales 830–1

Anderson, Janet, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Culture Media and Sport
Questions
Digital broadcasting 350w
Film 344w
Film, Cartoons 343–4w
Film, Exports 343w
London freedom pass 385w
News at Ten 351w
Television, Licensing 348w, 474w, 537w
Tourism 387w
Tourism, North West region 344–5w, 387w
Tourism, Task forces 25w

Angola
Sanctions 678–9

Animal experiments
167–8w, 465w
Primates 467–8w

Animal welfare
Greyhound racing 464–5w
Pigs 576–7w
Poultry 100w

Anniversaries
Queen 268w

Antenatal care
63w

Antiaircraft missiles
84w

Antisemitism
Russia 409w

Antisocial behaviour orders
556–7w

Appropriations in aid
354w

Archaeology
Seas and oceans 348w

Archer of Weston-super-Mare, Lord
Shares 520w

Areas of outstanding natural beauty
363w

Argentina
Falkland Islands 683

Aricept
Alzheimer's disease 197w

Armed conflict
85w
Africa 407w, 678–80
Chechnya 326–7w, 408w, 684
Kosovo 493–4w
Sri Lanka 328w, 416w

Armed forces
Brunei 84–5w
Colchester 282w
Criminal investigation 490–1w
Deployment 283w, 493w
East Timor 84–5w
Falkland Islands 207w
Germany 280–1w
Health 277w
Hospitals 280–1w, 492–3w
Housing 285w, 399–402w
Indonesia 281–2w
Intimidation 402–4w
Iran 324w
Kosovo 489w
Legal aid 83–4w
Ministerial statements (12.01.00) 287–301
Orthopaedics 284w
Telecommunications 282w
Training 93–4w
Uniforms 284–5w

Armed Forces Discipline Bill (HL) 1999/2000
Questions
490–1w

Arms trade
Developing countries 677
Export controls 28w
Export credit guarantees 379–80w
Indonesia 673
Iraq 478w
Pakistan 578w
Russia 410w
Turkey 28w, 483w

Armstrong, Rt Hon Hilary, Minister of State for Local Government and Housing, Department of the Environment Transport and the Regions
Questions
Best value 130–1
Compost 119w
East of England Development Agency 113w
Land Settlement Association, Compensation 8w
Millennium Exhibition 212w, 255w
Non-domestic rates, Electricity generation 9–10w
Regional planning and development, West Midlands 143
Single regeneration budget, West Midlands 110–1w
Sleeping rough 112w

Army Foundation College
84w, 285w

Arrests
Greater London 368w
Millennium 368w

Art works
Tax allowances 104w

Arthritis
Medical treatments 145w

Artificial sweeteners
Health hazards 584w

Asbestos
254w
Developing countries 263–4w
Imports 380w
Industrial injuries disablement benefit 499–500w
Navy 94w, 166w

Ashdown, Rt Hon Paddy
Questions
Avon and Somerset Constabulary, Manpower 307w
Dental services 588w
Pensioners, Social security benefits 572w
Pensioners, Somerset 571w
Police, Finance 302–8w
Police, Manpower 307–17w
Police, Somerset 317w
Post offices, Social security benefits 519w
Post offices, Somerset 519w
Social security benefits, Automated credit transfer 572w
State retirement pensions 572w

Ashton, Mr Joe
Questions
Axgro Foods, Regional selective assistance 27w
Food, Regional selective assistance 27w
Regional selective assistance 208w

Assembly Cabinet
see Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales

Assisted areas
Dumfries and Galloway 260w

Astley Hall Museum
387–8w

ASTOR system
395–6w

Asylum
see Refugees

Atherton, Ms Candy
Debates etc.
Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Nancekuke (18.01.00) 818–22
Sittings in Westminster Hall
EC grants and loans (11.01.00) 12–5wh
Questions
Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Nancekuke 91w, 125–6w, 488w
Education, Ombudsman 435w
Lorries, Safety 361–2w
Skin piercing 53w
Winter fuel payments 228w

Athletics
349w, 385–7w
Lancashire 386w
Twickenham 349–50w

Atkins, Charlotte
Questions
Child Abuse in North Wales Judicial Inquiry 330w

Atkinson, Mr David
Debates etc.
Millennium compliance (20.01.00) 979–80

Atkinson, Mr Peter
Questions
Cyprus 407–8w

Attendance allowance
229w, 429w

Austin, Mr John
Questions
Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Correspondence 122w

Automated credit transfer
Social security benefits 333w, 432w, 499w, 572w

Automatic train protection
246w

Aviation
Accidents 447–8w
Safety 357w

Avon
Health services (19.01.00) 946–54

Avon and Somerset Constabulary
Manpower 307w

Axgro Foods
Regional selective assistance 27w

Ayrshire
472w
Coal 109–10w

Babies
HIV infection 190w

Badgers
see Bovine tuberculosis

Baker, Norman
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 939
Post offices (17.01.00) 645–9
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1013–4
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Garages and petrol stations, Contracts (12.01.00) 82–7wh
Questions
Beta carotene 418w
Empty property, Dept of Social Security 501w
Empty property, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 446–7w

Baker, Norman—continued
Empty property, Dept of Trade and Industry 521w
Empty property, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 478w, 582w
Empty property, Home Office 468–71w
Empty property, Ministry of Defence 490w
Empty property, Ministry of Health 512w
Empty property, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 499w
Empty property, Treasury 512w
Lindane 212w
Navy 285w
Pesticides, Health hazards 417–8w
Pesticides, Labelling 482w
Ritual slaughter 152–3w
Royal parks, Demonstrations 346–8w
Television, Licensing 474w
Waste disposal, East Sussex 111–2w

Baldry, Mr Tony
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 164, 198–200
Questions
Millennium compliance, Dept of Social Security 67w
Turkey, EC enlargement 668

Balkans
Reserve forces 207–8w

Ballard, Jackie
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 934

Ballistic missiles
Iran 410–2w, 475w

Bank services
Overcharging (19.01.00) 220–40wh
Post offices 523w

Banks, Mr Tony
Questions
Voting methods 301w

Barber, Michael
48–9w

Barnes, Mr Harry
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 939
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 315, 317–21, 326, 329, 336, 378, 388–91, 393–6, (13.01.00) 437–40, 447–8, 465–7, 513–6, 518, 523–4
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1008, 1011, 1046, 1048–53, 1056–8
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 854
Questions
Disabled, Financial services 42w
India, Electronic funds transfer 326w, 415–6w
Lifelong education, Trade unions 969
Representation of the People Bill 1999/2000, Regulatory impact assessments 546

Barnet
Health services 138w, 236w

Barnsley
166w
Magistrates 506w

Barron, Mr Kevin
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 721–5, 737
Influenza (10.01.00) 26
Questions
Exports, Tobacco 352w

Barron, Mr Kevin—continued*
Smuggling, Tobacco 453w

Battle, Mr John, Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office*
Questions
British dependent territories, Homosexuality 221w
Burma 578w
Chile, Human rights 581w
Diplomatic service, Contracts 328–9w
Drugs, Smuggling 322w
Empty property, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 478w, 582w
Falkland Islands 408w
Hamas 411w
Indonesia 408w
Indonesia, Sanctions 581w
Iran, Terrorism 476w
Latin America, Drugs 408w
North Korea, Diplomatic relations 326w
Peru, Human rights 321–2w
Pinochet, Augusto 581w
Terrorism 413w
USA, Terrorism 477w

Bayley, Mr Hugh, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Social Security*
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 602–7
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Poverty, Greater London (11.01.00) 26–9wh
Questions
Achondroplasia 73–4w
Attendance allowance 229w
Carers' premium, Scotland 185w
Deregulation, Dept of Social Security 573w
Disability living allowance 68w, 429w
Disabled, Dept of Social Security 69–70w
Disadvantaged 65–6w
Ethnic groups, Dept of Social Security 70w
Incapacity benefit 9–10, 19–20, 226–7w
Incapacity benefit, Medical examinations 10
Industrial injuries disablement benefit 430w
Industrial injuries disablement benefit, Asbestos 499–500w
Industrial injuries disablement benefit, Pneumoconiosis 230–2w
Institutional care 229–30w
Institutional care, Income support 229w
Invalid care allowances 76–7w, 570–1w
Invalid care allowances, Scotland 73w
Maternity pay 570w
Mental health services, Fees and charges 424w
Mortgage relief 185w
Poverty, Children 69w
Rough sleepers initiative 16
Severe disablement allowance 1–3
Social security benefits, Carers 5–7, 65w
Social security benefits, Medical examinations 69w
Welfare state, Voluntary organisations 15–6

BBC Monitoring
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 286w

Beacon schools
Information technology 960–1

Beard, Mr Nigel
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 132–5wh

Beckett, Rt Hon Margaret, President of the Council and Leader of the House of Commons*
Debates etc.
Business statements (19.01.00) 938–45, (20.01.00) 984–96
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1070
Millennium compliance, Ministerial statements (20.01.00) 975–83
Questions
Business questions 425–36
Business statements 423–36
Reform of the House of Lords Royal Commission 417w

Beef
153w, 203w
Exports 241w

Beef Bones (Amendment) (England) Regulations 1999
Questions
153w

Beer
Excise duties 393w

Beggs, Mr Roy
Questions
Incinerators, Environmental health 132–3
New deal schemes, Scotland 966
Royal Ulster Constabulary, Kosovo 34w

Beith, Rt Hon A J
Debates etc.
Criminal Justice (Mode of Trial) Bill (HL), Points of order (20.01.00) 1089
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1069, 1075–7
Questions
Coal, Government assistance 486w
Post codes, Correspondence 208w
Pre-school education, Northumberland 45w
Schools, Northumberland 45–6w

Belfast Agreement
179–80w

Bell, Mr Martin
Debates etc.
Gregory, Sandra (17.01.00) 663–4
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 82–5
Questions
Chinook helicopters 286w
Fares, Concessions 209w

Benefits Agency Security Investigation Service
Manpower 80–1w

Benn, Mr Hilary
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 766–9
Questions
Burma 578w
Criminal proceedings, Disclosure of information 1w
Stalking 20w, 464w
Students, Fees and charges 147–8w
Youth Support Service 269w, 273w, 389w

Benn, Rt Hon Tony
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 734
Unparliamentary expressions, Points of order (18.01.00) 687
Questions
Kosovo, Peace keeping operations 684–5
Pinochet, Augusto 283–4

Bennett, Mr Andrew F
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Landlord and tenant, Housing benefit (12.01.00) 105–7wh, 109wh
Questions
Compost 119w
Environment Agency, Recruitment 249w
Incinerators, Environmental health 131–2
Land reclamation programme, North West region 160–3w
Lighting, Government departments 119w
M60 528w
Mersey Basin 244w
Plumbing 245w
Recycling 163–4w
Water supply 160w

Bercow, Mr John
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 944
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 157, 161, 172
Health services (18.01.00) 703–4, 709–10
Line of route (18.01.00) 804
Ministerial statement intervention (10.01.00) 30
NHS, Points of order (20.01.00) 997
Oral question time intervention (12.01.00) 268
Pensioners (17.01.00) 562, 569, 578, 585–6
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 36
Post offices (17.01.00) 615, 632
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 310, 312–6, 319, 324, 331, (13.01.00) 478, 480
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 874, 877–8, 884–5, 898, 904, 907–9, 914, 916, 919–20, 924–5
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1000–1, 1004–5, 1007, 1010–5, 1021
Questions
Climate change levy 116w
Common fisheries policy 575w
Dairy farming 239w
Disadvantaged 66w
EC budget, Fraud 514w
EC common foreign and security policy 488–9w
EC transport policy 577–8w
Economic and monetary union 392w
Electoral systems, Reform 296w
EU Justice and Home Affairs Council 559w
European Convention on Human Rights 420
European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters 558–9w
European Court of Justice 415w
Fisheries 575w
Francophone countries, Foreign relations 565w
Immobilisation of vehicles 550–1
Intergovernmental Conference 2000 416w
Lifelong education, Trade unions 969
Lone parents, Ripon 276
Maintenance, Children 17
Military exercises, Food supply 489w
New deal for lone parents 274w
New deal for young people 171–3w
New deal schemes 274–5w
New deal schemes, Research 48w
Russia, Antisemitism 409w
Serious Fraud Office 219–20w
Small businesses, Wales 497w
Taxation, EC action 514w

Bercow, Mr John—continued
UK membership of EC, Exhibitions 415w
Unemployment, Young people 201–2w

Bermingham, Mr Gerald
Debates etc.
Business question time intervention (19.01.00) 942
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 349–51, 358–9
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 880, 882, 884–5, 887, 889
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1027, 1036, 1038, 1041

Berry, Mr Roger
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 581–3, 592
Questions
Access to work programme 43–4w

Best, Mr Harold
Questions
Labour mobility 540w

Best value
130–1

Beta carotene
418w

Biggin Hill Airport
360w

Biosafety Protocol
245–6w

Blackman, Mrs Liz
Questions
Africa, Armed conflict 407w
Crimes of violence, Northern Ireland 182w

Blair, Rt Hon Tony, Prime Minister, First Lord of the Treasury and Minister for the Civil Service
Questions
Ayrshire 472w
Barnsley 166w
British Irish Council 472–3w
Building societies 843
Charter of Fundamental Rights (EU) 267–8w
Children, Poverty 272–3
Committee on Standards in Public Life 167w, 472w
Council of Europe, UK delegations 1w, 222w
EC defence policy 537–8w
EC institutions, Reform 842
Homosexuality, Schools 839–40
Ilisu dam 268–9w, 538w
Income tax 840
Intelligence and Security Committee, Public appointments 221–2w
Intergovernmental Conference 2000 416w
Iran, Foreign relations 416–7w
Labour Liberal Democrats Joint Consultative Committee 110w, 166–7w, 473–4w
Labour Party 273
Lone parents, Ripon 276
Minimum wage 273–4
Modernising government programme 221w
National identity 271–2
New deal schemes 267–8
Newspaper press, Prime Minister 537w
NHS 268–72, 275–6, 836–9, 842
Nurses, Pay 835–6
Official engagements, Prime Minister 473w
Official hospitality, Prime Minister 268w
Parliament, Nurseries 840–1
Part-time employment 844

Blair, Rt Hon Tony—continued
Performance and Innovation Unit 266–7w
Performance and Innovation Unit, Post offices 267w
Pigs 842–3
Proportional representation 274–5
Queen, Anniversaries 268w
Referendums, Finance 841–2
Royal Ulster Constabulary 843–4
Timms, Stephen, Members' interests 269w
Tyson, Mike 271, 417w
VAT, Housing 272

Blears, Ms Hazel
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 755
Questions
Regional planning and development 112w

Blizzard, Mr Bob
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 692, 704
Questions
Burglary, Crime prevention 298w
Council of Europe, UK delegations 222w
Intelligence and Security Committee, Public appointments 221–2w
Pensioners, Income 68w
Roads, Accidents 209–10w
Welfare state, Voluntary organisations 16

Block grant
Wales 835

Blood transfusions
Jehovah's witnesses 510w

Blunkett, Rt Hon David, Secretary of State for Education and Employment
Questions
Children, Day care 963–4
Class sizes 956–7
Lifelong education, Trade unions 967–9

Blunt, Mr Crispin
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 742
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Aerials, Planning permission (18.01.00) 190–3wh
Questions
Pakistan, Democracy 674
Public safety radio communications project 539–40

Boateng, Rt Hon Paul, Minister of State, Home Office
Debates etc.
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 111
Questions
Arrests, Millennium 368w
Avon and Somerset Constabulary, Manpower 307w
Charity Commission 561w
Court welfare officers, Training 217w
Crime, Lancashire 319w
Criminal proceedings, Disclosure of information 295–6w
Doncaster Prison 457w
European Convention on Human Rights 21w
Illegal immigrants, Greater London 454w
Immobilisation of vehicles 550–1
Judiciary, Training 553
Offenders, Electronic tagging 373–4w
Parental responsibility 548w
Police, Finance 302–8w
Police, Hillingdon 320w
Police, Manpower 307–17w
Police, Somerset 317w
Police, Vehicles 319w

Boateng, Rt Hon Paul—continued
Police Complaints Authority, Administrative delays 320–1w
Prison Service, Higher civil servants 456–7w
Prisoner escapes 123w
Prisoners, Body searches 453–4w
Prisoners, Mentally ill 537
Prisoners, Self-mutilation 454w
Prisons, Contracts for services 456w
Prisons, Discipline 453w
Prisons, Drugs 17–9w, 453–4w
Prisons, Overcrowding 537–9
Prisons, Wales 537–8
Probation and aftercare 216w
Psychology, Correspondence 320w
Road traffic control, Lorries 318–9w
Sudbury Prison 217–8w
Witnesses, Protection 552–4
Young offenders, Prisoners 14w
Young offenders, Secure accommodation 13w

Body, Sir Richard
Questions
Ports 449w

Body searches
Prisoners 453–4w

Bomb disposal
Mines 183w

Borrow, Mr David
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 295–6
Questions
Countryside stewardship scheme 239w
ONE programme 66w

Boswell, Mr Tim
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 159–60, 171, 186–9
Questions
EC enlargement 406–7w
Further education 541w
NHS trusts, Parking 588–9w
Outdoor education 389w
Schools, Buildings 962–3
Sixth form education, Finance 272w
Students, Fees and charges 40w
Youth Support Service 269w

Bottomley, Mr Peter
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 516
Questions
Drugs, Homelessness 176w
Hearing impaired, Health services 421w
Housing, West Sussex 4w
Metropolitan Police, Disciplinary proceedings 124w
Newspaper press, Prime Minister 537w
Police, Disciplinary proceedings 16w
Prisons, Drugs 17–9w
Students, Fees and charges 44–5w

Bottomley, Rt Hon Virginia
Debates etc.
Health services, Surrey (13.01.00) 530, 532
Influenza (10.01.00) 33
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Gatwick Airport, Noise (11.01.00) 30–4wh

Bovine somatotropin
100w

Bovine spongiform encephalopathy
Disease control 154w

Bovine tuberculosis
Disease control 239w

Bradley, Mr Peter
Debates etc.
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 37, 46, 61, 91, 93–100
Questions
Bus services, Rural areas 118w
Transport, Rural areas 245w

Bradshaw, Mr Ben
Questions
Burglary 298w
EC institutions, Voting methods 671

Brady, Mr Graham
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 790–1
Health services (18.01.00) 723
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 308, 335, 338
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 904, 907, 916, 922, 927–8
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1000
Questions
Business questions 433–6
Cancer, Health services 55–6w
Christie Hospital Manchester 236w
Fluoride, Water supply 187w
Hospitals, Admissions 63w
Intensive care, Hospital beds 289w
NHS, Public appointments 544w
Playing fields 115w
Prostate cancer 582w
Royal Marsden Hospital 140w

Brake, Mr Tom
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 564
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Warren, Gordon (12.01.00) 90–3wh, 95–6wh
Questions
Exhaust emissions, Pollution control 141–2
Peat, Dept of Health 196w
Prisons, Overcrowding 537
Recycling 7w

Brand, Dr Peter
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 712, 714, 743
Pensioners (17.01.00) 575–6, 592
Questions
Artificial sweeteners, Health hazards 584w
Kosovo, Armed forces 489w

Brazier, Mr Julian
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 295
Armed forces, Points of order (17.01.00) 555
Health services (18.01.00) 695, 701
Immigration (Port of Entry) (Amendment) Bill, 1R (18.01.00) 689–90
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 43, 50–1
Questions
Computers, Dept of Social Security 67w
Social security benefits, Reform 18–9

Breast cancer
Essex Rivers Healthcare NHS Trust 234–5w
Screening 54w, 234–5w

Breed, Mr Colin
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Swimming pools, Safety (18.01.00) 177–9wh, 181wh
Questions
Agriculture 154w
Ammunition, Uranium 98w, 279w
Beef 203w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Disease control 154w
Commonhold 119w
Meat Hygiene Service, Information technology 154w
Organic farming 412
Property transfer, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 502–4w, 575–6w
Secured car parks scheme 122w
Slaughterhouses, Closures 419w
Slaughterhouses, Inspections 155w
Slaughterhouses, Regulation 154w
Teachers, Pay 970

Bridges
Philippines 209w

Brinton, Mrs Helen
Questions
Blood transfusions, Jehovah's witnesses 510w
Cervical cancer, Screening 54w
Community safety local partnerships 544
Environmental impact assessment 4w
Folic acid 55w
Home energy efficiency scheme 8w
Mental health 198w
Mentally ill, Drugs 197w
Roads, Safety 143–4

British Council
567–8w
Contracts 567–8w
Developing countries 479w
English language 224w

British dependent territories
Homosexuality 221w

British Energy
Redundancy 109w

British Irish Council
200–1w, 472–3w

British Railways Board
Assets 253w

British Sky Broadcasting
522w

Brooke, Rt Hon Peter
Debates etc.
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 68, 74–7
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 855
Questions
Business questions 428
Labour Party 273

Brown, Rt Hon Gordon, Chancellor of the Exchequer*
Questions
Commemorative coins, Queen 392w
Commemorative coins, Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother 103w

Brown, Rt Hon Nicholas, Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food*
Debates etc.
Unparliamentary expressions, Points of order (13.01.00) 408
Questions
Agriculture, Small businesses 415–7
Agriculture, Trade agreements 412–3
Beef 153w
Beef, Exports 241w

Brown, Rt Hon Nicholas—continued*
Pigs 238w, 405–8

Brown, Mr Russell
Questions
Developing countries, AIDS 676
Hill livestock allowances 410

Browne, Mr Desmond
Questions
Intellectual property, Developing countries 256–7w
World Trade Organisation, Developing countries 483w

Browning, Mrs Angela
Debates etc.
Millennium compliance (20.01.00) 977
Post offices (17.01.00) 618, 626–33, 643–4, 648, 650
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Post offices (12.01.00) 63–5wh
Small businesses (20.01.00) 268–9wh, 271–7wh, 286–7wh, 303–4wh
Questions
Archer of Weston-super-Mare, Lord, Shares 520w
SMART awards 109w

Bruce, Mr Ian
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 153, 163, 195, 197, 220–3, 236
Post offices (17.01.00) 620–1, 629
Westminster Hall sittings, Points of order (12.01.00) 302
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Garages and petrol stations, Contracts (12.01.00) 78–9wh, 84wh, 88wh
Questions
Acid rain, Fish 134
Block grant, Wales 835

Bruce, Mr Malcolm
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 751, 761–6
Gregory, Sandra (17.01.00) 659–63
Questions
East coast railway line 111w
Pigs 238w

Brunei
Armed forces 84–5w

BSE
see Bovine spongiform encephalopathy

Building societies
843

Burden, Mr Richard
Questions
Regional planning and development, West Midlands 143
Young offenders, Secure accommodation 558w

Burglary
298w
Crime prevention 298w, 374–5w

Burma
578w

Burnett, Mr John
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 300
Health services (18.01.00) 713
Questions
European Convention on Human Rights 420

Burns, Mr Simon
Questions
Cancer, Waiting lists 236w
Driving, Safety 212w
Hospitals, Waiting lists 234w
Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust 233–4w
State retirement pensions 69w

Burstow, Mr Paul
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 565, 599–602
Questions
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, Ophthalmic services 4–5w, 249–50w
Driving, Licensing 210–1w
Police, Finance 300w
Social security benefits, Carers 65w
State retirement pensions, Carers 331w

Bus services
366w
Rural areas 118w, 365w
Yorkshire and Humberside 127–8

Business motions
(18.01.00) 800, (20.01.00) 1082

Business plans
United Kingdom Passport Agency 16w

Business statements
423–36, (19.01.00) 938–45, (20.01.00) 984–96

By-election writs
Ceredigion (11.01.00) 127

Byers, Rt Hon Stephen, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry*
Debates etc.
Utilities Bill, 1R (20.01.00) 996
Questions
Archer of Weston-super-Mare, Lord, Shares 520w
Assets, Dept of Trade and Industry 377–9w
Company investigations 525w
Company investigations, Correspondence 525w
Early retirement, Dept of Trade and Industry 258w
Manpower, Dept of Trade and Industry 257–8w
Post offices, Social security benefits 519w
Post offices, Somerset 519w
Robinson, Geoffrey, Correspondence 525w
SMART awards 109w

Bypasses
Ambleside 362w

C17 aircraft
284w

Cabinet Joint Consultative Committee
see Labour Liberal Democrats Joint Consultative Committee

Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales
Council of Ministers 496w
Dept of Social Security 108w

Cabinet Office
Consultants 443w
Secondment 134w

Cable, Mr Vincent
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 611–7
Questions
Alcoholic drinks, Abuse 190–1w
Assets, Dept of Trade and Industry 377–9w
Aviation, Accidents 447–8w

Cable, Mr Vincent*—*continued
Aviation, Safety 357w
Copyright, Internet 27–8w
Economic and monetary union 671–2
Electronic government 544w
Exports 382w
Gas fired power stations 522w
Genetically modified organisms, Crops 212–3w
Higher education, Conditions of employment 538w
Judiciary, Complaints 507w
Legal profession, Regulation 294w
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus 189w
Public transport, Greater London 249w
Self-assessment of tax, Pensioners 570w
Social security benefits, Medical examinations 69w
Tax allowances, Counselling 355–6w

Caborn, Rt Hon Richard, Minister for Trade, Dept of Trade and Industry*
Sittings in Westminster Hall
EC grants and loans (11.01.00) 17wh, 19–22wh
Questions
Asbestos, Imports 380w
Assisted areas, Dumfries and Galloway 260w
Axgro Foods, Regional selective assistance 27w
EC grants and loans 29–30w, 108w, 258–9w
Export credit guarantees 487w
Export credit guarantees, Arms trade 379–80w
Exports 382w
Food, Regional selective assistance 27w
Ilisu dam 31w, 257w
Intellectual property, Developing countries 256–7w
Manufacturing industries, North West region 380–1w
National Assembly for Wales, Dept of Trade and Industry 519–21w
Non-domestic rates, North West region 522w
Regional selective assistance 521w
Regional selective assistance, Sussex 382–3w
Soya beans, USA 520w
Trade agreements, France 383w
Trade promotion 484w
Uruguay Round 258w
World Trade Organisation 29w, 259w
World Trade Organisation, Developing countries 483w

Cambridge
Community safety 'ocal partnerships 544–5

Campbell, Rt Hon Menzies
Questions
Indonesia, Arms trade 673

Campbell, Mr Ronnie
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 933

Campbell-Savours, Mr Dale
Debates etc.
Influenza (10.01.00) 28–9
Line of route (18.01.00) 807, 811, 813, 815
Pensioners (17.01.00) 559, 566–8, 573–4
Questions
Business questions 431
Prisoners, Mentally ill 537

Canavan, Mr Dennis
Questions
Ammunition, Falkirk 90w
Jobseeker's allowance 227w

Cancer
140w
Correspondence 292w
Drugs 138–9w
Fertility 144w
Health services 55–6w
Medical profession 141w
Waiting lists 236w

Capital punishment
Iran 323–4w

Capital receipts initiative
Stoke on Trent 362w

Cardiff Airport
829–30

Carers
Social security benefits 5–7, 65w
State retirement pensions 331w

Carers' premium
Scotland 185w

Cars
529w
Prices 484w
Theft 555–6w

Cartoons
Film 343–4w

Casale, Mr Roger
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 725, 733
Questions
Education, Standards 43w
Public footpaths, Greater London 119w

Cash dispensing
28–9w

Casual workers
Dept for International Development 480w

Casualties
Iraq-Kuwait conflict 89–90w

Cattle
Exports 158w

Cawsey, Mr Ian
Questions
Agriculture, Trade agreements 413
Council tax 250w
Council tax, Police authorities 367–8w
Pigs, Animal welfare 576–7w

Cellular phone masts
see Aerials

Cellular phones
Health hazards 55w, 187–8w

Census
103–4w

Central Railway
128–30

Ceredigion
By-election writs (11.01.00) 127

Cervical cancer
Screening 54–5w

Chairman of Committee of the Whole House
Debates etc.
Amendments and new clauses (12.01.00) 306, 344, 364, 372, 389–90, 394, (13.01.00) 437, 467, 469, 498, 514, 518, 520

Chairman of Committee of the Whole House*—*continued
Conduct of proceedings (12.01.00) 311, 313, 316, 319–20, 326, 349, 358–9, (13.01.00) 478–80, 484, 491, 506
Points of order (12.01.00) 306

Chancellor of the Exchequer
see Treasury

Channel tunnel
Fire prevention 551–2

Chapman, Mr Ben
Questions
Agriculture, Marketing 239w
Child care tax credit 568w
Gamma hydroxybutyrate 11–2w, 41w, 142w, 177w
International Monetary Fund, Poverty 481w
Social security benefits, Carers 65w
Turkey, EC enlargement 667–8
Young offenders, Merseyside 218w

Chapman, Sir Sydney
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 557
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Railway stations, Hadley Wood (19.01.00) 261–2wh
Questions
Drugs, Crime 675
Health services, Barnet 138w, 236w
Passports, Administrative delays 295w
Social security benefits, Reform 17–8

Charitable donations
514–5w

Charities
Health 291–2w

Charity Commission
561w

Charter of Fundamental Rights (EU)
267–8w, 413w

Chaytor, Mr David
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 159
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 121–2wh, 134wh
Nuclear weapons, Proliferation (18.01.00) 155wh, 166–7wh
Questions
Curriculum 389w
Education, Disabled 540w
Further education, Jobseeker's allowance 151–2w
Further education, Teachers 440w
Greenhouse effect 114–5w
Greyhound racing, Animal welfare 464–5w
Sixth form education, Finance 543w

Chechnya
Armed conflict 326–7w, 408w, 684
Refugees 317w

Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment
Nancekuke 91w, 125–6w, 488w, (18.01.00) 818–26

Chemical and biological warfare
Iraq-Kuwait conflict 534–5w

Chemical weapons
Iran 475w

Chemical Weapons Convention
Sudan 323w

Cheshire
Crime 299w

Child Abuse in North Wales Judicial Inquiry
330w, 834

Child benefit
76w

Child care tax credit
513w, 568w

Child Support Agency
Computers 77w, 224w

Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
2R and money res* (11.01.00) 150–249
Questions
224w, 430–1w

Children
Day care 42w, 963–5
Employment 578w
Maintenance 17, 74w, 77w, 185w
Petitions (13.01.00) 526–7
Poverty 3–5, 69w, 272–3
United Arab Emirates 322w

Chile
Human rights 546w, 581w

Chinook helicopters
286w
Accidents 98w

Chlormequat
157–8w, 503–4w

Chope, Mr Christopher
Debates etc.
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1087–8, 1092
Parliamentary reporting, Points of order (20.01.00) 997
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Small businesses (20.01.00) 266wh, 270wh, 288–94wh, 305wh
Questions
London Ambulance Service 56w
NHS, Finance 64–5w
Police, Early retirement 468w
Police, Finance 548–54w
Schools, Capital investment 42–3w

Chorley
Historic buildings 387–8w

Christianity
India 478w

Christie Hospital Manchester
140w, 236w

Church, Ms Judith
Questions
Fertility, Health services 58–9w

City of London (Ward Elections) Bill 1998/99
Debates etc.
Order for further consideration read (11.01.00) 127, (18.01.00) 667

Civil servants
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 25w
Political activities 394w

Civil service
Investors in people 441–3w

Clapham, Mr Michael
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Garages and petrol stations, Contracts (12.01.00) 77wh
Questions
Industrial injuries disablement benefit, Pneumoconiosis 230–2w
Nuclear power stations, Industrial health and safety 108–9w

Clappison, Mr James
Questions
Cancer, Medical profession 141w
Iran, Human rights 325w
Schools, Drugs 223w

Clark, Rt Hon Dr David
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 297
Millennium compliance (20.01.00) 978

Clark, Dr Michael
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 111–3wh, 118wh, 147wh

Clark, Mr Paul
Questions
Construction 114w
Crime, Kent 299w

Clarke, Mr Charles, Minister of State, Home Office
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Warren, Gordon (12.01.00) 92–6wh
Questions
Acquittals 321w
Antisocial behaviour orders 556–7w
Burglary 298w
Burglary, Crime prevention 298w, 374–5w
Closed circuit television 214w, 297–8w, 372–3w, 543, 548–50
Closed circuit television, Ampthill 543–4
Closed circuit television, Stowmarket 549
Community safety local partnerships 544–5
Community safety local partnerships, Cambridge 544–5
Corporate manslaughter 455w
Crime, Cheshire 299w
Crime, Kent 299w, 542–3
Crimes of violence 374w
Criminal Justice (Mode of Trial) Bill (HL) 1999/2000 561w
Drug prevention schemes 10–1w
Drug seizures 554–5w
Drug seizures, Merseyside 560w
Drug treatment and testing orders, Correspondence 21w
Drugs, Crime 553–4w
Drugs, Greater London 555w
Drugs, Homelessness 176w
Drugs, Screening 13w
EU Justice and Home Affairs Council 559w
European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters 558–9w
Firearms 466w
Firearms, Licensing 370–2w
Gamma hydroxybutyrate 11–2w
Homicide 216–7w
Hooliganism, Football 557–8w
Local crime reduction partnership 372w
Local crime reduction partnership, Merseyside 560w
Members, Correspondence 547–8w
Metropolitan Police, Disciplinary proceedings 124w
Metropolitan Police, Manpower 457–63w
Metropolitan Police, Riot control weapons 465w
National Council of Victim Support 301w, 373w
Offences against children, Criminal investigation 560–1w
Offenders, Rehabilitation 467w
Police, Disciplinary proceedings 16w
Police, Finance 548–54w
Police, Manpower 375w, 455–6w
Police, Medals 455w
Police, Recruitment 321w

Clarke, Mr Charles—continued
Police grant, Staffordshire 12w
Public safety radio communications project 214w, 301–2w
Riot control weapons, Heathrow Airport 556w
Secured car parks scheme 122w
Silcott, Winston 296w
Smuggling, Tobacco 453w
Stalking 20w, 464w
Theft, Cars 555–6w
Trials 300w, 457–8w
UN Convention on Torture, Prosecutions 559w
West Mercia Police 465–6w
Witnesses, Magistrates' courts 299w
Young offenders, Secure accommodation 13w, 558w

Clarke, Mr Eric
Questions
Coal, Imports 109–10w

Clarke, Rt Hon Kenneth
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 725–9

Clarke, Rt Hon Tom
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Aerials, Planning permission (18.01.00) 191wh
Questions
Remploy 175w

Clarke, Mr Tony
Questions
Food Standards Agency 199–200w

Class sizes
955–7

Clerk's Dept
see Dept of the Clerk of the House

Clifton-Brown, Mr Geoffrey
Questions
Countryside, Access 213w
Drugs, Gloucestershire 545w

Climate change levy
116w

Closed circuit television
214w, 297–8w, 372–3w, 543, 548–50
Ampthill 543–4
Stowmarket 549

Clwyd, Ann
Debates etc.
Indonesia, Points of order (17.01.00) 555
Questions
Arms trade, Export controls 28w
Arms trade, Turkey 483w
Child Abuse in North Wales Judicial Inquiry 834
EC institutions, Voting methods 669–70
Export controls 178w
Health services, Wales 498w
Indonesia, Sanctions 581w
Iraq, Foreign relations 412w
Pakistan, Mines 2w, 127–8w

Clyde submarine base
92w

Coaker Mr Vernon
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 989
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 156, 168, 173
Pensioners (17.01.00) 580, 585
Questions
Business questions 429
Family law, Reform 388w
Food, Labelling 240w

Coaker Mr Vernon—continued
Midland main railway line 448w
Prostate cancer 53w, 136–7w
Pupil exclusions 538w

Coal
Ayrshire 109–10w
Government assistance 486w
Imports 109–10w, 524w
Mining 112–3w, 523–4w

Coffey, Ms Ann
Debates etc.
Influenza (10.01.00) 27–8
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Landlord and tenant, Housing benefit (12.01.00) 109wh

Cohen, Mr Harry
Debates etc.
Hare Coursing Bill, 1R (10.01.00) 33
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Nuclear weapons, Proliferation (18.01.00) 164–5wh
Questions
Animal experiments 465w
BBC Monitoring, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 286w
Ilisu dam 257w
Insurance companies, Assets 353w
Metropolitan Police, Riot control weapons 465w
Military intelligence, Larkhill 97w
National Beds Inquiry 423w
Navy, Asbestos 94w
Pakistan, Arms trade 578w
Recruitment, Ministry of Defence 91–2w

Colchester
Armed forces 282w

College of Medicine
see University of Wales College of Medicine

Collins, Mr Tim
Questions
Bypasses, Ambleside 362w

Colman, Mr Tony
Debates etc.
Community Finance Tax Credit Bill, 1R (11.01.00) 147–9
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Housing, Greater London (19.01.00) 242wh

Colvin, Mr Michael
Questions
Kashmir 678

Commemorative coins
Queen 392w
Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother 103w

Committee on Standards in Public Life
167w, 472w

Common agricultural policy
240w
Wiltshire 155–8w
Worcestershire 99w

Common fisheries policy
417–8, 575w

Commonhold
119w

Commonwealth
Human rights 183w

Community care
Disability living allowance 291w

Community Finance Tax Credit Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
1R (11.01.00) 147–9

Community Protection (Airport Noise and Pollution) Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
1R (19.01.00) 867–9

Community safety local partnerships
544–5
Cambridge 544–5

Community service orders
Social security benefits 430–1w

Company investigations
525w
Correspondence 525w

Company voluntary arrangements
512–3w

Competition
Electricity 524–5w
Planning permission 115w

Compost
119w

Computers
Child Support Agency 77w, 224w
Defence Housing Executive 81–2w
Dept of Social Security 12–3, 67w, 71–2w
Social Security Contributions Agency 66w, 225–6w

Conditions of employment
135–6w, 541w
Higher education 538w

Connarty, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 155, 166
Questions
Age, Discrimination 539–40w
Security, Northern Ireland 180w

Conservative Party
276

Consolidation bills
506w

Constituencies
7w

Consultants
Cabinet Office 443w
Dept of Health 52w
Lord Chancellor's Dept 507w
Ministry of Defence 84w
Treasury 356w

Contracts
British Council 567–8w
Diplomatic service 328–9w

Contracts for services
202w
Education 275–6w
Information Technology Services Agency 394w
Prisons 456w

Contributions Agency
see Social Security Contributions Agency

Cook, Rt Hon Robin, Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs
Questions
Cuba, Foreign relations 680–1
EC institutions, Voting methods 669–71
Economic and monetary union 671–2
Falkland Islands, Argentina 683
Indonesia, Arms trade 673

Cook, Rt Hon Robin*—*continued
Intergovernmental Conference 2000 668–9
Kosovo, Peace keeping operations 684–6
Libyan Arab Republic, Guided weapons 326w, 414–5w
Official secrets, Disclosure of information 328w
Pakistan, Democracy 672–4

Cooper, Ms Yvette, Minister for Public Health, Dept of Health
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetics, Research (11.01.00) 41–6wh
Questions
Alcoholic drinks, Abuse 190–1w
Antenatal care 63w
Artificial sweeteners, Health hazards 584w
Breast cancer, Screening 54w, 234–5w
Buildings, Dept of Health 140w
Cancer 140w
Cancer, Correspondence 292w
Cancer, Drugs 138–9w
Cancer, Fertility 144w
Cancer, Health services 55–6w
Cancer, Medical profession 141w
Cellular phones, Health hazards 55w, 187–8w
Cervical cancer, Screening 54–5w
Consultants, Dept of Health 52w
Cost effectiveness, Dept of Health 142w
Creutzfeldt-Jakob dementia 60w
Disposable syringes 141w
Drug prevention schemes 62–3w
Drugs, Licensing 137–8w, 186–7w
E coli 137w
Electromagnetic fields, Health hazards 196w, 583–4w
Epidemiology 289–90w
Family planning, Advisory services 63w
Fertility, Advisory services 63w
Fertility, Health services 58–9w
Fireworks, Injuries 188w
Fluoride, Water supply 187w, 584w
Folic acid 55w
Food, Safety 141–2w
Fuel poverty 139w
Gamma hydroxybutyrate 142w
Health education, Organic food 237w
Herbal medicine 55w
HIV infection, Babies 190w
Hospitals, Infectious diseases 53–4w
In vitro fertilisation, Gender selection 136w
Influenza, Vaccination 585–8w
Injuries 143w
Irinotecan 52–3w
Legitimacy 21–2w
Low birthweight babies 139w
Malnutrition 139w
Meetings, Dept of Health 140w
Members, Correspondence 61–2w
Meningitis, Vaccination 50w
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus 189–90w
National Radiological Protection Board 194–5w
NHS, Meat 196–7w
Nutrition 50–1w
Official cars, Dept of Health 49–50w
Paediatrics, Intensive care 198–9w
Peat, Dept of Health 196w
Pertussis vaccine 51w
Post offices, Dept of Health 51–2w
Prostate cancer 53w, 136–7w, 582w
Radiation exposure, Research 60–1w
School meals 188w
Skin cancer, Electromagnetic fields 142–3w
Skin piercing 53w
Smoking related diseases 55w
Strokes 188–9w

Cooper, Ms Yvette*—*continued
Sure start programme 37–9w
Surgery, Females 195w
Terminal care 56w
Tuberculosis, Vaccination 143–4w
"Widening Gap" 582–3w

Copyright
Internet 27–8w

Corbett, Mr Robin
Questions
Immobilisation of vehicles 551
Pinochet, Augusto 285–6

Corbyn, Mr Jeremy
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 563, 565–6, 571–2
Pinochet, Augusto, Points of order (17.01.00) 555–6
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Housing, Greater London (19.01.00) 241–6wh
Questions
Chechnya, Armed conflict 326–7w, 408w
Chechnya, Refugees 317w
Chile, Human rights 546w, 581w
Hamill, Robert 32w
Ilisu dam 668
Nuclear weapons, International law 95w
Organic farming 240w
Pinochet, Augusto 559–60w, 581w
Russia 283–4w
Social security benefits, Carers 6
Sri Lanka, Armed conflict 328w, 416w
Temporary immigrants 20w
Trident missiles 94–6w
UN Convention on Torture, Prosecutions 559w

Cormack, Sir Patrick
Questions
Business statements 423–5

Cornwall
Higher education 957

Corporate manslaughter
455w

Corston, Jean
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 695–6
Questions
Organic farming 240w

Cotter, Mr Brian
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 640–2
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Post offices (12.01.00) 62–3wh
Small businesses (20.01.00) 270wh, 281–4wh
Questions
Army Foundation College 84w, 285w

Council housing
365w
Housing management 119–20w
Property transfer 144–6
Tenancy agreements 120w
Waiting lists 163w

Council of Europe
UK delegations 1w, 222w

Council of Ministers
354w
Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales 496w

Council of the Isles
see British Irish Council

Council tax
250w

Council tax*—*continued
Police authorities 367–8w

Council tax benefits
71w

Counselling
Tax allowances 355–6w

Countryside
Access 213w
Wales 494w

Countryside stewardship scheme
239w

Court welfare officers
Training 217w

Courts martial
491–2w

Cousins, Mr Jim
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 172, 179, 212–4
Questions
Defence capabilities initiative 166w
NHS, Pensions 235w
Prescription drugs, Costs 57–8w

Cox, Mr Tom
Questions
Cattle, Exports 158w
Children, Employment 578w
Cycleways, Greater London 528w
Defence, EC countries 129w
Doctors, Greater London 61w
EC budget, Fraud 354–5w
Football, World Cup 474w
Genetically modified organisms, Crops 206w
Gold and foreign exchange reserves 105w
Headteachers, Greater London 273w
Housing, Empty property 140
Human rights, Commonwealth 183w
Illegal immigrants, Greater London 454w
Indian subcontinent, Immigration 579–80w
Institutional care 229–30w
Maintenance, Children 185w
Mines, Bomb disposal 183w
New deal schemes, Greater London 442w
Prisoner escapes 123w
Prisoners, Body searches 453–4w
Prisoners, Self-mutilation 454w
Prisons, Discipline 453w
Prisons, Drugs 453–4w
Smoking related diseases 55w
Sri Lanka 579w
Windfall tax 104w
Young offenders, Prisoners 14w

Cranston, Mr Ross, Solicitor-General
Questions
Criminal proceedings, Disclosure of information 1w
Crown courts, Rights of audience 219w
Crown Prosecution Service 420–2
Crown Prosecution Service, Information technology 218–9w
Crown Prosecution Service, Racial discrimination 218w
European Convention on Human Rights 419–20
Human rights, Chile 546w
Paddington Rail Accident Inquiry 243–4w
Serious Fraud Office 219–20w
Smoking, Solicitor-General 545–6w
Trials, Victims 418–9
Young offenders, Merseyside 218w

Crausby, Mr David
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 205–8
Questions
Cash dispensing 28–9w
Cost effectiveness, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 24w
Cost effectiveness, Dept for Education and Employment 45w
Cost effectiveness, Dept of Health 142w
Cost effectiveness, Dept of Social Security 335–8w
Cost effectiveness, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 8–9w
Cost effectiveness, Home Office 214w
Cost effectiveness, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 573–4w
Cost effectiveness, Ministry of Defence 86–7w
Cost effectiveness, Northern Ireland Office 34w
Cost effectiveness, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 330w
Cost effectiveness, Treasury 104–5w
Disabled, Dept of Social Security 69–70w
Ethnic groups, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 25w
Ethnic groups, Dept of Social Security 70w
Ethnic groups, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 100w
Fire prevention 551
Fireworks, Injuries 188w
Meningitis, Vaccination 50w
Nurses, Pay 835–6
School meals 188w
Small Business Service 482w
Smoking, Dept for Education and Employment 436w
Smoking, Dept for International Development 481w
Smoking, Dept of Trade and Industry 486w
Smoking, Home Office 553w
Smoking, Lord Chancellor's Dept 527–8w
Smoking, Solicitor-General 545–6w

Creutzfeldt-Jakob dementia
60w

Cricket
Grants 345–6w

Crime
Cheshire 299w
Drugs 553–4w, 674–6
Kent 299w, 542–3
Lancashire 319w, 554

Crime and Disorder Act 1998
Questions
556–8w

Crime Fighting Fund
321w

Crime prevention
Burglary 298w, 374–5w

Crimes of violence
374w
Northern Ireland 182w

Criminal investigation
Armed forces 490–1w
Offences against children 560–1w

Criminal Justice (Mode of Trial) Bill (HL) 1999/2000
Questions
561w

Criminal proceedings
Disclosure of information 1w, 295–6w

Crops
Genetically modified organisms 206w, 212–3w

Crown courts
Rights of audience 219w

Crown Prosecution Service
420–2
Information technology 218–9w
Racial discrimination 218w

Croydon
Trams 116–7w

Cryer, Mrs Ann
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Nuclear weapons, Proliferation (18.01.00) 161–4wh
Questions
Employment, Northern Ireland 33w
Local government, Scotland 376w
Local government, Standards 5w
Manpower, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 350w
Manpower, Dept for Education and Employment 441–2w
Manpower, Dept of Social Security 185–6w
Manpower, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 164–5w
Manpower, Dept of Trade and Industry 257–8w
Manpower, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 178w
Manpower, Home Office 176–7w
Manpower, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 204–5w
Manpower, Northern Ireland Office 182–3w
Manpower, Scotland Office 264–5w
Manpower, Treasury 513–4w
Pakistan, Democracy 673–4
Single regeneration budget 113w

Cryer, Mr John
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 992
Pensioners (17.01.00) 572
Questions
Business questions 436

Cuba
Foreign relations 680–1

Cullen Inquiry
see Paddington Rail Accident Inquiry

Cultural relations
495w

"Culture Media and Sport Select Committee on Staging International Sporting Events"
25–6w

Cummings, Mr John
Questions
Business questions 428–9

Cunningham, Mr Jim
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 197
Pensioners (17.01.00) 575–7
Post offices (17.01.00) 619
Questions
Children, Day care 963
Defence, Expenditure 285–6w
Drug prevention schemes 62–3w
Duke of York's Royal Military School, Standards 536w
Health services, Discrimination 144w

Cunningham, Mr Jim—continued
Organic farming 240w
Political parties, Finance 122w
Single regeneration budget, West Midlands 110–1w
Unemployment, Ethnic groups 173–4w
Unemployment, Rural areas 46w

Curriculum
389w

Curry, Rt Hon David
Questions
Hill livestock allowances 409–10
Housing, Empty property 140
VAT, Housing 356w

Curtis-Thomas, Ms Claire
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 784–5
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 121wh, 130wh
Questions
Deregulation, Dept of Social Security 573w
Deregulation, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 532w
Drug seizures, Merseyside 560w
Local crime reduction partnership, Merseyside 560w
Offences against children, Criminal investigation 560–1w
Personal and social education 41w
Radiation exposure, Research 487w
Sexual offences, Scotland 26w
Strokes 188–9w
Territorial Auxiliary and Volunteer Reserves' Association 88w

Cycleways
Greater London 528w

Cyprus
407–8w
EC enlargement 580w

Dairy farming
239w

Dalyell, Mr Tam
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 298
Business questions, Points of order (20.01.00) 997
Libyan Arab Republic, Points of order (17.01.00) 556
Westminster Hall sittings, Points of order (12.01.00) 302
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Kosovo (12.01.00) 97–9wh, 103wh
Questions
Archaeology, Seas and oceans 348w
Beef, Exports 241w
Business questions 433
Chemical Weapons Convention, Sudan 323w
Developing countries, Disease control 264w
Fletcher, Yvonne 300w
Hip replacements, Correspondence 237w
Incapacity benefit 19–20
Iran, Foreign relations 416–7w
Iraq, Sanctions 220w
Iraq-Kuwait conflict, Casualties 89–90w
Libyan Arab Republic, Guided weapons 220w
Pinochet, Augusto 281
Serbia, Sanctions 682

Darling, Rt Hon Alistair, Secretary of State for Social Security*
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 150–64
Questions
Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales, Dept of Social Security 108w
Members, Correspondence 573w
Pensions, Tax credit 7–8
Poverty, Children 3–5
Social security benefits, Wales 184w
Stakeholder pensions 79–80w

Darvill, Mr Keith
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 350–1
Questions
Polling stations, Disabled 300w

Data Protection Act 1998
Questions
452w

Davidson, Mr Ian
Questions
Ammunition, Uranium 280w
New deal schemes, Scotland 967
Winter fuel payments 333w
Written questions, Ministry of Defence 81w

Davies, Rt Hon Denzil
Questions
Airports, Wales 830
World Trade Organisation 29w

Davies, Mr Geraint
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 693
Questions
Local government, Wales 496–7w
National Air Traffic Services 114w
Pakistan, Democracy 672

Davis, Rt Hon David
Questions
Meetings, Dept of Health 140w

Davis, Rt Hon Terry
Questions
Council of Europe, UK delegations 1w

Dawson, Mr Hilton
Questions
Poverty, Children 4
Reparation by offenders, Northern Ireland 181w
Roads, Finance 136

Day care
Children 42w, 963–5
Merseyside 42w

Deaf
see Hearing impaired

Deal Barracks
397–8w

Dean, Mrs Janet
Questions
Pigs 407

Death
Fires 463w
Weather 516–8w

Debts
Developing countries 202w, 232–3w, 479–80w, 562–3w
Interest rates 394w
Social security benefits 431–2w

Decommissioning International Commission
Decommissioning International Commission—continued
see Independent International Commission on Decommissioning

Deeside Industrial Park
498w

Defence
EC countries 129w
Expenditure 285–6w

Defence capabilities initiative
166w

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency
405–6w
Public private partnerships 85w, 125w, 127w

Defence Housing Executive
Computers 81–2w

Defence Secondary Care Agency
Waiting lists 284w

Defence Vetting Agency
Manpower 207w

Democracy
Pakistan 672–4

Demonstrations
Royal parks 346–8w

Denham, Mr John, Minister of State, Dept of Health*
Questions
Alder Hey Children's Hospital 62w
Blood transfusions, Jehovah's witnesses 510w
Cancer, Waiting lists 236w
Christie Hospital Manchester 236w
Dental services, Waiting lists 511w
Doctors, Greater London 61w
Dyspraxia 511w
Health services, Barnet 138w, 236w
Health visitors, Greater London 61w
Hearing impaired, Health services 421w
Hospitals, Waiting lists 234w, 422w, 511w
Intensive care, Hospital beds 289w
Mental health services 293–4w
Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust 233–4w
Myxoedema 425–6w
National Beds Inquiry 423w
NHS, Finance 64–5w
NHS, Manpower 425w
NHS, Pensions 235w
NHS, Sick leave 292–3w
Primary care trusts 511w
Royal Marsden Hospital 140w
Transplant surgery 197w, 235–6w, 422–3w
University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust, Public appointments 237w, 292w
Uraemia 59w
West Sussex Health Authority, Waiting lists 510w

Dental services
588w
Waiting lists 511w

Deployment
Aircraft carriers 96–7w
Armed forces 283w, 493w
Navy 82w

Dept for Culture Media and Sport
Civil servants 25w
Cost effectiveness 24w
Ethnic groups 25w
Manpower 350w

Dept for Education and Employment
Cost effectiveness 45w
Manpower 441–2w
Research 39–40w
Dept for Education and Employment—continued
Smoking 436w

Dept for International Development
Casual workers 480w
Disabled 567w
Ethnic groups 567w
Females 567w
Incentives 482w
Internet 481w
Manpower 566–7w
Religion 567w
Smoking 481w
Visits abroad 563w

Dept of Health
Buildings 140w
Consultants 52w
Cost effectiveness 142w
Meetings 140w
Official cars 49–50w
Peat 196w
Post offices 51–2w

Dept of Social Security
Assets 331–2w
Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales 108w
Computers 12–3, 67w, 71–2w
Cost effectiveness 335–8w
Deregulation 573w
Disabled 69–70w
Empty property 501w
Ethnic groups 70w
Manpower 185–6w
Millennium compliance 67w
Performance appraisal 433w
Statistics 427–9w

Dept of the Clerk of the House
Public appointments 443w

Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions
Cost effectiveness 8–9w
Deregulation 532w
Early retirement 5w
Empty property 446–7w
Manpower 164–5w

Dept of Trade and Industry
Assets 377–9w
Early retirement 258w
Empty property 521w
Manpower 257–8w
National Assembly for Wales 519–21w
Post offices 519–20w
Smoking 486w

Deregulation
Dept of Social Security 573w
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 532w

Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994
Questions
532w, 573w

Developing countries
AIDS 676–7
Alternative energy 565w
Arms trade 677
Asbestos 263–4w
British Council 479w
Debts 202w, 232–3w, 479–80w, 562–3w
Disease control 264w
Export credit guarantees 566w
Intellectual property 256–7w
World Trade Organisation 483w

Diesel fuel
Excise duties 104w

Digital broadcasting
350w

Diplomatic relations
North Korea 326w
Ukraine 476w

Diplomatic service
582w
Contracts 328–9w

Director of Public Prosecutions
see Crown Prosecution Service

Disability Discrimination Act 1995
Questions
42w

Disability living allowance
68w, 229w, 429w
Appeals 9
Community care 291w

Disability working allowance
Appeals 9

Disabled
Dept for International Development 567w
Dept of Social Security 69–70w
Education 540w
Fares 254w
Financial services 42w
Ophthalmic services 294w
Polling stations 300w
Prescriptions 294w

Disadvantaged
65–6w

Disciplinary proceedings
Metropolitan Police 124w
Police 16w

Discipline
Prisons 453w

Discrimination
Age 539–40w
Health services 144w

Disease control
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy 154w
Bovine tuberculosis 239w
Developing countries 264w

Diseases
Respiratory system 421–2w

Dismore, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 166, 187
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Poverty, Greater London (11.01.00) 25wh
Questions
Crown Prosecution Service, Racial discrimination 218w
Iran, Human rights 220–1w
Iran, Israel 323w
Iran, Weapons 323w
Kalejs, Konrad 215w
Police, Medals 455w
Voluntary schools, Greater London 40–1w
World War II, Genocide 455w

Disposable syringes
141w

Disqualifications Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
Order relating to Com (20.01.00) 1093

Dobbin, Mr Jim
Questions
Developing countries, Debts 479–80w
Drug prevention schemes 10–1w
Primary care trusts 511w
Refugees 123–4w
Respiratory system, Diseases 421–2w

Dobbin, Mr Jim—continued
Television, Licensing 537w

Dobson, Rt Hon Frank
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Poverty, Greater London (11.01.00) 23–6wh

Doctors
Greater London 61w

Dogs
6w, 124w

Donaldson, Mr Jeffrey M
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Garages and petrol stations, Contracts (12.01.00) 79–81wh
Questions
Peru, Human rights 321–2w
Security, Northern Ireland 267

Doncaster
Magistrates 506w

Doncaster Prison
457w

Donohoe, Mr Brian H
Questions
Ayrshire 472w

Drew, Mr David
Debates etc.
Alternative energy (10.01.00) 120
Post offices (17.01.00) 635
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Garages and petrol stations, Contracts (12.01.00) 73wh, 83wh
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 123wh
Post offices (12.01.00) 47–52wh
Questions
Planning, South West region 213w
Terminal care 56w

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency
213w, 363w
Ophthalmic services 4–5w, 249–50w

Driving
Licensing 210–1w
Safety 212w

Driving Standards Agency
213w, 363w

Drown, Ms Julia
Questions
Biosafety Protocol 245–6w
Debts, Developing countries 232–3w
Incontinence 237–8w
Uruguay Round 258w

Drug prevention schemes
10–1w, 62–3w

Drug seizures
554–5w
Merseyside 560w

Drug treatment and testing orders
Correspondence 21w

Drugs
Cancer 138–9w
Crime 553–4w, 674–6
Electronic commerce 424w
Glasgow 555w
Gloucestershire 545w
Greater London 555w
Homelessness 176w
Latin America 408w, 674–5
Licensing 137–8w, 186–7w
Mentally ill 197w
Patents 62w
Prisons 17–9w, 453–4w
Rehabilitation 191–4w

Drugs—continued
Schools 223w, 971–2
Screening 13w
Smuggling 233w, 322w

Drugs prevention initiative
543w

Duke of York's Royal Military School
Standards 536w

Dumfries and Galloway
Assisted areas 260w

Duncan, Mr Alan
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 943
Health services (18.01.00) 699
Sittings in Westminster Hall
EC grants and loans (11.01.00) 12–3wh, 17–9wh
Parliamentary procedure, Points of order (11.01.00) 1wh

Duncan Smith, Mr Iain
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 288–90
Questions
Armed forces, Housing 399–402w

Dunwoody, Mrs Gwyneth
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 155, 165
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 59
Questions
Air traffic 211w
Air traffic control 357–8w
Automatic train protection 246w
Channel tunnel, Fire prevention 551–2
Corporate manslaughter 455w
Iran, Capital punishment 323–4w
Iran, Chemical weapons 475w
Iran, Nuclear power stations 413w
Iran, Nuclear weapons 324w
Iran, Religion 324w
National Air Traffic Services, Property 358w
Nuclear weapons, Proliferation 413w
Paddington Rail Accident Inquiry 243–4w
Railways, Safety 246–7w
Social security benefits, Reform 18

Dyspraxia
511w

E coli
137w

Eagle, Angela, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Social Security
Questions
Ancillary staff, Compensation 227w
Child benefit 76w
Child Support Agency, Computers 77w, 224w
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill 1999/2000 430–1w
Computers, Dept of Social Security 12–3, 71–2w
Council tax benefits 71w
Disability living allowance, Appeals 9
Empty property, Dept of Social Security 501w
Housing benefit 69w, 433–4w
Housing benefit, Abuse 338–40w
Independent Case Examiner for the Child Support Agency 10–2
Jobseeker's allowance 227w
Local exchange and trading schemes 14

Eagle, Angela*—*continued
Maintenance, Children 17, 74w, 77w, 185w
Millennium compliance, Dept of Social Security 67w
New deal for lone parents 66–7w
ONE programme 66w
Social security benefits, Abuse 339–40w
Social security benefits, Debts 431–2w
Social security benefits, Offenders 225w
Social security benefits, Personal records 334–5w
Social security benefits, Post offices 335w
Social security benefits, Scotland 73w
Social security benefits, Students 228w
Unified appeal tribunal, Public appointments 72w
Winter fuel payments 71w, 75–6w, 227–8w, 333–4w, 429–30w

Eagle, Maria
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 942, (20.01.00) 991
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 171, 182, 187
Health services (18.01.00) 735

Early retirement
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 5w
Dept of Trade and Industry 258w
Farmers 238w
Ministry of Defence 87–8w
Police 468w

East coast railway line
111w

East of England Development Agency
113w

East Sussex
Waste disposal 111–2w

East Timor
Armed forces 84–5w

EC action
Employment 972–4
Food 414–5
Taxation 514w

EC aid
564–5w
Environment protection 184w

EC budget
Fraud 354–5w, 514w

EC common foreign and security policy
488–9w

EC countries
Defence 129w
Transport 450w

EC defence policy
97w, 536–8w

EC economic policy
408–9w

EC enlargement
406–7w, 477w
Cyprus 580w
Turkey 667–8

EC external relations
Ukraine 476w

EC Fisheries Council
240w

EC grants and loans
(11.01.00) 1–22wh, 5–6w, 29–30w, 102w, 108w, 258–9w
Alyn and Deeside 589w

EC grants and loans*—*continued
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 205–6w
Wales 589–90w, 827–30

EC institutions
Reform 842
Voting methods 669–71

EC transport policy
577–8w

Economic and monetary union
392w, 515w, 671–2

Edinburgh
Housing benefit 340w

Education
Administration 148–51w, 436w
Contracts for services 275–6w
Disabled 540w
Finance 273w, 543w
Ombudsman 435w
Per capita costs 437–40w
Rural areas 539w
Standards 43w, 435–6w, 442w

Education action zones
145–6w

Edwards, Mr Huw
Questions
Forests, Sales 241–2w
Non-departmental public bodies, Wales 832
Philippines, Bridges 209w
Theatre, Wales 330w

Efford, Mr Clive
Questions
Closed circuit television 548–9
New deal for communities 449w
New deal for communities, Greater London 449w
Taxis, Guide dogs 529w

Eggs
Marketing 99–100w

Elderly
Institutional care 142w
Petitions (10.01.00) 117

Elections
(10.01.00) 34–116
Greater London Authority 253w, 530w

Electoral register
215–6w

Electoral systems
Reform 296w

Electric cables
524w

Electricity
Competition 524–5w
Meters 485w
Prices 261w
Tamworth 485w

Electricity generation
Non-domestic rates 9–10w

Electromagnetic fields
Health hazards 196w, 583–4w
Skin cancer 142–3w

Electronic commerce
Drugs 424w

Electronic funds transfer
India 326w, 415–6w

Electronic government
276w, 544w

Electronic tagging
Offenders 373–4w

Electronic voting
297w

Ellman, Mrs Louise
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Bank services, Overcharging (19.01.00) 232–4wh
EC grants and loans (11.01.00) 6–9wh
Questions
North South Ministerial Council 178–9w

Embassies
Germany 329w
Italy 329w
Operating costs 3w, 131–2w, 329w

Emergency services
Manpower 176–7w

Emery, Rt Hon Sir Peter
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 990–1
Millennium compliance (20.01.00) 981

Employment
539w
Children 578w
EC action 972–4
Northern Ireland 33w

Empty property
Dept of Social Security 501w
Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 446–7w
Dept of Trade and Industry 521w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 478w, 582w
Home Office 468–71w
Housing 139–40
Ministry of Defence 490w
Ministry of Health 512w
Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 499w
Treasury 512w

Energy
VAT 352w

"English House Condition Survey 1996"
576w

English language
British Council 224w
Further education 223–4w

English Sports Council
384w

English Table Tennis Association
22–3w

Ennis, Mr Jeff
Questions
Magistrates, Barnsley 506w

Environment Agency
359–60w
Fees and charges 448w
Recruitment 249w

Environment protection
EC aid 184w
Water companies 159–60w

Environmental Audit Select Committee
(18.01.00) 817

Environmental health
Incinerators 131–3

Environmental impact assessment
4w

Epidemiology
289–90w

Equal opportunities
Northern Ireland 445w
Northern Ireland Office 265–6w

Equality Commission for Northern Ireland
see Northern Ireland Equality Commission

Eritrea
262–3w
Ethiopia 413–4w

Essex
Hospitals 234w

Essex Rivers Healthcare NHS Trust
Breast cancer 234–5w

Ethiopia
262–3w
Eritrea 413–4w
Overseas aid 262–3w

Ethnic groups
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 25w
Dept for International Development 567w
Dept of Social Security 70w
Kosovo 682–3
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 100w
Unemployment 173–4w

EU Justice and Home Affairs Council
559w

European Communities
see EC and EU headings

European Convention on Human Rights
21w, 419–20
Northern Ireland 130w

European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters
558–9w

European Court of Justice
415w

Eurostar
450w

Evans, Mr Nigel
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 938
Line of route (18.01.00) 814
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 343–8, 353, 356–8, 361, 364–72, (13.01.00) 477–81, 489–95, 497–9, 502, 511, 524
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 929–34
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1003–5, 1013, 1017–9, 1021–4, 1026–30, 1035–40, 1045–6, 1048, 1055–6
Questions
Ministerial policy advisors, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 832–3
Roads, Safety 144
Transport, Wales 831

Exchange rates
Exports 393w, 484–5w

Excise duties
Beer 393w
Diesel fuel 104w
Fuels 569w
Motor vehicles 253–4w
Tobacco 569w

Exhaust emissions
Pollution control 141–2

Exhibitions
UK membership of EC 415w

Export controls
178w
Arms trade 28w
Serbia 133w

Export credit guarantees
487w
Arms trade 379–80w
Developing countries 566w

Exports
382w
Beef 241w
Cattle 158w
Exchange rates 393w, 484–5w
Film 343w
Tobacco 352w

Extradition
Iran 324w

Fabricant, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Analysis of Costs and Benefits (European Union Membership) Bill, 1R (20.01.00) 996
Business question time intervention (19.01.00) 944
Millennium compliance (20.01.00) 982
Ministerial statement intervention (20.01.00) 975
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 310–7, 322, 325–7, 329, 332, 339–41, 343, 349–50, 352, 355–6, 359–60, 373–4, 376, 382–5, (13.01.00) 441, 444, 449–51
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 893, 896–8, 903, 905–8, 914–8, 921–2, 924–5, 928, 930, 932–3, 935
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 999
Small businesses, Points of order (20.01.00) 997
Questions
Employment, EC action 972–4

Falkirk
Ammunition 90w

Falkland Islands
408w
Argentina 683
Armed forces 207w

Fallon, Mr Michael
Questions
Biggin Hill Airport 360w

Family law
Reform 388w

Family planning
Advisory services 63w

Far East
Prisoners of war 398w

Fares
Concessions 209w
Disabled 254w
Trains 449w

Farmers
see also Agriculture
Compensation 241w
Early retirement 238w

Fearn, Mr Ronnie
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 590–3, 606
Questions
Athletics 386–7w
London freedom pass 385w
Wembley Stadium 384–5w

Females
Dept for International Development 567w
State retirement pensions 14–5
Surgery 195w

Fertility
Advisory services 63w
Cancer 144w
Health services 58–9w

Field, Rt Hon Frank
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 180, 189–92
Pensioners (17.01.00) 563
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 40–1, 51–5
Questions
Benefits Agency Security Investigation Service, Manpower 80–1w
Children, Day care 42w
Housing benefit, Abuse 338–40w
Low birthweight babies 139w
National Insurance Contributions Office, Vetting 334w
New deal for young people, Merseyside 437–8w
"Opportunity for All, Tackling Poverty and Social Exclusion" 75w
Performance appraisal, Dept of Social Security 433w
Social security benefits, Abuse 339–40w, 433w
Social security benefits, Debts 431–2w
Social security benefits, Personal records 334–5w
Social security benefits, Post offices 335w
State retirement pensions 426w
Sure start programme 37–9w
Winter fuel payments 75–6w

Fifteen minutes rule
Rulings and statements (11.01.00) 150

Film
344w
Cartoons 343–4w
Exports 343w

Financial services
Disabled 42w

Fire prevention
551
Channel tunnel 551–2

Fire regulations
532–3w

Firearms
466w
Licensing 370–2w, 376w
Scotland 376–7w

Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997
Questions
466w

Fires
Death 463w

Fireworks
Injuries 188w
Millennium 248–9w

Fish
Acid rain 133–4

Fisher, Mr Mark
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 480

Fisheries
101–2w, 153w, 575w

Fishing offences
Prosecutions 101w

"Fit for the Future Consultation Paper"
142w

Fitzpatrick, Jim
Questions
Stakeholder pensions 79–80w

Fitzsimons, Lorna
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 987–8
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1065–6, 1068, 1070

Fletcher, Yvonne
300w

Flight, Mr Howard
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Bank services, Overcharging (19.01.00) 234–7wh, 239wh

Flint, Caroline
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 694
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Railway stations, Hadley Wood (19.01.00) 258–9wh
Questions
Conditions of employment 541w
Council housing, Housing management 119–20w
Council housing, Tenancy agreements 120w
Parliament, Nurseries 840–1

Flood control
9w

Fluoride
Water supply 187w, 584w

Flynn, Paul
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 993–4
Questions
Arrests, Millennium 368w
Business questions 430
Crown Prosecution Service 422
Drugs, Electronic commerce 424w
Drugs, Screening 13w
Drugs prevention initiative 543w
Internet, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 496w
Newspaper press, Wales 520w
Pensioners, Income support 432w, 572–3w

Folic acid
55w

Follett, Barbara
Questions
Commemorative coins, Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother 103w
National Savings Agency 107w
Specialist schools initiative 957–8

Food
EC action 414–5
Labelling 157w, 240w, 418–9w
Petitions (20.01.00) 1093
Regional selective assistance 27w
Safety 141–2w

Food Safety Act 1990
Questions
141–2w

Food Standards Agency
199–200w, 203w

Food supply
Military exercises 489w

Football
Hooliganism 557–8w
World Cup 130–2w, 383–4w, 474w

Football Task Force
220w, 340w

Foreign and Commonwealth Office
BBC Monitoring 286w
Empty property 478w, 582w
Manpower 178w

Foreign relations
Cuba 680–1
France 414w
Francophone countries 565w
Iran 324w, 416–7w
Iraq 412w
Montenegro 412w

Forests
Sales 241–2w

Forth, Mr Eric
Debates etc.
Business question time intervention (20.01.00) 985
Business questions (19.01.00) 940, (20.01.00) 989
Disqualifications Bill, Points of order (19.01.00) 865
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1078–80, 1088–9, 1091–2
Line of route (18.01.00) 801, 805, 812–3
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 471–2, 478, 483–4, 491–2, 495–6, 502–4
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 872, 876–9, 882–3, 896–900, 913–9, 929, 933–4
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1005, 1008–12, 1030–2, 1043–5, 1060
Questions
Business questions 430–1
Child benefit 76w

Foster, Mr Don
Questions
Consultants, Cabinet Office 443w
Consultants, Dept of Health 52w
Consultants, Ministry of Defence 84w
Secondment, Cabinet Office 134w
Secondment, Home Office 471–2w

Foster, Mr Michael Jabez, (Hastings and Rye)
Questions
Common fisheries policy 417–8
NHS 275–6
Pensioners, Income support 15

Foster, Mr Michael John, (Worcester)
Questions
Common agricultural policy, Worcestershire 99w
Hunting 489–90w
Pedestrian crossings, Schools 115–6w

Foulkes, Mr George, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for International Development
Questions
ACP countries, Sugar 577w
British Council 567–8w
British Council, Contracts 567–8w
British Council, Developing countries 479w
Casual workers, Dept for International Development 480w
Developing countries, Alternative energy 565w
Developing countries, Debts 479–80w, 562–3w
Developing countries, Export credit guarantees 566w
Disabled, Dept for International Development 567w
EC aid 564–5w

Foulkes, Mr George—continued
Ethiopia 262–3w
Ethiopia, Overseas aid 262–3w
Ethnic groups, Dept for International Development 567w
Females, Dept for International Development 567w
Francophone countries, Foreign relations 565w
International Monetary Fund, Poverty 481w
Internet, Dept for International Development 481w
Manpower, Dept for International Development 566–7w
Moluccan Islands 564w
Non-governmental organisations 565w
Overseas aid 566w
Religion, Dept for International Development 567w
Smoking, Dept for International Development 481w
Sudan, Human rights 262w
Sudan, Overseas aid 262w
Visits abroad, Dept for International Development 563w

Fowler, Rt Hon Sir Norman
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 988
Health services (18.01.00) 719–21
Questions
Pinochet, Augusto 284–5

Fox, Dr Liam
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 691–8, 700–2, 706–8
Influenza (10.01.00) 23–5

France
Foreign relations 414w
Lorry drivers 360–1w, 414w
Trade agreements 383w

Franchises
Train operating companies 251w

Francophone countries
Foreign relations 565w

Fraser, Mr Christopher
Questions
Consultants, Lord Chancellor's Dept 507w
Consultants, Treasury 356w

Fraud
EC budget 354–5w, 514w

Fuel poverty
139w

Fuels
Excise duties 569w
Pollution control 247–8w, 358–9w
Smuggling 393w

Fur Farming (Prohibition) Bill 1999/2000
Questions
101–2w

Further education
541w
English language 223–4w
Jobseeker's allowance 151–2w
Teachers 440w

Future large aircraft
283–4w
Wales 833

Fyfe, Maria
Debates etc.
Calling of Members, Points of order (19.01.00) 865–6
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 224–5

Fyfe, Maria—continued
Sittings in Westminster Hall
River Clyde, Shipbuilding (18.01.00) 185wh
Questions
Children, Day care 963–4
Employment 539w
Northern Ireland Equality Commission 180–1w
Severe disablement allowance 2–3

Gale, Mr Roger
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 942–3
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1072–3
Influenza (10.01.00) 29
Southern Water, Sewage (11.01.00) 250–5
Questions
Agriculture, Trade agreements 413
Business questions 432–3

Gamma hydroxybutyrate
11–2w, 41w, 142w, 177w

Gapes, Mr Mike
Questions
Iran, Ballistic missiles 410w
Iran, Foreign relations 324w
Russia, Arms trade 410w
Serbia, Export controls 133w
Terrorism 413w
Wassenaar Arrangement 133–4w
Zimbabwe, Human rights 132–3w

Garages and petrol stations
(12.01.00) 70–89wh
Licensing 359w

Gardiner, Mr Barry
Debates etc.
Mortgages, Unfair practices (12.01.00) 398–401
Questions
Athletics 349w
Athletics, Twickenham 349–50w
Early retirement, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 5w
Early retirement, Dept of Trade and Industry 258w
Early retirement, Ministry of Defence 87–8w
Health visitors, Greater London 61w
Wembley Stadium 348w, 384w

Garnier, Mr Edward
Questions
Acquittals 321w
Best value 130–1
Crown Prosecution Service 421
Members, Correspondence 511w
Trials 35–6w

Gas fired power stations
522w

Gas Supply
see Natural gas

Gatwick Airport
Noise (11.01.00) 30–7wh

Gender selection
In vitro fertilisation 136w

General practitioners
Medway 509w

Genetically modified organisms
(13.01.00) 111–52wh
Crops 206w, 212–3w
Honey 419–20w
Pesticides 152w
Research 99w

Genetics
Research (11.01.00) 38–46wh

Genocide
World War II 455w

George, Mr Andrew
Sittings in Westminster Hall
EC grants and loans (11.01.00) 1–6wh, 14–5wh, 22wh
Questions
Africa, Overseas aid 183–4w
Chlormequat 157–8w, 503–4w
Cultural relations 495w
EC aid, Environment protection 184w
EC grants and loans 5–6w, 29–30w, 102w
EC grants and loans, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 205–6w
Fisheries 101w, 153w
Fishing offences, Prosecutions 101w
Higher education, Cornwall 957
Poultry, Animal welfare 100w
Severe disablement allowance 1–2

Germany
Armed forces 280–1w
Embassies 329w

Gerrard, Mr Neil
Questions
Ancillary staff, Compensation 227w
Developing countries, AIDS 676–7
Fire regulations 532–3w
Gibraltar, Immigration 131w
Immigrants 298–9w
New deal schemes, Training 272w

Gibb, Mr Nick
Questions
Electricity, Competition 524–5w
Excise duties, Diesel fuel 104w
Insolvency Practices Council 484w
Official hospitality, Prime Minister 268w
Parcelforce 30w
Post Office 30w
Postage stamps 31w
Postal Services Commission, Public appointments 31w, 108w
Tax credit 353–4w
Uraemia 59w
West Sussex Health Authority, Waiting lists 510w

Gibraltar
Immigration 131w

Gibson, Dr Ian
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 124wh, 134wh, 137wh
Genetics, Research (11.01.00) 38–40wh
Questions
Cancer, Fertility 144w
Cuba, Foreign relations 680–1
Electromagnetic fields, Health hazards 583w
Higher education, Standards 542w
Organophosphates 204w, 241w
Pensions, Norwich 225–6w
"Widening Gap" 582–3w

Gill, Mr Christopher
Questions
Elderly, Institutional care 142w
Fisheries 102w
Food, EC action 414–5
Integrated pollution control 208w, 244w

Gillan, Mrs Cheryl
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 702, 744
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Nuclear weapons, Proliferation (18.01.00) 157wh, 161wh, 169–71wh
Questions
Africa, Armed conflict 680

Gillan, Mrs Cheryl—continued
British Council, Developing countries 479w
Casual workers, Dept for International Development 480w
Developing countries, Debts 479w, 562w
EC aid 564w
Internet, Dept for International Development 481w
Kosovo 480w
Manpower, Dept for International Development 566–7w
Visits abroad, Dept for International Development 563w

Gilroy, Mrs Linda
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 614, 626, 628
Sittings in Westminster Hall
EC grants and loans (11.01.00) 18wh
Post offices (12.01.00) 61wh
Questions
British Irish Council 200–1w
Criminal proceedings, Disclosure of information 295–6w
Iraq-Kuwait conflict, Chemical and biological warfare 534w
Local exchange and trading schemes 14

Glasgow
Drugs 555w

Glass
521–2w
North West region 259w

Gloucestershire
Drugs 545w

Godman, Dr Norman A
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 152
Questions
British Irish Council 472–3w
Business questions 434
EC enlargement 407w
Navy, Asbestos 166w
Refugees, Scotland 299w
Strategic Rail Authority, Public appointments 6w
Weapons, Northern Ireland 259–62

Goggins, Mr Paul
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 596–9
Questions
Drugs, Crime 674–5
Pensions, Tax credit 7–8

Gold and foreign exchange reserves
105w

Golding, Mrs Llin
Debates etc.
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1083
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 44
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Horserace Totalisator Board (19.01.00) 202–3wh, 210wh

Gordon, Eileen
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 218–20, 233
Influenza (10.01.00) 22

Governing bodies
Schools 436–7w

Government
(18.01.00) 750–800

Government departments
Information technology 134–5w
Lighting 119w

Government Resources and Accounts Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
Order relating to Com (10.01.00) 33

Gray, Mr James
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 881, 886, 918, 921
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 999, 1018, 1020
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Horserace Totalisator Board (19.01.00) 206–7wh, 210wh, 218wh
Post offices (12.01.00) 54wh
Questions
Belfast Agreement 179w
Bus services, Yorkshire and Humberside 128
Hamilton, Thomas, Personal records 222w
Planning permission, Competition 115w

Greater London
Arrests 368w
Cycleways 528w
Doctors 61w
Drugs 555w
Headteachers 273w
Health visitors 61w
Homelessness 165w
Housing (19.01.00) 241–9wh
Illegal immigrants 454w
New deal for communities 449w
New deal schemes 442w
Poverty (11.01.00) 23–9wh
Prisons 453–4w
Public footpaths 119w
Public transport 249w
Taxis 529w
Tourism 387w
Voluntary schools 40–1w
Waste disposal 362w

Greater London Authority
Elections 253w, 530w

Green, Mr Damian
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 758–9
Questions
Exhaust emissions, Pollution control 142
Flood control 9w
Members, Correspondence 61–2w
Sustainable Development Commission 529w

Greenhouse effect
114–5w

Greenway, Mr John
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 306, 308, 323, 330–3, 378–9, (13.01.00) 440–1, 448, 453, 458, 460–1, 464–5, 467–70, 473
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 870–6, 878, 885, 891–2, 900–1
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Horserace Totalisator Board (19.01.00) 206wh, 212–5wh
Questions
Police, Recruitment 321w
Public safety radio communications project 301–2w, 541

Gregory, Sandra
(17.01.00) 660–6

Greyhound racing
Animal welfare 464–5w

Grieve, Mr Dominic
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 317–8, 323, 328–30, 336, 338, 341, 348, 351–2, 376, 379–80, (13.01.00) 456, 482, 485–8

Griffiths, Jane
Questions
Armed forces, Falkland Islands 207w
Dogs 124w
Indonesia 408w
Sleeping rough 112w
Standards Fund 176w

Griffiths, Mr Win
Questions
Institutional care, Wales 495w

Grocott, Mr Bruce
Questions
Africa, Armed conflict 679–80
Community safety local partnerships 545

Grogan, Mr John
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 593–6
Questions
Bus services, Yorkshire and Humberside 128
Countryside stewardship scheme 239w
Horserace Totalisator Board 547–8

Guide dogs
Taxis 529w

Guided weapons
96w, 490w
Libyan Arab Republic 220w, 326w, 414–5w

Guillotine
(20.01.00) 998–1015

Gulf Veterans' Illnesses Unit
USA 85–6w

Gulf War
see Iraq-Kuwait conflict

Gulf War syndrome
533–4w

Gurkhas
War pensions 89–90w

Hadley Wood
Railway stations (19.01.00) 258–64wh

Hague, Rt Hon William
Questions
NHS 268–70, 836–9
Proportional representation 274–5

Hain, Mr Peter, Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office
Debates etc.
Gregory, Sandra (17.01.00) 662–6
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Nuclear weapons, Proliferation (18.01.00) 171–4wh
Questions
Africa, Armed conflict 407w, 678–80
BBC Monitoring, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 286w
Chemical Weapons Convention, Sudan 323w
Children, Employment 578w
Developing countries, AIDS 676–7
Developing countries, Arms trade 677
Diplomatic service 582w
Embassies, Operating costs 3w, 131–2w, 329w
Ethiopia, Eritrea 413–4w

Hain, Mr Peter—continued
Ilisu dam 477w
India, Christianity 478w
India, Electronic funds transfer 326w, 415–6w
Indonesia, Sanctions 325w, 478w
International Criminal Court 415w
Iran, Armed forces 324w
Iran, Ballistic missiles 410–2w, 475w
Iran, Capital punishment 323–4w
Iran, Chemical weapons 475w
Iran, Extradition 324w
Iran, Foreign relations 324w
Iran, Human rights 220–1w, 325w, 409w
Iran, Intelligence services 475–6w
Iran, Israel 323w
Iran, Nuclear weapons 324w, 475w
Iran, Proscribed organisations 325w
Iran, Religion 324w
Iran, Terrorism 580–1w
Iran, Weapons 323w, 411w
Iraq, Arms trade 478w
Iraq, Foreign relations 412w
Iraq, Sanctions 220w
Italy, Embassies 329w
Kashmir 677–8
Libyan Arab Republic, Guided weapons 220w
Manpower, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 178w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 412w
Middle East, Refugees 409w
Morocco 323w
Nuclear weapons, Proliferation 413w
Pakistan, Arms trade 578w
Russia, Arms trade 410w
Sri Lanka 579w
Sri Lanka, Armed conflict 328w, 416w
United Arab Emirates, Children 322w
Zimbabwe, Human rights 132–3w

Hall, Mr Patrick
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Bank services, Overcharging (19.01.00) 220–5wh
Questions
National Council of Victim Support 301w

Hamas
411w

Hamill, Robert
32w

Hamilton, Mr Fabian
Questions
Exhaust emissions, Pollution control 141
Hamas 411w
Iran, Ballistic missiles 410–2w
Iran, Human rights 409w
Iran, Weapons 411w

Hamilton, Thomas
Personal records 26–7w, 222w

Hammond, Mr Philip
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 701, 736–40, 743–4
Questions
Breast cancer, Screening 54w
Dental services, Waiting lists 511w
Epidemiology 289–90w
Hospitals, Infectious diseases 53–4w
NHS Direct 289w

Hancock, Mr Mike
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 763
Health services (18.01.00) 705
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R

Hancock, Mr Mike*—*continued
(20.01.00) 1019–20, 1024, 1027, 1032, 1038, 1042–3, 1046–7, 1052–3, 1060–1
Questions
Antiaircraft missiles 84w
Armed conflict 85w
Armed forces, East Timor 84–5w
Armed forces, Hospitals 280–1w, 492–3w
Armed forces, Indonesia 281–2w
Armed forces, Telecommunications 282w
ASTOR system 395–6w
Council housing, Waiting lists 163w
Defence Housing Executive, Computers 81–2w
Drug seizures 554–5w
Drugs, Crime 553–4w
Drugs, Greater London 555w
Guided weapons 96w
HMS Brave 83w
HMS Chatham 82–3w
Homelessness, Greater London 165w
Horizon project 91w
Military aircraft 394–5w
Navy, Deployment 82w
Smuggling, Drugs 233w
Territorial Army, Costs 92w
Territorial Army, Manpower 492w
Territorial Army, Recruitment 395–6w
Torpedoes 128w
Type 45 destroyers 91w, 126–7w
United Arab Emirates, Children 322w
Weapons, Safety 165w

Hanson, Mr David*, *Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 740–5
Questions
Child Abuse in North Wales Judicial Inquiry 834
Cultural relations 495w
Future large aircraft, Wales 833
Health services, Wales 498w
Institutional care, Wales 495w
Law enforcement, Wales 833–5
Local government, Wales 496–7w
Non-domestic rates, Wales 255–6w
Pensioners, Wales 495w
Theatre, Wales 330w, 498w
Transport, Wales 830–2
Universities, Wales 498w
University of Wales College of Medicine, Swansea 498w
Working families tax credit, Wales 499w

Hare Coursing Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
1R (10.01.00) 33

Harman, Rt Hon Harriet
Questions
"Tackling Congestion and Pollution" 367w

Harris, Dr Evan
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 297
Influenza (10.01.00) 31
Questions
Nutrition 50–1w
Research, Dept for Education and Employment 39–40w
Research, Northern Ireland Office 32w

Harvey, Mr Nick
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 709–15
Questions
Rivers, South West region 120–1w

Hawkins, Mr Nick
Debates etc.
Health services, Surrey (13.01.00) 528
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 879
Questions
Electoral register 215–6w
Specialist schools initiative 958

Hayes, Mr John
Questions
Business questions 435–6

Headteachers
Greater London 273w

Heal, Mrs Sylvia
Questions
Social security benefits, Carers 5

Heald, Mr Oliver
Debates etc.
Line of route (18.01.00) 802, 813
Questions
Police, Manpower 295w

Healey, Mr John
Debates etc.
EC grants and loans (11.01.00) 5
Questions
Armed forces, Deployment 493w
Class sizes 957
Disability living allowance, Appeals 9
Regional development agencies, Government assistance 269–70w
Vacancies 542w

Health
Armed forces 277w
Charities 291–2w

Health education
Organic food 237w

Health hazards
Artificial sweeteners 584w
Cellular phones 55w, 187–8w
Electromagnetic fields 196w, 583–4w
Pesticides 417–8w

Health insurance
835–6

Health services
Avon (19.01.00) 946–54
Barnet 138w, 236w
Cancer 55–6w
Discrimination 144w
Fertility 58–9w
Hearing impaired 238w, 421w
Lancashire 290–1w
Opposition days (18.01.00) 691–749
Reserve forces 396w
Surrey (13.01.00) 528–36
Wales 498w

Health visitors
Greater London 61w

Hearing impaired
Health services 238w, 421w

Heath, Mr David
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 577–81
Post offices (17.01.00) 620, 629–30
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 347–9, 367–8, 372
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 122–6wh
Post offices (12.01.00) 51wh
Questions
Achondroplasia 73–4w
Education, Finance 543w

Heath, Mr David*—*continued
Genetically modified organisms, Pesticides 152w
Genetically modified organisms, Research 99w
Serbia, Sanctions 681–2
Trials 300w
Witnesses, Protection 553–4

Heathcoat-Amory, Rt Hon David
Questions
Cellular phones, Health hazards 187–8w
Company investigations 525w
Company investigations, Correspondence 525w
Hollis Industries 569w
Maxwell companies, Pension funds 570w
Robinson, Geoffrey, Correspondence 525w

Heathrow Airport
Refugees 298w
Riot control weapons 556w

Henderson, Mr Ivan
Questions
Joint rapid deployment force 128–9w

Hepburn, Mr Stephen
Questions
Road traffic 137

Heppell, Mr John
Questions
New deal schemes 267–8
Witnesses, Magistrates' courts 299w

Herbal medicine
55w

Hesford, Mr Stephen
Questions
Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland 33–4w

Hewitt, Ms Patricia*, *Minister of State, Dept of Trade and Industry
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Small businesses (20.01.00) 265–71wh, 274wh, 276wh, 304–8wh
Questions
Animal experiments 167–8w
Integrated pollution control 208w
Radiation exposure, Research 487w
Regional selective assistance 208w
Small Business Service 482w

"High Voltage Power Lines and Public Health"
583w

Higher civil servants
Prison Service 456–7w

Higher education
Conditions of employment 538w
Cornwall 957
Pay 542w
Standards 542w

Higher Education Funding Council for England
Public appointments 145w

Hill, Mr Keith*, *Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Railway stations, Hadley Wood (19.01.00) 262–4wh
Questions
Automatic train protection 246w
British Railways Board, Assets 253w
Bus services 366w
Bus services, Rural areas 365w
Bypasses, Ambleside 362w
Cars 529w

Hill, Mr Keith—continued*
Central Railway 128–30
Cycleways, Greater London 528w
Dogs 6w
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, Ophthalmic services 4–5w, 249–50w
Driving, Licensing 210–1w
Driving, Safety 212w
Driving Standards Agency 213w, 363w
East coast railway line 111w
EC transport policy 577–8w
Eurostar 450w
Fares, Concessions 209w
Fares, Disabled 254w
Fireworks, Millennium 248–9w
Greater London Authority, Elections 253w, 530w
Hotels, Sales 448w
Integrated pollution control 244w
Lighting 451w
London Underground 112w
Lorries, Safety 361–2w
Lorries, Tolls 252w
Lorry drivers, France 360–1w
M60 528w
Midland main railway line 448w
Motor vehicles 209w
Motor vehicles, Excise duties 253–4w
Motorway service areas, Parking offences 252w
Passenger ships, Safety 450–1w
Pedestrian crossings, Schools 115–6w
Petrol alternatives 251–2w
Ports 449w
Public transport, Greater London 249w
Public transport, Information services 115w
Railtrack, Investment 452w
Railway stations 449w
Railways, Accidents 451w
Railways, Safety 246–7w
Road traffic 136–9
Road traffic, Rural areas 450w
Road traffic control, Costs 363w
Road works, Utilities 250–1w
Roads, Accidents 209–10w
Roads, Finance 134–6
Roads, Repairs and maintenance 529–32w
Roads, West Sussex 211w
Strategic Rail Authority, Public appointments 6w
"Tackling Congestion and Pollution" 367w
Taxis, Guide dogs 529w
Train operating companies, Franchises 251w
Train operating companies, Standards 252w
Trains, Fares 449w
Trains, Overcrowding 114w
Trams, Croydon 116–7w
Transport, Conferences 248w
Transport, EC countries 450w
Transport, Rural areas 245w
Tyne and Wear Metro 531–2w

Hill livestock allowances
408–10

Hillingdon
Police 320w

Hinchliffe, Mr David
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 716–9

Hip replacements
Correspondence 237w

Historic buildings
Chorley 387–8w

HIV infection
Babies 190w

HM Land Registry
see Land Registry

HM Prison Service
see Prison Service

HMS Brave
83w

HMS Broadsword
92–3w

HMS Chatham
82–3w

HMS Westminster
97–8w, 490w

Hodge, Ms Margaret, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Education and Employment*
Questions
Age, Discrimination 539–40w
Children, Day care 42w, 964–5
Conditions of employment 541w
Disabled, Financial services 42w
Education, Disabled 540w
New deal for lone parents 274w
Older workers 41w
Pre-school education, Northumberland 45w
Remploy 175w
Schools access initiative 272–3w

Hoey, Miss Kate, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Culture Media and Sport*
Questions
Athletics 349w, 385–7w
Athletics, Lancashire 386w
Athletics, Twickenham 349–50w
Cricket, Grants 345–6w
"Culture Media and Sport Select Committee on Staging International Sporting Events" 25–6w
English Table Tennis Association 22–3w
Football, World Cup 130–2w, 383–4w, 474w
Football Task Force 220w, 340w
Rugby, North West region 345w
Sports 341w
Sports, Facilities 345w
Sports, Finance 341–2w
Sportsgrounds 343w
Sportsgrounds, Lancashire 343w
Swimming, Olympic Games 343w
Television, Licensing 537w
Wembley Stadium 23–4w, 159w, 348w, 384–5w

Hogg, Rt Hon Douglas
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 941, (20.01.00) 992–3
Line of route (18.01.00) 801–2
Questions
Pakistan, Democracy 672–3

Holbeck Holdings
486–7w

Hollis Industries
569w

Home energy efficiency scheme
8w

Home improvement agencies
213–4w

Home Office
Assets 463–4w
Buildings 19w, 558w
Cost effectiveness 214w
Empty property 468–71w
Manpower 176–7w
Secondment 471–2w

Home Office—continued*
Smoking 553w

Homelessness
6w
Drugs 176w
Greater London 165w

Homicide
216–7w
Northern Ireland 526–7w

Homosexuality
British dependent territories 221w
Schools 839–40

Honey
Genetically modified organisms 419–20w

Hood, Mr Jimmy
Questions
Homosexuality, Schools 839–40

Hooliganism
Football 557–8w

Hoon, Rt Hon Geoffrey, Secretary of State for Defence*
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Ministerial statements (12.01.00) 287–301
Questions
Armed forces, East Timor 84–5w
Defence, Expenditure 285–6w
Defence capabilities initiative 166w
EC common foreign and security policy 488–9w
Guided weapons 490w
International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia 3w
Kosovo, Armed conflict 493–4w
Kosovo, Armed forces 489w
Members, Correspondence 94w
Military aircraft, Iraq 165w
Navy 285w
Navy, Deployment 82w
Nuclear weapons 398–9w
Nuclear weapons, International law 95w
Nuclear weapons, USA 493w
Russia 283–4w
Trident missiles 94–6w

Hope, Mr Phil
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 943
Members, Points of order (19.01.00) 944–5
Questions
Closed circuit television 214w
EC institutions, Reform 842
Public safety radio communications project 214w
Tyson, Mike 317–8w

Hopkins, Mr Kelvin
Questions
Central Railway 129
Road works, Utilities 250–1w

Horam, Mr John
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 114–7wh

Horizon project
91w

Horserace Totalisator Board
(19.01.00) 199–219wh, 547–8

Hospital beds
423–4w
Intensive care 289w

Hospitals
Admissions 63w
Armed forces 280–1w, 492–3w
Essex 234w

Hospitals—continued
Infectious diseases 53–4w
Waiting lists 234w, 422w, 511w

Hotels
Sales 448w

House of Commons
Management (20.01.00) 1062–92
Telephone systems 546–7w

House of Commons Modernisation Select Committee
see Modernisation of the House of Commons Select Committee

House of Lords Reform Royal Commission
see Reform of the House of Lords Royal Commission

Housing
Armed forces 285w, 399–402w
Construction 113–4w
Empty property 139–40
Greater London (19.01.00) 241–9wh
Refugees 471w
Rodents 575–6w
VAT 272, 356w
West Sussex 4w

Housing benefit
69w, 433–4w
Abuse 338–40w
Edinburgh 340w
Landlord and tenant (12.01.00) 104–10wh

Housing management
Council housing 119–20w

Howard, Rt Hon Michael
Debates etc.
Pinochet, Augusto, Points of order (11.01.00) 248
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 864
Questions
Crime, Kent 542–3

Howarth, Mr Alan, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Culture Media and Sport
Questions
Archaeology, Seas and oceans 348w
Astley Hall Museum 387–8w
Royal Ballet 344w
Royal parks, Demonstrations 346–8w
Theatre, Rural areas 346w

Howarth, Mr George, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Northern Ireland Office
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 341–3, 352–6, (13.01.00) 487–93, 496–7, 501–2, 508, 513
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 918, 925–8
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1014, 1020–1, 1024–6, 1029–30, 1041–4
Questions
Administration of justice, Northern Ireland 445–6w
Belfast Agreement 179–80w
Equal opportunities, Northern Ireland 445w
Equal opportunities, Northern Ireland Office 265–6w
Human rights, Northern Ireland 444–5w
North South Ministerial Council 178–9w
Northern Ireland Equality Commission 180–1w

Howarth, Mr Gerald
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 299
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 449–53, 459, 461, 464
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 908–10, 913, 922
Questions
Export credit guarantees, Arms trade 379–80w
Hill livestock allowances 408–9
Pinochet, Augusto 282–3

Howells, Dr Kim, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Trade and Industry
Debates etc.
Mortgages, Unfair practices (12.01.00) 401–4
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Garages and petrol stations, Contracts (12.01.00) 78wh, 83wh, 86–9wh
Questions
Arms trade, Export controls 28w
Arms trade, Turkey 483w
British Sky Broadcasting 522w
Cash dispensing 28–9w
Copyright, Internet 27–8w
Empty property, Dept of Trade and Industry 521w
Export controls 178w
Holbeck Holdings 486–7w
Insolvency Practices Council 484w
Newspaper press, Wales 520w
Nuclear safeguards 487–8w
Pesticides, Labelling 482w
Petrol, Retail trade 523w
Smoking, Dept of Trade and Industry 486w

Hoyle, Mr Lindsay
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 199–200
Government (18.01.00) 769
Post offices (17.01.00) 631, 642–4
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Garages and petrol stations, Contracts (12.01.00) 76–8wh, 84wh
Post offices (12.01.00) 54–6wh, 64wh
Questions
Airbus Military 284w
Astley Hall Museum 387–8w
Athletics 385–6w
Athletics, Lancashire 386w
British Sky Broadcasting 522w
C17 aircraft 284w
Cars, Prices 484w
Cricket, Grants 345–6w
Crime, Lancashire 319w
Exchange rates, Exports 393w, 484–5w
Excise duties, Beer 393w
Exhaust emissions, Pollution control 142
Film 344w
Film, Cartoons 343–4w
Film, Exports 343w
Food, Labelling 418–9w
Future large aircraft 283–4w
Future large aircraft, Wales 833
Gulf War syndrome 533–4w
Health services, Lancashire 290–1w
Joint rapid deployment force, Oman 88–9w
Latin America, Drugs 408w
Lorries, North West region 484w
Lorries, Tolls 252w
Lorry drivers, France 361w
Manufacturing industries, North West region 380–1w

Hoyle, Mr Lindsay—continued
Military aircraft 88w
Motorway service areas, Parking offences 252w
Non-domestic rates, North West region 522w
Organic farming, Lancashire 419w
Petrol, Retail trade 523w
Petrol alternatives 251–2w
Pigs 407
Pigs, Animal welfare 577w
Quarantine 100w
Radioactive materials, Japan 261w
Railway stations 449w
Rescue services 82w
Reserve forces, Balkans 207–8w
Road traffic control, Lorries 318–9w
Roads, Repairs and maintenance 529–30w
Royal Ballet 344w
Rugby, North West region 345w
Smuggling, Alcoholic drinks 351w
Smuggling, Fuels 393w
Sports 341w
Sports, Facilities 345w
Sports, Finance 341–2w
Sportsgrounds 343w
Sportsgrounds, Lancashire 343w
Swimming, Olympic Games 343w
Television, Licensing 537w
Theatre, Rural areas 346w
Tourism 387w
Tourism, North West region 344–5w, 387w
Trade promotion 484w
Train operating companies, Franchises 251w
Train operating companies, Standards 252w
Trains, Fares 449w

Hughes, Ms Beverley, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Aerials, Planning permission (18.01.00) 194–8wh
Swimming pools, Safety (18.01.00) 178–81wh
Questions
Coal, Mining 112–3w
Constituencies 7w
Construction 114w
Cost effectiveness, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 8–9w
Council tax 250w
Council tax, Police authorities 367–8w
Deregulation, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 532w
Early retirement, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 5w
EC grants and loans 5–6w
Empty property, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 446–7w
Environmental impact assessment 4w
Fire regulations 532–3w
Flood control 9w
Housing, Construction 113–4w
Housing, West Sussex 4w
Local government, Pensions 248w
Local government, Standards 5w
Local government finance 116w
London and South East Regional Planning Conference 450w
Manpower, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions 164–5w
New deal for communities 449w
New deal for communities, Greater London 449w
Planning, South West region 213w

Hughes, Ms Beverley—continued
Planning Inspectorate 113w
Planning permission, Competition 115w
Playing fields 115w
Regional planning and development 112w
Roads, Safety 143–4
Single regeneration budget 113w
Standard spending assessments 254–5w

Hughes, Mr Simon
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 563, 565–6
Pinochet, Augusto, Points of order (11.01.00) 248
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 39–40, 44, 59, 114
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 306, 309–10, 321–5, 331, 338–40, 342, 352, 354–6, 370, 373, 380–2, 386, 397, (13.01.00) 482–3, 486, 491–3, 500–1, 510, 512–3, 516–7, 523–4
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 888, 926
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1002, 1009–10, 1012–3, 1022, 1048, 1050–1, 1058
Questions
Doncaster Prison 457w
Law enforcement, Wales 833–4
London Underground 112w
Metropolitan Police, Manpower 457–63w
Pinochet, Augusto 280–1
Police, Manpower 455w
Prison Service, Higher civil servants 456–7w
Prisons, Contracts for services 456w
Probation and aftercare 216w
Public safety radio communications project 541
Social security benefits, Offenders 225w
Trials 457–8w
Weapons, Northern Ireland 259–60

Human rights
Chile 546w, 581w
Commonwealth 183w
Iran 220–1w, 325w, 409w
Northern Ireland 444–5w
Peru 321–2w
Sudan 262w
Zimbabwe 132–3w

Human Rights Act 1998
Questions
444w, 505–6w

Humble, Mrs Joan
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 166, 182, 223–6

Hume, Mr John
Debates etc.
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 850–1
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Garages and petrol stations, Contracts (12.01.00) 76wh
Questions
Weapons, Northern Ireland 262

Hunter, Mr Andrew
Questions
ACP countries, Sugar 577w
Fur Farming (Prohibition) Bill 1999/2000 101–2w

Hunting
489–90w

Hurst, Mr Alan
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 639–40
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 481, 494–5, 499
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Post offices (12.01.00) 59–60wh
Questions
British Railways Board, Assets 253w
London and South East Regional Planning Conference 450w
Post offices, Bank services 523w
Waste disposal, Greater London 362w

Hutton, Mr John, Minister of State, Dept of Health
Questions
Arthritis, Medical treatments 145w
Community care, Disability living allowance 291w
Dental services 588w
Disabled, Ophthalmic services 294w
Drugs, Rehabilitation 191–4w
Elderly, Institutional care 142w
Health, Charities 291–2w
Health services, Discrimination 144w
Hearing impaired, Health services 238w
Hip replacements, Correspondence 237w
Incontinence 237–8w
Institutional care 288w
Institutional care, Fees and charges 425w
Institutional care, Private sector 143w
Members, Correspondence 511w
Mental health 198w
Mental health services 293w
Mental health services, Fees and charges 423–4w
Mental health services, Manpower 293w
Mental patients 292w
Mentally ill, Drugs 197w
Mentally incapacitated 199w
Neurology 423w
Respiratory system, Diseases 421–2w
Special hospitals, Vacancies 145w

Iddon, Dr Brian
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 130wh, 142–4wh
Questions
Disposable syringes 141w
Drugs, Rehabilitation 191–4w
Herbal medicine 55w
Middle East, Refugees 409w
Minimum wage 208w
Paediatrics, Intensive care 198–9w
Prisons, Overcrowding 538
Sleeping rough 112w
Special hospitals, Vacancies 145w
VAT, Energy 352w

Ilisu dam
31w, 257w, 268–9w, 477w, 538w, 668

Illegal immigrants
297w, 319w
Greater London 454w

Illsley, Mr Eric
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 151
Questions
Barnsley 166w

Immigrants
298–9w

Immigration
Administrative delays 13w
Appeals 16w, 34–5w
Gibraltar 131w
Indian subcontinent 579–80w

Immigration—continued
Voucher schemes 452w

Immigration and Nationality Directorate
Correspondence 122w

Immigration (Port of Entry) (Amendment) Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
1R (18.01.00) 689–90

Immobilisation of vehicles
550–1

Imphal Barracks
Correspondence 166w

Imports
Asbestos 380w
Coal 109–10w, 524w

In vitro fertilisation
Gender selection 136w

Incapacity benefit
9–10, 19–20, 226–7w
Medical examinations 10

Incentives
Dept for International Development 482w
Lord Chancellor's Dept 296w
Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 417w
Treasury 352–3w

Incinerators
Environmental health 131–3

Income support
430w
Institutional care 229w
Pensioners 15, 66w, 330w, 432w, 572–3w

Income tax
840

Incontinence
237–8w

Independent Case Examiner for the Child Support Agency
10–2

Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland
33–4w, 181w

Independent International Commission on Decommissioning
527w

India
Christianity 478w
Electronic funds transfer 326w, 415–6w

Indian subcontinent
Immigration 579–80w

Indonesia
408w
Armed forces 281–2w
Arms trade 673
Sanctions 325w, 478w, 581w

Industrial diseases
Compensation 521w

Industrial health and safety
Nuclear power stations 108–9w

Industrial injuries disablement benefit
430w
Asbestos 499–500w
Pneumoconiosis 230–2w, 500w

Infectious diseases
Hospitals 53–4w

Influenza
516w, 584–5w
Ministerial statements (10.01.00) 21–33
NHS Direct 584w
Vaccination 585–8w

Information services
Public transport 115w

Information technology
Beacon schools 960–1
Crown Prosecution Service 218–9w
Government departments 134–5w
Meat Hygiene Service 154w
Police 540–1

Information Technology Services Agency
Contracts for services 394w

Ingram, Rt Hon Adam, Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office
Questions
Administration of justice, Northern Ireland 266w
Crimes of violence, Northern Ireland 182w
European Convention on Human Rights, Northern Ireland 130w
Hamill, Robert 32w
Homicide, Northern Ireland 526–7w
Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland 33–4w, 181w
Independent International Commission on Decommissioning 527w
Ludlow, Seamus 32–3w
Parades Commission 526w
Police, Northern Ireland 33w
Police Authority for Northern Ireland, Annual reports 443–4w
Reparation by offenders, Northern Ireland 181w, 263–5
Research, Northern Ireland Office 32w
Royal Ulster Constabulary 181–2w
Royal Ulster Constabulary, Compensation 444w
Royal Ulster Constabulary, Kosovo 34w
Royal Ulster Constabulary, Special Branch 129–30w
Security, Northern Ireland 180w, 265–7
Terrorism, Northern Ireland 178w
Victim support schemes, Northern Ireland 182w

Injuries
143w
Fireworks 188w

Insignia
Air force (19.01.00) 250–7wh

Insolvency Practices Council
484w

Institutional care
229–30w, 288w
Elderly 142w
Fees and charges 425w
Income support 229w
Private sector 143w
Wales 495w

Insurance companies
Assets 353w

Integrated pollution control
208w, 244w

Intellectual property
Developing countries 256–7w

Intelligence and Security Committee
Public appointments 221–2w

Intelligence services
Iran 475–6w

Intensive care
Hospital beds 289w
Paediatrics 198–9w

Interest rates
Debts 394w
Mortgages 354w

Intergovernmental Conference 2000
412w, 416w, 668–9

International Court of Justice
476w

International Criminal Court
415w

International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia
3w

International Decommissioning Commission
see Independent International Commission on Decommissioning

International law
Nuclear weapons 95w

International Monetary Fund
Poverty 481w

Internet
Copyright 27–8w
Dept for International Development 481w
Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 496w
Schools 36w
Shropshire 36w

Intimidation
Armed forces 402–4w

Invalid care allowances
76–7w, 570–1w
Scotland 73w

Investors in people
Civil service 441–3w

Iran
Armed forces 324w
Ballistic missiles 410–2w, 475w
Capital punishment 323–4w
Chemical weapons 475w
Extradition 324w
Foreign relations 324w, 416–7w
Human rights 220–1w, 325w, 409w
Intelligence services 475–6w
Israel 323w
Nuclear power stations 413w
Nuclear weapons 324w, 475w
Proscribed organisations 325w
Religion 324w
Terrorism 476w, 580–1w
Weapons 323w, 411w

Iraq
Arms trade 478w
Foreign relations 412w
Military aircraft 165w
Sanctions 220w

Iraq-Kuwait conflict
Casualties 89–90w
Chemical and biological warfare 534–5w
Organophosphates 535–6w

Irinotecan
52–3w

Isle of Sheppey
Minor injuries units 509–10w

Israel
Iran 323w

Italy
Embassies 329w

Jack, Rt Hon Michael
Debates etc.
Oral question time intervention (17.01.00) 538
Oral questions, Points of order (17.01.00) 556
Questions
Agriculture, Wales 494w

Jack, Rt Hon Michael—continued
Business questions 427
Company voluntary arrangements 512–3w
Education, Per capita costs 437–40w
Holbeck Holdings 486–7w
Police, Lancashire 296–7w, 554
Post offices, Dept of Trade and Industry 519–20w
Schools, Buildings 961–2
Social security benefits, Abuse 68–9w

Jackson, Helen
Questions
Health education, Organic food 237w

Japan
Radioactive materials 260–1w

Jehovahs witnesses
Blood transfusions 510w

Jenkin, Mr Bernard
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 707
Questions
Central Railway 129–30
Driving Standards Agency 213w, 363w
Greater London Authority, Elections 253w, 530w
Motor vehicles, Excise duties 253–4w
Road traffic, Rural areas 450w

Jenkins, Mr Brian
Questions
Best value 130
Cyprus, EC enlargement 580w
Electricity, Meters 485w
Illegal immigrants 319w
Iraq, Arms trade 478w
Northern Cyprus 580w
Teachers, Pay 435w
Theft, Cars 555–6w
Unemployment, Tamworth 393w

Jet skis
447w

Jobseeker's allowance
227w
Further education 151–2w

Johnson, Mr Alan, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Trade and Industry
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 617–26, 628, 649–53
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Post offices (12.01.00) 65–9wh
Questions
Cars, Prices 484w
Exchange rates, Exports 484–5w
Glass 521–2w
Glass, North West region 259w
Lorries, North West region 484w
Minimum wage 208w, 487w
Parcelforce 30w
Partnership Fund 260–1w
Post codes, Correspondence 208w
Post Office 30w
Post offices 485w
Post offices, Bank services 523w
Post offices, Dept of Trade and Industry 519–20w
Post offices, Salisbury 108w
Postage stamps 31w
Postal Services Commission, Public appointments 31w, 108w
Working hours, Part-time employment 261–2w

Johnson, Miss Melanie, Economic Secretary to the Treasury*
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Bank services, Overcharging (19.01.00) 237–40wh
Questions
Appropriations in aid 354w
Census 103–4w
Charitable donations 514–5w
Child care tax credit 513w
Consultants, Treasury 356w
Contracts for services 202w
Cost effectiveness, Treasury 104–5w
Council of Ministers 354w
Death, Weather 516–8w
Debts, Developing countries 202w, 232–3w
EC budget, Fraud 354–5w, 514w
Economic and monetary union 392w, 515w
Empty property, Treasury 512w
Exchange rates, Exports 393w
Gold and foreign exchange reserves 105w
Incentives, Treasury 352–3w
Insurance companies, Assets 353w
Manpower, Treasury 513–4w
Members, Correspondence 568w
Mortgages, Interest rates 354w
Mutual societies 232w
National debt 515–6w
National Savings Agency 107w
Personal pensions, Misrepresentation 106w
Smuggling, Tobacco 351w
Stamp duties, Property transfer 513w
Standards, Treasury 105–6w
Tax credit 353–4w
Unemployment, Tamworth 393w
Unemployment, Young people 201–2w
Working families tax credit 513w

Johnson Smith, Rt Hon Sir Geoffrey
Questions
Pigs 405–6
Urban Regeneration and Countryside Protection Bill 1999/2000 10w

Joint rapid deployment force
128–9w
Oman 88–9w

Jones, Rt Hon Barry
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 618
Questions
Armed forces, Deployment 283w
Best value 131
EC grants and loans, Alyn and Deeside 589w
EC grants and loans, Wales 828–9
Hill livestock allowances 409
Truancy 271w

Jones, Helen M
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 943–4
Questions
Charity Commission 561w
Community care, Disability living allowance 291w
Creutzfeldt-Jakob dementia 60w
Electronic government 276w
Health, Charities 291–2w
Nature conservation 111w
Partnership Fund 260–1w
Royal Ulster Constabulary 181w
Secondary education, Standards 539w
Winter fuel payments 12

Jones, Mr Jon Owen
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 137wh

Jones, Mr Jon Owen—continued*
Questions
Transport, Wales 496w, 831–2

Jones, Dr Lynne
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 162, 183–6, 234, 240
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 118–9wh, 131wh, 136wh, 139wh
Questions
Kosovo, Armed conflict 493–4w
Official cars, Dept of Health 49–50w
Young offenders, Secure accommodation 13w

Jones, Mr Martyn David
Questions
Pensioners, Wales 495w

Jones, Mr Nigel
Questions
Motor vehicles 209w

Jowell, Rt Hon Ms Tessa, Minister for the New Deal, Dept for Education and Employment*
Questions
Access to work programme 43–4w
Employment 539w
Employment, EC action 972–4
Labour mobility 540w
Long term unemployed 47–8w
New deal for 50 plus 543w
New deal for long term unemployed 46w
New deal for young people 46–7w, 168–73w, 542w
New deal for young people, Merseyside 437–8w
New deal for young people, West Sussex 173w
New deal schemes 274–5w
New deal schemes, Greater London 442w
New deal schemes, Research 48w
New deal schemes, Scotland 965–7
New deal schemes, Training 272w
Small businesses 539w
Unemployment, Ethnic groups 173–4w
Unemployment, Rural areas 46w
Vacancies 542w

Judiciary
Complaints 507w
Training 36w, 553

Kalejs, Konrad
2–3w, 14–6w, 215w

Kashmir
677–8

Kaufman, Rt Hon Gerald
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 292
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 307–12, 319, 326–7, 337–8
Questions
Members, Correspondence 20w, 368w, 463w, 547w
News at Ten 351w

Keeble, Ms Sally
Questions
Food, EC action 415
State retirement pensions, Females 14–5

Keetch, Mr Paul
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 292–3
Influenza (10.01.00) 28

Keetch, Mr Paul—continued*
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Nuclear weapons, Proliferation (18.01.00) 168–9wh

Kelly, Ms Ruth
Questions
Child care tax credit 513w
Maternity pay 570w
Parental responsibility 548w
Stakeholder pensions 332–3w

Kennedy, Rt Hon Charles
Questions
Income tax 840
NHS 270–1

Kennedy, Jane, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Lord Chancellor's Dept*
Questions
Administration of justice, Young offenders 388w
Assets, Lord Chancellor's Dept 294–5w
Consultants, Lord Chancellor's Dept 507w
Family law, Reform 388w
Immigration, Appeals 34–5w
Incentives, Lord Chancellor's Dept 296w
Judiciary, Complaints 507w
Land Registry 222–3w
Legal profession, Regulation 294w
Magistrates, Barnsley 506w
Smoking, Lord Chancellor's Dept 527–8w
Trials 35–6w

Kent
Crime 299w, 542–3

Key, Mr Robert
Questions
Air force, Manpower 405–6w
Ammunition 406w
Armed forces, Criminal investigation 490–1w
Armed forces, Health 277w
Armed forces, Housing 285w
Armed forces, Legal aid 83–4w
Armed forces, Orthopaedics 284w
Armed forces, Training 93–4w
Armed forces, Uniforms 284–5w
Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Nancekuke 488w
Clyde submarine base 92w
Common agricultural policy, Wiltshire 155–8w
Consolidation bills 506w
Courts martial 491–2w
Defence Evaluation and Research Agency 405–6w
Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, Public private partnerships 127w
Guided weapons 490w
HMS Broadsword 92–3w
Kosovo, Armed forces 489w
Kosovo, Peace keeping operations 92w, 396–7w
Law Commission, Manpower 506w
Military exercises 405w
Post offices, Salisbury 108w
Property, Ministry of Defence 405–6w
RAF Chilmark 494w
Territorial Army, Working hours 395w
Warships, Portsmouth Harbour 404w

Khabra, Mr Piara S
Questions
Closed circuit television 543

Kidney, Mr David
Questions
Beacon schools, Information technology 960
Eurostar 450w

Kidney, Mr David*—*continued
Food, Safety 141–2w
Gurkhas, War pensions 89–90w
Homicide 216–7w
Trials, Victims 419

Kilfoyle, Mr Peter, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Ministry of Defence
Questions
Airbus Military 284w
Antiaircraft missiles 84w
Armed forces, Colchester 282w
C17 aircraft 284w
Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Nancekuke 91w, 125–6w
Consultants, Ministry of Defence 84w
Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, Public private partnerships 85w, 125w, 127w
Defence Housing Executive, Computers 81–2w
Duke of York's Royal Military School, Standards 536w
Early retirement, Ministry of Defence 87–8w
Empty property, Ministry of Defence 490w
Future large aircraft 283–4w
Guided weapons 96w
Horizon project 91w
Joint rapid deployment force 128–9w
Joint rapid deployment force, Oman 88–9w
Military aircraft 88w
Navy, Asbestos 166w
Pakistan, Mines 127–8w
Recruitment, Ministry of Defence 91–2w
Salisbury Plain 280w
Torpedoes 128w
Type 45 destroyers 91w, 126–7w
USA, Ministry of Defence 86w
Weapons, Safety 165w
Written questions, Ministry of Defence 81w

King, Mr Andy
Debates etc.
Overseas aid, Petitions (13.01.00) 526–7
Questions
Personal pensions, Misrepresentation 106w

King, Ms Oona
Debates etc.
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1073–5, 1078, 1086
Pensioners (17.01.00) 587–90
Questions
Ethiopia, Eritrea 413–4w
Immigration, Administrative delays 13w
Mentally incapacitated 199w
State retirement pensions 502w
Sudan, Human rights 262w

King Committee
see Intelligence and Security Committee

Kingham, Ms Tess
Questions
Refugees, Algeria 214–5w

Kirkbride, Miss Julie
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 156–7, 178
Questions
Hospital beds 424w
Roads, Finance 134–5
Social Security Contributions Agency, Computers 66w

Kirkwood, Mr Archy
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 152, 209–12
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1062–6, 1089–92
Post offices (17.01.00) 613, 625
Questions
Dept of the Clerk of the House, Public appointments 443w
Poverty, Children 4–5

Kosovo
(12.01.00) 97–103wh, 480w
Armed conflict 493–4w
Armed forces 489w
Ethnic groups 682–3
Peace keeping operations 92w, 396–7w, 684–6
Royal Ulster Constabulary 34w

Kumar, Dr Ashok
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 200–3
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Small businesses (20.01.00) 285wh, 299–301wh
Questions
Cancer 140w
Cancer, Correspondence 292w
Modernising government programme 221w

Labelling
Food 157w, 240w, 418–9w
Pesticides 482w

Labour Liberal Democrats Joint Consultative Committee
110w, 166–7w, 473–4w

Labour mobility
540w

Labour Party
273

Ladyman, Dr Stephen
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 995
Health services (18.01.00) 695–6
Southern Water, Sewage (11.01.00) 255–6
Questions
Crime, Kent 542
Crown Prosecution Service 420–1
EC Fisheries Council 240w

Lait, Mrs Jacqui
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 571–5
Questions
Police, Finance 546–7
Wembley Stadium 23–4w

Lancashire
Athletics 386w
Crime 319w, 554
Health services 290–1w
Organic farming 419w
Police 296–7w, 554
Sportsgrounds 343w

Land reclamation programme
North West region 160–3w

Land Registry
222–3w

Land Settlement Association
Compensation 8w

Landlord and tenant
Housing benefit (12.01.00) 104–10wh

Lansley, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 750–6

Larkhill
Military intelligence 97w

Latin America
Drugs 408w, 674–5

Law Commission
Manpower 506w

Law enforcement
Wales 833–5

Law Enforcement International
483w

Lawrence, Mrs Jackie
Questions
Census 103–4w
Small businesses, Wales 497w

Laxton, Mr Bob
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 651

Learning and Skills Council for England
538–9w

Legal aid
Armed forces 83–4w

Legal profession
Regulation 294w

Legislative drafting
(20.01.00) 1094–100

Legitimacy
21–2w

Leigh, Mr Edward
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 203–5
Health services (18.01.00) 708, 710
Pensioners (17.01.00) 583–7
Questions
Buildings, Home Office 558w
Incapacity benefit 9–10
Kosovo, Peace keeping operations 685–6
Road traffic 136–7

Lepper, Mr David
Debates etc.
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1065
Questions
Roads, Finance 135

Leslie, Mr Christopher
Questions
Schools, Buildings 962

Letwin, Mr Oliver
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 763, 780, 785–90
Post offices (17.01.00) 617, 630, 637
Questions
NHS, Meat 196–7w

Levitt, Mr Tom
Questions
Alder Hey Children's Hospital 62w
Belfast Agreement 179w

Lewis, Mr Ivan
Questions
Belfast Agreement 179–80w
Further education 541w

Lewis, Dr Julian
Debates etc.
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 51, 57, 71, 81, 105–9
Security, Points of order (18.01.00) 687
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Air force, Insignia (19.01.00) 250–3wh, 256wh

Lewis, Dr Julian—continued
Nuclear weapons, Proliferation (18.01.00) 155wh, 157wh, 165–6wh
Questions
Common fisheries policy 417–8
Homelessness 6w
Incinerators, Environmental health 132
Ministerial policy advisors, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 832
Referendums, Finance 841
Rough sleepers initiative 16
Trials, Victims 418–9

Libyan Arab Republic
Guided weapons 220w, 326w, 414–5w

Licensing
Driving 210–1w
Drugs 137–8w, 186–7w
Firearms 370–2w, 376w
Garages and petrol stations 359w
Television 348w, 474w, 537w

Liddell, Rt Hon Mrs Helen, Minister for Energy and Competitiveness in Europe, Dept of Trade and Industry
Debates etc.
Alternative energy (10.01.00) 122–6
Questions
Coal, Government assistance 486w
Coal, Imports 109–10w, 524w
Coal, Mining 523–4w
Electric cables 524w
Electricity, Competition 524–5w
Electricity, Meters 485w
Electricity, Prices 261w
Gas fired power stations 522w
Industrial diseases, Compensation 521w
Nuclear power stations, Industrial health and safety 108–9w
Oil 31–2w
Plutonium 379w
Radioactive materials, Japan 260–1w
Radioactive materials, Switzerland 259–60w

Lidington, Mr David
Questions
Closed circuit television 550
Criminal Justice (Mode of Trial) Bill (HL) 1999/2000 561w
Drug treatment and testing orders, Correspondence 21w
Montenegro, Foreign relations 412w
Poverty, Children 69w
Tyson, Mike 368–70w, 417w

Lifelong education
Trade unions 967–9

Lighting
451w
Government departments 119w

Lilley, Rt Hon Peter
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Post offices (12.01.00) 52–4wh, 66wh
Questions
Veterinary medicine 158w

Lindane
212w

Line of route
(18.01.00) 801–17

Linton, Mr Martin
Debates etc.
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 85–90
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 311–2, 315–6, 324, 366–7, 376–8, 381, 383, 385, (13.01.00) 511–3, 524–6

Linton, Mr Martin—continued
Questions
Greater London Authority, Elections 253w
Millennium Exhibition 255w

Livestock industry
Wales 494–5w

Livsey, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 612, 626–7
Questions
Countryside, Wales 494w
Court welfare officers, Training 217w
EC grants and loans, Wales 828
Maintenance, Children 74w
Radiation exposure, Research 60–1w

Lloyd, Rt Hon Sir Peter
Questions
Members, Correspondence 94w

Lloyd, Mr Tony
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Nuclear weapons, Proliferation (18.01.00) 159–61wh
Small businesses (20.01.00) 284–8wh

Llwyd, Mr Elfyn
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 154, 215–8
Post offices (17.01.00) 618
Sittings in Westminster Hall
EC grants and loans (11.01.00) 14wh
Questions
Acid rain, Fish 133–4
Agriculture, Small businesses 416
EC grants and loans, Wales 827–8
Fuels, Pollution control 247–8w, 358–9w
Garages and petrol stations, Licensing 359w

Local crime reduction partnership
372w
Merseyside 560w

Local exchange and trading schemes
14

Local government
Pensions 248w
Scotland 376w
Standards 5w
Wales 496–7w

Local Government Bill (HL) 1999/2000
Questions
4w

Local government finance
116w

Lock, Mr David, Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Dept
Questions
Consolidation bills 506w
Human Rights Act 1998 505–6w
Judiciary, Training 36w
Law Commission, Manpower 506w
Northern Ireland Court Service, Manpower 507–9w
Solicitors, Training 527w

London
see Greater London

London Ambulance Service
56w

London and South East Regional Planning Conference
450w

London freedom pass
385w

London Underground
112w
Investment 244–5w

Lone parents
Ripon 276

Long term unemployed
47–8w

Lord Chancellor's Dept
Assets 294–5w
Consultants 507w
Incentives 296w
Smoking 527–8w

Lorries
North West region 484w
Road traffic control 318–9w
Safety 361–2w
Tolls 252w

Lorry drivers
France 360–1w, 414w

Loughton, Mr Tim
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Bank services, Overcharging (19.01.00) 225–9wh, 231wh
Questions
EC economic policy 408–9w
New deal for young people, West Sussex 173w
NHS 272
NHS, Manpower 425w
Pensions, Tax credit 7
Power stations, Pollution control 121w
Regional selective assistance, Sussex 382–3w
Roads, West Sussex 211w
Schools access initiative 272–3w

Love, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 693
Medicinal Product Testing in Children Bill, 1R (12.01.00) 303–5
Questions
Drugs, Licensing 186–7w
Irinotecan 52–3w
Learning and Skills Council for England 539w

Low birthweight babies
139w

Ludlow, Seamus
32–3w

Luff, Mr Peter
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 769–73, 790
Questions
Agriculture, Trade agreements 412–3

Lyell, Rt Hon Sir Nicholas
Questions
Land Settlement Association, Compensation 8w

M60
528w

McCabe, Mr Stephen
Questions
Iran, Terrorism 580–1w

McCartney, Rt Hon Ian, Minister of State, Cabinet Office
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 770–1, 788–93
Questions
Drugs, Gloucestershire 545w
Electronic government 544w
Government departments, Information technology 134–5w

McCartney, Mr Robert
Debates etc.
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 857

McDonnell, Mr John
Debates etc.
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 860
Questions
E coli 137w
Food Standards Agency 203w
Reparation by offenders, Northern Ireland 264–5

McGrady, Mr Eddie
Debates etc.
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 862–3
Questions
Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland 181w
Northern Ireland Court Service, Manpower 507–9w
Security, Northern Ireland 265–6

MacGregor, Rt Hon John
Debates etc.
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 63–70

McIntosh, Miss Anne
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 153, 230–1
Health services (18.01.00) 699–700
Questions
Defence Vetting Agency, Manpower 207w
Electromagnetic fields, Health hazards 583–4w
Farmers, Compensation 241w
Imphal Barracks, Correspondence 166w
Institutional care, Private sector 143w
Skin cancer, Electromagnetic fields 142–3w
Social security benefits, Post offices 501w
Weapons, Northern Ireland 180w
Winter fuel payments 12

McIsaac, Shona
Questions
Business questions 432
Planning Inspectorate 113w

MacKay, Rt Hon Andrew
Debates etc.
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 848–50
Questions
Security, Northern Ireland 266

Mackinlay, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 167, 195–8
Line of route (18.01.00) 802–3, 810–2
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 79–80
Questions
Asbestos 254w
Asbestos, Developing countries 263–4w
Asbestos, Imports 380w
Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales, Council of Ministers 496w
Cuba, Foreign relations 681
Disadvantaged 65–6w
European Convention on Human Rights 419–20
House of Commons, Telephone systems 546–7w
Malaria 264w
Official secrets, Disclosure of information 328w
Paddington Rail Accident Inquiry 243–4w

Mackinlay, Mr Andrew—continued
Schools, Inspections 543–4w

Maclean, Rt Hon David
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 940
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 484–5, 491, 497, 499–500, 504–7
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 873, 879–84, 889–90, 892–6, 899, 901, 904, 906, 908, 910–5, 922–3, 928–9
Questions
Buildings, Dept of Health 140w
Buildings, Home Office 19w
Drugs, Licensing 137–8w
Influenza 584–5w
NHS Direct, Influenza 584w
NHS Direct, Nurses 585w

Maclennan, Rt Hon Robert
Debates etc.
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 34–5, 55–60, 77

McLoughlin, Mr Patrick
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 619, 644–5
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 493
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Post offices (12.01.00) 49wh
Questions
Hill livestock allowances 410
Sudbury Prison 217–8w

McNamara, Mr Kevin
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 294–5
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 855–6
Questions
Administration of justice, Northern Ireland 266w, 445–6w
Charitable donations 514–5w
Equal opportunities, Northern Ireland 445w
Equal opportunities, Northern Ireland Office 265–6w
European Convention on Human Rights 21w
European Convention on Human Rights, Northern Ireland 130w
Heathrow Airport, Riot control weapons 556w
Human rights, Northern Ireland 444–5w
Human Rights Act 1998 505–6w
Ilisu dam 268–9w, 538w
Judiciary, Training 36w
Ludlow, Seamus 32–3w
Police, Northern Ireland 33w
Police, Training 26w
Police Authority for Northern Ireland, Annual reports 443–4w
Royal Ulster Constabulary, Compensation 444w
Royal Ulster Constabulary, Special Branch 129–30w
Security, Northern Ireland 266–7
Wilkinson Sword of Peace 277–9w

MacShane, Mr Denis
Debates etc.
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 37, 47, 54, 61, 69, 73, 75, 78–82
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 325–8

MacShane, Mr Denis—continued
Questions
Education, Administration 148–51w
Education, Finance 273w
Referendums, Finance 841–2

Mactaggart, Fiona
Debates etc.
Influenza (10.01.00) 30–1
Post offices (17.01.00) 618
Questions
Common agricultural policy 240w
Illegal immigrants 297w
International Criminal Court 415w
Judiciary, Training 553
New deal for lone parents 66–7w
Northern Ireland Equality Commission 180–1w
Part-time employment 844

McWalter, Mr Tony
Debates etc.
Millennium compliance (20.01.00) 982
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 859
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Small businesses (20.01.00) 292wh, 302wh, 304wh
Questions
Building societies 843
Business questions 426–7
Higher education, Pay 542w

Madel, Sir David
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 993

Maginnis, Mr Ken
Debates etc.
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 852–4
Questions
Weapons, Northern Ireland 262

Magistrates
Barnsley 506w
Doncaster 506w

Magistrates' courts
Witnesses 299w

Maintenance
Children 17, 74w, 77w, 185w

Malaria
264w

Malins, Mr Humfrey
Questions
Pinochet, Augusto 286

Malnutrition
139w

Mandelson, Rt Hon Peter, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland*
Debates etc.
Royal Ulster Constabulary, Ministerial statements (19.01.00) 845–64
Questions
Belfast Agreement 179w
Cost effectiveness, Northern Ireland Office 34w
Employment, Northern Ireland 33w
Manpower, Northern Ireland Office 182–3w
Weapons, Northern Ireland 180w, 182w, 259–63

Manufacturing industries
North West region 380–1w

Maples, Mr John
Questions
France, Foreign relations 414w
France, Lorry drivers 360–1w, 414w
Kosovo, Ethnic groups 682–3

Maples, Mr John—continued
Libyan Arab Republic, Guided weapons 326w
North Korea, Diplomatic relations 326w

Marketing
Agriculture 239w
Eggs 99–100w

Marsden, Mr Gordon
Questions
Computers, Dept of Social Security 71–2w
Conditions of employment 135–6w
Contracts for services 202w
EC enlargement 406–7w
Government departments, Information technology 134–5w
Information Technology Services Agency, Contracts for services 394w
Social security benefits, Carers 6–7

Marsden, Mr Paul
Questions
Cancer, Drugs 138–9w
Developing countries, Alternative energy 565w
Eggs, Marketing 99–100w
HIV infection, Babies 190w
National Radiological Protection Board 194–5w
Schools, Governing bodies 436–7w
Schools, Internet 36w
Taxpayers, Shropshire 515w
Transplant surgery 197w, 235–6w
Wembley Stadium 159w
West Mercia Police 465–6w

Marshall-Andrews, Mr Robert
Questions
Pinochet, Augusto 282

Martlew, Mr Eric
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 712, 722
Questions
Incinerators, Environmental health 133
Working families tax credit 513w

Maternity pay
570w

Mates, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 858

Maude, Rt Hon Francis
Questions
Timms, Stephen, Members' interests 269w

Mawhinney, Rt Hon Sir Brian
Debates etc.
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 856
Questions
Members, Correspondence 531w, 547–8w, 568w, 573w

Maxwell companies
Pension funds 570w

May, Mrs Theresa
Questions
Children, Day care 964
Class sizes 956–7
"Raising Aspirations in the 21st Century" 388w
Teachers, Pay 971
Teachers, Pensions 390–2w

Meacher, Rt Hon Michael, Minister for the Environment, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 126wh, 148–52wh

Meacher, Rt Hon Michael—continued
Questions
Asbestos 254w
Biosafety Protocol 245–6w
Climate change levy 116w
Environment Agency 359–60w
Environment Agency, Fees and charges 448w
Environment Agency, Recruitment 249w
Fuels, Pollution control 247–8w, 358–9w
Garages and petrol stations, Licensing 359w
Genetically modified organisms, Crops 206w, 212–3w
Greenhouse effect 114–5w
Home energy efficiency scheme 8w
Incinerators, Environmental health 131–3
Jet skis 447w
Land reclamation programme, North West region 160–3w
Lighting, Government departments 119w
Mersey Basin 244w
Nature conservation 111w
Plumbing 245w
Power stations, Pollution control 121w
Recycling 163–4w
Special areas of conservation 366–7w
Sustainable Development Commission 529w
Urban Regeneration and Countryside Protection Bill 1999/2000 10w
Water companies, Environment protection 159–60w
Water supply 160w

Meale, Mr Alan
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Horserace Totalisator Board (19.01.00) 217–8wh

Meat
NHS 196–7w

Meat Hygiene Service
Information technology 154w

Medals
Police 455w

Medical examinations
Incapacity benefit 10
Social security benefits 69w

Medical profession
Cancer 141w

Medical treatments
Arthritis 145w

Medicinal Product Testing in Children Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
1R (12.01.00) 303–5

Medicine
Student numbers 440–1w

Medway
General practitioners 509w

Meetings
Dept of Health 140w

Mellor Task Force
see Football Task Force

Members
Correspondence 20w, 61–2w, 94w, 328w, 341w, 351–2w, 368w, 463w, 511w, 531w, 547–8w, 568w, 573w

Members' interests
Timms, Stephen 269w

Meningitis
Vaccination 50w

Mental health
198w

Mental health services
293–4w
Fees and charges 423–4w
Manpower 293w

Mental patients
292w

Mentally ill
Drugs 197w
Prisoners 537

Mentally incapacitated
199w

Merron, Ms Gillian
Questions
National Insurance Fund 499w

Mersey Basin
244w

Merseyside
Day care 42w
Drug seizures 560w
Local crime reduction partnership 560w
New deal for young people 437–8w
Young offenders 218w

Meters
Electricity 485w

Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus
189–90w

Metropolitan Police
21w
Disciplinary proceedings 124w
Manpower 457–63w
Riot control weapons 465w

Michie, Mr Bill
Questions
Ufl 146–7w

Michie, Mrs Ray
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 508–10
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Garages and petrol stations, Contracts (12.01.00) 75–6wh

Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust
233–4w

Middle East
Peace negotiations 412w
Refugees 409w

Midland main railway line
448w

Milburn, Rt Hon Alan, Secretary of State for Health
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 698–709
Influenza, Ministerial statements (10.01.00) 21–33
Questions
Food Standards Agency 199–200w, 203w
NHS, Pay review bodies 286–8w

Military aircraft
88w, 394–5w
Iraq 165w

Military exercises
405w
Food supply 489w

Military intelligence
Larkhill 97w

Millennium
Arrests 368w
Fireworks 248–9w
Public transport 248–9w

Millennium compliance
Dept of Social Security 67w
Ministerial statements (20.01.00) 975–83

Millennium Exhibition
212w, 255w

Miller, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 941, (20.01.00) 993
Government (18.01.00) 750, 765, 779–81
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1080–1, 1085, 1092
Millennium compliance (20.01.00) 979
Post offices (17.01.00) 641–2
Questions
Business questions 427–8
Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales, Dept of Social Security 108w
Crime, Cheshire 299w
Learning and Skills Council for England 538–9w
Roads, Safety 144

Mines
Bomb disposal 183w
Pakistan 2w, 127–8w

Minimum wage
208w, 273–4, 487w

Mining
Coal 112–3w, 523–4w

Ministerial policy advisors
Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 832–3

Ministerial statements
Armed forces (12.01.00) 287–301
Influenza (10.01.00) 21–33
Millennium compliance (20.01.00) 975–83
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 845–64

Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food
Cost effectiveness 573–4w
EC grants and loans 205–6w
Ethnic groups 100w
Incentives 417w
Manpower 204–5w
Property transfer 502–4w, 575–6w

Ministry of Defence
Consultants 84w
Cost effectiveness 86–7w
Early retirement 87–8w
Empty property 490w
Property 405–6w
Recruitment 91–2w
USA 86w
Written questions 81w

Ministry of Health
Empty property 512w

Minor injuries units
Isle of Sheppey 509–10w

Minster College
Finance 271–2w

Mirror Group Newspapers
569w

Misrepresentation
Personal pensions 106w

Mitchell, Mr Austin
Questions
Appropriations in aid 354w
Cervical cancer, Screening 54–5w
Charter of Fundamental Rights (EU) 267–8w
Council of Ministers 354w
EC defence policy 536–7w

Mitchell, Mr Austin—continued
EC enlargement 477w
EC grants and loans 258–9w
International Court of Justice 476w
Ukraine, Diplomatic relations 476w
Ukraine, EC external relations 476w

Mobile phones
see Cellular phones

Modernisation of the House of Commons Select Committee
(20.01.00) 1093

Modernising government programme
221w

Moffatt, Laura
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 293–4
Health services (18.01.00) 735–6
Questions
Falkland Islands, Argentina 683

Moluccan Islands
564w

Montenegro
Foreign relations 412w

Moonie, Dr Lewis
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Horserace Totalisator Board (19.01.00) 211–2wh

Moran, Ms Margaret
Debates etc.
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 861
Questions
Minimum wage 273–4
Road traffic 137–8

Morgan, Mr Alasdair
Debates etc.
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 90–3
Questions
Assisted areas, Dumfries and Galloway 260w
Carers' premium, Scotland 185w
Football, World Cup 130–2w, 383w
Invalid care allowances, Scotland 73w
Social security benefits, Scotland 73w
Weapons, Testing 276–7w
Wembley Stadium 23w

Morgan, Ms Julie
Questions
Institutional care, Wales 495w
Lifelong education, Trade unions 967–8

Morley, Mr Elliot, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food*
Questions
Common agricultural policy, Wiltshire 155–8w
Common fisheries policy 417–8, 575w
Cost effectiveness, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 573–4w
Countryside stewardship scheme 239w
EC Fisheries Council 240w
EC grants and loans, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 205–6w
Ethnic groups, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 100w
Fisheries 101–2w, 153w, 575w
Fishing offences, Prosecutions 101w
Food, Labelling 418–9w
Forests, Sales 241–2w
Fur Farming (Prohibition) Bill 1999/2000 101–2w
Incentives, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 417w

Morley, Mr Elliot—continued
Manpower, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 204–5w
Organic farming 240w, 410–2
Organic farming, Lancashire 419w
Pigs, Animal welfare 576–7w
Poultry, Animal welfare 100w
Property transfer, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 502–4w, 575–6w
Ritual slaughter 152–3w
Rodents, Housing 575–6w

Morocco
323w

Morris, Rt Hon Ms Estelle, Minister for School Standards, Dept for Education and Employment*
Questions
Barber, Michael 48–9w
Education, Administration 148–51w, 436w
Education, Contracts for services 275–6w
Education, Finance 273w, 543w
Education, Per capita costs 437–40w
Education, Standards 435–6w
Education action zones 145–6w
Headteachers, Greater London 273w
Minster College, Finance 271–2w
Schools, Governing bodies 436–7w
Schools, Inspections 543–4w
Schools, Northumberland 45–6w
Secondary education, Standards 539w
Sixth form education, Finance 272w
Specialist schools initiative 957–60
Standards Fund 176w
Teachers, Pay 970–1

Mortgage relief
185w

Mortgages
Interest rates 354w
Unfair practices (12.01.00) 398–404

Motor vehicles
209w
Excise duties 253–4w

Motorway service areas
Parking offences 252w

Mountford, Kali
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 171, 227–30
Health services (18.01.00) 714
Pensioners (17.01.00) 574
Questions
Kashmir 677–8
Reparation by offenders, Northern Ireland 263

Mowlam, Rt Hon Marjorie, Minister for the Cabinet Office*
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 756–61
Questions
British Irish Council 200–1w
Electronic government 276w

Mudie, Mr George
Questions
Antisocial behaviour orders 556–7w

Mullin, Mr Chris, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions*
Debates etc.
Southern Water, Sewage (11.01.00) 254–8
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Gatwick Airport, Noise (11.01.00) 34–7wh
Housing, Greater London (19.01.00) 246–9wh

Mullin, Mr Chris—continued
Landlord and tenant, Housing benefit (12.01.00) 107–10wh
Questions
Acid rain, Fish 133–4
Air traffic 211w
Air traffic control 357–8w
Areas of outstanding natural beauty 363w
Aviation, Accidents 447–8w
Aviation, Safety 357w
Biggin Hill Airport 360w
Capital receipts initiative, Stoke on Trent 362w
Commonhold 119w
Council housing 365w
Council housing, Housing management 119–20w
Council housing, Property transfer 144–6
Council housing, Tenancy agreements 120w
Council housing, Waiting lists 163w
Countryside, Access 213w
Homelessness 6w
Homelessness, Greater London 165w
Housing, Empty property 139–40
Lindane 212w
Multiple occupation 364–5w
National Air Traffic Services 7w, 114w
National Air Traffic Services, Property 358w
Public footpaths, Greater London 119w
Recycling 7w
Rivers, South West region 120–1w
Social rented housing 363–4w
Waste disposal, East Sussex 111–2w
Waste disposal, Greater London 362w

Multiple occupation
364–5w

Murphy, Mr Jim
Questions
Hooliganism, Football 557–8w
International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia 3w
Long term unemployed 47–8w
New deal for young people 46–7w
New deal schemes, Scotland 965–6
Weapons, Northern Ireland 259–60

Murphy, Rt Hon Paul, Secretary of State for Wales*
Questions
Agriculture, Wales 494w
Airports, Wales 830
Block grant, Wales 835
Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales, Council of Ministers 496w
Cardiff Airport 829–30
Child Abuse in North Wales Judicial Inquiry 330w
Cost effectiveness, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 330w
Countryside, Wales 494w
Deeside Industrial Park 498w
EC grants and loans, Alyn and Deeside 589w
EC grants and loans, Wales 589–90w, 827–30
Empty property, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 499w
Internet, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 496w
Livestock industry, Wales 494–5w
Manpower, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 590w
Ministerial policy advisors, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 832–3
National Assembly for Wales 496w
Non-departmental public bodies, Wales 330w, 832

Murphy, Rt Hon Paul—continued
Official engagements, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 590w
Petrol, Wales 434w
Small businesses, Wales 497w
Social security benefits, Automated credit transfer 499w
Transport, Wales 496w

Mutual societies
232w

Muvunyi, Tharcisse
467w

Myxoedema
425–6w

Nancekuke
Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment 91w, 125–6w, 488w, (18.01.00) 818–26

National Air Traffic Services
7w, 114w
Property 358w

National Assembly for Wales
496w
Dept of Trade and Industry 519–21w

National Beds Inquiry
423w

National Council of Victim Support
301w, 373w

National debt
515–6w

National identity
271–2

National Insurance Contributions Office
Vetting 334w

National Insurance Contributions Unit
see Social Security Contributions Agency

National Insurance Fund
499w

National Meat Hygiene Service
see Meat Hygiene Service

National Radiological Protection Board
194–5w

National Savings Agency
107w

Natural gas
31–2w

Nature conservation
111w

Navy
285w
Asbestos 94w, 166w
Deployment 82w

Naysmith, Dr Douglas
Questions
Bovine tuberculosis, Disease control 239w
Unified appeal tribunal, Public appointments 72w

Neill Committee
see Committee on Standards in Public Life

Neurology
423w

New deal for 50 plus
543w

New deal for communities
449w
Greater London 449w

New deal for lone parents
66–7w, 274w

New deal for long term unemployed
46w

New deal for young people
46–7w, 168–73w, 542w
Merseyside 437–8w
West Sussex 173w

New deal schemes
267–8, 274–5w
Greater London 442w
Research 48w
Scotland 965–7
Training 272w

New Scotland Yard
see Metropolitan Police

News at Ten
351w

Newspaper press
Prime Minister 537w
Wales 520w

Newsprint
Recycling (10.01.00) 33

NHS
268–72, 275–6, 836–9, 842
Finance 64–5w, 569w, 840
Manpower 425w
Meat 196–7w
Pay review bodies 286–8w
Pensions 235w
Public appointments 544w
Sick leave 292–3w

NHS Direct
289w
Influenza 584w
Nurses 585w

NHS trusts
Parking 588–9w

Noise
Airports (19.01.00) 867–9
Gatwick Airport (11.01.00) 30–7wh

Nolan Committee
see Committee on Standards in Public Life

Non-departmental public bodies
Wales 330w, 832

Non-domestic rates
Electricity generation 9–10w
North West region 522w
Wales 255–6w

Non-food crops
238w

Non-governmental organisations
565w

Norman, Mr Archie
Questions
Cellular phones, Health hazards 55w
EC institutions, Voting methods 670–1

North Essex Health Authority
233–4w

North Korea
Diplomatic relations 326w

North South Ministerial Council
178–9w

North West region
Glass 259w
Land reclamation programme 160–3w
Lorries 484w
Manufacturing industries 380–1w
Non-domestic rates 522w
Rugby 345w
Tourism 344–5w, 387w

Northern Cyprus
580w

Northern Ireland
Administration of justice 266w, 445–6w
Crimes of violence 182w
Employment 33w
Equal opportunities 445w
European Convention on Human Rights 130w
Homicide 526–7w
Human rights 444–5w
Police 33–4w, 181w
Reparation by offenders 181w, 263–5
Security 180w, 265–7
Terrorism 178w
Victim support schemes 182w
Weapons 180w, 182w, 259–63

Northern Ireland Act 1998
Questions
265–6w

Northern Ireland Court Service
Manpower 507–9w

Northern Ireland Equality Commission
180–1w

Northern Ireland Office
Cost effectiveness 34w
Equal opportunities 265–6w
Manpower 182–3w
Research 32w

Northern Ireland Parades Commission
see Parades Commission

Northern Ireland Police Authority
see Police Authority for Northern Ireland

Northumberland
Pre-school education 45w
Schools 45–6w

Norwich
Pensions 225–6w

Nuclear power stations
Industrial health and safety 108–9w
Iran 413w

Nuclear safeguards
487–8w

Nuclear weapons
398–9w
International law 95w
Iran 324w, 475w
Proliferation (18.01.00) 153–74wh, 413w
USA 493w

Nurseries
Parliament 840–1

Nurses
NHS Direct 585w
Pay 835–6

Nutrition
50–1w

Oaten, Mr Mark
Questions
Drugs, Patents 62w
Injuries 143w
Road traffic 136–7
Television, Licensing 348w

O'Brien, Mr Mike, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Home Office
Debates etc.
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 112–6
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 314, 333–7, 359–64, 368, 370–2, 374–5, 383–5, 387–9, 391–3, 395–7, (13.01.00) 456–65, 468, 471–3, 477, 508–9, 511, 517–22, 524–6

O'Brien, Mr Mike—continued
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 887, 889–91, 910–2, 936–7
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 998–1003, 1016–7, 1047–55, 1059
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Horserace Totalisator Board (19.01.00) 215–9wh
Questions
Animal experiments 465w
Animal experiments, Primates 467–8w
Channel tunnel, Fire prevention 551–2
Data Protection Act 1998 452w
Dogs 124w
Electoral register 215–6w
Electronic voting 297w
Fire prevention 551
Fires, Death 463w
Greyhound racing, Animal welfare 464–5w
Horserace Totalisator Board 547–8
Political parties, Finance 122w
Polling stations, Disabled 300w
Representation of the People Bill 1999/2000, Regulatory impact assessments 545–6
Sinn Fein 370w
Voting methods 301w
World War II, Genocide 455w

O'Brien, Mr Stephen
Questions
Crown Prosecution Service 422
Deeside Industrial Park 498w
Exhaust emissions, Pollution control 141
Weapons, Northern Ireland 259–61

O'Brien, Mr William
Questions
Closed circuit television 297–8w, 549–50
Coal, Imports 524w
Coal, Mining 523–4w
Committee on Standards in Public Life 472w
Independent Case Examiner for the Child Support Agency 11
Small businesses 539w
Victim support schemes, Northern Ireland 182w

Offences against children
Criminal investigation 560–1w

Offenders
Electronic tagging 373–4w
Rehabilitation 467w
Social security benefits 225w

Office of the Secretary of State for Wales
Cost effectiveness 330w
Empty property 499w
Internet 496w
Manpower 590w
Ministerial policy advisors 832–3
Official engagements 590w

Official cars
Dept of Health 49–50w

Official engagements
Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 590w
Prime Minister 473w

Official hospitality
Prime Minister 268w

Official secrets
Disclosure of information 328w

O'Hara, Mr Edward
Questions
Attendance allowance 229w
Disability living allowance 429w

O'Hara, Mr Edward—continued
Fares, Concessions 209w
Hospitals, Waiting lists 422w
Institutional care, Income support 229w
Mental health services, Fees and charges 423–4w
Pensioners, Social security benefits 232w
State retirement pensions 74–5w
Transplant surgery 422–3w
Winter fuel payments 227–8w

Oil
31–2w

Older workers
41w

Olner, Mr Bill
Questions
Non-food crops 238w

Olympic Games
Swimming 343w

Oman
Joint rapid deployment force 88–9w

Ombudsman
Education 435w

ONE programme
66w

O'Neill, Mr Martin
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Small businesses (20.01.00) 276–81wh, 298wh

Ophthalmic services
Disabled 294w
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency 4–5w, 249–50w

Opik, Mr Lembit
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 201
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 851–2
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Post offices (12.01.00) 55–6wh
Questions
Farmers, Early retirement 238w
Reparation by offenders, Northern Ireland 264

"Opportunity for All, Tackling Poverty and Social Exclusion"
75w

Opposition days
(18.01.00) 750–800
Health services (18.01.00) 691–749
Pensioners (17.01.00) 557–610
Post offices (17.01.00) 611–58

Organ, Mrs Diana
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 633–6, 648
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Post offices (12.01.00) 61–2wh

Organic farming
240w, 410–2
Lancashire 419w

Organic food
Health education 237w

Organophosphates
204w, 241w
Iraq-Kuwait conflict 535–6w

Orthopaedics
Armed forces 284w

Ottaway, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 300
Questions
Aircraft carriers, Deployment 96–7w
EC defence policy 97w, 537–8w
HMS Westminster 97–8w, 490w
Refugees, Scotland 546w

Outdoor education
389w

Overcharging
Bank services (19.01.00) 220–40wh

Overcrowding
Prisons 537–9
Trains 114w

Overseas aid
566w
Africa 183–4w
Ethiopia 262–3w
Petitions (13.01.00) 526–7
Sudan 262–3w

Paddington Rail Accident Inquiry
243–4w

Paediatrics
Intensive care 198–9w

Page, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 636–40, 646
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Horserace Totalisator Board (19.01.00) 199–202wh, 217wh

Paice, Mr James
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 760
Questions
Agriculture, Small businesses 416–7
Community safety local partnerships, Cambridge 544–5

Pakistan
Arms trade 578w
Democracy 672–4
Mines 2w, 127–8w

Palmer, Dr Nick
Debates etc.
Line of route (18.01.00) 804, 812
Questions
Crown courts, Rights of audience 219w
Maintenance, Children 17
World Trade Organisation 259w

Parades Commission
526w

Parcelforce
30w

Parental responsibility
548w

Parking
NHS trusts 588–9w

Parking offences
Motorway service areas 252w

Parliament
Nurseries 840–1

Parliamentary procedure
Rulings and statements (11.01.00) 1wh, (12.01.00) 109–10wh

Partnership Fund
260–1w

Part-time employment
844
Working hours 261–2w

Passenger ships
Safety 450–1w

Passport Agency
see United Kingdom Passport Agency

Passports
177w
Administrative delays 295w

Patents
Drugs 62w

Paterson, Mr Owen
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 759, 770, 775–9
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Horserace Totalisator Board (19.01.00) 210–1wh
Questions
Business questions 429–30
Children, Day care 965
Falkland Islands, Argentina 683
Horserace Totalisator Board 548
Law enforcement, Wales 834–5
Livestock industry, Wales 494–5w

Patten Commission
see Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland

Pay review bodies
NHS 286–8w

Peace keeping operations
Kosovo 92w, 396–7w, 684–6

Peace negotiations
Middle East 412w

Peat
Dept of Health 196w

Pedestrian crossings
Schools 115–6w

Pension funds
Maxwell companies 570w

Pensioners
Income 68w
Income support 15, 66w, 330w, 432w, 572–3w
Opposition days (17.01.00) 557–610
Self-assessment of tax 570w
Social security benefits 232w, 572w
Somerset 571w
Wales 495w

Pensions
67–8w, (11.01.00) 150–249, 334w
Local government 248w
NHS 235w
Norwich 225–6w
Police 546–7
Tax credit 7–8, 353w
Teachers 390–2w

Performance and Innovation Unit
266–7w
Post offices 267w

Performance appraisal
Dept of Social Security 433w

Perham, Ms Linda
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Small businesses (20.01.00) 274wh, 294–7wh
Questions
Older workers 41w
Passenger ships, Safety 450–1w
Railways, Accidents 451w
Transport, EC countries 450w
Working hours, Part-time employment 261–2w

Personal and social education
41w

Personal pensions
Misrepresentation 106w

Personal records
Hamilton, Thomas 26–7w, 222w
Social security benefits 334–5w

Pertussis vaccine
51w

Peru
Human rights 321–2w

Pesticides
Genetically modified organisms 152w
Health hazards 417–8w
Labelling 482w

Petitions
Children (13.01.00) 526–7
Elderly (10.01.00) 117
Food (20.01.00) 1093
Overseas aid (13.01.00) 526–7
Slaughterhouses (13.01.00) 526

Petrol
Retail trade 523w
Wales 434w

Petrol alternatives
251–2w

Philippines
Bridges 209w

Pickles, Mr Eric
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 162, 231–5
Slaughterhouses, Petitions (13.01.00) 526
Questions
Fires, Death 463w
Invalid care allowances 570–1w
Social security benefits, Carers 6
Tuberculosis, Vaccination 143–4w

Pickthall, Mr Colin
Questions
Higher Education Funding Council for England, Public appointments 145w

Pigs
238w, 405–8, 842–3
Animal welfare 576–7w

Pike, Mr Peter L
Debates etc.
Line of route (18.01.00) 802, 808–9, 814–5
Questions
Bovine somatotropin 100w
Crime, Lancashire 554
Electricity, Prices 261w
Housing, Empty property 139–40
Lifelong education, Trade unions 967–8
ONE programme 66w
Pakistan, Democracy 673
VAT, Housing 272

Pinochet, Augusto
277–86, 375–6w, 559–60w, 581w

Planning
South West region 213w

Planning Inspectorate
113w

Planning permission
Aerials (18.01.00) 190–8wh
Competition 115w

Playing fields
115w

Plumbing
245w

Plutonium
379w

Plutonium—continued*
Respiratory system 60w

Pneumoconiosis
Industrial injuries disablement benefit 230–2w, 500w

Police
Disciplinary proceedings 16w
Early retirement 468w
Finance 300w, 302–8w, 546–7, 548–54w
Hillingdon 320w
Information technology 540–1
Lancashire 296–7w, 554
Manpower 295w, 307–17w, 375w, 455–6w, 836–9
Medals 455w
Northern Ireland 33–4w, 181w
Pensions 546–7
Recruitment 321w
Somerset 317w
Training 26w
Vehicles 319w

Police authorities
Council tax 367–8w

Police Authority for Northern Ireland
Annual reports 443–4w

Police Complaints Authority
Administrative delays 320–1w

Police grant
Staffordshire 12w

Policing for Northern Ireland Independent Commission
see Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland

Political activities
Civil servants 394w

Political parties
Finance 122w

Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
2R and money res* (10.01.00) 34–116
Order relating to Com (17.01.00) 659
Questions
122w

Political refugees
see Refugees

Pollard, Mr Kerry
Debates etc.
Food, Petitions (20.01.00) 1093
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Small businesses (20.01.00) 301–3wh
Questions
Morocco 323w

Polling stations
Disabled 300w

Pollution control
Exhaust emissions 141–2
Fuels 247–8w, 358–9w
Power stations 121w

Pond, Mr Chris
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 603

Portillo, Mr Michael
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 699, 733–5
Questions
Kosovo, Peace keeping operations 684

Ports
449w

Portsmouth Harbour
Warships 404w

Post codes
Correspondence 208w

Post Office
30w

Post offices
(12.01.00) 47–69wh, 485w
Bank services 523w
Dept of Health 51–2w
Dept of Trade and Industry 519–20w
Opposition days (17.01.00) 611–58
Performance and Innovation Unit 267w
Salisbury 108w
Social security benefits 335w, 501w, 519w
Somerset 519w
Wales 499w

Postage stamps
31w

Postal Services Commission
Public appointments 31w, 108w

Poultry
Animal welfare 100w

Pound, Mr Stephen
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 452–6, 460
Questions
Conservative Party 276
Indonesia, Sanctions 325w

Poverty
Children 3–5, 69w, 272–3
Greater London (11.01.00) 23–9wh
International Monetary Fund 481w

Powell, Sir Ray
Questions
EC grants and loans, Wales 828

Power stations
Pollution control 121w

Prentice, Mr Gordon
Debates etc.
Recycled Content of Newsprint Bill, 1R (10.01.00) 33
Questions
Electric cables 524w
Fluoride, Water supply 584w
Food, EC action 414
Hotels, Sales 448w
Labour Liberal Democrats Joint Consultative Committee 110w, 166–7w, 473–4w
Minimum wage 487w
National Assembly for Wales 496w
Pensioners, Income support 330w
Police, Vehicles 319w
Prisoners of war, Far East 398w

Pre-school education
Northumberland 45w

Prescott, Rt Hon John, Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for the Environment Transport and the Regions*
Questions
Bus services, Rural areas 118w
Bus services, Yorkshire and Humberside 127–8
Exhaust emissions, Pollution control 141–2
London Underground, Investment 244–5w
Transport supplementary grants 447w

Prescription drugs
Costs 57–8w, 145w

Prescriptions
Disabled 294w

Primarolo, Ms Dawn, Paymaster General*
Questions
Child care tax credit 568w
Exports, Tobacco 352w
Smuggling, Alcoholic drinks 351w
Smuggling, Drugs 233w
Tax allowances, Art works 104w
Tax allowances, Counselling 355–6w
Taxation, EC action 514w
Taxpayers, Shropshire 515w
VAT, Energy 352w
VAT, Housing 356w

Primary care trusts
511w

Primates
Animal experiments 467–8w

Prime Minister
Newspaper press 537w
Official engagements 473w
Official hospitality 268w

Prior, Mr David
Debates etc.
Influenza (10.01.00) 32

Prison Service
Higher civil servants 456–7w
Training 26w

Prisoner escapes
123w

Prisoner escorts
Young offenders 13w

Prisoners
Body searches 453–4w
Mentally ill 537
Self-mutilation 454w
Young offenders 14w

Prisoners of war
Far East 398w

Prisons
Contracts for services 456w
Discipline 453w
Drugs 17–9w, 453–4w
Greater London 453–4w
Overcrowding 537–9
Wales 537–8

Private sector
Institutional care 143w

Probation and aftercare
216w

Proliferation
Nuclear weapons (18.01.00) 153–74wh, 413w

Property
Ministry of Defence 405–6w
National Air Traffic Services 358w

Proportional representation
274–5

Proscribed organisations
Iran 325w

Prosecutions
Fishing offences 101w
UN Convention on Torture 559w

Prosser, Mr Gwyn
Questions
Deal Barracks 397–8w

Prostate cancer
53w, 136–7w, 582w

Protection from Harassment Act 1997
Questions
464w

Psychology
Correspondence 520w

Public Administration Select Committee
(18.01.00) 817; (20.01.00) 1093

Public appointments
Dept of the Clerk of the House 443w
Higher Education Funding Council for England 145w
Intelligence and Security Committee 221–2w
NHS 544w
Postal Services Commission 31w, 108w
Strategic Rail Authority 6w
Unified appeal tribunal 72w
University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust 237w, 292w

Public footpaths
Greater London 119w

Public private partnerships
Defence Evaluation and Research Agency 85w, 125w, 127w

Public safety radio communications project
214w, 301–2w, 539–41

Public transport
Greater London 249w
Information services 115w
Millennium 248–9w

Pupil exclusions
538w

Quarantine
100w

Queen
Anniversaries 268w
Commemorative coins 392w

Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother
Commemorative coins 103w

Quin, Rt Hon Ms Joyce, Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food*
Questions
Agriculture 154w
Agriculture, Marketing 239w
Beef 203w
Beta carotene 418w
Bovine somatotropin 100w
Bovine spongiform encephalopathy, Disease control 154w
Bovine tuberculosis, Disease control 239w
Cattle, Exports 158w
Chlormequat 157–8w, 503–4w
Common agricultural policy 240w
Common agricultural policy, Worcestershire 99w
Dairy farming 239w
Eggs, Marketing 99–100w
Farmers, Compensation 241w
Farmers, Early retirement 238w
Food, EC action 414–5
Food, Labelling 157w, 240w
Genetically modified organisms, Honey 419–20w
Genetically modified organisms, Pesticides 152w
Genetically modified organisms, Research 99w
Hill livestock allowances 408–10
Meat Hygiene Service, Information technology 154w
Non-food crops 238w
Organophosphates 204w, 241w
Pesticides, Health hazards 417–8w
Quarantine 100w
Slaughterhouses, Closures 419w
Slaughterhouses, Inspections 155w

Quin, Rt Hon Ms Joyce – continued*
Slaughterhouses, Regulation 154w
Veterinary medicine 158w

Quinn, Mr Lawrie
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 941
Questions
Middle East, Refugees 409w

Racial discrimination
Crown Prosecution Service 218w

Radiation exposure
Research 60–1w, 487w

Radioactive materials
Japan 260–1w
Switzerland 259–60w

RAF Chilmark
494w

Rail Vehicle Accessibility Regulations 1998
Questions
116–7w

Railtrack
Investment 452w

Railway stations
449w
Hadley Wood (19.01.00) 258–64wh

Railways
Accidents 451w
Safety 246–7w

"Raising Aspirations in the 21st Century"
388w

Rammell, Mr Bill
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 562
Questions
Glass 521–2w
Glass, North West region 259w

Randall, Mr John
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Kosovo (12.01.00) 99–100wh
Questions
Belfast Agreement 179w
Montenegro, Foreign relations 412w
Police, Hillingdon 320w

Rapson, Mr Syd
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 990
Questions
Children, Day care 964–5

Raynsford, Mr Nick, Minister of State, Dept of the Environment Transport and the Regions*
Questions
Home improvement agencies 213–4w
Members, Correspondence 531w

Recruitment
Environment Agency 249w
Ministry of Defence 91–2w
Police 321w
Territorial Army 395–6w

Recycled Content of Newsprint Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
1R (10.01.00) 33

Recycling
7w, 163–4w
Newsprint (10.01.00) 33

Redundancy
British Energy 109w

Redwood, Rt Hon John
Questions
London Underground, Investment 244–5w
Road traffic 138–9
Transport supplementary grants 447w

Reed, Mr Andrew
Questions
Class sizes 956

Referendums
(10.01.00) 34–116
Finance 841–2

Reform of the House of Lords Royal Commission
417w

Refugees
123–4w
Algeria 214–5w
Chechnya 317w
Heathrow Airport 298w
Housing 471w
Middle East 409w
Scotland 299w, 546w

Regional development agencies
Government assistance 269–70w

Regional planning and development
112w
West Midlands 143

Regional selective assistance
208w, 521w
Axgro Foods 27w
Food 27w
Sussex 382–3w

Regulatory impact assessments
Representation of the People Bill 1999/2000 545–6

Rehabilitation
Drugs 191–4w
Offenders 467w

Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974
Questions
467w

Reid, Rt Hon Dr John, Secretary of State for Scotland*
Questions
Assets, Scotland Office 265w
Firearms, Licensing 376w
Firearms, Scotland 376–7w
Hamilton, Thomas, Personal records 26–7w, 222w
Local government, Scotland 376w
Manpower, Scotland Office 264–5w
Police, Training 26w
Refugees, Scotland 546w
Sexual offences, Scotland 26w

Religion
Dept for International Development 567w
Iran 324w

Remploy
175w

Rendel, Mr David
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Horserace Totalisator Board (19.01.00) 203–4wh
Questions
Police, Pensions 546–7

Rent officers
Stockport (12.01.00) 104–10wh

Reparation by offenders
Northern Ireland 181w, 263–5

Representation of the People Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
Com (12.01.00) 306–97, (13.01.00) 437–526
Rep adjourned (19.01.00) 870–937
Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 998–1061
Questions
Regulatory impact assessments 545–6

Rescue services
82w

Reserve forces
Balkans 207–8w
Health services 396w

Respiratory system
Diseases 421–2w
Plutonium 60w

Retail trade
Petrol 523w

Rights of audience
Crown courts 219w

Riot control weapons
Heathrow Airport 556w
Metropolitan Police 465w

Ripon
Lone parents 276

Ritual slaughter
152–3w

River Clyde
Shipbuilding (18.01.00) 182–9wh

Rivers
South West region 120–1w

Road traffic
136–9
Rural areas 450w

Road traffic control
Costs 363w
Lorries 318–9w

Road works
Utilities 250–1w

Roads
Accidents 209–10w
Finance 134–6
Repairs and maintenance 529–32w
Safety 143–4
West Sussex 211w

Robathan, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 296
Government (18.01.00) 760
Pensioners (17.01.00) 557
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 61, 78, 94–5, 100–4
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 339
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 861–2
Questions
Central Railway 128–9
Housing benefit 69w
Lifelong education, Trade unions 968–9
Reparation by offenders, Northern Ireland 264
Silcott, Winston 296w
University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust, Public appointments 237w, 292w

Robertson, Mr Laurence
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 178

Robertson, Mr Laurence*—*continued
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Horserace Totalisator Board (19.01.00) 207–9wh
Questions
Antenatal care 63w
Areas of outstanding natural beauty 363w
Civil servants, Political activities 394w
Food, Labelling 157w
India, Christianity 478w
Indonesia, Sanctions 478w
Institutional care, Fees and charges 425w
Intergovernmental Conference 2000 668–9
Myxoedema 425–6w
Poverty, Children 3–4
Refugees, Housing 471w
Sinn Fein 370w

Robinson, Geoffrey
Correspondence 525w

Roche, Mrs Barbara, Minister of State, Home Office
Questions
Illegal immigrants 297w, 319w
Immigrants 298–9w
Immigration, Administrative delays 13w
Immigration, Appeals 16w
Immigration, Voucher schemes 452w
Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Correspondence 122w
Members, Correspondence 20w, 368w, 547w
Passports 177w
Passports, Administrative delays 295w
Refugees 123–4w
Refugees, Algeria 214–5w
Refugees, Chechnya 317w
Refugees, Heathrow Airport 298w
Refugees, Housing 471w
Refugees, Scotland 299w
Temporary immigrants 20w
United Kingdom Passport Agency, Business plans 16w

Rodents
Housing 575–6w

Roe, Mrs Marion
Debates etc.
Line of route (18.01.00) 801–5, 814–6
Questions
Charter of Fundamental Rights (EU) 413w
Weapons, Northern Ireland 180w

Rooker, Rt Hon Jeff, Minister of State, Dept of Social Security
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 235–41
Pensioners (17.01.00) 564–71, 573, 579–80
Questions
Assets, Dept of Social Security 331–2w
Benefits Agency Security Investigation Service, Manpower 80–1w
Computers, Dept of Social Security 67w
Cost effectiveness, Dept of Social Security 335–8w
Manpower, Dept of Social Security 185–6w
Maxwell companies, Pension funds 570w
National Insurance Contributions Office, Vetting 334w
National Insurance Fund 499w
"Opportunity for All, Tackling Poverty and Social Exclusion" 75w
Pensioners, Income 68w
Pensioners, Income support 15, 66w, 330w, 432w, 572–3w
Pensioners, Social security benefits 232w, 572w
Pensioners, Somerset 571w

Rooker, Rt Hon Jeff*—*continued
Pensions 67–8w, 334w
Pensions, Norwich 225–6w
Performance appraisal, Dept of Social Security 433w
Social security benefits, Abuse 68–9w, 340w, 433w
Social security benefits, Automated credit transfer 333w, 432w, 572w
Social security benefits, Personal records 335w
Social security benefits, Post offices 501w
Social security benefits, Reform 17–9
Social Security Contributions Agency, Computers 66w
Stakeholder pensions 231w, 332–3w
State earnings related pension scheme 77–9w
State retirement pensions 69w, 74–5w, 331w, 426w, 502w, 572w
State retirement pensions, Carers 331w
State retirement pensions, Females 14–5
Statistics, Dept of Social Security 427–9w
Winter fuel payments 12

Rooney, Mr Terry
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 170, 174–8, 181

Ross, Mr Ernie
Questions
Conditions of employment 541w

Ross, Mr William
Debates etc.
Disqualifications Bill, Points of order (19.01.00) 866
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 498, 501–2, 507–8, 510–1, 513, 518–23, (12.01.00) 340, 346–7, 352–4, 361–4, 366–7, 372–3, 375, 382, 385–9
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 876–7, 894, 900–3
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1027–8, 1032–5, 1040, 1044, 1046–7, 1058–60
Questions
Firearms, Licensing 370–2w, 376w
Firearms, Scotland 376–7w
Homicide, Northern Ireland 526–7w
Independent International Commission on Decommissioning 527w
Parades Commission 526w
Weapons, Northern Ireland 182w

Rough sleepers initiative
15–6

Rowe, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 158, 187, 193–5
Government (18.01.00) 782, 787
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 878–9, 882
Questions
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus 189–90w
Winter fuel payments 333–4w

Rowlands, Mr Ted
Questions
Social security benefits, Wales 184w

Roy, Mr Frank
Questions
Drugs, Crime 674–5

Royal Ballet
344w

Royal Commission in Reform of the House of Lords
see Reform of the House of Lords Royal Commission

Royal Marsden Hospital
140w

Royal Military Academy
Discharges 89w, 398w
Secondary education 90w

Royal Opera House
385w

Royal parks
Demonstrations 346–8w

Royal Ulster Constabulary
181–2w, 843–4
Compensation 443–4w
Kosovo 34w
Ministerial statements (19.01.00) 845–64
Special Branch 129–30w

Ruane, Mr Chris
Sittings in Westminster Hall
EC grants and loans (11.01.00) 15–8wh
Questions
Administration of justice, Young offenders 388w
Antisocial behaviour orders 557w
Armed forces, Intimidation 402–4w
Burglary, Crime prevention 374–5w
Bus services 366w
Bus services, Rural areas 365w
Closed circuit television 372–3w
Council housing 365w
Crimes of violence 374w
Housing benefit 433–4w
Institutional care, Wales 495w
Local crime reduction partnership 372w
Mental health services 293–4w
Mental health services, Manpower 293w
Mental patients 292w
Multiple occupation 364–5w
National Council of Victim Support 373w
NHS, Sick leave 292–3w
Offenders, Electronic tagging 373–4w
Railtrack, Investment 452w
Road traffic control, Costs 363w
Roads, Repairs and maintenance 530–2w
Social rented housing 363–4w
Surgery, Females 195w

Ruddock, Joan
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 117–22wh
Questions
Genetically modified organisms, Honey 419–20w
Organic farming 411–2
Soya beans, USA 520w

Ruffley, Mr David
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1011, 1028
Questions
Closed circuit television, Stowmarket 549
Social security benefits, Carers 5–6

Rugby
Grants 345w
North West region 345w

Rural areas
Bus services 118w, 365w
Education 539w
Road traffic 450w
Theatre 346w
Transport 245w
Unemployment 46w

Russell, Bob
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Post offices (12.01.00) 65–6wh
Questions
Armed forces, Colchester 282w
Breast cancer, Screening 234–5w
Commemorative coins, Queen 392w
Constituencies 7w
Disability living allowance 68w
Neurology 423w
Queen, Anniversaries 268w
Student numbers, Medicine 440–1w
Transport, Conferences 248w

Russell, Ms Christine
Questions
Data Protection Act 1998 452w

Russia
283–4w
Antisemitism 409w
Arms trade 410w

Ryan, Ms Joan
Questions
Africa, Armed conflict 678–9
Metropolitan Police 21w
Public transport, Information services 115w
Teachers, Pay 970–1

St Aubyn, Mr Nick
Debates etc.
Health services, Surrey (13.01.00) 528–31, 533–4
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Small businesses (20.01.00) 280wh, 288wh, 297–9wh, 306wh
Questions
Class sizes 955–6
Universities, Wales 498w
Welfare state, Voluntary organisations 15–6

Salisbury
Post offices 108w

Salisbury Plain
280w

Salter, Mr Martin
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 940
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 856–7
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Bank services, Overcharging (19.01.00) 229–32wh
Questions
Arthritis, Medical treatments 145w

Sanctions
Angola 678–9
Indonesia 325w, 478w, 581w
Iraq 220w
Serbia 681–2

Sanders, Mr Adrian
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 632
Questions
Council housing, Property transfer 144–6
Performance and Innovation Unit 266–7w
Performance and Innovation Unit, Post offices 267w
Prescription drugs, Costs 145w
Social security benefits, Students 228w
Stamp duties, Property transfer 513w
Tourism, Task forces 25w

Sarwar, Mr Mohammad
Sittings in Westminster Hall
River Clyde, Shipbuilding (18.01.00) 182–5wh

Savidge, Mr Malcolm
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 114wh
Nuclear weapons, Proliferation (18.01.00) 153–9wh

Sayeed, Mr Jonathan
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 298–9
Questions
Closed circuit television, Ampthill 543–4

School meals
188w

Schools
Attendance 540w
Buildings 961–3
Capital investment 42–3w
Drugs 223w, 971–2
Governing bodies 436–7w
Homosexuality 839–40
Inspections 543–4w
Internet 36w
Northumberland 45–6w
Pedestrian crossings 115–6w

Schools access initiative
272–3w

Scotland
Carers' premium 185w
Firearms 376–7w
Invalid care allowances 73w
Local government 376w
New deal schemes 965–7
Refugees 299w, 546w
Sexual offences 26w
Social security benefits 73w

Scotland Office
Assets 265w
Manpower 264–5w

Scotland Yard
see Metropolitan Police

Seas and oceans
Archaeology 348w

Secondary Care Agency
see Defence Secondary Care Agency

Secondary education
Royal Military Academy 90w
Standards 539w

Secondment
Cabinet Office 134w
Home Office 471–2w

Secure accommodation
Young offenders 13w, 558w

Secured car parks scheme
122w

Security
Northern Ireland 180w, 265–7

Sedgemore, Mr Brian
Questions
Smuggling, Tobacco 351w

Select Committee on Public Administration
see Public Administration Select Committee

Self-assessment of tax
Pensioners 570w

Self-mutilation
Prisoners 454w

Serbia
(12.01.00) 97–103wh
Export controls 133w

Serbia—continued*
Sanctions 681–2

Serious Fraud Office
219–20w

Severe disablement allowance
1–3

Sewage
Southern Water (11.01.00) 250–8

Sexual offences
Scotland 26w

Shares
Archer of Weston-super-Mare, Lord 520w

Shaw, Mr Jonathan
Questions
Incapacity benefit, Medical examinations 10
Mortgage relief 185w
Schools, Attendance 540w
Specialist schools initiative 958–9

Sheerman, Mr Barry
Questions
Beacon schools, Information technology 961

Sheldon, Rt Hon Robert
Debates etc.
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1064

Shepherd, Mr Richard
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 314, 320, 325

Shipbuilding
River Clyde (18.01.00) 182–9wh

Shipley, Ms Debra
Questions
Electromagnetic fields, Health hazards 196w
Legitimacy 21–2w

Short, Rt Hon Clare, Secretary of State for International Development*
Questions
Africa, Overseas aid 183–4w
Developing countries, Asbestos 263–4w
Developing countries, Disease control 264w
EC aid, Environment protection 184w
Human rights, Commonwealth 183w
Incentives, Dept for International Development 482w
Kosovo 480w
Malaria 264w
Mines, Bomb disposal 183w
Philippines, Bridges 209w

Shropshire
Internet 36w
Taxpayers 515w

Sick leave
NHS 292–3w

Silcott, Winston
296w

Simpson, Mr Alan
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 119wh, 138–42wh
Questions
Fuel poverty 139w
Military aircraft, Iraq 165w
Organic farming 410–1

Simpson, Mr Keith
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 758

Simpson, Mr Keith—continued*
Questions
National identity 271–2

Singh, Mr Marsha
Questions
Special areas of conservation 366–7w

Single parents
see Lone parents

Single regeneration budget
113w
West Midlands 110–1w

Sinn Fein
370w

Sixth form education
Finance 272w, 543w

Skin cancer
Electromagnetic fields 142–3w

Skin piercing
53w

Slaughterhouses
Closures 419w
Inspections 155w
Petitions (13.01.00) 526
Regulation 154w

Sleeping rough
112w

Small Business Service
482w

Small businesses
(20.01.00) 265–308wh, 539w
Agriculture 415–7
Wales 497w

SMART awards
109w

Smith, Rt Hon Andrew, Chief Secretary to the Treasury*
Questions
Assets, Public sector 353w
Assets, Treasury 233w
Excise duties, Fuels 569w
Excise duties, Tobacco 569w
Information Technology Services Agency, Contracts for services 394w
Interest rates, Debts 394w
Members, Correspondence 351–2w
Self-assessment of tax, Pensioners 570w
Tax credit, Pensions 353w

Smith, Angela
Questions
Education action zones 145–6w
Home improvement agencies 213–4w
Reform of the House of Lords Royal Commission 417w
Salisbury Plain 280w

Smith, Rt Hon Chris, Secretary of State for Culture Media and Sport*
Questions
Civil servants, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 25w
Cost effectiveness, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 24w
Ethnic groups, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 25w
Manpower, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 350w
Members, Correspondence 341w
Royal Opera House 385w
Wembley Stadium 23w

Smith, Miss Geraldine
Questions
EC enlargement 406–7w

Smith, Jacqui, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Education and Employment*
Questions
Drugs prevention initiative 543w
Education, Standards 43w
Gamma hydroxybutyrate 41w
Outdoor education 389w
Personal and social education 41w
Pupil exclusions 538w
Schools, Attendance 540w
Schools, Buildings 961–3
Schools, Capital investment 42–3w
Schools, Drugs 223w, 971–2
Truancy 271w
Voluntary schools, Greater London 40–1w

Smith, Mr John
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 219, 236
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 67, 104–5
Post offices (17.01.00) 624
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 309
Questions
Acid rain, Fish 134
Cardiff Airport 829–30
Iraq-Kuwait conflict, Chemical and biological warfare 534–5w
Iraq-Kuwait conflict, Organophosphates 535–6w
North South Ministerial Council 178–9w
Trains, Overcrowding 114w

Smith, Mr Llew
Questions
Ammunition, Uranium 282w
Business questions 434–5
Environment Agency 359–60w
Environment Agency, Fees and charges 448w
Libyan Arab Republic, Guided weapons 414–5w
Nuclear safeguards 487–8w
Nuclear weapons, USA 493w
Plutonium 379w
Radioactive materials, Japan 260w
Radioactive materials, Switzerland 259–60w
Theatre, Wales 498w

Smith, Sir Robert
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 158
Questions
East coast railway line 111w
Pigs 238w, 406, 842–3

Smoking
Dept for Education and Employment 436w
Dept for International Development 481w
Dept of Trade and Industry 486w
Home Office 553w
Lord Chancellor's Dept 527–8w
Solicitor-General 545–6w

Smoking related diseases
55w

Smuggling
Alcoholic drinks 351w
Drugs 233w, 322w
Fuels 393w
Tobacco 351w, 453w

Smyth, Rev Martin
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 989–90

Smyth, Rev Martin*—*continued
Calling of Members, Points of order (19.01.00) 866
Representation of the People Bill, Com (12.01.00) 348
Questions
Business questions 429
Drugs, Crime 675–6
Moluccan Islands 564w

Soames, Mr Nicholas
Debates etc.
Armed forces, Homosexuality (12.01.00) 294
Questions
Children, Day care 963
Developing countries, AIDS 677
Witnesses, Protection 552–3

Social rented housing
363–4w

Social security benefits
(11.01.00) 150–249
Abuse 68–9w, 339–40w, 433w
Automated credit transfer 333w, 432w, 499w, 572w
Carers 5–7, 65w
Community service orders 430–1w
Debts 431–2w
Medical examinations 69w
Offenders 225w
Pensioners 232w, 572w
Personal records 334–5w
Post offices 335w, 501w, 519w
Reform 17–9
Scotland 73w
Students 228w
Wales 184w

Social Security Contributions Agency
Computers 66w, 225–6w

Soley, Mr Clive
Debates etc.
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1067–72, 1090

Solicitor-General
Smoking 545–6w

Solicitors
Training 527w

Somerset
Pensioners 571w
Police 317w
Post offices 519w

South West region
Planning 213w
Rivers 120–1w

Southern Water
Sewage (11.01.00) 250–8

Southworth, Ms Helen
Questions
Immigration, Voucher schemes 452w

Soya beans
USA 520w

Speaker and deputies
Debates etc.
Amendments and new clauses (11.01.00) 150, (17.01.00) 557, 611, (18.01.00) 691, 750, (19.01.00) 892, 912, 929–30, (20.01.00) 1016, 1023, 1030, 1045, 1050, 1052
Conduct of proceedings (10.01.00) 28, (11.01.00) 174, 219, 240, 255–6, (12.01.00) 264, 268, 282, 286, (13.01.00) 408, 414, (17.01.00) 603, 620, 630, (18.01.00) 702–6, 735, 741–4, 777, 791–2, 803, 813, 826, (19.01.00) 837, 844, 853, 859, 863–4, 873–4, 877, 880, 882, 887, 894–5, 898, 900, 903, 906, 916–7, 920, 922, 924, 938, 946, (20.01.00) 988, 996, 1006, 1013–4, 1022–3, 1029, 1040, 1082, 1089
Disallowed questions (11.01.00) 134, (12.01.00) 276, (13.01.00) 422
Points of order (11.01.00) 238, 248–9, (13.01.00) 532, (17.01.00) 555–6, 611, 658, (18.01.00) 687–8, 706, (19.01.00) 865–6, 887, 925, 945, (20.01.00) 997, 999, 1088–9
Rulings and statements, Fifteen minutes rule (11.01.00) 150
Rulings and statements, Sub judice rule (13.01.00) 422
Rulings and statements, Supplementary questions (13.01.00) 418, (17.01.00) 556, (20.01.00) 966
Rulings and statements, Unparliamentary expressions (13.01.00) 408, (18.01.00) 687–8
Rulings and statements, Westminster Hall sittings (12.01.00) 302
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Conduct of proceedings (11.01.00) 16wh, 25–6wh, (12.01.00) 52wh, 70wh, 89wh, 99wh, 107wh, 109wh, (13.01.00) 114wh, 121wh, 124wh, 126wh, 132wh, 135wh, 137wh, (18.01.00) 167wh, 169wh, 171wh, 185–6wh, (19.01.00) 215wh, 240wh, (20.01.00) 274wh, 278wh,288wh, 303–4wh
Points of order (20.01.00) 266wh
Rulings and statements, Admissions (12.01.00) 90wh
Rulings and statements, Parliamentary procedure (11.01.00) 1wh, (12.01.00) 109–10wh
Rulings and statements, Speeches (18.01.00) 164wh

Special areas of conservation
366–7w

Special Branch
Royal Ulster Constabulary 129–30w

Special hospitals
Vacancies 145w

Specialist schools initiative
957–60

Spellar, Mr John, Minister for the Armed Forces, Ministry of Defence
Debates etc.
Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Nancekuke (18.01.00) 822–6
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Air force, Insignia (19.01.00) 254–7wh
Questions
Air force, Manpower 405–6w
Aircraft carriers, Deployment 96–7w
Ammunition 406w
Ammunition, Falkirk 90w
Ammunition, Uranium 98w, 279–80w, 282w
Armed conflict 85w
Armed forces, Criminal investigation 490–1w
Armed forces, Deployment 283w, 493w
Armed forces, Falkland Islands 207w
Armed forces, Health 277w
Armed forces, Hospitals 280–1w, 492–3w
Armed forces, Housing 285w, 399–402w
Armed forces, Indonesia 281–2w
Armed forces, Intimidation 402–4w
Armed forces, Legal aid 83–4w
Armed forces, Orthopaedics 284w
Armed forces, Telecommunications 282w
Armed forces, Training 93–4w

Spellar, Mr John*—*continued
Armed forces, Uniforms 284–5w
Army Foundation College 84w, 285w
ASTOR system 395–6w
Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Nancekuke 488w
Chinook helicopters 286w
Chinook helicopters, Accidents 98w
Clyde submarine base 92w
Cost effectiveness, Ministry of Defence 86–7w
Courts martial 491–2w
Deal Barracks 397–8w
Defence, EC countries 129w
Defence Evaluation and Research Agency 405–6w
Defence Vetting Agency, Manpower 207w
EC defence policy 97w
Gulf Veterans' Illnesses Unit, USA 85–6w
Gulf War syndrome 533–4w
Gurkhas, War pensions 89–90w
HMS Brave 83w
HMS Broadsword 92–3w
HMS Chatham 82–3w
HMS Westminster 97–8w, 490w
Hunting 489–90w
Imphal Barracks, Correspondence 166w
Iraq-Kuwait conflict, Casualties 89–90w
Iraq-Kuwait conflict, Chemical and biological warfare 534–5w
Iraq-Kuwait conflict, Organophosphates 535–6w
Kosovo, Peace keeping operations 92w, 396–7w
Military aircraft 394–5w
Military exercises 405w
Military exercises, Food supply 489w
Military intelligence, Larkhill 97w
Navy, Asbestos 94w
Prisoners of war, Far East 398w
Property, Ministry of Defence 405–6w
RAF Chilmark 494w
Rescue services 82w
Reserve forces, Balkans 207–8w
Reserve forces, Health services 396w
Royal Military Academy, Discharges 89w, 398w
Royal Military Academy, Secondary education 90w
Territorial Army, Costs 92w
Territorial Army, Manpower 492w
Territorial Army, Recruitment 395–6w
Territorial Army, Working hours 395w
Territorial Auxiliary and Volunteer Reserves' Association 88w
Warships, Portsmouth H. Dour 404w
Weapons, Testing 276–7w
Wilkinson Sword of Peace 277–9w

Spelman, Mrs Caroline
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Garages and petrol stations, Contracts (12.01.00) 70–5wh, 88wh
Questions
Independent Case Examiner for the Child Support Agency 10–1
Influenza, Vaccination 585–8w

Sport England
see English Sports Council

Sports
341w
Facilities 345w
Finance 341–2w

Sportsgrounds
343w
Lancashire 343w

Spring, Mr Richard
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Horserace Totalisator Board (19.01.00) 204–6wh
Questions
"Culture Media and Sport Select Committee on Staging International Sporting Events" 25–6w
NHS 842
Wembley Stadium 23–4w

Squire, Ms Rachel
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Post offices (12.01.00) 56–7wh
Questions
Nuclear weapons 398–9w

Sri Lanka
579w
Armed conflict 328w, 416w

Staffordshire
Police grant 12w

Stakeholder pensions
79–80w, 231w, 332–3w

Stalking
1w, 20w, 464w

Stamp duties
Property transfer 513w

Standard spending assessments
254–5w

Standards Fund
176w

Standards of Conduct in Public Office Standing Committee
see Committee on Standards in Public Life

Stanley, Rt Hon Sir John
Questions
Police, Manpower 375w

Starkey, Dr Phyllis
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 988–9
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 119wh, 124wh
Questions
EC institutions, Voting methods 670
Ilisu dam 31w, 477w
NHS 270
Royal Military Academy, Discharges 89w, 398w
Royal Military Academy, Secondary education 90w

State earnings related pension scheme
77–9w

State retirement pensions
69w, 74–5w, 331w, 426w, 502w, 572w
Carers 331w
Females 14–5

Statistics
Dept of Social Security 427–9w

Steen, Mr Anthony
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 611, 621, 630
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Post offices (12.01.00) 50wh

Stevenson, Mr George
Questions
Capital receipts initiative, Stoke on Trent 362w
Police grant, Staffordshire 12w

Stewart, Mr David
Questions
Belfast Agreement 179w
Disabled, Ophthalmic services 294w
Fares, Disabled 254w
Oil 31–2w

Stewart, Mr Ian
Questions
Pertussis vaccine 51w

Stoate, Dr Howard
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 698, 708, 712–3, 729–32, 738
Influenza (10.01.00) 32
Questions
Housing, Construction 113–4w

Stockport
Rent officers (12.01.00) 104–10wh

Stoke on Trent
Capital receipts initiative 362w

Stowmarket
Closed circuit television 549

Strang, Rt Hon Dr Gavin,
Questions
Pigs 406

Strategic Rail Authority
Public appointments 6w

Straw, Rt Hon Jack, Secretary of State for the Home Dept*
Debates etc.
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 34–45, 51, 56, 111
Questions
Assets, Home Office 463–4w
Buildings, Home Office 19w, 558w
Cost effectiveness, Home Office 214w
Crime, Lancashire 554
Electoral systems, Reform 296w
Empty property, Home Office 468–71w
Fletcher, Yvonne 300w
Kalejs, Konrad 14–6w, 215w
Manpower, Home Office 176–7w
Members, Correspondence 463w, 547w
Metropolitan Police 21w
Muvunyi, Tharcisse 467w
Pinochet, Augusto 277–86, 375–6w, 559–60w
Police, Early retirement 468w
Police, Finance 300w, 546–7
Police, Information technology 540–1
Police, Lancashire 296–7w, 554
Police, Manpower 295w
Police, Pensions 546–7
Public safety radio communications project 539–41
Secondment, Home Office 471–2w
Smoking, Home Office 553w
Tyson, Mike 317–8w, 368–70w

Streeter, Mr Gary
Questions
British Council 567–8w
British Council, Contracts 567–8w
Developing countries, Debts 562–3w
Developing countries, Export credit guarantees 566w
Disabled, Dept for International Development 567w
EC aid 564–5w
Ethnic groups, Dept for International Development 567w
Females, Dept for International Development 567w
Non-governmental organisations 565w
Overseas aid 566w

Streeter, Mr Gary—continued*
Religion, Dept for International Development 567w

Stringer, Mr Graham, Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office*
Debates etc.
Legislative drafting (20.01.00) 1097–100
Questions
Civil servants, Political activities 394w
Civil service, Investors in people 441–3w
Conditions of employment 135–6w
Consultants, Cabinet Office 443w
NHS, Public appointments 544w
Secondment, Cabinet Office 134w

Strokes
188–9w

Stuart, Ms Gisela, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Health*
Debates etc.
Health services, Avon (19.01.00) 950–4
Health services, Surrey (13.01.00) 532–6
Questions
Accident and emergency departments, Manpower 585w
Alzheimer's disease, Aricept 197w
Drugs, Electronic commerce 424w
Drugs, Patents 62w
Empty property, Ministry of Health 512w
Gamma hydroxybutyrate 177w
General practitioners, Medway 509w
Health services, Lancashire 290–1w
Hospital beds 423–4w
Hospitals, Admissions 63w
Influenza 584–5w
London Ambulance Service 56w
Minor injuries units, Isle of Sheppey 509–10w
NHS Direct 289w
NHS Direct, Influenza 584w
NHS Direct, Nurses 585w
NHS trusts, Parking 588–9w
Prescription drugs, Costs 57–8w, 145w
Tranquillisers 509w

Student numbers
Medicine 440–1w

Students
Fees and charges 40w, 44–5w, 147–8w
Social security benefits 228w

Stunell, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1081–2
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Landlord and tenant, Housing benefit (12.01.00) 104–7wh, 110wh
Questions
Alzheimer's disease, Aricept 197w
Business questions 426
Council tax benefits 71w
Firearms 466w
Incinerators, Environmental health 131

Sub judice rule
Rulings and statements (13.01.00) 422

Sudan
Chemical Weapons Convention 323w
Human rights 262w
Overseas aid 262–3w

Sudbury Prison
217–8w

Sugar
ACP countries 577w

Supplementary questions
Rulings and statements (13.01.00) 418, (17.01.00) 556, (20.01.00) 966

Sure start programme
37–9w

Surgery
Females 195w

Surrey
Health services (13.01.00) 528–36

Sussex
Regional selective assistance 382–3w

Sustainable Development Commission
529w

Swansea
University of Wales College of Medicine 498w

Swayne, Mr Desmond
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 942
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 226–7
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1004
Questions
Business questions 434
Chinook helicopters, Accidents 98w
Cuba, Foreign relations 681
Digital broadcasting 350w
Dogs 6w
Institutional care 288w
Intergovernmental Conference 2000 412w
Meningitis, Vaccination 50w
Representation of the People Bill 1999/2000, Regulatory impact assessments 545–6
Terrorism, Northern Ireland 178w
Tuberculosis, Vaccination 144w

Swimming
Olympic Games 343w

Swimming pools
Safety (18.01.00) 175–81wh

Swinney, Mr John
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 160
Questions
Tyne and Wear Metro 531–2w

Switzerland
Radioactive materials 259–60w

Syms, Mr Robert
Debates etc.
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 933–6
Questions
Roads, Finance 135–6
Trade agreements, France 383w

"Tackling Congestion and Pollution"
367w

Tamworth
Electricity 485w
Unemployment 393w

Tapsell, Sir Peter
Questions
Official engagements, Prime Minister 473w

Task forces
Tourism 25w

Tax allowances
Art works 104w
Counselling 355–6w

Tax credit
353–4w
Pensions 7–8, 353w

Taxation
EC action 514w

Taxis
Greater London 529w
Guide dogs 529w

Taxpayers
Shropshire 515w

Taylor, Mr David
Debates etc.
Community Protection (Airport Noise and Pollution) Bill, 1R (19.01.00) 867–9
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 454
Questions
Agriculture, Small businesses 416

Taylor, Mr Ian
Questions
Beacon schools, Information technology 960–1

Taylor, Rt Hon John D
Debates etc.
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 860–1

Taylor, Mr John M
Questions
Falkland Islands 408w
Hamilton, Thomas, Personal records 26–7w
Weapons, Northern Ireland 262–3

Taylor, Mr Matthew
Debates etc.
Influenza (10.01.00) 26–7
Sittings in Westminster Hall
EC grants and loans (11.01.00) 15wh, 18wh
Questions
Assets, Dept of Social Security 331–2w
Assets, Home Office 463–4w
Assets, Lord Chancellor's Dept 294–5w
Assets, Public sector 353w
Assets, Scotland Office 265w
Assets, Treasury 233w
Barber, Michael 48–9w
Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, Public private partnerships 85w, 125w
Economic and monetary union 515w
Excise duties, Fuels 569w
Excise duties, Tobacco 569w
Export credit guarantees 487w
Gulf Veterans' Illnesses Unit, USA 85–6w
Incentives, Dept for International Development 482w
Incentives, Lord Chancellor's Dept 296w
Incentives, Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food 417w
Incentives, Treasury 352–3w
Interest rates, Debts 394w
National debt 515–6w
Police, Manpower 456w
Standards, Treasury 105–6w
USA, Ministry of Defence 86w

Taylor, Sir Teddy
Questions
Mutual societies 232w
Security, Northern Ireland 265

Teachers
Further education 440w
Pay 435w, 970–1
Pensions 390–2w

Telecommunications
Armed forces 282w

Telecommunications masts
see Aerials

Telephone systems
House of Commons 546–7w

Television
Licensing 348w, 474w, 537w

Temporary immigrants
20w

Tenancy agreements
Council housing 120w

Terminal care
56w

Territorial Army
Costs 92w
Manpower 492w
Recruitment 395–6w
Working hours 395w

Territorial Auxiliary and Volunteer Reserves Association
88w

Terrorism
413w
Iran 476w, 580–1w
Northern Ireland 178w
USA 477w

The Tote
see Horserace Totalisator Board

Theatre
Rural areas 346w
Wales 330w, 498w

Theft
Cars 555–6w

Thomas, Mr Gareth
Debates etc.
Alternative energy (10.01.00) 118–22

Thomas, Mr Gareth R
Questions
Land Registry 222–3w
New deal for young people 542w
NHS, Pay review bodies 286–8w

Thompson, Mr William
Debates etc.
Millennium compliance (20.01.00) 982
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Garages and petrol stations, Contracts (12.01.00) 81–2wh
Questions
Pigs 407
Royal Ulster Constabulary 182w

Timms, Stephen
Members' interests 269w

Timms, Mr Stephen, Financial Secretary to the Treasury*
Questions
Airport tax 231–2w
Company voluntary arrangements 512–3w
EC grants and loans 102w
Excise duties, Beer 393w
Excise duties, Diesel fuel 104w
Hollis Industries 569w
Smuggling, Fuels 393w
Windfall tax 104w

Tipping, Mr Paddy, Parliamentary Secretary, Privy Council Office*
Debates etc.
Criminal Justice (Mode of Trial) Bill (HL), Points of order (20.01.00) 1089
Line of route (18.01.00) 806

Tobacco
Excise duties 569w
Exports 352w

Tobacco—continued
Smuggling 351w, 453w

Todd, Mr Mark
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 773–6
Questions
Coal, Mining 112–3w

Tolls
Lorries 252w

Tonge, Dr Jenny
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 994–5
Health services (18.01.00) 711, 716
Indonesia, Points of order (17.01.00) 658
Pensioners (17.01.00) 565
Post offices (17.01.00) 616
Questions
Accident and emergency departments, Manpower 585w
British dependent territories, Homosexuality 221w
Developing countries, Arms trade 677
Ethiopia 262–3w
Ethiopia, Overseas aid 262–3w
Family planning, Advisory services 63w
Fertility, Advisory services 63w
Hospital beds 423w
Hospitals, Waiting lists 511w
Ilisu dam 257w

Torpedoes
128w

Tourism
387w
Greater London 387w
North West region 344–5w, 387w
Task forces 25w

Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995
Sittings in Westminster Hall
(18.01.00) 190–8wh

Townend, Mr John
Debates etc.
Influenza (10.01.00) 30
Questions
Business questions 431–2

Trade agreements
Agriculture 412–3
France 383w

Trade promotion
484w

Trade unions
Lifelong education 967–9

Train operating companies
Franchises 251w
Standards 252w

Training
Armed forces 93–4w
Court welfare officers 217w
Judiciary 36w, 553
New deal schemes 272w
Police 26w
Prison Service 26w
Solicitors 527w

Trains
Fares 449w
Overcrowding 114w

Trams
Croydon 116–7w

Tranquillisers
509w

Transplant surgery
197w, 235–6w, 422–3w

Transport
Conferences 248w
EC countries 450w
Finance 569w
Rural areas 245w
Wales 496w, 830–2

Transport supplementary grants
447w

Treasury
Assets 233w
Consultants 356w
Cost effectiveness 104–5w
Empty property 512w
Incentives 352–3w
Manpower 513–4w
Standards 105–6w

Tredinnick, Mr David
Questions
Organic farming 411

Trend, Mr Michael
Questions
State retirement pensions, Females 15

Trials
35–6w, 300w, 457–8w
Victims 418–9

Trident missiles
94–6w

Trimble, Rt Hon David
Questions
Reparation by offenders, Northern Ireland 263–4
Royal Ulster Constabulary 843–4

Truancy
271w

Tuberculosis
Vaccination 143–4w

Turkey
Arms trade 28w, 483w
EC enlargement 667–8

Turner, Dr Desmond
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 135–8wh
Questions
National Air Traffic Services 7w
Witnesses, Protection 552

Turner, Dr George
Questions
Computers, Dept of Social Security 12–3
Crown Prosecution Service 421–2
Crown Prosecution Service, Information technology 218–9w
East of England Development Agency 113w
Education, Rural areas 539w
Police, Information technology 540–1

Turner, Mr Neil
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 782
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Horserace Totalisator Board (19.01.00) 206–7wh

Twickenham
Athletics 349–50w

Twigg, Mr Derek
Questions
Crime, Cheshire 299w
Poverty, Children 3

Twigg, Mr Stephen
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Railway stations, Hadley Wood (19.01.00) 258–61wh

Twigg, Mr Stephen—continued
Questions
Iran, Armed forces 324w
Iran, Ballistic missiles 475w
Iran, Extradition 324w
Iran, Intelligence services 475–6w
Iran, Nuclear weapons 475w
Iran, Proscribed organisations 325w
Iran, Terrorism 476w
USA, Terrorism 477w

Tyler, Mr Paul
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 986–7
Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Nancekuke (18.01.00) 824
Line of route (18.01.00) 809–10
Post offices (17.01.00) 614, 621, 646
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1005–8, 1010

Tyne and Wear Metro
531–2w

Type 45 destroyers
91w, 126–7w

Tyrie, Mr Andrew
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 757, 759, 771–2, 777, 781–4

Tyson, Mike
271, 317–8w, 368–70w, 417w

Ufl
146–7w

UK membership of EC
(20.01.00) 996
Exhibitions 415w

Ukraine
Diplomatic relations 476w
EC external relations 476w

UN Convention on Torture
Prosecutions 559w

Unemployment
see also Long term unemployed
Ethnic groups 173–4w
Rural areas 46w
Tamworth 393w
Young people 201–2w

Unfair practices
Mortgages (12.01.00) 398–404

Unified appeal tribunal
Public appointments 72w

Uniforms
Armed forces 284–5w

United Arab Emirates
Children 322w

United Kingdom Passport Agency
see also Passports
Business plans 16w

United Reformed Church Bill (HL) 1998/99
Debates etc.
3R* (18.01.00) 667

Universities
Wales 498w

University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust
Public appointments 237w, 292w

University of Wales College of Medicine
Swansea 498w

Unparliamentary expressions
Rulings and statements (13.01.00) 408, (18.01.00) 687–8

Uraemia
59w

Uranium
Ammunition 98w, 279–80w, 282w

Urban Regeneration and Countryside Protection Bill 1999/2000
Questions
10–1w

Uruguay Round
258w

USA
Gulf Veterans' Illnesses Unit 85–6w
Ministry of Defence 86w
Nuclear weapons 493w
Soya beans 520w
Terrorism 477w

Utilities
Road works 250–1w

Utilities Bill 1999/2000
Debates etc.
1R (20.01.00) 996

Vaccination
Influenza 585–8w
Meningitis 50w
Tuberculosis 143–4w

VAT
Energy 352w
Housing 272, 356w

Vaz, Mr Keith, Minister for Europe, Foreign and Commonwealth Office
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Kosovo (12.01.00) 100–3wh
Questions
Charter of Fundamental Rights (EU) 413w
Chechnya, Armed conflict 326–7w, 408w
Cyprus 407–8w
Cyprus, EC enlargement 580w
Drugs, Crime 674–6
EC defence policy 536–7w
EC economic policy 408–9w
EC enlargement 406–7w, 477w
European Court of Justice 415w
France, Foreign relations 414w
France, Lorry drivers 414w
Gibraltar, Immigration 131w
Ilisu dam 668
Indian subcontinent, Immigration 579–80w
Intergovernmental Conference 2000 412w
International Court of Justice 476w
Iran, Nuclear power stations 413w
Kalejs, Konrad 2–3w
Kosovo, Ethnic groups 682–3
Members, Correspondence 328w
Montenegro, Foreign relations 412w
Northern Cyprus 580w
Pakistan, Mines 2w
Russia, Antisemitism 409w
Serbia, Export controls 133w
Serbia, Sanctions 681–2
Turkey, EC enlargement 667–8
UK membership of EC, Exhibitions 415w
Ukraine, Diplomatic relations 476w
Ukraine, EC external relations 476w
Wassenaar Arrangement 133–4w

Vehicles
Police 319w

Veterinary medicine
158w

Vetting
National Insurance Contributions Office 334w

Victim Support
see National Council of Victim Support

Victim support schemes
Northern Ireland 182w

Victims
Trials 418–9

Viggers, Mr Peter
Questions
Pensions 67–8w
Reserve forces, Health services 396w

Vis, Dr Rudi
Questions
Education, Standards 442w
Iran, Human rights 325w

Voluntary organisations
Welfare state 15–6

Voluntary schools
Greater London 40–1w

Voting methods
301w
EC institutions 669–71

Voucher schemes
Immigration 452w

Wakeham Commission
see Reform of the House of Lords Royal Commission

Wales
Agriculture 494w
Airports 830
Block grant 835
Countryside 494w
EC grants and loans 589–90w, 827–30
Future large aircraft 833
Health services 498w
Institutional care 495w
Law enforcement 833–5
Livestock industry 494–5w
Local government 496–7w
Newspaper press 520w
Non-departmental public bodies 330w, 832
Non-domestic rates 255–6w
Pensioners 495w
Petrol 434w
Post offices 499w
Prisons 537–8
Small businesses 497w
Social security benefits 184w
Theatre 330w, 498w
Transport 496w, 830–2
Universities 498w
Working families tax credit 499w

Wales Office
see Office of the Secretary of State for Wales

Walley, Ms Joan
Debates etc.
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1068
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 127–32wh
Questions
Housing, Rodents 575–6w
Incapacity benefit 226–7w
Malnutrition 139w
Rodents, Housing 576w

Walter, Mr Robert
Debates etc.
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 96, 109–12
Questions
EC grants and loans, Wales 829
Petrol, Wales 434w
Social security benefits, Automated credit transfer 499w

War pensions
Gurkhas 89–90w

Wardle, Mr Charles
Debates etc.
Conquest Hospital, Points of order (18.01.00) 688

Warren, Gordon
(12.01.00) 90–6wh

Warships
Portsmouth Harbour 404w

Wassenaar Arrangement
133–4w

Waste disposal
East Sussex 111–2w
Greater London 362w

Water companies
Environment protection 159–60w

Water supply
160w
Fluoride 187w, 584w

Waterhouse Inquiry
see Child Abuse in North Wales Judicial Inquiry

Waterson, Mr Nigel
Questions
Intergovernmental Conference 2000 668–9
Lighting 451w
Weapons, Northern Ireland 259–61
Winter fuel payments 71w

Watts, Mr Dave
Questions
Standard spending assessments 254–5w

Weapons
Iran 323w, 411w
Northern Ireland 180w, 182w, 259–63
Safety 165w
Testing 276–7w

Weather
Death 516–8w

Webb, Mr Steve
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 161, 177–83
Health services, Avon (19.01.00) 946–53
Pensioners (17.01.00) 557–64, 568, 574, 585, 605
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Post offices (12.01.00) 57–9wh
Questions
Child Support Agency, Computers 77w, 224w
Children, Maintenance 77w
Death, Weather 516–8w
Independent Case Examiner for the Child Support Agency 11–2
Invalid care allowances 76–7w
Local government finance 116w
Pensions 334w
Post offices 485w
Post offices, Dept of Health 51–2w
Psychology, Correspondence 320w
Social security benefits, Automated credit transfer 333w, 432w
Stakeholder pensions 231w
State earnings related pension scheme 77–9w
State retirement pensions 331w
Winter fuel payments 429–30w

Welfare of Animals at Slaughter Act 1991
Questions
576–7w

Welfare of Livestock Regulations 1994
Questions
576–7w

Welfare state
Voluntary organisations 15–6

Wells, Mr Bowen
Questions
Africa, Armed conflict 679

Welsh Assembly Cabinet
see Cabinet of the National Assembly for Wales

Welsh National Assembly
see National Assembly for Wales

Wembley Stadium
23–4w, 159w, 348w, 384–5w

West Mercia Police
465–6w

West Midlands
Regional planning and development 143
Single regeneration budget 110–1w

West Sussex
Housing 4w
New deal for young people 173w
Roads 211w

West Sussex Health Authority
Waiting lists 510w

Western European Union
UK delegations 1w, 222w

Westminster Hall sittings
(11.01.00) 1wh, (12.01.00) 90wh, 109–10wh, (18.01.00) 164wh
Rulings and statements (12.01.00) 302

White, Mr Brian
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 752
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1073, 1077–8
Legislative drafting (20.01.00) 1094–8
Millennium compliance (20.01.00) 981
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 439
Questions
Agriculture, Small businesses 415–6
Education, Administration 436w
Education, Standards 435–6w
Electronic voting 297w
Industrial injuries disablement benefit 430w
Mortgages, Interest rates 354w
Offenders, Rehabilitation 467w
Solicitors, Training 527w

Whitehead, Dr Alan
Debates etc.
Alternative energy (10.01.00) 119
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 70–4, 108

Whitney, Sir Ray
Debates etc.
Health services (18.01.00) 701, 741

Wicks, Mr Malcolm, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Education and Employment
Questions
British Council, English language 224w
Curriculum 389w
Education, Ombudsman 435w
Education, Rural areas 539w
Education, Standards 442w
Further education 541w
Further education, English language 223–4w

Wicks, Mr Malcolm—continued
Further education, Jobseeker's allowance 151–2w
Further education, Teachers 440w
Higher education, Conditions of employment 538w
Higher education, Cornwall 957
Higher education, Pay 542w
Higher education, Standards 542w
Higher Education Funding Council for England, Public appointments 145w
Learning and Skills Council for England 538–9w
Regional development agencies, Government assistance 269–70w
Sixth form education, Finance 543w
Student numbers, Medicine 440–1w
Students, Fees and charges 40w, 44–5w, 147–8w
Teachers, Pay 435w
Teachers, Pensions 390–2w
UfI 146–7w
Youth Support Service 269w, 273w, 389w

Widdecombe, Rt Hon Ann
Debates etc.
Oral question time intervention (17.01.00) 544
Pinochet, Augusto, Points of order (11.01.00) 238, 247–8
Representation of the People Bill, Allocation of time motion, Rep and 3R (20.01.00) 1001, 1006–7
Questions
Immigration, Appeals 16w, 34–5w
Kalejs, Konrad 2–3w, 14–6w
Passports 177w
Pinochet, Augusto 277–80
Prisons, Overcrowding 538–9
United Kingdom Passport Agency, Business plans 16w

"Widening Gap"
582–3w

Wigley, Rt Hon Dafydd
Debates etc.
Pensioners (17.01.00) 560
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 40
Sittings in Westminster Hall
EC grants and loans (11.01.00) 9–12wh
Post offices (12.01.00) 55wh
Questions
Debts, Developing countries 202w
EC grants and loans, Wales 589–90w, 830
Industrial diseases, Compensation 521w
Jet skis 447w
Manpower, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 590w
National Assembly for Wales, Dept of Trade and Industry 519–21w
New deal for long term unemployed 46w
Non-departmental public bodies, Wales 330w
Non-domestic rates, Electricity generation 9–10w
Non-domestic rates, Wales 255–6w
Official engagements, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 590w
Prisons, Wales 537–8
Regional selective assistance 521w
Water companies, Environment protection 159–60w

Wilkinson, Mr John
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 995–6
Questions
Pinochet, Augusto 281–2
Police, Pensions 547
Refugees, Heathrow Airport 298w

Wilkinson Sword of Peace
277–9w

Willetts, Mr David
Debates etc.
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 164–74
Questions
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill 1999/2000 430–1w
Computers, Dept of Social Security 13
Housing benefit, Abuse 338–9w
Local government, Pensions 248w
Statistics, Dept of Social Security 427–9w
Tax credit, Pensions 8, 353w
Tranquillisers 509w

Williams, Rt Hon Alan
Questions
University of Wales College of Medicine, Swansea 498w

Williams, Mr Alan W
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 134wh
Questions
EC enlargement 407w
New deal for 50 plus 543w
Working families tax credit, Wales 499w

Williams, Mrs Betty
Questions
Further education 541w
Hearing impaired, Health services 238w

Willis, Mr Phil
Debates etc.
Post offices (17.01.00) 622
Questions
Education, Contracts for services 275–6w
New deal for young people 168–71w
Specialist schools initiative 959–60

Wills, Mr Michael, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Education and Employment
Questions
Beacon schools, Information technology 960–1
Cost effectiveness, Dept for Education and Employment 45w
Manpower, Dept for Education and Employment 441–2w
"Raising Aspirations in the 21st Century" 388w
Research, Dept for Education and Employment 39–40w
Schools, Internet 36w
Smoking, Dept for Education and Employment 436w

Wilshire, Mr David
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 941–2
Health services (18.01.00) 694, 743
Parliamentary procedure, Points of order (19.01.00) 945
Representation of the People Bill, Com (13.01.00) 466
Representation of the People Bill, Rep (19.01.00) 873–4, 885–8, 902–6, 911, 919–24, 926
Questions
Diplomatic service 582w

Wilson, Mr Brian, Minister of State, Scotland Office
Sittings in Westminster Hall
River Clyde, Shipbuilding (18.01.00) 186–9wh

Wiltshire
Common agricultural policy 155–8w

Windfall tax
104w

Winnick, Mr David
Debates etc.
Business questions (19.01.00) 939–40, (20.01.00) 986
Pinochet, Augusto, Points of order (11.01.00) 248
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 35, 60–3, 85, 111
Questions
Business questions 425–6
Committee on Standards in Public Life 167w
Dept of the Clerk of the House, Public appointments 443w
Members, Correspondence 328w, 341w, 351–2w
Muvunyi, Tharcisse 467w
Pinochet, Augusto 284, 375–6w
Police Complaints Authority, Administrative delays 320–1w

Winter fuel payments
12, 71w, 75–6w, 227–8w, 333–4w, 429–30w

Winterton, Mrs Ann
Questions
Schools, Drugs 971–2

Winterton, Mr Nicholas
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 991–2
Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill, 2R (11.01.00) 154
Line of route (18.01.00) 805, 807–8, 813
Ministerial statement intervention (19.01.00) 855
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 859
Questions
Athletics 386w
Exhaust emissions, Pollution control 142
Pinochet, Augusto 284
Small businesses, Wales 497w
Weapons, Northern Ireland 180w

Winterton, Ms Rosie
Questions
Bus services, Yorkshire and Humberside 127–8
Children, Poverty 272–3
Civil service, Investors in people 441–3w

Winterton, Ms Rosie—continued
Immobilisation of vehicles 550
Pensioners, Income support 66w

Witnesses
Magistrates' courts 299w
Protection 552–4

Women
see Females

Woodward, Mr Shaun
Debates etc.
Royal Ulster Constabulary (19.01.00) 858

Woolas, Mr Phil
Questions
Sudan, Overseas aid 262w
Trams, Croydon 116–7w

Worcestershire
Common agricultural policy 99w

Working families tax credit
513w
Wales 499w

Working hours
Part-time employment 261–2w
Territorial Army 395w

World Cup
Football 130–2w, 383–4w, 474w

World Trade Organisation
29w, 259w
Developing countries 483w

World War II
Genocide 455w

Worthington, Mr Tony
Questions
Industrial injuries disablement benefit, Asbestos 499–500w

Wray, Mr James
Questions
Tyson, Mike 271

Wright, Dr Tony
Debates etc.
Government (18.01.00) 753
Influenza (10.01.00) 29–30
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 42

Written questions
Ministry of Defence 81w

Wyatt, Derek
Debates etc.
Elderly, Petitions (10.01.00) 117
Millennium compliance (20.01.00) 980
Questions
Animal experiments 167–8w

Wyatt, Derek—continued
Animal experiments, Primates 467–8w
Cars 529w
Civil servants, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 25w
Diplomatic service, Contracts 328–9w
Dyspraxia 511w
Electronic voting 297w
Embassies, Operating costs 3w, 131–2w, 329w
English Table Tennis Association 22–3w
Football, World Cup 384w
Football Task Force 220w, 340w
General practitioners, Medway 509w
Italy, Embassies 329w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 412w
Minor injuries units, Isle of Sheppey 509–10w
Minster College, Finance 271–2w

Yeo, Mr Tim
Sittings in Westminster Hall
Genetically modified organisms (13.01.00) 145–9wh
Questions
Beef 153w
Food, EC action 415
Pigs 407–8

Yorkshire and Humberside
Bus services 127–8

Young, Sir George
Debates etc.
Business questions (20.01.00) 984–5
Criminal Justice (Mode of Trial) Bill (HL), Points of order (20.01.00) 1088
House of Commons, Management (20.01.00) 1082–4
Line of route (18.01.00) 806–8
Political Parties Elections and Referendums Bill, 2R (10.01.00) 45–53

Young offenders
Administration of justice 388w
Merseyside 218w
Prisoner escorts 13w
Prisoners 14w
Secure accommodation 13w, 558w

Young people
Unemployment 201–2w

Youth Support Service
269w, 273w, 389w

Zimbabwe
Human rights 132–3w

CAMBRIDGE REFERENCE LIBRARY